Our evenings are now made more splendid by the arrival of an additional candidate for our admiration, the greatest of the planets and the brightest of all the stars except Venus. This great luminary was named after the father of the gods, Jupiter. Its great bulk, its rapid rotation, its changing appearance and its system of moons, four in number, make this an attractive object to the astronomer. It is claimed that the moons can be seen, by some especially keen of vision, without artificial aid; but, to the most of us, a glass is necessary. A spy glass will show them as small points of light, but the phenomena of eclipses, occultations, etc., require a telescope. The revolutions of the moons, like the rotation of the planet, are very rapid: the first making its journey in less than two days, while the fourth, which is five times as far from the primary as our moon is from us, takes less than seventeen days. The circles of their revolution are turned edgewise to us and to the sun, so that they appear to vibrate back and forth almost in a strait line, and at every revolution pass into the shadow of the planet and are eclipsed, and on this side pass over and east their shadow on its surface. The fourth at long intervals, as in 1883, I think it was, runs above and below the necessary limits, and escapes eclipse and avoids transit. Then, too, so nearly are they in line at times, that one is occulted by another, as the writer has witnessed; and an eclipse of one by the shadow of another is possible. At present the inclination of their orbits is about a mean between these two.

It is very interesting to watch the movements of these bodies, and the importance thereof in the eyes of astronomers can be judged by the fact that twenty pages of the American Ephemeris is devoted to this subject, and yet with all the data there given it is difficult to assign each its proper place at hours different from the time of its daily configuration. But by constructing a diagram of the circular orbits according to measurements found in the Ephemeris, and carefully dividing them into the required number of days and hours the true position of each moon can be obtained with a good degree of certainty for any day or hour and from that they can easily be referred back to their apparent position. The accompanying cut shows their position at about 7 o'clock, 90th meridian time, March 15th, as they will appear in an inverting telescope. On the right is the 1st, which has here reached the limit of its progress east. On the left are the 2d, 4th and 3d, in that order, beginning at the primary. The 2d and 4th are toward the observer, having lately crossed the disc of the planet, the 3d is from him and will disappear behind the planet before morning.

On the scale here given the diameter of the fourth would equal the width of a page of the Cynosure. It would be a profitable study for beginners in astronomy, and others interested, to make occasional observations of Jupiter during this and next month. "The works of the Lord are great, sought out of all those who have pleasure therein." To observe the eclipses and occultations (the former best seen in April) all that is needed is a small telescope and the Nautical Almanac, or the American Ephemeris, which cost only $1.00. The same motions, retrograde, etc., that were observed of Saturn will apply to Jupiter on a larger scale, it being nearer.

The view above given is one of the best to show the width of the 3d and 4th orbits, their length east and west can be seen from the 18th to the 20th of this month. The shadow of the planet is too much behind it now to see the eclipses well, but next month and after it is well off to one side. Then the more distant moons coming out from behind the planet appear for awhile and then suddenly disappear and remain out of sight for three or four hours, when they again come into sight away off in space.

The notes on Saturn being written some time before they were sent and the date omitted (we will charge that to the printers) one of the statements became incorrect.

Galesburg, March 6.

A SONG OF STOUT WORKERS.

Onward, brave men, onward go!
Place is none for rest below;
He who laggeth faints and fails,
He who presses on prevails!

Monks may nurse their mouldy moods,
Caged in musty solitudes;
Men beneath the breezy sky
March to conquer or to die!

Work and live—this only charm
Warms the blood and nerves the arm;
As the stout pine stronger grows
By each gusty blast that blows.

On high throne or lowly sod,
Fellow workers we with God;
Then most like to Him when we
March through toil to victory.

If there be who sob and sigh,
Let them sleep or let them die;
While we live we strain and strive,
Working most when most alive!

Where the fairest blossom grew,
There the spade has most to do;
Hearts that bravely serve the Lord,
Like St. Paul must wear the sword!

Onward, brothers, onward go!
Face to face to find the foe!
Words are weak, and wishing fails,
But the well-aimed blow prevails.

—John Stewart Blackie.

AN ARGUMENT FOR MASONRY.

Masonry is supported by many who are men of good standing in all their relationships, domestic, social, and as citizens and church members. Therefore, Masonry must be good! Slavery was supported by such men a generation ago, but who now claims that slavery is good? The law of doing to others as we would they should do to us settles slavery forever, for no man ever desires to be a slave to any other man. But the pro-Mason may point to the first church at Jerusalem and triumphantly ask if Peter and Paul and the members of that church did not conform to the rites of Judaism in deference to their old customs; as, for example, when Paul was advised to go, and did go, into the Temple ritual with the four men, thereby to prove to the Jews that he was not guilty of preaching against Moses; or when Peter withdrew from eating with the Gentiles in order to please his Jerusalem brethren who came to Antioch. So if these apostles could conform to Judaism and still be good Christians, why may not Christians now conform to the Masonic ritual as Paul and Peter did to that of the Temple?

There! exclaims the Mason, I stand justified as a Christian and as a Mason, too!

Nay, sir, nay! Paul told Peter that he walked not uprightly, and so Peter might have retorted upon Paul, and so we say to you! You, Mr. Mason, you walk not in accordance with the Gospel of the New Testament Christ (see Gal. 2). There was, however, a better excuse for them than for you. The law of Moses was once of divine authority. Masonry never was. The brazen serpent became an idol after its divine purpose had ceased. So did the rites of Judaism to Christians in relation to Christianity. Peter and Paul were the morning stars of this dispensation, and had not realized fully the extent of its demands upon the whole conduct. They had both clearly taught that the Gospel was not to be confined to Jews, but that the Jew and Gentile were equally citizens under it. No higher relation could exist than that of Christian brotherhood. The Jewish bonds had ceased, and all men became one in Christ.

But what saith Masonry? Alas! alas! Its origin was never divine, but it falsely claims to be so. Its object has ever been to become the "universal brotherhood" instead of Christianity, which it places on the same level as Mohammedanism or any other religion. Hence, the only conclusion to which any clear, sound Christian can rightly come is, that it is "another gospel" than that of Christ, who is quite unknown to it as "the way, the truth, and the life;" and that the Grand Lodge above is a Christless myth which Masonry holds up to its deluded followers as their eternal Christless home. A Scot.

"DEVIL-WORSHIP" AT THE MONUMENT.

PRESS COMMENTS—THINGS BY THEIR RIGHT NAMES.

From the Advance, March 5.

Is it not time to inquire why the Masonic fraternity is permitted to act on the assumption that it is to be given precedence over all other societies, associations and churches in public dedications and ceremonies? We have nothing to say of the childish ceremonies with which its members amuse themselves. We join no crusade against that or any other order, so long as it does not intefere with the rights of others. But in the recent dedication of the Washington Monument, the Masons were on hand in the person of some high functionaries, with wonderful, if not awe-inspiring titles, to officiate in the dedicatory service, and this not only in direct violation of the well-known principle in our Government that preference is to be given to no religious soeieties; but against the written protest of more than 12,000 United States citizens. It is beyond dispute that Freemasonry is a religion. Why has it any more right than should be accorded to Catholics, or Episcopalians, or Baptists, in the affairs of the National Government? For that order to intrude itself into such dedicatory exercises and assume a right denied to all other religious bodies is an impertinence that should be resented.

From the Interior.

The proper Masonic functionaries declared that the square, the level and the plumb had been applied to the obelisk, and that its corners were found to be square, its courses level, and its walls skillfully erected according to the plan. Grand Master Myron M. Parker scattered corn and poured out wine and oil, the emblems of nourishment, refreshment and joy; and in the course of the mystic ceremonies brought into use certain historic relics with which Gen. Washington was intimately connected.

Now we do not want to be cranky about a little folly of this kind, nor to say unpleasant things; but the fair and the right thing is the fair and right thing, be it large or small. If our honored Moderator of the Assembly had gone to Washington, in his official capacity, and pronounced upon the work as satisfactory to Presbyterians, and proceded to make capital out of this work of the people for Presbyterianism—well, Dr. Hays is not the man to tackle, if one wants an easy victory, but we would have been after Dr. Hays with the sharpest stick in a pile of cordwood. The number of the people who have contributed money directly and through taxation to that monument, who have positive convictions against Freemasonry, runs up into the millions. Is it according to the square and plumb and level of fair dealing to pervert their patriotic liberality into a glorification of what they are opposed to, and what some of them positively detest? We put the question to any Freemason who reads this: "Is this fair and square?" There are vast numbers of our best citizens and Christians whose consciences are deeply offended, not at what other people do, but at what they themselves have been compelled to do in this matter. A vast number will not inquire into, nor care about the significance of those "mystic rites," but a vast number do care, when they are made parties to them; ask them what they understand by this scattering of corn and pouring libations upon the ground and they will promptly answer—"Devil-worship." That may sound like a harsh and uncharitable judgment, but there is no mistaking what it did mean up to the time of its abolishment by Christianity, and what it does now mean in pagan lands—whatever it may mean in the Masonic ritual. It is a very ancient rite—doubtless the most ancient of all religious rites, except possibly burnt offerings. Its object was to placate the spirits above,—hence it was demon-worship. It was found fully established in western Asia and in Greece and Egypt at the dawn of history. Whatever may now be meant to Freemasons, (they speak of them as "emblems,") they constitute a religious rite. There is no good-will between the papal and the Masonic hierarchies. Now let us suppose that the dedicatory services, for that is what the religious services amounted to, had been performed by Cardinal McCloskey and a procession of his acolytes, sprinkling holy water, not to placate but to scare away the devils, and burning incense to please the saints, and mumbling medieval Latin to mystify the spectators, and other rites of his semi-pagan superstition—could we not have counted very certainly on the aid of the Freemasons in condemning such an abuse of the people's property? We certainly could, and they would have justified us in the employment of indignant denunciation. Let us stick to the main principle of our free institutions—liberty for everybody in the enjoyment of his religious beliefs and ceremonies—taxation for nobody in the support of them.

From the Catholic Examiner, February 28.

Civilization has been again disgraced. The proudest of our nation's monuments has been unhallowed in its dedication by the buffooneries of a rabble of flaunting mountebanks. An outrage has been committed against the convictions of ten millions of American Catholics and the intelligence of other millions of citizens who gazed disgusted at the apotheosis of pranking imposture in the capital of the nation and in the full blaze of the nineteenth century. Masonry has triumphed again. The Past Grand Clown, the Most Worshipful Pantaloon, and Sir Knight the Zany, with a bedizzened rabble of most worthy Tom Fools and eminent fantastics, have been afforded another gala day to flaunt their tags and rags and feathers and cut their Bedlamite antics and gibber their drivel. How they finally compassed their glory we know not. But they did, to our national humiliation. One of them attempts to explain to the Telegram that the concession was due to his order, in view of the fact that Washington was himself a Freemason, and as such personally laid the corner stone of our National Capitol.

It was late one winter night that we traversed Union Square. At that hour it was hushed and deserted. The full moon rode high in a cloudless heaven and poured its radiance on the equestrian statue of Washington, softening its details yet enhancing their beauty, and melting away its stains and mould and blemishes that the searching sunbeam reveals with pitiless truth. In the silent midnight and under the glamor of the silvery rays, wonderfully solemn and impressive was that group of bronze—the proud and mettled charger champing at his bit—the majestic figure of the chieftain, erect, imposing, heroic in martial gesture of command. It was the ideal Washington, the hero of romance, the warrior who lives in the phantasy and heart of the nation he redeemed!

O, the star high plunge, from the sublime under the silvery moon to the sordidly ridiculous in the gaslight of a neighboring restaurant! There he was again. But O, not the stately soldier, the Pater Patriæ, the knightly hero; but the "George" of the flippant, satirical and irreverent paragrapher! "George" in a chromo leering above the cashier's desk! "George" in "shorts" and a diaper, with a tack hammer in his hand, and a junk shop bunch of odd keys, compasses and geometrical gim-cracks bedizening his breast! "George," with a smirk and a pose in all the full feathered jackdawry of a Grand Past Masonic Clown! Mars with a rattle and in cap and bells! "Agamemnon, King of Men," masquerading after a drunken bout in the tinsel and trumpery of his court fool!

"Your George," said that rasp-tongued Carlyle to an American visitor, "was no such shakes when all is said. He needs taking down a peg or two, and, mark me, he'll get it yet!" Assuredly the complaisant Commissioners of the Washington Monument have done all that in them lay to hasten the fulfillment of the snarling cynic's prophecy. The venerated remains of our national hero have as yet encountered but the perfumed touch of the reverent embalmer, and never the pitiless inquisition of the anatomizer's scalpel. Romantic Irvings and gushing biographers of the J. S. C. Abbott school hath Washington had a many. He yet awaits the keen, cold dispassion of Carlyle's relentless Froude.

Nil de mortuis nisi bonum. Of the dead naught but good, though it were the doom of history, and Sterne to the contrary notwithstanding, who denounced the maxim as "a nonsensical lullaby of some nurse, put into Latin by some pedant, to be chanted by some hypocrite to the end of the world, for the consolation of departing lechers." And it is they to whom was entrusted the solemn ceremony that was to dedicate the nation's monument to its idol that must needs raise an iconoclastic hand against his memory, and announce to us with theatric emphasis that he who was "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen," could play at whiles the mummer and clown with the veriest buffoon that gibbered and juggled at the base of his obelisk. What marvel if the disgusted spectator begins to inquire whether the all-perfect Washington was not a myth, whether Thackeray went far enough in his "Warrington" to strip him of his ideal plumage, or who learn to speculate whether he who could embrace such abject folly did not, as is charged, actually accompany it once or twice in an excursion far beyond the diocese of strict morality.

As far as the Monument Commissioners have had it in their power to do so they have changed the 22d of February from Washington's Birthday to the Festival of the Patron Saint of American Freemasonry, and the monument that was erected by the nation to the Father of his Country to the trophy of an oath-bound order detested by millions and distrusted by more.

From the Midland, March 5.

But there are more positive reasons for refusing such favors. Masonry is un-American in its whole character. It is an absolute despotism within a free country. It claims the right of life and death without respect to civil law or civil courts and the whole structure of the lodge government is built upon unqualified and unquestioning obedience to the will of the master of the lodge. Such an association acting secretly and assuming the functions of civil government, is inconsistent with the genius and spirit of Republican government and instead of being the recipient of special favors ought to be an object of suspicion to civil authorities.

But the thing that makes the giving of such honors to Masonry intolerably wrong, is the fact that it is a heathenish religion in the midst of a Christian country. There are millions of people in this country who pay tax to build court houses, custom houses and all sorts of public buildings, as well as the Washington Monument, who are conscientiously opposed to Masonry on the grounds of its anti-Christian character. The opinion of these citizens ought to be respected, and to confer special privileges upon such an association while churches and all other really benevolent societies are ignored, is an insult to the Christian people of the country. It is to be hoped that the time will soon come when the friends of true religion will unite in such a vigorous protest against this pretentious association as will make it retire in dishonor to its own dark quarters where its false pretences will not be paraded offensively before a Christian people.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E. E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued.

This was decidedly an opening for Martin Treworthy, who had enough of the wisdom of the serpent not to speak his real chargin at the unexpected revelation. He only muttered inwardly, "I might have known they would rope you in, my fine fellow;" and then he proceeded to take advantage of the unsuspecting Stephen in the following fashion:

"Well, you have fought the saloons like a young Jephthah, as though you'd been regularly raised to the business, but somehow we hain't got rid of the Ammonites yet."

"The fact is, Mr. Treworthy, saloon-keepers are the very hardest kind of fish to catch. In the first place all kinds of obstacles are thrown in the way of procuring evidence, and when evidence is obtained there is the difficulty of convicting. The jury fail to agree, or there is a loophole in the statute book. It is really discouraging."

"Well, I remember going on a hunt once after mail robbers," said Martin, in the slow, ruminative fashion in which he used to begin his stories of border experience. "They belonged to a gang that had kept the whole country in terror for years. They'd ride into a town with their revolvers cocked right in open day, and take whatever they wanted. Sometimes, out of sheer cussedness, they would amuse themselves by picking a quarrel with some poor fellow in one of the stores or restaurants shoot him dead, and then ride off without anybody's daring to move a finger to stop 'em no more'n as if they had the numb palsy."

"That was a pretty state of affairs," commented Stephen, whose Eastern ideas were much shocked. "I hope you caught the villains and hung them to the nearest tree."

"We rode miles and miles through the brushwood," continued Martin, "and at last we sighted the rascals—were, in fact, nearly within pistol range, when I seen one of the fellows raise himself in his saddle, fling up his arms and then let them drop down to his side. And after that 'there was no more luck about the house' as the old song says. It was really queer what accidents happened to put us back, till finally we lost the trail altogether. I didn't understand the matter as I did afterwards. The fellow give the Masonic sign of distress; the leader of our party was a Mason himself, and worked it so as not to have them captured."

Stephen felt as if a calcium light had been flashed on sundry puzzling points encountered in his legal practice, but its chief effect just then was to give him a sense of discomfort like the light let too suddenly in on eyes that have been long bandaged. So he only said, "Aha," while Martin wound up with a moral to his tale as follows:

"They say sauce that is good for the goose is good for the gander, and if secret signs and grips are good for thieves and murderers, they are good for rumsellers; and if they are good for that kind of gentry they are good for dynamiters. Better stick a pin in there. It may come handy to refer to next time you have a liquor case to try."

And Martin Treworthy, with a curious smile on his face, strode away, and left the young attorney to recover as well as he could from the effects of "more light" than had been flashed upon his understanding by any degree of Odd-fellowship which he had yet taken.

The Union denied emphatically any knowledge of or sympathy with the dynamite plot, and there were plenty of unthinking, good people who never stopped to consider that though this might be true of the brotherhood as a body, there could easily be a wheel within a wheel—a lodge of dynamiters inside of a seemingly innocent trades union, bound together by the same secret covenant to shield "imprudent" members.

The scheme of blowing up the works and then fastening the guilt on Nelson had been planned by Mr. Gerrish as a fine piece of double revenge: first on manufacturers who had failed to appreciate his office and titles as he deemed they deserved; and secondly on the young workman, who from first to last as a recognized leader of the better element among the operatives was regarded by him much as Haman regarded Mordecai. The task of seeing it carried out by trusty underlings into whom he had talked his own atheistic and communistic ideas he handed over to Reynolds, according to his usual plan of furnishing the brains, and letting some obsequious tool do the labor. He had not counted on the egregious failure of both schemes, and when his subordinate held another secret conference with the chief, he found him in anything but an amiable mood. He stormed and swore at his unfortunate aid-de-camp, and told him that "he had managed the job like a —— ——." The concluding noun and adjective we forbear to give, though really very just and applicable to their subject It had the effect, however, of making Reynold's eye flash and his countenance redden, as if there was some limit to his endurance.

"That ain't hardly safe talk, let me tell you, to a man that could have you arrested by dropping a little hint to the police."

Gerrish did not, as might have been expected, break out into oaths and curses at this threat. He only smiled—that tigerish smile before which Reynolds, with all his superior bulk, shrank as it is said even lions will shrink before the hyena; and with an almost imperceptible motion of his hand towards the glittering dirk concealed in his bosom, he hissed slowly between his teeth:

"Remember the penalty of a traitor."

The two glared at each other for a second, and then Reynolds said with an uneasy laugh:

"Come, what is the use of all this? I think we had better attend to business."

"So do I," was the laconic response of his chief. And the worthy pair who had quarrelled before, and knew that in all probability they would again, made up after the fashion of their peculiar species—that is to say, they smoked a couple of cigars together, and indulged in considerable profanity while they discussed the general situation of affairs. There was no ignoring the fact that the strike was every day growing more unpopular, and as their power over the workmen must be in some way retained, they came to the united conclusion that to appear in the role of peacemakers, bound to have a pacific settlement of the difficulties, would be decidedly more for their interest than to keep up the agitation. But when the tiger is once unchained it is not always an easy matter to get him back into his den—a fact on which Gerrish and Reynolds failed to count.

(To be continued.)

—The Independent gives the following figures: "The Presbyterians have in Utah, thirty-three schools, fifty-four teachers, and more than 2,000 pupils; the Congregationalists, thirty schools, with forty-seven teachers, and upward of 1,800 scholars; the Methodists, eleven schools, nineteen teachers, and about 700 pupils; The Episcopalians, five schools, twenty-five teachers, and attendance of 850; the Catholics, three schools, thirty-five teachers, and 450 scholars enrolled; and the Baptists, two schools, three teachers, and 175 pupils; total, eighty-five schools, 188 teachers, and an enrollment for the year of 7,500."

Reform News.

OHIO'S REPORT FOR FEBRUARY.

Additional pledges and cash, for the work in Ohio, have been received to the amount of $15.00—$7.00 of it being cash from the following persons:

John Robison, Dresden	$5 00
John B. White, Chandlersville	1 00
Marcus Philips, Pagetown	1 00

This makes $192.00 in all. Let the friends who are interested send in their pledges at once. In my last report I gave J. N. Logan credit for $1.00, the name should have read J. W. Logue. Would the friends at Bellefontaine like to have a convention there sometime in April, at which the General Secretary will be present, and we will try also to secure the presence of the senior editor of the Cynosure? Such a meeting I presume would give all the light on the subject of secret societies that is desired. Will the friends there who spoke through the last Cynosure, please answer through the Cynosure, or directly to the undersigned, and as soon as possible so that all arrangements may be perfected at an early date? S. A. George, Sec. O. C. A.

MICHIGAN STATE MEETING.

The next meeting of the Michigan State Christian Association, will be held, D. V., in Brighton, Livingstone Co., April 21–23. The official call will appear soon.

We earnestly hope that all who are in any way interested in the overthrow of the secret systems that are cursing our land will make an effort to attend this meeting. Those who have been carrying the burden of this movement have sometimes been disheartened by the fact that many who talk loud won't lift. There is Anti-masonic strength enough in Michigan, if it could be interested and organized so as to be effective, to make itself felt. Two years ago a few earnest ones organized and incorporated under the laws of the State, an association for the purpose of carrying on the anti-secret work; since then some progress has been made and some have done nobly, but the mass of professed anti-secretists have taken no interest in the movement. Brethren, this cause is Christ's, and if you have any desire for the vindication of his name which has been cast out by these institutions, we urge you to come to this meeting and encourage us by your presence, counsel and assistance. Entertainment will be free; come, one and all in the name of the Lord. W. H. Ross.

THE WISCONSIN CONVENTION PROLONGED.

Dear Cynosure: In my note after our convention at Milton Junction, I informed you that Bro. Ronayne by special request remained to hold gospel meetings with the Seventh-day Baptist church. Bro. Ronayne preached with great power, and gave several Bible readings of intense interest. A good number of persons by the blessing of God were saved.

Most of the time the audience consisted of an unusually large proportion of Christian people, lodge prejudice, the skating rink and cold weather keeping many away. There seemed to be a settled determination on the part of most of the secretists to keep away, yet some would come. But it is sad to see how many of the flower of the land are mortgaged to anti-Christ, and are mad upon their idols. The idea seems to be, "anything but Christ the only way." One Mason told me that the convention and Ronayne's lectures would bring at least fifty into the lodge. I told him if that was the case, they ought to pass him a vote of thanks and ask him to come again. Christians were greatly quickened and built up, and much good accomplished.

The pastor, Eld. N. Wardner, is a strong friend of the anti-secret reform, a hearty prohibitionist, an able and earnest expounder of the Sabbath institution, and a loving and devoted pastor, supported by a most devoted companion, and a band of earnest men and women.

Allow me to say that there was something truly delightful and sacredly interesting in being for a few weeks with a people who at sunset lay aside worldly business and care, and enter upon the weekly rest, as God's people did in the olden time, and devote the evening to praise, prayer, and exhortation, followed next morning by "Sabbath school," preaching, and general free conference, and young people's meeting at 3 P. M. As the sun sinks to rest "the Sabbath is past," and as it "draws toward the first of the week," if the people have night before-hand preparations for going abroad, for washing or other business, or wish to take an evening train, there are no qualms of conscience, the Sabbath having been kept holy to the end thereof. It starts the inquiry whether a return to the practice of beginning the rest-day at sunset would not be a positive gain as a matter of convenienee, whether it be Sunday or the seventh day. It would not be surprising if the attempt to enforce the Sunday laws would result in the discussion, review, and resettlement of the whole question on the true Scriptural basis. If Christ and the apostles changed the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day, it will have to stay; if not, God will restore it to the seventh, and there is no help for it. It cannot truly be said to be a matter of indifferenee. It is one or the other; which?

By the very urgent request of Bro. J. W. Wood of Baraboo, with the concurrence of several of the pastors, who, since the week of prayer had been engaged with their people in union meetings, Bro. Ronayne visited that place with results very similar to those at Milton Junction—perhaps rather more encouraging. Sorely did the Masons remember Bro. Ronayne's exposures seven years ago, and with few exceptions stood aloof. An old lady, a member of the Presbyterian church, whose deceased husband was a Mason, and who herself is a Mason so far as women can be, dwelling in the little shed tacked on to the outside of the ancient and honorable institution, but having no direct connection therewith, told me that she had not been, and would not go to hear Mr. Ronayne, and said that he was a "perjured villain." She would not object to his leaving the lodge, and advising or warning people to keep out of it, but to reveal the secrets he had sworn to keep—that made him too bad to be trusted at all. She would not deny my description of the little "shed" she occupies, "tacked on to the main building," neither would she confess; but said, laughing at the awkwardness of the position, that she would reveal no secrets. An Odd-fellow told me he had not been and would not go to hear Mr. Ronayne, and that he need not expect secret society people to go and hear him; yet a good many did go before he left, and some confessed frankly their deep interest in his preaching; and no doubt many more would have gone had he remained longer. After he closed his public efforts, and before leaving the place, a Catholic, a man of talent, who attended some of the meetings, was made a joyful convert to Christ.

At the meetings the writer had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Van Dressen, pastor of the Wesleyan church at Lyons and Fairfield, and of preaching for him in the Lyons church on Feb. 14th, in the morning, and both morning and evening in the school house at Fairfield, on the 21st, to large and appreciative audiences. A good degree of interest prevails in both places, and secretism has no standing room in the churches. A new church house is up and enclosed near the school house in Fairfield, and the out-look for salvation upon the people is very encouraging. W. W. Ames.

(Wesleyan please copy.)

A GOOD WORK IN CENTRAL MICHIGAN.

Pontiac, Mich.

Editor Cynosure:—I will give a short account of my visit to Gratiot county in this State.

I spent two nights at Holly, and while there saw a soul brought into the glorious liberty of the children of God. On the cars I met with a preacher who was holding special meetings. He insisted on my spending the night with him. As we were going into the meeting-house he requested me to state my experience in Masonry, if I should feel so led. Before the meeting opened a man came to the pulpit and whispered to the pastor. He then whispered to me that some of the Freemasons had informed him that they knew me well, and if he allowed me to preach it would ruin the meeting; for if I mentioned Masonry, his best friends would bolt. He told me to do as I judged best.

I did not refer to their paganism, but I could see that there was a strong opposition to me. In closing the meeting I told the congregation what had been said. A man then came to the pulpit and said that he was the man who had spoken to the preacher. He was Doctor Smith, he owned the house, and if I had been allowed to say anything against Freemasonry, he would close the house against the meetings. I observed quite an excitement, though some invited me to visit them. As I had to go with the preacher, I spent the night with the doctor. I asked him how he came to admit such people into his building, knowing as he did that they professed to be strongly Anti-masonic. He answered that when he gave them permission to use the house he informed them that they must not speak against the lodge. Nine-tenths of the praying men in the community, some of the best praying men they had, and some of the best helpers in the present revival were secret society men, but they would not tolerate opposition to the lodge. The doctor told me several times—once in the presence of his family and their preacher, that, if he must leave the lodge or go to hell, he would go to hell. He professes to be a Christian. He said any man who opposed Freemasonry was led by the devil.

I desired to know how he came to let men preach in his building when he believed that they were led by the devil. He replied that the preacher never spoke in opposition to the lodge—at least, he never spoke in a manner to disturb or offend lodge-men—and they would not let him do so. The preacher informed me that he had decided not to say anything about secretism, directly, till after the revival closed; then, when he got ready to organize a class, he would "present our issues and show how we as a people stood on that question." He would then send for me to lecture. He charged me to tell no man in that place at that time what his plan was. "We as a people," "our issues," "when we get ready to organize a class"—Yes! A salvation issue? or, a mere society issue?

My friend, do you oppose iniquity on Bible ground because you personally hate it? or, do you merely profess to hate it, as an agent of some institution? Do you see any difference in a belief and the profession of a belief? I beseech you, ponder this and pray over it!

I left that place reflecting that lodge-men are the worst duped men in the land, and church people are largely to blame for it. That day on the cars I saw some more church-Masonry. At first it is all wreathed in smiles and talks sweetly of "The dear Jesus," but in the end turns pale with rage; has murder in its eye, and discovers a bad bringing up, or a sad bringing down.

I found the people at Sumner greatly excited. Brother and sister Finch had held the ground unwaveringly. Sister Finch had bought the old schoolhouse and moved it onto a lot that she had purchased for that purpose. She had the house fixed up—all at her own expense, for the sake of having a place where the truth could be told. In doing this they met with the most determined opposition. Circumstances had led the Free Methodist chairman, Wm. Cusick, to advise them to send for me. The heavy snow storm that came just then compelled us to de the lectures one week, but I held meeting every night. So the setting-maul people had a chance to plan and talk. It may be said of them as of the Pharisees, "They say and do not," for they declared that I should not expose Masonry there. They threatened to use eggs, a rail, and other such Masonic arguments. One said they knew me well, and I had done the lodge much harm. They circulated a paper in which they promised never to trade again with Wm. Finch, though some of them were in debt to him for goods.

Twice I spent about two hours in a store where a crowd had gathered. I explained the inside work of the lodge and talked salvation to them. After that they were more cautious. They sent out for a Methodist class-leader who came in and denied the correctness of Ronayne's "Hand-book." He said there were mistakes in it. When asked to specify them, he said he would not, because the people would then believe the rest to be correct. In reciting the oath of the first degree I omitted the words "hereby" and "herein." A man interrupted me, saying: "You made a mistake—have not you left out something?" I replied: "Yes, I left out the words 'hereby' and 'herein;' I was after a point." These and many other incidents opened the eyes of many. Before the time for the expose, the chimney was twice filled with brick, but no harm was done. The local paper strongly denounced some of their acts. The Masons had thoroughly exposed themselves, and so the community got a clear view of the influence of lodge-schooling.

I spoke three nights on the religion of Freemasonry. The house was full, though the snow-drifts kept many away. At the close of my third discourse I gave an opportunity for reply. No one responded. Bro. A. D. Noyes, who heard all but the first lecture, endorsed what he had heard. He had been a Freemason. Being well known there as an excellent Christian man, his words made a strong impression. A Methodist Mason called at my room and we had a thorough talk. If he walks in the light, he will soon be a free man. My old friend, Bro. A. J. Root, came some distance to see me, and the Lord greatly blessed us together. Elder Gilmore came to see me, and wanted me to lecture on his circuit. There were other openings. But the roads were badly blockaded. I hope to go up there again.

The hand of God was seen in many circumstances not mentioned herein. I had a chance to talk salvation in the cars and in depots. Several were anxious to get books and decided to order them. I have been in special meetings nearly all winter. The God of all grace has been with me. Praise his name.

But how little is being done in Michigan! I pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest! A. H. Springstein.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BISHOP WEAVER'S "OUTLOOK."

Frontier, Mich.

In the Religious Telescope of February 25, 1885, appears an article from the pen of Bishop Weaver on the outlook of the United Brethren church, as to its law prohibiting secrecy. He affirms that he has always observed this special law. This affirmation was eminently necessary, for any one familiar with the sayings, speeches, writings and doings of the grossest nullifiers would have declared that the Bishop's speech "bewrayeth him."

He declares that, "in principle I am to-day where I was forty years ago." Then the constitution voiced his principle. It prohibited secrecy. His writings were against secrecy. But now a prohibitory law against secrecy is to him equivalent to the decanter practice of his fathers! Therefore, his principle of forty years ago and now, is no better than decanter practice. The quicker we know that this is true the better is it for the church.

He interrogatively affirms that the church is a failure in saving men from the lodge. Not so. Wherever ministers are very careful to observe the law, and "instruct our people upon the evils of secret societies," not only are men saved from the lodge, but they are prevented from being ensnared in such evils. In the loyal conferences there are more men saved from lodges than from the lives of sots.

The Bishop strains himself to say that the law on the "trial of members" is scriptural, but impliedly teaches that the law, expressly based upon "Be ye not unequally yoked with unbelievers," is scandalously unscriptural!—indeed, implacable, forever debarring a man from fellowship! But all know that any offender of any law of the discipline may by satisfactory repentance, be permitted membership again. This law is no more implacable than any other law by which an offender is disfellowshiped.

He says: "Many of these converts could be won from these minor orders if they could be cared for and instructed; but our law meets them at the door and forbids them entrance." The Bishop declares that he believes that God has called the U. B. church to oppose this evil, but wants its advocates in the church so that we may oppose them more effectually! But why discriminate against the major orders? Are the members of these major orders possessors of smaller souls? If minor orders are more liable to succumb if their members are in the church, why not oppose these stronger orders the same way? Indeed, why not open the gates so wide that all sin may walk right into church fellowship in order to its reformation! This would be in keeping with the sophistry he employs in opposing the sentiment, "Give us a pure church." A "thousand other" evils already in, the Bishop pleads for one more!

But the Bishop bases his plea on the necessity of getting money. True, it is an "evil," but there's money in it. Big congregations, fat salaries, and grand churches in high places are held forth as the inducement to fellowshipping this "evil." If the devil can betray less conscience let him try his hand!

But how to bring this "evil" in is the rub with the Bishop. His plan is to place a "construction" on the constitution which says: "There shall be no alteration of the foregoing constitution unless by request of two-thirds of the whole society," by which the word "request" shall not mean request, and "whole society" shall not mean whole society, and "two-thirds" shall not mean that much by several thousands. As well may he construe the section (an offense to him), which says that "There shall be no connection with secret combinations," to mean that the church shall not own a lodge or church as a partner with an order; or that "secret" does not mean secret, but an awfully and calamitously—who knows what? Possibly a dynamite association. Not quite so much money in them and more danger!

The Bishop would not have "one-third" rule the two-thirds. O, no! Less by far than that will do. One-tenth, according to his own "observation," only do not want secret societies debarred, and the Bishop is in favor by forced constructions of law and inert legal propositions to grant their wish. His principle is the same as it was forty years ago, and he is with the one-tenth! It is high time that this were revealed, and the Bishop is a good expositor. But who shallanswer for these years in which loyalists have been misled? W. H. Clay.

AN INTERESTING PERSONAL HISTORY.

[From a private letter.]

San Antonio, Feb. 25, 1885.

My Dear Brother:—I praise the Lord that some one is interested in us here in Texas. He has said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." I have been sending out your tracts to the preachers in different parts of Texas with the Cynosure and American, and am praying that they may do good work. I could give out some German and Swedish tracts. There are several German churches here, in fact the German and Mexican languages are spoken nearly as much as the English; there are also quite a number of Swedes in town and some Swedish churches in Austin.

You want to know something about my history. I was born in Roxbury, Mass., now a part of the city of Boston. My wife was born in South Carolina. I left home to seek my fortune before I was seventeen years of age; and sailed around Cape Horn in the fall of 1849 to California, a hard place at that time for a young man just starting out in life. Gamblers were the aristocracy, and the bowie knife and revolver the law. As soon as I arrived in San Francisco, I went to work for seven dollars per day, and at the end of the week, (notwithstanding I had been taught to believe in Jesus, and had been obliged to go to church and Sabbath-school every Sunday) I was found at the gambling table playing poker, and I continued to gamble more or less for upwards of twenty years. I followed mining principally for fifteen years, and stock-raising on a small scale twelve years. Fifteen years of my life I did not hear a sermon preached, or go inside a church, and not more than five or six times in twenty years. I got worse and worse, and was frightened sometimes at the wickedness of my own heart. I became skeptical in regard to the truth of the Bible, and doubted the existence of a God.

But the Lord in his mercy did not cast me off forever. I became uneasy and began to inquire, Is my mother's God a myth? Is the Bible true? Is there any evidence of Christianity? I began reading everything that I could get on the subject. I saw myself as a sinner before God, only worthy of death, but God had given me such a view of the Saviour and of his plan of salvation, that I had no trouble in making an unconditional surrender, and felt as secure in his arms as a child in the arms of its mother. I had read the "Way of Holiness" by Sister Palmer, and copies of the Guide to Holiness, and was constantly seeking for the experience of perfect love, which blessing I received some six months subsequent to my conversion. I joined the M. E. Church and received license to exhort and afterwards to preach. I commenced preaching against the popular sins in the church, and they did not like that, though they renewed my license every year, and I continued to obey God and show his people their sins, for I saw more pride and worldliness than spirituality.

One of the prominent members of the church wanted me to join the Good Templars, and said they needed my influence. I told him I would read the Bible and pray over it. This was before I had read or heard anything against secret societies, but the more I read my Bible and prayed the less inclined I was to join, and finally I saw that it was just as much forbidden in the Bible as stealing, and I had entered into a covenant with God to obey him, and had no intention or desire to explain away any part of his Word. After preaching as a local preacher for about five years I felt that my work was done in that vicinity and I sold out, and came to Texas with a view of going to the Pan Handle, but was detained at the quarantine station for eight days, which brought me to Corsicana on the day that the State Holiness camp-meeting opened. I attended the camp-meeting. Brother Harvey organized a Free Methodist church with eight members, mostly young converts, and left me to take charge of the work. The opposition was so fierce that we lost all but one of our original members. We were fiercely opposed by those who ought to have given us aid, and our names were cast out as evil. We could get no place to hold meetings. I had a little money, and bought two lots and built a little church, 20 by 30, with a little room back where I lived and boarded myself. At that time I was not married. I remained there three years, and by the help of the Lord and a few faithful brethren, succeeded in building up a little society of about thirty members, and I believe every one of them would pray in public and speak in class, and two young preachers have joined the conference from the society. They now have a good large church of their own, and are driving the battle on with all their might.

I am now probably in the hardest place in Texas. The people have no regard for God, the Bible, or the Sabbath. The beer gardens are crowded on the Sabbath with dancing and carousing, and the churches are comparatively empty. They have done a great many things to stop us. At one place where we were invited to preach at a private house where several families were living, by a lady who lived in part of the house, a gang came with guns, cursing and swearing, and declaring that I should not preach. But the Lord was with us, and we had victory, and some of them sneaked off, while others sat down and became as docile as lambs.

We want to build a church, but I cannot do it here as in Corsicana; but am trusting in the Lord. We have a large tent that will hold 200 people and a small one that we live in, and we believe that the Lord will establish his work here. I was married four years ago and my wife is with me heart and soul in the work. Pray for us. Your brother in Christ.

Warren Parker.

PITH AND POINT.

NO DUES DUE THE LODGE.

I wish to call upon the editors of all the prohibition papers to give continual and thorough warning against secret orders and make all to know that the liquor traffic is protected and kept in existence by these societies. Bro. Benjamin is right about not paying his lodge "dues." I left the Masonic order not far from twenty years ago and I have never paid any lodge "dues" since, and have never had any smitings of conscience on that subject, and feel that the Lord has nothing marked down against me on that score. What the lodge may have I neither know nor care. "If the son shall make you free ye shall be free indeed."—Eli Tapley, Columbus, Miss.

CAN SOMEBODY VISIT MUSCATINE, IOWA?

I drop you a line as a reminder of the sad state of things in our city as regards temperance and secret societies. The judge of our judicial district, Walker A. Hayes, is an avowed enemy of prohibition, and the most aggressive temperance workers are trying to secure his impeachment. But here the societies all grow and flourish without let or hindrance, as none seem to know of their baneful influence. Among other evils tolerated is that of a bar in one of the leading hotels, whose owner is an elder in the —— church. The great national reform movement is a thing unheard of, we regret to say, up to date. However, our leading paper is doing much for the prohibition cause, although devotedly Republican. I have never yet heard any minister say aught against an oath-bound society within eighteen months. If the battle could only be opened against them here much good might be done. Could you not reach this place occasionally from Rock Island, Wayne, or Monmouth?—Anti-mason.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT.

Rev. H. A. Day, in his article Feb. 26, makes us infer that the dear brother thinks the most important work our preachers can do is to preach against Masonry. If this is his idea, I beg to differ, as I cannot conceive that a soul who went to perdition from without the lodge would be any better off than though he went there from within; and it will certainly not save a man merely to get him out of the lodge. Again, I admit that a great deal of the argument about sanctification is senseless; but that ceases when we succeed in getting a soul to cease arguing and accept the Sanctifier, for that moment we not only have him saved from the sin of the lodge but from all sin. I have never known a truly sanctified soul to have any affiliation with the lodge, at least the Masonic. Warren Parker, San Antonio, Tex.

RICH ON PAPER.

I have a little item of great interest to me, and perhaps it might be to some of the readers of the Cynosure, showing what money at interest will do both for the lender and borrower. In December, 1851, I sold to a man in California a mule for $150. He gave me his note for the same at 5 per cent per month, if paid in one year; if not, to bear 60 per cent per year compound interest. I have got a good accountant to cast up the interest and he says the amount due me last December was $544,706,489.15, which would without doubt make me (if I could collect it) the richest man in the world. At that time in California many paid as high as ten per cent a month. The man left the State soon after and I suppose went home to Tennessee.—I. Bancroft.

NORTHERN WISCONSIN.

Prohibition is having quite a boom here. They have an organization or club and are doing a good work. I say, God bless them, as it is one of our American planks and may open the door for more.—A. S. Hammond, Eau Claire, Wis.

THE SECRET OF THE LORD.

At a reception of the Knight's Templar in Cleveland the Rev. B. F. Brooks, pastor First M. E. church, in his address of welcome said: "The secret of the Lord is with the mighty, and the angels will not reveal it to the uninitiated." Do they suppose that the people cannot understand what such stuff means? Go on, dear friends; God bless you; God help you. May you be prospered in your noble work of reform, and may the secret of the Lord, which is "with those who fear him," fill all our hearts with courage and zeal.—Mrs. S. R. Overholt, Nashville, Mich.

CATTLE IN THE INDIAN TERRITORY.

I have been told by men who are interested that forty per cent of the cattle in the Indian Territory and on the ranges in Western Kansas are already dead and that the worst time has not come yet. It is claimed that after the grass starts in the spring the mortality among them will exceed that caused by the storms of winter. They will try to subsist on the young grass before it is old enough to support them, and as a consequence the poor weak creatures will mire very easily. Who is responsible for the untold suffering and misery of these poor dumb animals? Where is the Henry Bergh who will bring those cattle men to account, who keep more cattle than they can provide food for in the winter? It would be sufficient reason for the government to expel all the cattle men from the Indian Territory—this indifference to the suffering of the poor brutes under their charge.—W. D. Clay, Wellington, Kan.

A GOOD ESTIMATE FROM TEXAS.

I see in your last issue that there were about sixteen thousand protested against Masonic ceremonies at the Washington monument. I think with sufficient time and energy at least twice that number could have been obtained. I could have gotten a goodly list in this section, although secretism carries the day here. But, thank God, we have some Baptist ministers and others who are opposed to it. I have circulated the Christian Cynosure some and to good effect. I have been receiving it for over a year, through the kindness of my parents. I am strictly in sympathy with every reform movement of the paper, and may God hasten the time when its principles shall become law.—N. W. Griffin, Palo Pinto, Tex.

BIBLE LESSONS.

REVIEW.

[From Peloubet's Notes.]

LESSON XIII.—March 29, 1885.—Paul's review of his ministry. Acts 20: 17-36.

GOLDEN TEXT.—But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the grace of God. Acts 20: 24.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

Time.—The lessons of this quarter extended over three years and two months of Paul's life, from May 28, A. D. 57, to August, A. D. 60. Paul was 55 to 58 years of age. The Gospel had been preached for thirty years, from the day of Pentecost, May A. D. 30.

Territory.—The Gospel had been preached in the larger portion of the Roman Empire east of Rome. It had a foothold in Europe, Asia, and Africa. There were churches in the leading cities.

Persons.—Paul and his companions, especially Luke, Timothy, and Trophimus, Agabus the prophet, Philip the evangelist, and his daughters, James the apostle, Eutychus the sleepy hearer, Felix, Claudius, Lysias, Festus, and Agrippa.

Missionary Journeys.—Paul has now completed his three great missionary journeys. (1) From Antioch through Asia Minor and return, A. D. 48–50, two years. (2) From Antioch through Asia Minor, into Macedonia and Greece, and return through Jerusalem to Antioch, A. D. 51–54, three or four years. (3) From Antioch through Asia Minor, three years in Ephesus, to Macedonia and Greece, and return to Jerusalem, A. D. 54–58, four years.

The Return of the Missionary.—This quarter begins with Paul completing his third missionary journey. He had just been driven from Ephesus, where he had had a most successful ministry of three years. He proceeds through Macedonia to Greece. After three months at Corinth he returns towards Jerusalem, where he arrives in May, A. D. 58.

Events.—These may be called up by the places noted on the return journey—Eutychus at Troas, the address at Miletus, the warning at Tyre, the prophecy at Ceserea, the mob at Jerusalem, followed by the rescue, addresses, plot, and escape to Cesarea.

Paul's Review of his Conversion is twice given in this quarter, and may be used for practical instruction.

Paul's Review of his Ministry, as related to the elders of Ephesus, the characteristics of Paul, his earnestness, faithfulness, tenderness, hopes, unselfishness, desire for the salvation of men, are all shown here, and give many practical lessons.

Lessons.—Let the scholars suggest (1) the truths that seem to them most clearly taught by these lessons; (2) the duties enforced.

Laws making scientific temperance education compulsory have been enacted in the States of Vermont, Michigan, New Hampshire, New York and Rhode Island. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Massachusetts proposes to make a vigorous effort this winter to have a similar law adopted in that State.

Mr. Nathaniel McKay, writing on the Panama Canal scheme, says that every ship which runs from New York to the Isthmus carries 500 barrels of alcohol. "The loafers who hang about the works," he adds, "use every endeavor to drink it up. This is the greatest cause of the reported large number of tumbstones on Monkey Hill."

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Iowa, D. P. Rathbun, Wayne.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
Jas. Furguson, Clarence, Iowa.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun. Wayne, Iowa.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans.
D. A. Richards Clarkville, Mich.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only conditiou for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenent) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomcroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Cowell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needies, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.

4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.

5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.

7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.

8. We hold to and will vote for womau suffrage.

9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.

10. That International differences should be settled by arbitration.

11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.

14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long negiect of its duty in respect to this evil.

15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solshury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

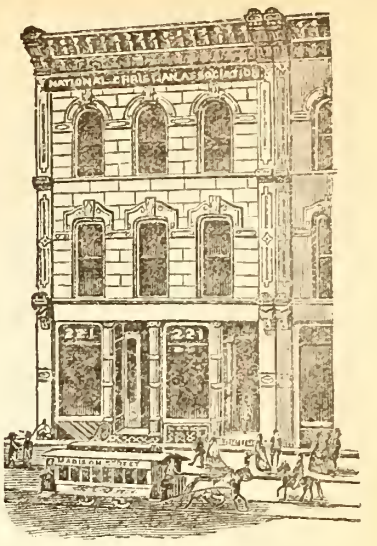
Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.

ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.



A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

VICE-PRES.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.

COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D
SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., C. C. Foote, Detroit; Rec. Sec'y, W. H. Ross, Williamstown; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler, Albany.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. pooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesharre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

Editors.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 19, 1885

"Devil-worship at the Monument.—Four articles under the above head, in this Cynosure, taken from the Advance, the Interior, Catholic Examiner and the Midland, will be read with interest. They show the progress of the press in handling the lodge. That "It is beyond question that Freemasonry is a religion" shows an advance in ideas and knowledge well befitting the name of the paper. But the Interior is keener, clearer and sounder still. Mr. Gray says of the Masonic libation, pouring corn, oil and wine on the ground (misquoted on the third page):

"It is a very ancient rite—doubtless the most ancient of all religious rites, except, possibly burnt-offerings. Its object was to placate the spirits below, as the burnt-offerings were to placate the spirits above—hence it was demon-worship. It was found fully established in western Asia and in Greece and Egypt at the dawn of history. Whatever may now be meant to Freemasons,—they speak of them as 'emblems,'—they constitute a religious rite."

This is rare and admirable, and when the great body of Presbyterians who read the Interior, come to see and understand that those evil spirits, "devils," against whom Christ wrought his most stupendous miracles, are worshipped in the secret lodges, they will abhor them.

Mr. H. N. Waldo, Arcade, N. Y., was one of the 7,000 who voted for Birney in 1840, and one of the 150,000 who voted for St. John in 1884. He writes: "The Whigs coaxed and scolded then; but I never before knew what it was to be sworn at; have fists shook in my face, and called very bad names, till a few of us voted for St. John. It seems to me the same spirit was here that murdered Lovejoy; struck down Sumner, and mobbed yourself and others. The Kuklux, it seemed, had come North." Yet, in 1840, the reasons for sustaining Clay against Polk, slavery and the Mexican war, were a hundred to one stronger than for supporting Blaine.

Mr. L. Landon wishes a statement in reply to the late repetition of lodge falsehoods concerning Washington's Masonry. These falsehoods are their assertions:

1. That Washington was an active and devoted Mason.

2. That he was master of a lodge.

Both of these statements are proven false by documentary evidence furnished the Legislature of Pennsylvania, by Gov. Ritner, in the year 1837, March 8th, pursuant to a vote of that body. The tract or pamphlet containing these proofs, can be had by applying at the office of the Cynosure, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago, Ills.

The Inaugural of President Cleveland is a straightforward, condensed, statesman-like, non-partisan document. The papers say he "reverently kissed the Bible on which he was sworn into office—a Bible well worn, which his mother gave him when he left home," And his invocation of "Almighty God," at the close of the ceremony, was appropriate and becoming a Christian nation. The crime of King David was worse than the vices imputed to Cleveland. Let us pray that our incoming administration may equal in fidelity and justice that of the penitent Hebrew King.

The Detroit Freemason runs a tilt against the petition against Masonic paganism at the Washington Monument. The editor repeats: "The Father of his country during the greater part of his life was a member of the craft. That Masons are the oldest organized civic body in America, and represent today a far greater number of this country's citizens than any other society." There are about six millions of Catholics, and not more than half of one million Freemasons in this country. Such lying is simply monstrous.

"Mr. Joseph Cook," says the United Presbyterian, "in one of his late preludes, announced that we must have a new party with which to put down the liquor traffic, giving as his reason that the whisky power is so great, and that the old parties have refused to destroy it, or even try to do so. But it is not a new party we want. But work without and above all parties. A party of temperance, of Sabbath keeping, of anti-divorce, of pernicious literature, of the third commandment—where will we stop?" At the platform of the American party.

THE UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST—A DAY OF PRAYER AND FASTING.

The Cynosure ventures to suggest to Dr. L. Davis, of the Dayton Theological Seminary, and to ex-Bishop Milton Wright, of the Richmond Star, to invite all brethren like-minded with them to unite in a day of prayer and fasting for the presence and blessing of God on their General Conference, to meet next May. The 160 to 170 thousand brethren of that communion, and ten times that number outside the denomination, with the religious press generally, will look upon the meeting at Fostoria, Ohio, next May, as a turn-table on which religious opinions in this country will veer toward the worship of Christ, or that of Satan. If there remains on earth any of the "worship of devils," mentioned in Deut. 32: 17; Lev. 17: 17; Ps. 106: 37: Rev. 9: 20, and in numerous other Scriptures, the secret lodge rites are such worship; omitting, as they do, Father, Son and Holy Ghost. And "this kind goeth not forth but by prayer and fasting."

Not scholars only, but all Christians, know; indeed, none dispute, that Paul commands to dis-fellowship secret societies as "unfruitful works of darkness," Eph. 5: 11. The church of the United Brethren has, from its foundation, excluded them, and to meet their impudence and fearful craft, they have adopted a rule, foregoing a formal trial, and declaring those who join secret societies out of the church as seceders, and reason and religion justify the rule. There is no more need of a formal trial when a member has openly gone to a priest and joined a secret lodge, than if he had gone to a Popish priest and joined a Romish church, or hung out his sign and gone to selling liquor. And now, as the Conference draws near, the Religious Telescope groans with articles assailing their just and reasonable anti-secrecy law.

Bishop J. Weaver, Feb. 25th, assails the anti-secrecy rule because:—

1. "If it were not for our sweeping law against all secret orders, we could to-day have large, self-sustaining congregations in towns and cities where now we have none." But this argument is as good for admitting liquor-sellers as Masons, for liquor is as strong in the cities as the lodge is. Again he says:

2. "Our present law, by a good many of our ministers, is not, and, in my opinion, will not be enforced." And this is said by a Bishop; and "overseer," set by God and his brethren to see that discipline, that rule included, is enforced. The civil sheriffs and governors who made this plea a few years since in favor of secession, were held to be rebels and confederate with rebels; and they were. So is Bishop Weaver.

But Bishop Weaver says further:

3. "The law makes no provision for the restoration of one who has joined a secret society, no matter what his confessions and promises might be, that is if he withdraws from the secret order—says he is sorry he joined, and will quit it!" Bishop Weaver under-estimates the intelligence of United Brethren if he expects them to believe such an objection to the law sincere, and not deserving pity and disgust. "Restore such an one in the spirit of meekness," is the rule of Christ for penitent offenders of all classes, penitent Masons included.

But the proof that Bishop Weaver is utterly insincere, and "walking in craftiness," is seen in the fact that in his three solid columns of attack on the rule excluding the lodge, he suggests no alteration or amendment. If he was a fair-minded, upright man he should tell his people, who have trusted him, honestly what he wants. If he wishes to receive Odd Fellows, or the Grand Army, or Good Templars, he is bound in decency and candor, to let his church know where he means to land them. But not a word of this. He transcribes the very spirit of those who assailed Christ. They took no ground themselves, only but sought to obstruct and hinder his efforts to do good and repress evil.

But the venerable and beloved Dr. L. Davis has commenced a reply to him (Telescope, March 11th), and promises to expose "The false assumptions and flimsy reasoning by which the Bishop (Weaver invites anarchy and revolution" into the church. Ten thousand blessings rest on the beloved and excellent Dr. Davis.

Our readers will remember Dr. Z. Warner, the nullifier, whose doctorate by President Thompson, seemed to have quieted him for a time. This strange brother, in the Telescope of Feb. 18th, comes to the front with Bishop Weaver's argument that opposing secret societies loses money by keeping the Brethren church out of cities, and keeping rich men out of the church." He says: "More than a hundred years have failed to give us one millionaire; and it may be doubted if there are two hundred people in our church worth one hundred thousand dollars. * * * If we were to enter the cities in force at once, it will be years before there will be any financial aid come from them" And again: "There are thousands of dollars in the hands of our people ready to be given whenever they are convinced that we have arranged for successful work," (by taking in the Masons, of course).

We need patience to consider such arguments. They sound so like the talk of him who "had the bag" and plead, "This ointment might have been sold for three hundred pence;" that the line of Faber rushes to our memory.

Behind him crouches Judas with the silver in his hands.

But these brethren forget that most men who join the lodge now do so to get, not to give.

Then we have a brother who signs himself "A Progressive Pastor," in the Telescope, March 11th, who discourses thus concerning "The law on secrecy." "I say, leave the whole thing out, root and branch." * * * "The pastors of this church never will enforce it." And then he adds: "I operate as a pastor in a city of 60,000 people; and when I hear it said we cannot reach the rich, and we cannot reach the working men because they belong to some union or other, for these unions are secret societies; and we can't take the old battle-scarred veteran, because he belongs to the Grand Army, then I wonder in heaven's name who I am to hunt for, and what class I am to take in?"

In answer we observe: Bishop Weaver in this very paper of Feb. 25th, says: "I give it as my deliberate opinion that nine-tenths of our people—ministers and all—are opposed to secret societies." And the shrewd observer who edits The Interior, says: "The number of those who detest secret societies runs up into millions." Surely among these millions "a progressive pastor" might possibly find souls to bring to Christ in a city of sixty thousand people, even if he had to look for them in "the highways and hedges," as Christ commanded.

But if Bishop Weaver's estimate is right, that nine-tenths of that church are opposed to secret societies, the worst possible policy would be to let in secret societies to purchase either peace or prosperity. The man who trades with the devil, loses both purchase and price. Bishop Weaver and the "progressive pastor" plead for "the minor secret orders;" especially the Grand Army. Do not these gentlemen know that Masons run and rule those lesser orders? That John A. Logan pre-empted the Grand Army for the last election? If sensible men were compelled to buy snakes, they would prefer to take the old ones, the most frightful, and which would die soonest. But for Bishop Weaver now, when the whole dark dynamite family are going out of fashion, to advise the brethren to take an instalment of them to their bosom, betokens senility or something worse.

But the power of the lodge is superhuman, and human wit, or power, or wisdom, can not successfully cope with it. Our Saviour prescribed the only effectual method, which is "prayer and fasting." Will not Dr. Davis and ex-Bishop Wright appoint a day of prayer for their next General Conference, and invite all to unite with them who can be reached by the anti-secret religious press of the community?

THE CHICAGO BRETHREN:—A DIALOGUE.

Ques. What is the trouble? The Chicago brethren say they are Anti-masons, and think they are sincere; yet they shrink from active Anti-masons as if the Anti-masons had a contagious disease. There must be some flaw or screw loose in your machinery.

Ans. Some Chicago brethren shrink from active Anti-masons, as James and the Jerusalem Christians shrank from Paul, after the mob raised by "the Jews which were of Asia," had assailed him, and forty of them had sworn not to eat till they had killed him.—Acts 21.

Q. Why did Paul get up that uproar? James did not; and he was a good Christian and an apostle living right there in Jerusalem among thousands of Christians and among the very mob itself.—Acts 21: 20.

Ans. James's Jerusalem Christians were all "zealous of the law" (Acts 21: 20), and Satan was not afraid of such Christians, who mixed dead Jewish ceremonies with living faith in Christ. So Satan is not afraid of Chicago churches, whose communions are all open to the dead Jewish and Pagan ceremonies of the secret lodges; or those who practice those ceremonies. Satan got up that mob, and the half-and-half Jerusalem Christains laid it to Paul. So they shrank from him, and he would have been killed if it had not been for "the chief captain."

Q. Why didn't Paul bend a little to their notions?—not be so stiff?

Ans. He did. He said, "I am a Pharisee;"

shaved his head and "purified himself," as the Jews did; but that did no good. They knew Paul stood for "simple faith in Christ and against salvation by their customs."

Q. Was that really all they had against him?

Ans. Oh, no! An ex parte counell told and swore to a whole ship-load of lies about him. They even made the chief captain believe that Paul was an Egyptian and captain of a gang of murderers! See Acts 21: 38.

Q. Well, how did things turn out at last?

Ans. It turned out this way: Paul, ignored, perhaps forgotten, by the settled pastors and thousands of Christians in Jerusalem, was sent in chains a missionary to Rome, at the expense of the empire; preached "two whole years" there, "no man forbidding him," and his doctrine filled the world, so that 215,000,000, more than half of the Christians on the globe call themselves "Roman Catholics," after the name of the church which Paul founded with a chain on his arm! Whether James and the city brethren who were Judaizing disciples, ever repented of mixing up with religion those empty ceremonies which they made Paul practice (Aets 21: 24), we know not. But we imagine they did; and that they all fell in love with Paul, as Peter did (2 Pet. 3:15) and as we doubt not the Chicago brethren will yet fall in love with the "active Anti-masons."

ADVENTISM.

Our attention is called to this subject by a friendly and fraternal criticism of the Cynosure by the Messiah's Advocate and Herald, Oakland, California. The editor says, "The Cynosure is well engaged in rescuing the church from the withering blight of the secret oath-bound societies." But he excepts to our saying, "It is the glory of God to conceal a thing;" and he has purposely concealed the time and manner of his coming.

This remark of the Cynosure was intended to apply to past as well as future comings. We have ever been taught, and believed, that when God appears in the Old Testament "mone humano," in human form, having "eyes," "hands," feet," etc., that it was Christ anticipating his humanity. So he came to Adam, to Abraham, to Jacob, etc. So he says to Moses, "I am Jehovah." "I am come down to deliver" my people; not in vision only, but in fact. So he came to Joshua as "Captain of the Lord's host." So he came to Saul on his way to Damascus, in vision to be sure, but none the less in fact. Finite cannot see or appreciate infinite. No man hath seen or can see God; yet he has made himself cognizable in the different ways given in Scripture. And in all these "comings," he hath concealed the mode. True the angels said, "He shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go." But the word "manner" refers merely to his coming to this earth through the clouds. But he will then come "in his glory;" in very different aspect from the humble, crucified body in which he departed. Every one of his comings has taken men by surprise, both as to time and mode or manner.

In Mr. Moody's meeting at Northfield, Mass., a good brother assured us that Christ would stand on Mt. Olive; and, said he, "I shall shake hands with him." Rev. Mr. Hinman, who writes much and well, says, "We can live in the air then, as well as on the earth." And Mr. Moody at the above meeting was asked, when the millennial coming had opened, and the Bride (the church) has met her Lord in the air, "to be forever with the Lord;" whether "conversions would still go on among those not taken up;" with many like inquiries. Mr. Moody grew reticent and changed the theme; and the Cynosure praised him for it.

William Miller, born in Pittsfield, Mass., in 1781, commanded a company in the war of 1812, and in 1833, at fifty-two years of age, fixed on 1843 as the date of Christ's coming to destroy and reconstruct the world. His converts were thousands; but his prediction failed. He and his converts insisted that their error must be slight, and fixed other periods for the final catastrophe. His interpretations were plansible, and some learned and thousands of good men adopted them. We now look back over the interval of forty-five years, and can judge the movement, as the Saviour said we should "know" men,—by its fruits. A sect has been formed, which has furnished sub-sects, divided by questions, of the day to keep Sabbath, whether the souls of the dead sleep, etc., etc., each characterized by the original zeal and positiveness of opinion. This effect is unhappy. It has aggravated by multiplication the state of schism which weakens and degrades the church of God.

But along with the few "dead flies" which scent sectarianism, the movement has yielded good and beautiful results. For instance: It has rescued a glorious host of Scriptures from oblivious neglect. It has put the coming of Christ as a living reality before multitudes who had almost forgotten that he is coming, and put them upon thinking whether they are, as on any interpretation they ought to be, prepared to meet and greet him at his coming. It has made thousands long for and love his appearing.

But the brightest truth casts the darkest shadow; and as the doctrine of predestination becomes mischevious error when it keeps a young minister from offering salvation to all in the house, for fear some are not elected; so Adventism is a curse to the man whom it takes off from and discourages in the work of preparing the way of the Lord," so that he may come. It has been attributed to Mr. Moody, though we have not seen it in his writings, that he considers our race a wreck and sinking, and his mission that of a man with a life-boat to bring off as many as he can. We do not so conceive things. It seems to us (Isa. 2: 4) that Christ is to produce a state of things yet in which "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither learn war any more;" that prayer is as prevalent now as when Hezekiah prayed, and God rescued the Hebrew commonwealth from the curse of lodge-worships (such as are now divorcing our United States and Europe from God), and suddenly "turned Israel back to the worship of God, and obedience to his law. We bless God for the work Mr. Moody is doing. He is holding up Christ who alone is to "draw all men" from their idols. Fifty years ago Dr. William Cogswell published a book, "The Harbinger of the Millennium," which taught us that The American Board and cognate societies were to bring in the millennium. At that very time the missionaries held slaves and slaves who could not read the name of Christ did the work in the mission schools; and when we objected to slavery we were ostracised and despised troublers of Israel! So now, our railroads are bringing our comforts from the ends of the earth, through the broken law of God to our very tables, and the best and brightest of our young men are going to hell by steam, by tens of thousands!

Now there is nothing in Christ's second advent which makes God's ear heavy, or his arm short. Let us insist on Christ's coming; for he will. But while we do not turn off our eyes from the signs of the times bnt look for and haste nnto his coming, let us not shrink from preparing his way, nor despond because "The acceptable year of the Lord" always, as in our slavery war, brings with it "The day of vengance of our God." Christ joined both together. "A fire goeth before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him." Let us not amuse ourselves with superficial, skin-deep revivals, or conjuring with the millennium. The Bridegroom will come when the Bride hath made herself ready. Amen: even so, come, Lord Jesus.

—Rev. Isaac Bancroft expects to start out on his summer's campaign in Wisconsin about the first of April. Write him at Monroe, Wis., as to the work needed in your county or neighborhood.

—Secretary Stoddard will present the petition for a prelude on Freemasonry to Joseph Cook very soon—perhaps has already done so. He has also formed a young men's club against the lodge in Boston, which he hopes will be a nucleus to attract others of like spirit and become a permanence and a power in the city.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard secured the names of most or all the Congregational pastors of Chicago to the Joseph Cook request. In Detroit Bro. C. C, Foote obtained over thirty names which he forwerded immediately to Rev. David McFall at East Cambridge, Mass.

—William Hall of W. Salamanca, N. Y., who wrote last week in favor of a union of all Prohibitionists, wishes to correct one mistake that occurs in it. Instead of himself who was distributing Anti-masonic tracts it was Gov. St. John himself who was so worthily engaged. No wonder his heart warmed to the Prohibition leader.

—One of the strangest peoples with whom missionary enterprise has had to do are the Falashas, of Ethiopia. They are black Jews, about 200,000 in number, living west of Jordan, who have as their holy writings the Old Testament in an Ethiopic version, and who still rigidly adhere to the Mosaic ceremonies and laws. Undobtedly they are not of pure Jewish descent, although to some extent they are the children of Jewish immigrants, who, in the time of the great dispersion, settled in Abyssina and married wives of that nation.

LECTURES AT MUSKINGUM COLLEGE.

New Concord, O., March 10, 1885.

At the request of friends of reform in this community, Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton (Ill.) College, delivered three lectures in the hall of Muskingum College in this place.

The first lecture was delivered at 7 P. M., Feb. 26th, on the subject, "Dynamite." The speaker took the ground that all secret societies are akin, and that they should all be prohibited by law. Secrecy adapts them to no good purpose and may adapt them to any evil purpose. The public can make no distinction between secret societies. They tack secrecy onto some good principle not to help the cause of truth, but that the good principle may help secrecy. For example, the Grand Army of the Republic tacks secrecy to patriotism, not that secrecy may help patriotism, but that patriotism may help secrecy. As far as secrecy is concerned, all secret orders are dangerous, and ought to be prohibited by law.

The second lecture was delivered at 1 P. M., Feb. 27th. The subject was, "Oath-bound." Some societies impose no oath, but take an affirmation or promise. Rash oaths are unscriptural. The obligation of secrecy of secret fraternities is rash, because it requires the candidate to bind himself to conceal what has not yet been made known to him. Until it is made known to him he cannot know whether it would be right to conceal it.

An oath or promise to do what is wrong is sinful. Such an oath or promise should not be kept. Freemasonry assures the candidate that its obligation will not interfere with his duties to his family, his neighbors, his country, or his God. But it is found that it inteferes with them all. An oath or promise imposing such obligations ought to be broken. Men should not "sneak out" of secret organizations when they become convinced they are wrong, but should come out of them manfully.

The third lecture was delivered at 10 A. M. Feb. 28th, on the subject of "Serving Idols." The speaker showed the sin of idolatry. Men make idols of many things. We all need to see if there is not something or other that takes the place of God in our hearts. Secret societies generally reject or ignore the Lord Jesus Christ. Such as are guilty of this cannot worship the true God. There are only two beings whom worship can reach, God and the devil. Many secret societies "sacrifice unto devils," and not to God. The speaker closed by saying that the day would come when the idolatry of the lodge system would be swept from off the face of the earth.

At each meeting there was present a large, intelligent, and appreciative audience. The speaker has the happy faculty of being able to illustrate by pleasing anecdotes. He is an able and eloquent orator. There is a probability that the students will bring him back to deliver them an address at no distant day. If he come he is certain to receive a hearty welcome. If you want a treat send for Pres. C. A. Blanchard, and you will be likely to get it.

Henry McCreary,
T. H. Paden,
M. Faris,
} Committee.

BROTHER HINMAN AGAIN IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, March 12, 1885.

Dear Cynosure:—The bad state of the roads in central Indiana made it inconvenient, if not impracticable to hold meetings, and I am taking a short vacation with my family.

I reached here on the evening of the 10th and found all in usual health. To-day I have visited the Capitol and attended the brief session of the United States Senate. Mr. Hendrieks presided with dne dignity, and reminds one of some respectable farmer in charge of a town meeting. To-day Mr. Van Wyck presented a petition concerning the forfeiture of a railroad land grant in Florida, which led to considerable discussion and was participated in by Senators Brown of Alabama, Edwards of Vermont, and Plumb of Kansas, who is apparently the youngest member of that body. At 1:30 the Senate adjourned for the day. These brief sessions will continue until the nominations are made, which Mr. Cleveland and his cabinet seem disposed to take ample time to consider.

There is an exceedingly hungry horde of office-seekers, and great and growing displeasure because their wants are not supplied. To-day there is great consternation among the clerks caused by the discharge of a considerable number of supernnmerary employes at the White House. It is feared that it was but a device to create vacancies to be filled by and by.

(Continued on 12th page.)

THE HOME.

IN HARBOR.

I think it is over, over—
I think it is over at last;
Voices of foeman and lover,
The sweet and the bitter have passed.
Life, like the tempest of ocean,
Hath outblown its ultimate blast.
There's hut a faint sobhing seaward,
While the calm of the tidc deepens leeward,
And hehold! like the welcoming quiver
Of heart-pulses throhbed through the river,
Those lights in the Harhor at last—
The heavenly harbor at last!

I feel it is over, over—
The winds and the waters surcease :
How few were the days of the Rover
That smiled in the beauty of peace!
And distant and dim was the omen
That hintcd redress or release
From the ravage of life and its riot,
What marvel I yearn for the quiet
Which hides in this Harbor at last?
For the lights, with their welcoming quiver,
That throb through the sanctified river
Which girdles the Harbor at last—
The heavenly harbor at last!

I know it is over, over—
I know it is over at last:
Down sail, the sheathed anchor uncover,
For the stress of the voyage has passed.
Life, like a tempest of ocean,
Hath outhlown its ultimate hlast.
There's but a faint sobbing seaward,
While the calm of the tide deepens leeward,
And behold! like the welcoming quiver
Of hcart-pulses throhhed through the river,
Those lights in the Harhor at last—
The heavenly harbor at last!

—Paul H. Hayne.

KNOW YOUR BIBLE.

BY JOSEPH COOK.

The Spaniards have a proverb which says: "An ounce of mother is worth a pound of clergy." An ounce of conduct is worth a ton of reading. An ounce of self-surrender to truth already possessed is worth a planet's weight of truth not transmuted into deeds. Nevertheless, it is so important to give attention to select reading in the hushed mood of spiritual sensitiveness, which is the only interpreter of souls in print, that, perhaps it is timely now to recite a list of illumiued, cheerful, incisive, stalwart books, which may be useful to those who lately have entered a Christian life, and some of which may become, not only food, but muscle. Let us always remember that mental and spiritual food without work are not transformed iuto uerve and muscle, and not merely food. Work after food makes strength; and food without work makes—what shall we say?—a plethoric, over-fed, luxurious, uneasy Christianity, an object of pity to gods and men.

What you want, of course, is first the Bible really understood—that is, acted out. How much do you know of Shakespeare until after you are forty years of age? Until a man has surrendered himself to God he caunot be said to appreciate the Bible, or any great merely human production. Let a poet like Milton, or Shakespeare, or Dante, make a painting of the inner sky in man, and he will put into it light and shade almost as strongly contrasted as the light and shade of Christianity. If there is not the Sun of the Atouement in it, there will be there the chariot of that Sun—a fathomless desire for peace with God and with the irreversible record of the past. But how can you understand great poetry of the secular sort until you have lived it, and multitudinous rifting experiences have opened your heart? Nevertheless, even with a heart untutored by fullness of life, it is better for you to read great poetry than third-rate poetry—the light fiddling of the charlatans, who sing the anthem of the stars as if it were a dancing tune, and make a painting of the sky without the sun in it, or moon, or light, or shade, or much of anything else. It is best for you in studying what is greatest in the results of human imagination, to avoid mercilessly all second-rate matter, however good; and so, in feeding your devotional life, it is best for you to avoid Bunyan, and Jeremy Taylor, and Baxter, and Martineau, and Pascal, and Bushnell, and Thomas a Kempis himself, if these books shut out the Bible from daily and almost hourly use. The Germans have a proverb, that "the better is a great enemy of the best," and these richest of the devotional works are a mischief if they hinder you from taking the Bible as your supreme inspirer in life, as it will undoubtedly be your solace in death.

Do you know a book that you are willing to put under your head for a pillow when you lie dying? Very well; that is the book you want to study while you are living. There is but one such book in the world. For one, I have not made up my mind to put under my head when I lie dying, anything written by Voltaire, or Strauss, or Parker. We are to be scientifically careful when we choose a book for a dying pillow. If you can tell me what you want for a dying pillow, I will tell you what you want for a pillar of fire in life—that is, the Bible, spiritually understood by being transmuted into deeds. Sentiment is worth nothing until it becomes principle, and principle is worth nothing until it becomes action.—Bible Readings.

THE PSALMS.

Richard Sibbes, two hundred and fifty years ago, the erudite preacher at Gray's Inn, London, said: "If the Scriptures be compared to a body, the Psalms may well be the heart; they are so full of sweet affections and passions." Indeed, without them, the pulse of the church's devotion would probably long since have beaten so low as to be scarcely discernible. God's people in all ages, have been taught both how to pray and to praise from the book of Psalms.

A most venerable bequest of antiquity is this book. If the Hebrew nation had handed down to us no other embodiment of literature and religion than this, they would have been entitled to our boundless gratitude. And even poetry, as well as piety, has lingered about these Psalms at all times with admiration. As though they had been all written by one man, the classic and brilliant Lamartine exclaims: "The sweet singer of Israel! The first poet of sentiment! The king of lyrics! All the most secret murmurs of the human heart found their voice and their note on the lips and the harp of this minstrel. Read Horace or Pindar after a Psalm! For my part I cannot."

Both Milton and Addison, poets rare, hung with mingled delight and reverence over the Psalms, and both nibbed their pens for some attempted transference of their beauty and excellence into English. In the same class, also, belongs Bacon, who said: "If you listen to David's harp you shall hear as many hearse-like airs as carols." Philosophy did not humble itself, when it lent its ear to these strains of ancient piety, and "listened to David's harp."

Once privileged with a few minutes' conversation with Longfellow, I alluded to the Psalms, which led him to say with mueh emphasis and signficance of expression, in reference to some modern fancy that David did not write them, "But somebody wrote them!" As though they were worth all that they are commonly held to be, from whose pen soever they came.—Rev. J. G. Hall, in N. Y. Observer.

JOHN PLOUGHMAN'S TALK ON PATIENCE.

Patience is better than wisdom; an ounce of patience is worth a pound of brains. All men praise patience, but few enough can practice it; it is a medicine which is good for all diseases, and, therefore, every old woman recommends it; but it is not every garden that grows the herbs to make it with. When one's flesh and bones are full of aches and pains, it is as natural for us to murmur as for a horse to shake his head when the flies tease him, or a wheel to rattle when a spoke is loose; but nature should not be the rule with Christians, or what is their religion worth? If a soldier fights no better than a ploughboy, off with his red coat. We expect more fruit from an apple-tree than from a thorn, and we have a right to do so. The disciples of a patient Saviour should be patient themselves. Grin and bear it, is the old-fashioned advice, but Sing and bear it, is a great deal better. After all, we get very few cuts of the whip, considering what bad cattle we are; and when we do smart a little, it is soon over. Pain past is pleasure, and experience comes by it. We ought not to be afraid of going down iuto Egypt when we know we shall come out of it with jewels of gold and silver.

Impatient people water their miseries, and hoe up their comforts; sorrows are visitors that come without invitation, but complaining minds send a wagon to bring their troubles home in. Many people are born crying, live complaining, and die disappointed; they chew the bitter pill which they would not even kuow to be bitter if they had the sense to swallow it whole in a cup of patience and water. They think every other man's burden to be light, and their own feathers to be heavy as lead; they are hardly done by in their own opinion; no one's toes are so often trodden on by the black ox as theirs; the snow falls thickest round their door, and the hail rattles the hardest on their windows: and yet, if the truth were known, it is their fancy rather than their fate which makes things go so hard with them. Many would be well off if they could but think so. A little sprig of the herb called content put into the poorest soup will make it taste as rich as the Lord Mayor's turtle. John Ploughman grows the plant in his garden, but the late hard winter nipped it terribly, so that he cannot afford to give his neighbors a slip of it; they had better follow Matthew 25: 9, and go to those who sell and buy for themselves. Grace is a good soil to grow it in, but it wants watering from from the fountain of mercy.

To be poor is not always pleasant, but worse things than that happen at sea. Small shoes are apt to pinch, but not if you have a small foot; if we have little means it will be well to have little desires. Poverty is no shame, but being discontented with it, is. In some things the poor are better off than the rich; for if a poor man has to seek meat for his stomach, he is more likely to get what he is after, than the rich man who seeks a stomach for his meat. A poor man's table is soon spread, and his labor spares his buying sauce. The best doctors are Dr. Diet, Dr. Quiet, and Dr. Merryman, and many a godly plowman has all these gentlemen to wait upon him. Plenty makes dainty, but hunger finds no fault with the cook. Hard work brings health, and an ounce of health is worth a sack of diamonds. It is not how much we have, but how much we enjoy that makes happiness. There is more sweet in a spoonful of sugar than in a cask of vinegar. It is not the quantity of our goods, but the blessing of God on what we have that makes us truly rich. The parings of a pippin are better than a whole crab; a dinner of herbs with peace is better than a stalled ox and contention therewith. "Better is a little with the fear of the Lord than great treasure and trouble therewith." A little wood will heat my oveu; why, then, should I murmur because all the woods are not mine?

When troubles come it is no use to fly in the face of God by hard thoughts of providence; that is kicking against the pricks and hurting your feet. The trees bow in the wind, and so must we. Every time the sheep bleats, it loses a mouthful, and every time we complain, we miss a blessing. Grumbling is a bad trade and yields no profit, but patience has a golden hand. Our evils will soon be over. After rain comes clear shining; black crows have wings; every winter turns to spring; every night breaks into morning.

"Blow the wind never so fast,
It will lower at last."

If one door should be shut God will open another; if the peas do not yield well, the beans may; if one hen leaves her eggs, another will bring out all her brood; there's a bright side to all things, and a good God everywhere. Somewhere or other in the worst flood of trouble, there always is a dry spot for contentment to get its foot ou, and if there were not it would learn to swim.

Friends, let us take to patience and water-gruel, as the old folks used to tell us, rather than catch the miserables, and give others the disease by wickedly finding fault with God. The best remedy for affliction is submitting to providence. What can't be cured must be endured. If we cannot get bread, let us bless God that there are still some cabbages in the garden. Must is a hard nut to crack, but it has a sweet kernel. "All things work together for good to them that love God." Whatever falls from the skies is, sooner or later, good for the laud: whatever comes to us from God is worth having, even though it be a rod. We cannot by nature like trouble any more than a mouse can fall in love with a cat, and yet Paul by grace came to glory in tribulations also. Losses and crosses are hard to bear, but when our hearts are right with God, it is wonderful how easy the yoke becomes. We must needs go to glory by the way of Weeping Cross; aud as we were never promised that we should ride to heaven in a feather bed, we must not be disappointed when we see the road to be rough, as our fathers found it before us. All's well that ends well; and, therefore, let us plow the heaviest soil with our eye on the sheaves of harvest, and learn to sing at our labor while others murmur.—Spurgeon.

BIBLE READINGS FOR THE YOUNG.

THE ONLY FOUNDATION. Read Luke 6: 45–49.

For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. 1 Cor. 3: 11.

1. Who laid this sure foundation in Zion? Isa. 28: 16; John 3: 16.
2. What is it to dig deep for this rock? 2 Pet. 1: 10; Prov. 2: 3-5.
3. What is it to build on this rock? 1 Pet. 2: 4–7; 2 Pet. 1: 5–7.

4. What does the sand on which many build represent? Rom. 10: 3; Deut. 29: 19; Matt, 7: 22.
—Notes for Bible Study.

THE CHILD OF NAZARETH.

That little home in Nazareth—
How bright it must have been,
When in it dwelt the blessed Child
Who knew no toueh of sin.

How glad his mother must have felt,
As day by day he grew
In strength and beauty by her side,
So pure, so sweet, so true.

And often as she spoke his name—
Dear name, and angel given—
And quickly at her call he came,
She saw the light of heaven

Upon the gentle, lifted face,
And in the wistful eyes
That were so strangely beautiful,
So loving, meek, and wise.

I think he was a joyous child,
And when he went and came
The mountain kids about him played;
The wild wood birds grew tame.

None ever heard a hasty word
From this fair, sinless Child;
None ever saw him frown,
But all were happy when he smiled.

I'm sure he did not fully know
His father's business yet;
But still his hands were swift to do
The tasks his mother set.

And up and down the hillside paths
His feet were quick to run
On errands, if his mother sent,
For was he not her son?

I like to think, my little ones,
That on the birthday page
The very age that you are now
Was once the Christ Child's age.

And, as he stands at God's right hand,
The King of earth and heaven,
He comprehends your childish thoughts,
Though you are only seven,

Or nine or twelve. He knows about
The prizes you would win.
He was like you in everything,
Exeept the blight of sin.

Oh, who can help but love him well,
This friend for life and death,
Whom God and man with favor crowned.
The Child of Nazareth.

—Congregationalist.

BREAD CAST UPON THE WATERS.

The late Thomas Tegg left a name in the bookselling trade for enterprise and successful prosecution of his calling. When a lad, coming to London in search of employment, he met on the coach some other young men who were bent on the same errand. They on reaching their place of destination thought that they would like, before searching for a situation, to spend a few days in seeing the sights of the metropolis. Tegg, on the contrary, went straightway to the point, and entered the first book shop he saw in quest of work.

"What can you do?" he was asked.

"My best," was his laconic and pregnant reply.

"Do you wear an apron!"

Tegg produced one, and tied it on.

"Go to work," said his new master, and thus, as he himself afterward said,—

"In less than half an hour after my arrival, I was at work in one of the best houses in London."

The young man's application to business was marked, but on one occasion, when in another situation, he asked for a holiday.

"We have no objection, but where art thou going?" said his employer, a member of the Society of Friends.

"To Greenwich fair, sir."

"Then we think thou hadst better not go. Thou wilt lose half a day's wages. Thou wilt spend, at least the amount of two days' wages more, and thou wilt get into bad company."

At two o'clock, however, he was told he might go; but as soon as he reached the London bridge, his heart smote him, and he returned.

"Why, Thomas, is this thee?" his employer exclaimed. "Thou art a prudent lad," and when Saturday came, a guinea was added to his wages.

This incident, we may add, led Tegg, when he came to be a master, to be a kind though a strict one, and during fifty years of his business life, his biographer tells us he never used a harsh word to a servant, and dismissed but three. Equally judicious was a resolution he made, that he would visit a place of worship every Sunday; read no loose or infidel books; would frequent no public houses; would devote his leisure to profitable studies; and would form no friendships till he knew the parties well.

With such principles success in business was but a qurstion of time. He inspired confidence, which subsequent experience justified, and started in trade on his own account. Some difficulties, however, followed, in the course of which occurred the following incident:

"He had purchased," said Mr. Curwen, in his interesting history of booksellers, "a hundred pounds worth of books from Mr. Hunt, who, hearing of his struggles, bade him pay for them when he pleased. Tegg, in the fulness of his gratitude, told him that should he ever need aid, he should have it; but the wealthy bookseller smiled at the young struggler's evident simplicity. We will tell the rest of the story in Mr. Tegg's own words.

"Thirty years afterward I was in my counting-house, when Mr. Hunt with a queer looking companion came and reminded me of my promise. He was under arrest and must go to prison unless I would be his bail. I acknowledged the obligation, but would first take my wife's opinion.

"'Yes, my dear,'" was her answer, 'by all means help Mr. Hunt. He aided us in trouble; you can do no less for him.'

"Next morning I found I had become his surety for thirty thousand pounds."

The hundred pounds which Mr Hunt had lent Tegg so many years before, was thus found by him after many days.—The New York Observer.

HOW RUBBER BOOTS AND SHOES ARE MADE.

Did you ever see any crude rubber, and have you any idea how it is gathered and worked? There are twenty or thirty varieties of crude rubber, varying greatly in quality, and of all these the best is known as Para, a South American product, obtained in Brazil, about 1,800 miles above the mouth of the Amazon. It is called Para from the city of that name from which it is shipped to foreign parts. The gum is gathered by tapping the rubber trees, as we tap maple trees for sap for maple sugar. The sap in gathered into a large pot into which the native dips a flat wooden paddle, to which gum adheres. He withdraws the paddle and holds it in a smoke made by burning palm nuts, which dries and cures the film of rubber on the paddle. He then dips again, and smokes again, repeating the process until he has on the paddle a bunch of gum weighing several pounds. Then he splits the ball or roll to get the paddle out, and it is ready for market.

These natives are not models of honesty, however, as these chunks of gum frequently contain palm nuts, rubber nuts, pieces of iron, or are freely mixed with sand to add weight, which often causes the manufacturer great trouble. The public, or a large share of the public, have an idea that crude rubber gum comes something like tamarac, and that it is melted and cast into whatever form is desired, but this is not true. A rubber shoe factory is not a foundry; it comes nearer being a printing office.

These chunks of rubber are sliced into steaks, you might say, by sharp knives revolving rapidly and kept constantly wetted. When one of these knives strikes an iron spike, there is apt to be "music in the air." The operators are on the lookout, however, and accidents are so thoroughly guarded against that they are very rare. These steaks are then put into a chopping machine, where they are made into an article closely resembling boarding-house hash, only that this hash is the straight goods, except that it needs cleaning. The small pieces thus formed are then put through a machine which makes mince meat of them, and at the same time washes out all the dirt and sand. This (not the dirt and sand) is now shoveled into a rolling machine which compresses the mass into rough sheets. This is the first process. These sheets are then taken to another building and put into a steam drying room, where they remain about three months to free them from all moisture.

By the drying process they lose from 15 to 30 per cent of their weight. If the least moisture remains in the rubber when made up into shoes, the heat of vulcanization causes its expansion, and consequently causes blisters in the stock. The dry gum is then run between heavy iron rollers, heated by steam, and called grinders, by which it is softened to permit the admixture of the vulcanizing material.

Rubber in its natural state is unfit for use, and Goodyear's process of vulcanization by the aid of sulphur is necessary to utilize it. This mixing is done by running the ground rubber through still another series of rollers, which press the rubber and sulphur together in one soft, fine body, which is finally run through a calendar, between great steel cylinders; the mass is pressed out into long, smooth sheets of any desired width or thickness. Then comes the printing process. These sheets are fed through steel cylinders on the face of which is engraved the pattern for sole, heel, and upper desired to be produced, and these impressions are as clearly printed on the rubber as this type impression is on this paper.

Then the sheets go to the cutters, who cut out the different parts and send them to their respective departments. The lasting is done similarly to that of other shoes, except that the parts are all put together by rubber cement, and, before removal from the last, they are placed in vulcanizing ovens, where they are subjected to a degree of heat that transforms the various parts into a homogeneous mass in the shape of a boot or shoe without a seam, nail, or peg. Then, if a dull finish is desired, the last is removed, and the goods are ready for market. Otherwise they are varnished to give the bright finish, and dried, when they are ready.—Scientific American.

TEMPERANCE.

From John Bright.—To drink deeply—to be drunk—is a sin: this is not denied. At what point does the taking of strong drink become a sin? The state in which the body is when not excited by intoxicating drink is its proper and natural state; drunkenness is the state furtherest removed from it. The state of drunkenness is a state of sin; at what stage does it become a sin? We suppose a man perfectly sober, who has not tasted anything which can intoxicate: one glass excites him, and, to some extent, disturbs the state of sobriety, and so far destroys it; another glass excites him still more; a third fires his eye, loosens his tongue, inflames his passions; a fourth increases all this; a fifth makes him foolish and partially insane; a sixth makes him savage; a seventh or an eighth makes him stupid—a senseless, degraded mass; his reason is quenched, his faculties are for the time destroyed. Every noble and generous and holy principle within him withers, and the image of God is polluted and defiled. This is sin; awful sin; for "drunkards shall not inherit the kingdom of God." But where does the sin begin? At the first glass, at the first step toward complete intoxication, or at the sixth, or seventh, or eighth? Is not every step from the natural state of the system toward the state of stupid intoxication an advance in sin, and a yielding to the unwearied tempter of the soul?

From T. L. Cuyler.—If I were to talk to these young men upon total abstinence I should say just this: It is the best thing in the world for your pocket. Nothing turns the pocket into a bagful of holes like alcohol. It is the best thing for the home. More homes are darkened and damned by the bottle than any other cause. It is the best thing for your brain; for alcohol, like the hound after the hare, makes at once for the brain, ruining body and soul. It is the best thing for your immortal soul; for if you never drink you will never be a drunkard, and the drunkard cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven. That is my total abstinence speech in a nutshell.

A Practical Temperance Story.—Charles P. Coggleshall, a picture frame dealer at 384 to 390 Carroll avenue, filed a petition in the Probate Court, asking for the appointment of a conservator for his father, Samuel P. Coggleshall, an alleged drunkard. His real estate is valued at $47,000, and personal property at about $2,500.—Chicago Herald.

A certain saloon-keeper in Wilkesbarre, Pa., has made it his custom for several years to keep a glass box on his bar during holiday week labeled "charity." Into this box his customers are invited to drop their spare change. On New Year's day his customers are invited to guess how much there will be in the box when it is opened, each guesser paying a small coin into the box for the privilege of guessing, the one who guesses nearest the correct figure to receive a box of twenty-five cigars. This year the box contained $250, and he sent it to the Home of Friendless Children, but was surprised by its prompt return, with a note from the managers declining to receive a gift from such a source.

La Canada is a Mexican village. Its stores bear such suggestive titles as "The Saloon of Mercy," and "The True Faith." Every pulque shop, where men and women get mildly exhilarated on the juice of the maguey distilled in divers forms, shows the image of some saint or virgin setu p among the bottles. One is called 'The pulqueria of the mother of God," and scores are dedicated similarly.—N. Y. Sun.

(Continued from 9th page.)

The court martial of Gen. Hazen has fairly commenced, and judging by the unexpected vigor of the Swaim trial, bids fair to be prosecuted to a satisfactory conclusion. It is probable that the civil courts of this District might learn some lessons in vigor and promptness from their military courts.

There seems now to be some probability that the rascalities of the Indian Ring will be investigated and possibly punished. Some months since it was reported that out of $300,000 appropriated to the Cherokees, a large proportion had been absorbed by Congressmen and others. It is charged and believed that Congressman Phillips of Kansas, was in the receipt of $22,500 of this amount.

There was doubtless much occasion for the cry, "turn the rascals out." It remains to be seen whether a more hungry swarm will take their place.

MARCH 14th.—Together with my two boys I have just returned from a visit to the top of the great Monument. Free tickets can be obtained at 612, 17th St., N. W. They entitle the possessor to be taken to the top of the Monument, when in the opinion of those in charge, it can be done with safety, and without interference with the workmen. The same steam elevator that took up the stones now takes people. Not more than thirty can ascend at once and the journey takes ten minutes. After a stay of just ten minutes, the same time is occupied in descending. There is ample room on the floor just above the top of the main walls, and the four windows afford a wide view without danger from falling.

The view of the city, the public buildings, and especially of the Potomac, is exceedingly fine. People and horses look curiously small, and the great Capitol seems dwarfed to the size of an ordinary building. The Arlington mansion and surroundings were seemingly quite near, and but for the haze, the Blue Ridge of the Alleghenys could have been plainly seen in the southwest. We just discovered their faint outline. I have never before quite understood the work of improving the Potomac flats. Viewed from the Monument it seemed a map just at the base; artificial channels are being dredged, and the low banks and shallow bed of the river is being filled. The sources of malaria are greatly diminished, and the facilities of navigation increased.

I noticed that in the part of the Monument built before the war there is a considerable number of memorial stones, sent by States, individuals and corporations. There is a much larger number yet to be placed. Besides this, there remains yet much to be done before the monument is completed, but in its massive and simple grandeur it is without a parallel. H. H. HINMAN.

THE CHURCHES.

—Rev. Robert Hardie after a protracted meeting at Argo school-house in Brookings county, Dakota, organized, Feb. 9th, a Wesleyan church of twenty-seven members.

—As a result of a union meeting in the Wesleyan church at Hillsboro, Ohio, there were some fifty or sixty conversions last month.

—Elder D. P. Rathbun having spent the winter in New York State, has lately been holding successful revival meetings with the Wesleyan church at La Fayette, N. Y.

—Mr. Gladstone, the English Premier, states through his secretary, in answer to an inquiry, that the clergy of the church of England are not State paid.

—It is said that the Morning Star, the organ of the Free Baptists, is soon to be removed to Boston. Its headquarters have been at Dover, N. H., for the past thirty years.

—It is reported that 800,000 pupils were taught last year in the different Methodist schools for freedmen.

—John B. Gough lately lectured in Madison Ave. Congregational church, New York, in behalf of the Cremorne Mission established by the late celebrated Jerry McAuley. Since the death of her husband, Mrs. McAuley has conducted this beneficent enterprise.

—It is believed that there have been 300 conversions at Kalamazoo, Mich., during the union meetings conducted by Major Whittle. The First Congregational church, pastor C. O. Brown, received fifty-four to its membership March 1st.

—The largest congregation in Sweden is that of Hedvig Elconora or Ladugardsland's congregation, Stockholm, the entire membership being not far from 36,000, or larger than the city of Norrkoping, the fourth largest city in the kingdom.

—Japan has 93 Christian churches, with 7,000 members, and 109 Sunday-schools. There are 500,000 copies of the Scriptures, and 2,000,000 Christian books and tracts in circulation there. The agent of the London Religious Tract Society, in Japan, furnishes a very encouraging report of the prospects of religion in that country. He says, "Nobles, commoners, and priests are all diligently studying the doctrines of Christianity. We hope that within the next ten, or at the most, twenty years, Japan will be a Christian country."

—The Northfield Seminary, founded by Mr. D. L. Moody in 1879, to promote the Christian education of young women, now has about 200 students. Its principle edifice, Marquand Hall, an elegant structure, which has cost $67,000, is a memorial to Frederick Marquand, from whose estate came the funds for its erection. In addition to this, which is just completed, the Seminary is provided with two dormitories, "East hall," and "Bonar hall," and Mr. Moody's house is used much of the time. A granite recitation hall, to cost upward of $50,000, is also now under construction, to be completed in two months, and more buildings still have to be provided within a year to keep up at all with the demand of incoming students. At this school and the corresponding one at Gill, for boys, about $300,000 have been expended on buildings.

—Dr. Robert Stewart reports a net increase of 560 during the present year in the United Presbyterin India Mission—the largest increase ever made in one year. The number of adult baptisms is 216, from which it appears that more than half the increase has been from the baptized children of the mission.

—The editor of the Philadelphia Times, Col. A. K. McClure, makes some statements relative to the education of the colored people in the South that will surprise a good many people. He says: "The educational facilities for the blacks are better in the South to-day than they are in the North, in proportion to the facilities profferred to all. Sout Carolina employes and pays out of the State treasury more black teachers than are employed in all the States of the North, and Alabama employs 1,100 colored male teachers, and 500 colored female teachers. The normal schools for whites and blacks in both Alabama and South Carolina are exactly equal. North Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, and, indeed, most of the old slave States, each snstain more colleges for the blacks than do Pennsylvania or Massachusetts."

—Old Dr. Somerville, the veteran Scotch evangelist, has been preaching the Gospel to those dwelling on the sites of the "seven churches of Asia." He went first to "Thyatira," having now about ten thousand inhabitants. Accommodation was found at the house of the "angel of the church"—that is, the Protestant preacher, in whose small church a densely-packed audience, including several Mussulmans, was assembled to listen to the Gospel from this stranger's lips. He went next to "Sardis," which is a heap of ruins. Naught is left standing but two of the pillars of the great Temple of Cybele. Near these pillars is a small cluster of mud houses belonging to a few Mohammedan families. The sheikh of these was spoken to, and he courteously invited Dr. Somerville into his house, where shortly a little company of men and women gathered, and to them the Gospel was preached from the Epistle to Sardis. The audience was exclusively Mohammedans. At "Philadelphia" a few individuals gathered in a house, and from the Epistle to the church of Philadelphia the Gospel was spoken to them.

—Since the Christian Convention, conducted by Mr. Moody, at New-Brunswick, N. J., was held, revivals have begun in several of the churches in the town.

—A meeting of the State Superintendents of the American Home Missionary Society has been held in Chicago, to consider the relation of Congregational ministers to the Scandinavians in this country, and also to devise some scheme for a new mission to Sweden.

—The Independent, gleaning from about two dozen journals of all Evangelical denominations, finds that the conversions reported in a single week number 28,000. "We must not forget," says that journal, "that this list of upwards of 28,000 converts represents only a fraction of the churches—how large or how small a fraction it would be idle to undertake to say. It is enough to know that many thousands are flocking to the sanctuary to enroll themselves as God's people."

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

—It is said by Freemason organs that "Right Reverend" Lord Plunkett, lately elected Archbishop of Dublin, is a "true and zealous Freemason," and was for many years Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. His Masonic qualifications were his winning card, no doubt.

—Rob. Morris writes thus of the brotherly love of New York Masons: "This is no place to speak of the dissensions of the Scotch rite Masonry, although there are an abundance of them here. Where, indeed, was ever that branch of Masonry established in America that did not result in dissensions? This unfortunate fact is seen on every page of its annals. For the sake of the common cause I regret it; but the peculiar autocratic government of that rite allows no force to the complaints of the private members and I forbear."

—The Freemason of Detroit, a Masonic sheet not always sure of its facts, prints this list of Masonic Episcopal bishops. We have considerable doubt about the lodge relation of Bishop McLaren, while Bishop Vail, of Kansas, whose name is not given below, is well-known to be a Mason: "The Rt. Rev. William Stevens Perry, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of the P. E. church in the Diocese of Iowa, was made a Freemason in Philadelphia, Pa. The Rt. Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Pittsburg; Rt. Rev. Samuel Seaburg, D. D., of the Diocese of Connecticut; Rt. Rev. Edward Bass, D. D., Bishop of Massachusetts; Rt. Rev. Wm. H. Odenheimer, D. D, Bishop of New Jersey; Rt. Rev. Thos. W. Dudley, D. D., Bishop of Kentucky; Rt. Rev. Wm. E. McLaren, S. T. D., D. C. L., Bishop of Chicago; Rt. Rev. Hugh Miller Thompson, D. D., assistant Bishop of the Diocese of Mississippi; also, Bishops Griswold, Chase, Bedell, Schereschwesky, Randall, Pinckney, Spaulding, Worthington, and the present Lord Bishop of Peterboro', England. Bishop Hoadley, in 1798, defended Freemasonry in the House of Lords, England."

—The "High Court" of the order of Foresters for Illinois was lately held in Chicago. There are nearly 2,000 members reported in the State. The "High Chief Ranger" urged that the charter fees for new lodges, or courts, should be $100, and that agents who organize them should be rewarded with $75 of the amount. If his advice had been adopted every little town in the State would be overhauled by the tramp agents of this order working up their $75-lodge.

—The Illinois State encampment, G. A. R., met lately at Peoria. A membership of 20,000 was reported, 105 posts having been added during the year.

—The first meeting of the order of the Knights of Pythias was held in the city of Washington, D. C., twenty-one years ago Feb. 19th. The order has grown from a membership of five at that time to 150,000 at present, with over 280 divisions of the uniform rank and 671 sections of the endowment rank, the latter carrying an aggregate life insurance of over $45,000,000. This pretense of life insurance is a great catch for the lodges. It holds fast in the gills of thousands of Masons and other lodge men who would otherwise slip off the hook.

—A late London dispatch says: The troubles between the English Freemasons and the Grand Orients of France continue. The Prince of Wales, replying to a recent letter of the French Grand Master, says: "English Masons have always held to the belief that God is the first and great landmark of genuine Freemasonry. Without such belief nobody can rightly claim to inherit the traditions of true Freemasonry." It is expected the Grand Orient will convene a meeting in London to explain the attitude of the Orient, which is intended to allow the fullest liberty of conscience.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

No.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	3
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	4
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (nown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	4
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	3

A GOLDEN WEDDING.

WAVERLY, Pa., Feb. 21, 1885.

Deacon Stephen Parker and wife had been married fifty years on the 11th day of February, 1885. They said they did not wish to invite their friends and receive presents of gold as is the custom at the present time; but some of their friends thought the day ought not to go by unobserved, and resolved to pay their respects to them on that occasion. The following persons were present: Mr. and Mrs. Daniel VanFleet, of Benton; Hon. Giles Roberts and wife, Wallsville; Asa Eaton, and wife, Dr. J. C. Miles, wife and daughter Carrie, of Dalton; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Wilmarth, Mr. and Mrs. Herrick, of New York; Mr. J. D. Knight, of Clark's Green; Alfred Baker and wife, of Scott; S. A. Reynolds and wife, Waverly.

Two of the number were at the marriage nuptials fifty years ago, Mr. Daniel Van Fleet and Miss Demaris Parker. The marriage ceremony was performed by Elder Shaw. The same china tea-set was used that they drank tea out of at the wedding fifty years before. After a sumptuous dinner the company repaired to the parlor and speeches were made by Dr. Miles, Asa Eaton, Hon. Giles Roberts and others. Deacon Parker said he felt he had something better than gold, and that was the love and friendship of the friends he loved. Lines composed for the occasion were read by Mrs. S. A. Reynolds.

DONATIONS

Received in cash at the office of the National Christian Association from January 17, 1885, to March 16, 1885:

For Rev. John G. Fee's work:
A friend, $100.

For J. F. Browne:
Rufus Johnson, $5.

For Eli Tapley:
Rufus Johnson, $5.
Isaac Townsend, $3.50.

For Free Tract Fund:
George Brokaw, 80 cents.
Ann Paley, 50 cents.

For Cynosure to Southern Ministers:
Rufus Johnson, $10.
John F. Icke, $1.

For General Work:
Mrs. Lucina Hubbard, $10.

For A. D. Zaraphonithes:
Ezra A. Cook, $10.
College Church, Wheaton, $5.50.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer.

It is the universal expression of all parties dealing with the well-known firm E. H. Ricker & Co., the Elgin Nursery, that all trees and vines received from them are the best and give satisfaction. We heartily recommend them to our readers. If you are in need of anything in their line you may rest assured you will receive the best treatment. Their manual on tree-planting is worth having. Mailed free to any address.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

Valuable Medicine.

DR. W. H. PARMELEE, Toledo, O., says: "I have prescribed the 'acid' in a large variety of diseases, and have been amply satisfied that it is a valuable addition to our list of medical wants.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how had men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Battle of the Books

The WATERLOO of The LITERARY Revolution was supposed to have been met about three years ago. The merry millionaire-publisher laughed and said "I told you so," and dreamed of the return of old-time prices—$8.00 for books the Revolution had given for 50 cents. There was a hard battle, but it proved to be a BUNKER HILL instead of a "Waterloo." Disaster was transformed to victory. To-day the Revolution has a larger catalogue (100 pages, crowded) of better books at lower prices than ever before. The few titles here named are only specimens. FRANCE Guizot's Celebrated Illustrated History of France we have reduced in price, from $49.50 to as low as $5.00. We publish two editions, one in eight volumes, small octavo, with 426 fine illustrations, price, $8.00; the other in eight volumes, 12mo., with 64 illustrations, price, $5.00—this The Christian at Work pronounces "A marvel of excellence in every respect, at a marvel of cheapness." SPAIN Prescott's Great Work, History of the Reign of Ferdinand and Isabella, we issue in two elegant volumes, small octavo, illustrated, price $2.00, also in one volume, 12mo., price, $1.25. A timely and excellent work, reduced in cost from $15.00 to $1.00, is Kenrick's History of Ancient Egypt EGYPT under the Pharaohs. Also, the Life of Chinese Gordon, by Forbes, price, 50 cents. We also publish in five charming Elzevir volumes price only $1.75, Green's Larger ENGLAND History of the English People. Many will prefer this edition to Harper's published at $10.00. We also issue Hume's England, six large octavo volumes, library style, gilt tops, price $6.00. and the same bound in three vols., half Russia for $4.50. We have, too, Macaulay's England, three vols., small 12mo. for $1.60, and Dickens's Child's History of England, price GERMANY 45 cents. Germany is represented by Schiller's History of The Thirty Years' War, Elzevir edition, price 40 cents, and by Yonge's Young Folks' History of Germany, price 45 cents. One of the BABYLON greatest historical works published is Rawlinson's Seven Great Monarchies of the Ancient Eastern World. This we have reduced in cost from $18 to $3.00, though ours is really a better edition than the one sold at the higher price. It is in three vols., large 12mo., cloth, gilt tops, containing over 700 illustrations and maps. Gibbons' ROME with Milman's Notes we issue in five volumes, small 12mo., for $2.25. These represent only a portion of our Historical publications. There are Grote's Greece, 4 vols., $2.70, Carlyle's French Revolution, 2 vols., 80 cents, and others. Every department of standard literature finely represented. To know what The Literary Revolution is doing you need to see its immense catalogue and read the enthusiastic words of its patrons—but better than all, see the books themselves.

Books ordered by mail require 20 per cent. of list price extra for prepayment of charges.

COUPON 10 CENTS. This Coupon will be received in lieu of 10 cents cash, toward the price of any book above named, if sent within 10 days from date of this paper (give name of paper). This offer is to secure your PROMPT response and indicate the paying advertising mediums.

100-PAGE CATALOGUE sent free. The best literature of the world at the lowest prices ever known. Books sent for EXAMINATION BEFORE PAYMENT on reasonable evidence of good faith. Address JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl Street, New York.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	75½	@76½
No. 3		@68
Winter No 2		@78
Corn—No. 2		41
Oats—No. 2	31	33
Rye—No. 2		63
Bran per ton		13 25
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@12 00
Mess pork per bbl		12 60
Butter, medium to best	12	@30
Cheese	05	@12
Beans	55	@1 40
Eggs		24
Potatoes per bus	35	50
Seeds—Timothy	1 25	@1 38
Flax		1 45
Broom corn	01	@ 05
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@14½
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 70	@6 00
Common to good	4 40	@5 50
Hogs	4 30	@4 95
Sheep	2 50	@5 00

NEW YORK.

Flour	2 90	@5 25
Wheat—Winter	84	@ 93½
Spring		88
Corn	50	@51
Oats	37	@40½
Mess Pork		14 00
Eggs		25
Butter	8	24
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 80	@5 60
Hogs	4 40	@4 65
Sheep	1 50	@3 00

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL

A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a large Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned in the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentieths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—While the new Furnace was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engaged upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forbear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous and better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words.

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endowment of hoarded bank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bo̅o̅kt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading; more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'-bind'er, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for casing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, -lĕrnd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The following exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 210,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the new work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

FARM NOTES.

HIRING FARM HELP.

Where a farmer hires a man for a definitc term of service, and for a definite rate of wages, to do a specified kind of work, the contract is express. But where the farmer simply requests the man to work for him, and nothing is said about the time or pay, or where thc relation of employer and employe is formed without a full and definite understanding, the contract is implied, and its lacking terms must be supplied by law. A contract of hiring for one year or less need not be in writing. If for more than a year, it is not binding unless in writing, and either party can terminate the agreement at pleasure.

EXPRESS CONTRACTS.—Where the hiring is for a definite time, both parties are bound by it until the time expires. The employer must furnish work, and the employe must labor to the end. If the master discharges the workman without legal cause before the time expires the man will be entitled to his wages up to the time of his discharge, and also such damages as he has suffered by being thrown out of a job. These damages will probably be thc amount of his wages up to the end of the time of hiring, less what the workman has earned or might have earned at other employment. If the man leaves without legal cause beforc his time is up, the great weight of authority is that he is not entitled to any compensation for the time he has worked, though several highly respectable courts have held that under such circumstances he has a right to the wages up to the time of leaving, less the damages occasioned to his employer by his leaving.—American Agriculturist.

THE FARMER'S LIABILITY TO HIS HIRED MEN.

There are duties of a master to his men, which, if not faithfully performed, render the master liable for the injury resulting to the men from such failure: 1. To exercise due care in the hiring and retention of employes. 2. To exercise due care in the purchasing and retention of machinery. 3. To exercise due care in keeping his buildings and premises in safe and proper condition. 4. To exercise due care not to expose his men to other than the ordinary risks of the business for which they are hired. Among the general duties of the last group are: If two farm hands, both presumably competent, are set to work together and one carelessly injures the other, he has no claim therefor upon the master. But if the latter failed in the first duty above set forth, i. e., if he hired a man whom he knew to be incompetent, or if he did not exercise due care to ascertain whether the man was competent, then he, the master, would be liable for injury suffered through such incompetence by another workman, without fault on the part of the latter. To illustrate: Suppose a farmer hires a careless boy, and sets him to driving a spirited team; if the boy by his carelessness allows the team to run away and injure another workman, the farmer will be liable. He has here failed in his duty to exercise proper care in the selection of his employes. But if he had used the caution of the ordinarily prudent man in selecting a person competent to drive the team, and the man so selected had still proved careless and allowed the team to run away and injure a workman, the master would be relieved from liability for the injury done.—American Agriculturist.

CATARRH CURED!

A clergyman, after suffering a number of years from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, after trying every known remedy without success, at last found a prescription which completely cured and saved him from death. Any sufferer from this dreadful disease sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Dr. J. A. Lawrence, 199 Dean St., Brooklyn, New York, will receive the recipe free of charge.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.
For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

Cures all Lung, Nervous and Chronic Diseases. Office and "Home Treatment," by
A. H. HIATT, M. D., Central Music Hall, CHICAGO.
Price Reduced. Write for Pamphlet, Information, &c.

NELSON'S

Sunday School Books and Cards.
Approved by all Evangelical Denominations.
SEND FOR CATALOGUE.
T. NELSON & SONS, 42 Bleecker St., N.Y.

Sunday-School Papers.
MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,
To Sunday-Schools, r quarter. .... 21-2cts.
Per year..... ..... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.
Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.
IT CONTAINS:
1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.
Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address
T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

"A WEEKLY SHOWER OF REFRESHING."

Such is the language of a minister in writing of the

CHRISTIAN NATION
OF
New York.

—)o-o(—

Read some of the many high opinions of the CHRISTIAN NATION expressed by people and papers:

The True Radical Ring.
I like your paper. It has the true radical ring, and is growing better every week.
(REV.) T. C. SPROULL.

A Weekly Treat.
I have enjoyed a weekly treat, as the CHRISTIAN NATION is just to my taste. I like the fearless stand that it has taken for Prohibition. H. M. POLLOCK.

Par Excellence.
Allow me to congratulate you on the appearance and make-up of your paper. The matter is very good, and in fact the whole is par excellence. I hope you may receive many thousands of subscribers. S. O. LOWRY.

In the Front Rank.
I congratulate you most heartily upon the success which has thus far attended your enterprise, and wish you the largest measure of success in the future. This undoubtedly you will have, and simply because of the merits of your paper, which already holds its place among our best religious Journals, and has put itself abreast of the advanced movements in journalism. (REV.) J. F. CARSON.

Hold the Fort for Prohibition.
I am very much pleased with your paper. It is not a yearling, but I hope that it may be, like England's queen of old, hale and hearty at sixty—that it may live to see this nation a Christian Nation indeed and in truth. Hold the fort for Prohibition! Some of us have had to pass through the fire of persecution because we dared to vote our sentiments on that question, and your paper has been a weekly shower of refreshing to us. May it prove a blessing in this, and be a great power in the work of overturning the greatest evil that ever cursed our nation, and which does more than any other agent in hindering us from becoming a Christian Nation. (REV.) A. H. ORR.

Able Corps of Writers and Contributors.
Sacramento, Cal., Daily Record-Union.—A new paper entitled the CHRISTIAN NATION has been started at New York, under the conductorship of John W. Pritchard, and with an able corps of writers and contributors.

Deserves a Noble Support.
Christian Cynosure, Chicago.—Among recently started Journals we have forborne to speak heretofore of the CHRISTIAN NATION of New York, a weekly of beautiful proportions and able management lately begun by John W. Pritchard....Thus ably manned the CHRISTIAN NATION is a worthy addition to the ranks of journalism, and deserves a noble support.

Fast Making its Way.
The National Republican, Washington, D. C.—Mr. Joseph Bowes, the leader of the Sabbath-school teachers' class at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, this city, is the writer of an article on the "International Sunday-school Lesson," which appears each week in the CHRISTIAN NATION, a journal published in New York. This journal is fast making its way into the hands of the Sunday-school teachers of the country on account of the superior and exceedingly helpful character of its articles on the Sunday-school lesson.

Send for the Christian Nation and get Posted.
Pine Bluff, Ark., Reformer.—The National Reform party is rapidly coming to the front. Among the host of friends that rally round its standard, we see the CHRISTIAN NATION of New York. It should be found in every family. Every lawyer, politician, minister, teacher and editor, should take it to keep abreast with the times. It is a Journal of enlightened statesmanship, sound public morals, choice literature and general information. A better gift could not be made to literary friends, bringing you weekly to remembrance, and feeding them with the choicest food and strengthening them for National Reform work. The National Reform party is destined to take the lead. Its platform meets every issue, maintains all morality, removes all prejudice, partisan strife and bitterness. It satisfies the best elements of either party that want reform, but dislike to appear as turning traitor to their party. The National Reform party obviates their trouble. Send for the CHRISTIAN NATION and get posted.

The CHRISTIAN NATION is $2.00 per year. Subscriptions taken for 3, 6, 9 or 12 months.

Address,

CHRISTIAN NATION,
Tribune Building, NEW YORK.

IN THE COILS;
—OR—
The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they see how it turns out.' "—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifully bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

Five Dollar
LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.
National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW
Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.
Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—
Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.
SING THEM!
HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!
Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.
Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

IN BRIEF.

A Turk attempting to perform his devotions in City Hall Park, New York, attracted a curious crowd and was promptly clubbed by a park policeman.

There is a Methodist preacher in Phillipsport, Pa., who travels over forty-five miles on his Sunday circuit, holding four services. His salary is only $200 a year.

A resident of Salem, Mass., eighty-four years of age, who had not voted before for forty years, cast his ballot last fall for St. John.

Five large springs of water have suddenly burst forth on the open plains in the county of Ximines, Mexico, where there has been a continued drouth for many years.

The Glasgow Herald thinks that if Americans would substitute oatmeal for pies and hot cakes they would be calmer, less lively, less specculative, less bombastic and happier.

The astronomers report that the star Arcturus is speeding directly toward the earth at the rate of 320,000 miles a day. There is no cause, however, for immediate alarm as it will not arrive for 93,000 years.

Brussels has a clock which is wound up by the sun. A shaft exposed to the sun causes an up-draft of air which sets a fan in motion. The fan starts mechanism which raises the weight of the clock till it reaches the top, and then puts a break on the fan until the weight has gone down a little, when the fan is liberated and acts as before.

Between Damascus and Jerusalem is said to be a tribe of about 3,000 Israelites who have been there probably since the beginning of the Christian era. They have neither city nor town, but live in tents and like the primitive races are exclusively tillers of the soil and warriors, going armed from head to foot. They use the Hebrew language among themthemselves but speak the Arabic with strangers.

In 1827 Charles Babbage superintended the printing of a set of trigonometrical tables for the ordnance survey of England and Ireland. Only thirty copies were printed. The tables contained six millions of figures. They were prepared and corrected with the utmost care, and when completed were hung up in the hall at Cambridge University, and a reward offered to any one who could find an inaccuracy. No error has ever been discovered and it may reasonably be concluded that they are absolutely correct.

The importance of adding the county and State to the address of letters or other mail matter, even in case of the most important cities, is apparent from the fact that there are in the United States 11 St. Pauls, 20 Bridgeports, 18 Buffalos, 17 Brooklyns, Clevelands, and Rochesters, 16 Hartfords, 15 Louisvilles, 13 Bostons and Pittsburgs, 8 Cincinnatis and Philadelphias, 6 Chicagos, 7 Detroits, 5 Milwaukees, and St. Louises, 32 Washingtons, and 4 New Yorks and Baltimores. New Orleans and San Francisco are not duplicated.

A CURE FOR DIPHTHERIA.—Dr. Delthil, a French physician, says that a sure cure for any ordinary case of diphtheria is to utilize the vapors of liquid tar and turpentine so as to dissolve the fibrinous exudations that choke up the throat and lead to such fatal results in that dreaded disease. Dr. Delthil's process is simply this: He pours equal parts of turpentine and liquid tar into a tin pan or cup and sets fire to the mixture. A dense resinous smoke arises which obscures the air of the room. "The patient," Dr. Delthil says, "immediately seems to experience relief; the choking and rattle stop; the patient falls into a slumber, and seems to inhale the smoke with pleasure. The fibrinous membrane soon becomes detached, and the patient coughs up microbicides. These, when caught in a glass, may be seen to dissolve in the smoke. In the course of three three days afterward the patient entirely recovers." This treatment has been tested in New York recently, and with gratifying results. It is based on the theory that diphtheria is due to the rapid multiplication of living fungi which are killed by the fumes of the tar and turpentine. Indeed, all successful treatment of diphtheria is by the use of medicines which destroy low forms of insect life.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbytsrian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of svsryday life, and showing how individual domsstic, social, religious, professional and public life ars trammeisd and biased by ths bansful workings of the lodgs. Bsing presentsd in ths form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of ths story will not havs to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The charaeter, elal as and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when hs became a Christian. This book has opcned the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozsn, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion 50 cents sach; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 25 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Coutaining the opinion of many prominent collegs presidents, and others, and a full account of ths murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Secret Societies. A discussion of their charseter and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasone murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of openiug and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illnstrated and explnined. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illnstrates every sign, grip and ceremony uf the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Moultorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞ The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workiugs and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complets illustrated ritual of the fivs degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degres of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of ths author is to refuts ths arguments of thoss who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His argumsnts are conclusive, and the forcibls mannsr in which they are put, bsing drawn from Scriptura, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Luela C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozsn, $1.25

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that sec societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1 25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees" 304 pages; cloth, $1.

National Christian Association.
921 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The President has issued a proclamation that an invasion of the Oklahoma lands will not be tolerated, and that if unauthorized possession be taken the military power of the United States will be invoked to expel the intruders. Persons already in occupation of the lands will be also removed.

The Agricultural Department estimates that of last year's crop, 675,000,000 bushels of corn and 169,000,000 bushels of wheat remain in farmers' hands.

It is rumored that Maj. J. W. Powell, Director of the U. S. Geological Survey Bureau, will be among the first officials to fall before the new administtation. He is a popular man in his bureau, a good scientist, and a notably successful organizer. The difficulty is said to be that he did some excellent work for Blaine last fall, which the administration regards as not in strict accord with the spirit of civil service reform. Maj. Powell is an old Wheaton student, and has been invited to give an address at the quarter-centennial of the college next June.

COUNTRY.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union met in Music Hall at the New Orleans Exposition on the 13th inst. Addresses were made by Mrs. Mary I. Lathrop, of Michigan; Miss Frances E. Willard, President of the Society; ex-Governor John P. St. John, and others.

The Wisconsin Senate has passed a bill to submit the question of woman suffrage in school matters to the election in 1887, and killed the memorial to Congress in favor of general woman suffrage. The question of allowing women municipal suffrage was debated and made a special order.

The propeller Michigan has been sighted off Grand Haven after having been imprisoned in the ice over four weeks.

An earthquake at Lancaster, Pa., Sunday evening shook buildings and threw plates from tables. Services were suspended in the churches until the shock subsided.

The strike of employes of the Gould railroads at various points in Missouri has assumed such grave proportions that it is reliably reported that the governor has ordered all available militia to proceed forthwith to Sedalia, where the situation is most serious. It is said the number of strikers there has increased to a thousand, and that all trains except mail cars are stopped. The situation at Moberly, Hannibal, and other points is growing more serious hourly.

Six thousand pounds of glycerine in a nitro-glycerine manufactury, near Bradford, Pa., exploded Tuesday, blowing two men to atoms, reducing a factory to fragments, and shaking the town. Trees were torn up by the roots, and great holes were made in the ground.

Fourteen merchants and the leading banker in the town were found by the police Tuesday in gambling rooms at Harvard, Ill. All were bound over for trial.

By throttling his father and threatening him with death, Charles Moore secured his aged parent's signature, at Bowling Green, Ky., to notes for $6,110. The victim, Dr. J. R. Moore, is one of the oldest and wealthiest citizens of Kentucky.

A jury at DesMoines, Ia., Friday found Mr. McKee, a saloonist, guilty on thirty-five counts of an indictment for violating the liquor law and the court fined him $50 on each count. An appeal was taken.

Pope, Cole & Co., metal dealers at Baltimore and proprietors of copper works at Canton, have made an assignment. Liabilities $1,000,000; assets about $900,000

Last Thursday Mackin and Gallagher, convicted in the United States court of election frauds in Chicago, moved for a new trial. The motion was overruled by Judge Blodgett, who sentenced the prisoners to two years in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $5,000 each. They were given in charge of the marshal who was instructed to take them to Joliet penitentiary at the end of ten days. Their counsel will attempt a further appeal to the Supreme Court.

There is not a saloon open in Topeka, Kan. Seventeen whisky sellers are serving time in prison for violation of the law, and the fines collected from saloonists in the county for the past year amount to $11,500.

The people of Sarahsville, Ohio, enraged at the brutal beating inflicted upon his two little children by Thomas Dayton erected a post in the public square, lashed Dayton to it and thrashed him with whips. The post has been left standing as a warning.

FOREIGN.

In the House of Commons Friday afternoon Mr. Gladstone announced that an agreement had been arrived at between Russia and England, by the terms of which neither the Russian nor the Afghan forces would advance any further on either side of the frontier.

An insurrection has broken out in Albania and all the available turkish troops have been hurried to the scene. A force of Turkish regulars was defeated by the insurgents near Lyoumet. At Prisrend the garrison was driven into the citadel, where it is now besieged by the insurgents. The Austrian consul and orthodox priests also took refuge in the citadel.

Gen. Wolseley held a general review of the Nile expeditionary force now reunited at Korti, on the Nile, on the 9th. He complimented the troops for the heroism and fortitude they had shown, and especially thanked the voyageurs for their services in facilitating the advance of General Earl's force toward Abu Hamed.

A report is current among the natives about Korti to the effect that the Mahdi has evacuated Metemneh, owing to fears of an invasion of the Soudan from Abyssinia.

The British government has prepared an extradition bill authorizing an amendment to all British treaties, with a view to the surrender of persons charged with murder, malicious wounding, or conspiracy to murder any ruler, sovereign or member of any royal family, and also persons charged with the illicit manufacture or storage of explosives.

Osman Digna, commanding the Soudanese rebels on the Red Sea, has issued a proclamation saying that he will attack the British at Suakin and capture all the ships of the enemy. After occupying Suakim he will await El Mahdi. The combined forces will then proceed to Mecca where the latter will be anointed, and proclaimed successor of Mohammed, after which Constantinople will be occupied and the Sultan dethroned.

BUSINESS.

LETTERS

Containing cash for Cynosure received during the week, ending Friday, March 13:

Rev. S. A. Bumstead, L Prentice, Geo. Johnston, J. H. Weaver, Mary Good, E. E Browne, H W. Marsh, C. Winter, H. N. Waldo, George Goodell, Rob't George, L Landon, Jas Pierson, Ira Dorcas, Cyrus L Clark, Lewis Wood, Wm Rankin, Frederick Byrer, J C Heywood, Mrs R H Denning, Jesse F Rock, D Lotzenhiser, Z Foss, H Neal, M D, L D Lathrop, W M Beden, Jno Hamilton, Amos Forlen, D D Miller, Mrs N R Weede, L M Rhodes, Rob't McCreery, Mrs C A Pardee, G Gale, Keturah Miles, John H Clark, Stephen Jackson, D N Tyler, Tho's White, John S Horton, H Davis, Elias McEntarfer, Mr. and Mrs William Whittemore, H M Woodford, N R Corning, Louisa Hess, Benj F Forbes, S C White.

Your attention is again called to the advertisement of Webster's Practical Dictionary. For a limited time this dictionary and the Cynosrue for one year will be sent to all remitting $2 for the paper in advance. You wish your neighbors to take the Cynosure. Show them your Webster's Dictionary, with its 600,000 words and 1,400 illustrations. It is far superior to any other dollar dictionary offered to the public. It cannot be sent except to subscribers to your paper.

S. Hart of Lecompton, Kan., writes: "Dictionary received. I like it. Am distributing Cynosures preparatory to soliciting subscriptions."

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER

IS THE

"WAUKESHA GLENN!"

HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS, NATURAL OR ARTIFICIA.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞ Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND-PAINTED SILKS for Patchwork, Tidies, Screens, etc. Send $1 for package, or 50 cts. for beautiful samples. WESTERN ART CO., Salem, O.

LADIES CAN SECURE Light, Pleasant and Profitable EMPLOYMENT at their Homes, in the city or country. Instructions free by calling, or we will mail you printed instructions and full particulars for 15 cts. Address TOILET MFG CO., 52 E. Madison St., Chicago. Manufacturers and dealers in Toilet Articles, Rugs, Yarns, Patterns, etc.

Lesson Quarterly.

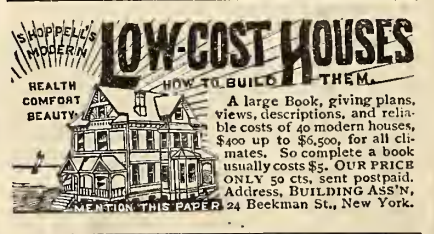
Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

SEEDS GIVEN AWAY!

A Package Mixed Flower Seeds (400 kinds) with Park's Floral Guide, all for two stamps. Tell all your friends.

G. W. PARK, Fannettsburg, Pa.



☞ Write now. This notice will not appear again.

THE NOVELTY RUG MACHINE.

[PAT. DEC. 27, 1881.]

Makes Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc., with ease and rapidity. Price only one dollar. Single machine, with full directions, sent by mail on receipt of price. Agents wanted. Apply for circulars to E. ROSS & CO., Patentees and Sole Manufacturers, Wauseon, Ohio; also dealers in Rug Patterns.

A large Book, giving plans, views, descriptions, and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts, sent postpaid. Address, BUILDING ASS'N, 24 Beekman St., New York.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S

ORIENTAL CREAM, or MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER.

PURIFIES as well as BEAUTIFIES the Skin. No other Cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth-Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of thirty years and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayre, said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin. MME. M. B. T. GOURAUD, Sole Proprietor, 48 Bond St., New York. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the United States, Canadas, and Europe. ☞ Beware of base imitations. $1,000 Reward for arrest and proof of any one selling the same.

$1 WORTH OF TESTED Seeds Free

To any person sending us 50 cents for one year's subscription to the Rural Home, and seven cents to help pay postage, packing, etc., we will send the Ten Packets of choice Vegetable seeds named below free. We make this offer to induce you to become a regular subscriber to the Rural Home, and to test the value of our seeds (specially grown for our use). Following are the seeds we offer: Early Oxheart Cabbage, Imported Blood Turnip Beet, Livingston's Perfection Tomato, New Italian Onion, Early White Turnip, Early Montana Sugar Corn, New Perpetual Lettuce, Premium Green Pea, Valparaiso Squash, New, Imported, Large Sugar Parsnip. We want every farmer and gardner in the United States to give these seeds an honest and fair trial. They are warranted to be of the very best quality, true to name, fresh and pure, and of the growth of 1884. Full directions for cultivating on every package. Address THE RURAL HOME, Philadelphia, Pa.

TREES!

By the million at the

ELGIN NURSERIES.

(Established 1854. Thirty-first year.)

The Leading Nurseries of the West. Our

Annual Catalogue and Price-List,

containing valuable hints on the planting and management of trees,

FREE TO ALL.

Farmers and planters, do not fail to send for it.

Address, E. H. RICKER & CO.,
Please mention this paper. Borden Block, Elgin, Ill.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y.

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen. $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees. in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

IN ADVERTISEMENTS AGGREGATING

100 lines	15 per cent	discount
200 "	20 "	"
300 "	25 "	"
500 "	35 "	"
1000 "	40 "	"
2500 "	50 "	"

TIME CONTRACTS.

1 Month	10 per cent	discount
3 "	20 "	"
6 "	30 "	"
12 "	7 lines or over 40 "	"

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 27. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 26, 1885. WHOLE No. 778.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Masonry Bearing Fruit... 8
Washington's Funeral.... 8
The Scandinavian Revival 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Freemasonry in Sweden.. 1
What is Church Union... 2
Lawlessness..... 2
SELECTED:
D. D. Tide..... 2
Freemasonry in Europe... 3
Edmond About's Pall-bearers..... 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chaps. XIII. and XIV.. 4
REFORM NEWS:
Southern Illinois; Wonderful Meeting at New Orleans..... 5
Open Letter to D. D. G. M. Kingman..... 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Cynosure in the South; Be Steadfast, Wheaton; Shall he leave the M. E. Church; Union for Reformers; Masonic Oysters.....5,6
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
OBITUARY..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CLUBBING LIST..... 7
LITERATURE..... 12
THE CHURCHES..... 12
FARM NOTES..... 14
IN BRIEF..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

The Legislature of California has gone farther, we believe, in reckless disregard of moral principles than that of any other State. It is natural, therefore, that it should be most forward to recognize and give aid to the lodge in an appropriation from the public funds to defray the expenses of a Grand Army meeting which is appointed in 1886.

Nothing more has been heard of M. Andrieux, the ex-prefect of Paris police whose defiant renunciation attracted world-wide attention a month ago. The very publicity of the affair was a measure also of greatest safety and the wary officer probably understood it. But when we regard the character of continental Masonry, it is not likely that any insurance company would wish to take a heavy risk on his life.

The Republicans of Chicago have rallied to put down the corrupt administration that has so long under Carter Harrison disgraced the city. The election frauds of November, managed by the gambling ring which has kept Harrison in power, have shown the need of energetic effort to overthrow the demagogue, Harrison. The Republican nomination for mayor is Judge Sidney Smith, who was nominated for Congress a few years ago. At that time Judge Smith wrote that he was never a member of any secret society, and was esteemed as a man of honor and probity. His election would be an honor to Chicago.

"A non-partizan party" is a weak ruse and attempted deception. Mrs. J. Ellen Foster was a bitter Blaine partizan last fall. She not only made Republican speeches, but made a journey to Buffalo to ascertain and proclaim the alleged vices of Mr., now President Cleveland. If temperanec people make prohibition paramount, they are a temperance party; if they do not, they are not prohibitionists but something else, ready to give aid to the party which promises fairest. They will be "everything by turns and nothing long." But the lodge and liquor are Siamese twins. They present the one fundamental issue; and to ignore either is to fail by ignoring the truth. The American party is the only one which meets this issue and makes it paramount as it is.

The lodge increases its unpopularity every day, as its kinship is with every felonious organization, liquor, dynamite, strikes, murders, car-robberies, etc., all which have their oaths of concealment and tokens of mutual recognition. But these ramifications of secreey and subjection to head villains would only give them power by intimidation were it not for the steady, constant widening and deepening of the anti-secret discussion, religious and political. This terrifies the lodge and leads to displays, mock funerals for men long since dead, child-baptisms, and religious banters to make men wonder like heathen instead of worshiping like Christians. But this galvanized activity foretokens its doom. It is sinking or it would not be catching at straws.

Along with the universal acknowledgmeut of the decay of the race of statesmen, of whom our country has furnished some of the most illustrious examples in history, let us placee the faet that our metropolitan city, New York, is now the cheapest money market in the world. Only a few years ago the rate of interest was so high that it was difficult to obtain loans on the very best security at the legal rate of 7 per cent, while in European cities it was from 3 to 5. But rates have been steadily going down as wealth has increased until it is said that millions on millions are being loaned at one per cent, and even as low as one-half per cent—a rate lower than was ever known in the history of finance. Yet all the time capital is increasing. Shall Goldsmith prophesy for us—

> "Ill fares the land to hastening ills a prey,
> Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

The papers speak of two visitors at the White House last week, representatives of religious societies, who were received with marked distinetion by President Cleveland. Henry Ward Beecher called, and President Cleveland "took him by both hands and it seemed as if he could not make too much of him." "No person has been received with greater cordiality." The Catholic Archbishop Gibbons of Baltimore called by appoiutment and was given a half hour of executive time, with "a eordial invitation to repeat the call." Of course Mr. Beecher's political assistance during the campaign, and especially his condoning the vile character given to the Democratic candidate by his opponeuts, were services for which there must be political gratitude, but the world's proverbs are many which should warn the President of the company he keeps. With his other visitor there seems to be an effort to rival his political opponent, Mr. Blaiue, in the regard of the Catholic church. These visitations are more notable, because aside from the usual routine of executive business.

President Cleveland is said to have small regard for the epicurean habits into which the White House has fallen under Arthur, yet he takes a "little good wine" with his dinner. The temperance ladies must not expeet too much of the new matron of the White House. Miss Cleveland, the sister of the President who occupies that position, is probably rather a student than a reformer. She may admire the firmness of Mrs. Hayes at a distance, but will probably find the practice of her excellent principles a difficult matter. Miss Cleveland's name appears in the last catalogue of Elmira Female College, New York, as lecturer on medieval history. She is represented as very popular as a lecturer among the young ladies It is certainly to be hoped that she will not drop her literary tastes and set up for a second-rate leader of fashionable society. Retaining her individuality and independence she may infuse a nobler spirit into Washington circles, and God graut her noble tribute to temperance may also beeome the law at least in the Presidential mansion over which she presides.

The Canada liquor dealers have met with a decided defeat in the Dominion Parliament. They asked through the government, among other things, that compensation be made to all dealers who have suffered loss through the adoption of the Scott Act, and that the act be suspended until a commission can inquire and report on its workings. The government has sustained a made this absurd bill its own, a Canadian sentiment most decided defeat. Evidently Politicians, rum-sellers, is too strong to be trifled with by ers, or the government even ...

FREEMASONRY IN SWEDEN.

A LETTER FROM PROFESSOR FERNHOLM.

KRISTINEHAM, Sweden, Feb. 16, 1885.

President J. Blanchard,

DEAR BROTHER:—Your kind letter and also two humbers of your interesting and valuable periodical, the Christian Cynosure, I have duly received. I am sorry that I had not the time to give you an answer immediately.

The believers in Sweden generally abhor secret orders; and this is especially the case among the Free Mission churches. We do not find it at all consistent with the standing of a disciple of Christ, that he should be a member of a secret lodge. So strong is that feeling, that though we approve of the purpose of Good Templarism, the believers in our country generally have avoided beiug members of this order. Only in several northern parts of the country, believers are found who are Good Templars. Besides these northern regions you will throughout the country find very few believers who have joined the Good Templars; and most of them who have done so, have found it better to withdraw, and work together with other believers who stand without all secret matters, for the promoting of temperance. Of Freemasonry I have never known a single believer being a member. Such a thing would here be considered thoroughly inconsistent with his Christian standing.

But the last twenty years—a time during which a wind from the Holy Spirit has blown all over our country—we have been too much occupied with calling souls out of sin and worldliness, and getting the saved under Christian influence, care and education, to leave us time to pay any great attention to such things as Freemasonry. Because of that you will not be surprised to find that I do not know much of what has been said or written about this institution. Overloaded with labor and living in a very remote country town I am deprived of the means of getting the information you ask for. The brethren Waldenstrom, Ekman, and Erik Nystrom, who, as members of our "riksdag" (congress) are in Stockholm at present, can possibly communicate to you necessary intelligence about Mr. Skrefsrud, Prof. Nielson, etc.

I saw and heard the missionary Skrefsrud about two years ago, when he visited our town. But he lodged with the rector of the national church, and kept at such a distance from all free churchists, that though I earnestly tried personally to be acquainted with him, I failed altogether in my endeavor. Since that my sympathy for him was somewhat chilled. I remember having read in a newspaper some years ago of his apology in favor of Freemasonry, and of Prof. Nielson's refutation of it. I remember, too, that I have read of what you tell about the Crown Prince of Germany and his relation to Freemasonry. But I do not know whether those statements are to be trusted, and I have no means of ascertaining their truth.

I said, that we have had no time to pay any great attention to Freemasonry; but you may not conclude from that, that we think it of less importance to be counteracted. I wanted but to say, that we have not been able to take up this work yet. But you may be assured that our sympathies are on your side in your struggle against the "works of darkness."

In future, getting more leisure, I may perhaps find occasion to write something more suitable for your paper, than these hasty lines. Meanwhile you are in my prayers. Yours in Christ,

ANDREAS FERNHOLM.

WHAT IS CHURCH UNION?

BY REV. A. J. CHITTENDEN.

Editor Cynosure:—The call for a convention of people opposed to secretism is one to which I wish to respond in some way that may help it come to pass. The evil has been working long enough; the bad fruits are ripe enough, and there is no good reason for waiting till all other questions are settled before assailing this one in some way that shall be felt.

The railroads entering Chicago have hundreds of trains following each other all the time. The world cannot vacate the whole roadway of a continent just for a single reform wagon. To wait till all honest men are informed and agreed on every question of doctrine or morals, before we attempt to unite true Christians is [illegible] which was not to disregard the command of Christ, is to lose the [illegible] in any such manner; and it [illegible] every virtue command[illegible] opportunity of illustrating the very [illegible]use people to di[illegible]. For when there is nothing to [illegible] being united, and then there will be no virtue in [illegible] a command [illegible] then there was no use in the beginning to [illegible] evil in the [illegible]re was no use in the Maj[illegible] church div[illegible]at kind.

There is no [illegible]d has ever [illegible]greater magnitude than the curse of [illegible]arter-cei[illegible]. It is a conspicuous calamity in almos[illegible]y city and town in the United States. I place it [illegible]nd to none, either in importance or in immediate [illegible]mand for organized attention. As an impediment in the way of efficient Christianity it is undoubtedly the worst from which society suffers. Satan's master-piece of strategy is seen in this plan of dividing Christians on some over-strained point of doctrine, government, or moral economy. The duty of the churches is to recognize and immediately seek to remedy this great error.

Every thinking person believes that a community that can work together as Christians during a whole winter season, could continue to co-operate all summer if they would. And if they would (were so advised by their counsellors in the Lord) they could live and work together till death should separate them.

It is a confusion of terms to characterize the endeavor to re-unite Christians as the making of a sect whose creed is—"no sect." When Christ left the church he charged the apostles with the creed, "Let there be no division of my people." That command is that there shall be NO SECT IN CHRIST. As between the churches and the heathen world, Christianity was a sect; and in coming out from the world, we are socially a sect, to-day. But, having made that one sufficient division of society, Christ emphatically forbade any other. His charge can mean nothing less than this—"there shall be no schism" among Christians. The only ground on which one society of people can preclude or withdraw fellowship is on the ground that the other party are not Christians. They are then forbidden to extend to each other any fraternal recognition, and it becomes the duty of either party to regard the other as the enemies of Christ. The absurdity of carrying out this consistency has left the churches in the habit of showing conventional courtesies for appearance sake, and disobeying Christ the rest of the year.

This disobedience is the great abomination which the evangelist uniformly requires them to abandon (for the time at least) and which returns to segregate and demoralize the army of Israel till the time of the next revival (among the children).

A ship disengaged from an ice-field is a sect as related to the ice, and that is well; but to be cut in two parts by another iceberg or to be sawn in two by a crazy mechanic would be sect within itself. When a church says, "No sect in Christ," it is not, on that account, a sect within the church. It is not clear thinking that regards such an endeavor as the reunion of Christians the making of another sect. If a man had a dozen chickens in a dozen coops and concluded to put them all into one we should not hinder him by crying out, "Man, you have twelve coops already!" During a little interval in the transfer, there might be thirteen coops, but when the communion is in effect, there is practically only one. A hundred lambs in a hundred little tight pens would freeze to death in a stormy night, and the good, sensible shepherd who should run a pen-fence around them all and then remove the partitions for their common comfort and preservation would not be charged with making a new pen in addition to the fifty. Fifty from fifty-one leaves one. That is church union.

There seems to be in the minds of some writers, a misapprehension of what we wish to do. They supply us with the gratuitous programme of demolishing all existing churches and leaving them as so many piles of morter-covered brick to which church unionists are to apply themselves and erect a new building after the pattern shown us in the acts of the apostles. Such an advertisement of our notions may be regarded as a clever caricature, but I have not discovered such an intention during twenty years of conversation and some reading. When one hundred people of one Christian name practically unite with as many of another denomination, acting together in the making of committees, arranging meetings, meeting expenses, etc., there has been no demolition of a church—only a joining of hands, and nothing at all fearful or impracticable to be repeated very frequently—and then without any intervals at all. We are not Nihilists in the church. Sectism is Nihilism, acting by disintegration.

Neither is unionism a no-creed-ism. It permits larger and healthier credence than any system of intimidation or ecclesiastical protectorate. Good Christian society leaves the rights of individual conscience decently respected within the limits of common morality and of essential Christianity. And that is church unionism. We prefer to say simply—it is Christianity. Church uniting is not the ignoring faith, character, or discipline; but its faith is repentance and trust in Christ; its character is sincerity and love; its discipline is moral and on the grounds of common morality.

The security of the churches does not depend upon legacies added to the Bible, or on testimonies multiplied in the history of the church, or on swingbars placed between the people and the Lord's table.

When the ministry fail to declare the truth, or the people called Christians fail to obey it, there is no contrivance, ecclesiastical or civil, that can prevent the removal of the candlestick and the loss of the house and the very ground on which it stands. Everything in this world called property is exposed to the common vicissitudes of society, and an illegitimate guarding of moral property is the surest way to have it stolen and carried off. The effective discipline of the church must proceed from a vital condition of the church charged with a spiritual sense of responsibility, and without any other necessary constitution than the Bible interpreted by the church—not of yesterday, but the church of to-day.

To say that any church will have organization and order and methods and officers and duties assigned, is superfluous. Such things for necessary purposes are a matter of course. Unionism is order, not anarchy. It is the society of Christians meeting casually or by appointment, as a settled community, and for the purposes of mutual benefit and the increase of their aggregate usefulness in the world. They receive to their society and communion all who seem to have received Christ as Saviour and who evidently are living in obedience to him. They do not challenge people at first acquaintance on every conceivable question of belief. Neither do they publicly investigate the public moral habits or every specific moral notion of the candidate for fellowship. All such customs are essentially improper, unauthorized in the Scriptures, and are generally distasteful to the more refined among Christians. We have no right, in common courtesy, to ask a candidate if he is a murderer, or a thief, or a libertine, or a profane swearer, or a drunkard, or a glutton. When he misconducts himself, it will then be proper to investigate the accused. But we have no right to presume, on first acquaintance, that he has been accused. He is supposed to know the sentiments of the church to whom he comes, and their usages, and what constitutes acceptable character in that society.

Such knowledge is sufficient of itself to preclude most of the unworthy, and a fair trial of people, on the presumption of good character, and under good influence, is better than making hasty and artificial conscience on acquired opinions and offending a sensitive person by exhaustive moral investigation.

The acts of the apostles show nothing but simple courteous greeting of all who professed to believe in the risen Christ, and when they fell into sins they were dealt with after the fact, but were not investigated before the fact.

I hope the church union thought of the West will take shape immediately as it has in the East. The sins of waste cry aloud to heaven, and the waiting of the heathen is a shame to us. The poverty of the churches is a self-made poverty, and will continue till Christ is obeyed in every particular. The divisions of the church are the by-word of mockers, and we have nothing to answer. Any idea or method of "reform" that entails an age of inveterate sectism as the consequence will be "straining at gnats and swallowing camels."

The incidental evils of the anti-slavery and other agitations ought not to be gloried in, and all sects that have not expired with their causes should speedily repent.

Wheaton.

LAWLESSNESS.

BY REV. LEVI KELLY.

The present lawlessness in our country is largely owing to a want of proper home training. The child that gets its demands by whining and crying, will soon learn to threaten, and finally will inforce it by blows.

Many childreu in our towns and cities receive nearly all their education in the streets, and so familiarize themselves with crimes that they soon become accomplished criminals.

Want for a proper regard for parental authority will result in disregard for the claims of civil government. Unless the mind is trained to obey, what hopes may we have of making law-abiding citizens of such subjects? These make the dangerous classes in our cities, who love idleness and hate industry. They foment riots, and rob the working classes of their wages.

Many young girls are indulged at home, for some supposed good traits in their address or appearance. Instead of teaching them the art of housekeeping, they are allowed to flirt, entertain company, and despise the sterner duties, which are so necessary to married life. The girl of the times has more demands for dress and display, for ornament and show and puff, than for real practical gifts. Such women love poodle dogs more than childreu. Perhaps among this class may be reckoned the women who destroy the fruit of the womb. If refinement neglects children, and prefers poodle dogs, no wonder there are so many American families without living offspring. No doubt many inmates of the houses of infamy trace their downfall to the neglect of home duties, and an early departure from imposed restraint.

We have had for twenty-five years a relaxation of good home training, and it begins to bear the legitimate fruit. I think Horace Greeley said the rebellion would never have occurred if Southern mothers had applied the birch to their babies. Proper punishment may prevent in after years imprisonment or hanging. At first it does not seem joyous, "but afterwards it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness."

Doctor of Divinity Title.—These honorary doctorate degrees are becoming a delusion and a snare and an offense; things to be avoided and to be gotten rid of with an unguent of brimstone, or chloride of lime, or carbolic acid, or whatever is effective for the purpose. "Let him bathe himself, wash his clothes in water, and be unclean until the even." The title, "Reverend," refers to a revered office, and is a convenience for designating a class. A military title is useful for indicating rank in actual service. So, also, of the civil titles, Governor, Judge, Secretary, Senator, etc. The medical doctorates are almost an indispensable convenience. But the honorary doctorates have neither significance, nor use, nor beauty. You meet two friends and address one of them as "Mister," and the other as "Doctor." While it is well understood by all three of you that you stand on an equality, and that the honorary title is as empty as a gourd, yet an invidious distinction is made which is offensive both to the moral sense and the gentlemanly instincts of each one of the party. The "Doctor" knows that he is entitled to no pre-eminence over the other two, and if he be a gentleman of fine sense of honor, it humiliates him by making him a party to a sham, and to a discourtesy. The one who is addressed as "Mister," is thus told in terms that he is inferior to the "Doctor," and he excuses it because he knows that nothing is meant by the conventionality—but he cannot help the reflection that the phrase conveys an insult and perpetrates injustice. But let us suppose a different case—that the "Doctor" is a man of superior learning, attainments and talents—then he needs no artificial distinction—no ribbon fastened in his ear like a premium ox at a country fair. He bears a name to which he himself has given all the distinction which it deserves—no more, no less, and he is the last man to enjoy meretricious tinsel or to confess that he needs it. The wiping out of these honorary doctorates is demanded as an element of moral reform, as due to candid Christian fellowship, and as due to gentlemanly courtesy. Here is one who will take it as a personal favor never to have the title applied to him again.—Interior.

—We hope none of these many pastors who are quite willing Mr. Cook should take the lodge lion by the beard, ask him to take up this battle in the spirit of the lawyers whom Christ condemned as ready to lade men with burdens grievous to be borne but which they were unwilling to touch with one of their fingers!

FREEMASONRY IN EUROPE.

A FACTOR IN POLITICS—ONE THE WORLD OVER—ITS SECRET POWER KNOWN ONLY BY THE FEW.

[From a pastoral by Bishop Bagshawe of Nottingham, England.]

"The children of the evil one" are organized and led on, the Holy Father tells us, by the wide-spread society of Freemasons, which acts in conjunction with and makes use of innumerable other secret sects. Clement XII., in 1738, first warned Christendom of the nefarious plot against the church carried on in this society. Pius VII., Leo XII., Pius VIII., Gregory XII., Pius IX., and Leo XIII. have all given similar warnings. Placed on their high watch-tower, and receiving communications from the entire world, the Popes have the best means of judging in this matter.

The great French revolution of the last century was prepared and foretold by the Masonic lodges. The new constitution which it gave to France was modelled on that of Freemasonry. Its cry of under cover of which so many horrors were perpetrated, was the watchword of the lodges. Barruel, an eye-witness, and a member of the sect, declares that the brethren then, consideriug that the time was come when they were to publish their secret, cried aloud, "at last our goal is reached; from this day France will be one vast lodge, and the Frenchmen Freemasons; the rest of the world will soon follow." The party leaders—Mirabeau, Sieyes, Gregoire, Robespierre, Condocet, Fauchet, Guillotin, Bonneville,, Volney, Phillippe, Egalito, etc.—had all been initiated into the higher grades of Freemasonry, and Wachsmuth, in his history of France during the revolution (p. 55), asserts "that the literature of the time immediately preceding that terrible event, the tendency of which was to subvert tne church and state, found in Freemasonry a zealous and useful ally." The notorious Louis Blanc, a Freemason, in his history of the revolution (vol. ii., cap. 3), says, "It is necessary to conduct the reader to the opening of the subterranean mine laid at that time beneath the thrones and altars of revolutionists." whom he then proceeds to describe and name as Freemasons, Count von Haughwitz, also, ex-Provincial Grand Master of the Prussian Freemasous, warned the Congress of Verona in 1830 in the following words: "I feel at this moment firmly persuaded that the French revolution, which had its commencement in 1788, and broke out soon after, attended with all the horrors of regicide, existed heaven knows how long before, having been planned and having had the way prepared for it by associations and secret oaths." In like manner Odilon-Barrot, La Fayette, Marshal Maison, and other chiefs of the revolution of 1830, were all Freemasons. It was brought about by

LIBERTY, EQUALITY, AND FRATERNITY,

TREACHERY AND FALSEHOOD IN FAVOR OF THE FREEMASON LOUIS PHILLIPPE.

Louis Phillippe in his turn was driven out by the Parisian lodges, and the members of the Provisional government which took his place, Cremieux, and Garnier-Pages, themselves Freemasons, received thereupon the adhesion of the Grand Orient of France, whose address contained the following words, "Freemasons have from all time borne on their banners these words: liberty, equality, fraternity; findiug them again on the flag of France they hail the triumph of their principles, and they pride themselves in being able to say that the whole country has received by you a Masonic consecration." So lastly in the days of the Commune in Paris in the spring of 1871, a procession of 5,000 people, in which 150 lodges of France were represented, went to the town hall, when it was openly proclaimed with approval that the new Commune was the antitype of Solomon's temple, and the cornerstone of the social fabric about to be raised by the efforts of the craft. The Freemasons also on the same occasion openly carried on negotiation with the government of Versailles on behalf of the socialists. We will quote one more fact of no common interest given by the Univers of January 31st, 1873. It quotes the Journal de Florence as follows: After the battle of Sedan our (Italian) ministers were for some time undecided with regard to the occupation of Rome. Most probably this event would never have taken place but for a deputation of Freemasons, who obtained an audience of the Minister Lanza. They handed him a small slip of paper on which was written this truly laconic message: If the government does not immediately the revolution will break out in every town in Italy. Lanza read the paper and examined the signatures; he saw that they were exclusively those of heads of lodges, and at once gave General Cadorna orders to march. The petition was made public, as well as the signatures attached to it, and any one desirous of knowing who the persons were need only consult the "Annuario della Frammasoneria Italiana." But we may be told that if we mean to warn you against Freemasonry we are going beside the mark in telling you of the evil deeds of foreign Freemasons, and that English Freemasonry is quite a different thing. In truth we do not doubt that a great multitude of English Freemasons would hold such deeds in horror, for it is the avowed principle of Freemasoury to keep always a secret in reserve from its disciples until the highest grades be reached, so that the three symbolic grades, and even the dignitaries, may easily know little or nothing of what is done and purposed by their superiors in the order in the higher secret grades. Their name and credit, their wealth and influence are of enormous use to the leaders, without any very active co-operation in their designs; and the fearful responsibility of lending credit and influence to secret leaders and secret designs, of which they know nothing cannot be escaped. The society is one and universal, and a common responsibility is assumed by all who join it. The Papal condemnation and the Papal excommunication fall on all such equally.

GIVE ORDERS TO MARCH ON ROME,

There are abundant proofs that the English and and Scotch Masons are one with those on the Continent. They are even their fathers and teachers in the craft, for Mackay's Lexicon of Freemasonry shows with dates how nearly all the Contineutal Graud Lodges were established by members of either English or Scotch lodges between the years 1734 and 1800. When the Prince of Wales was first appointed Grand Master, the Times of April 29, 1875, announced how deputations were sent to him not only from the Scotch and Irish lodges, but also from that of Sweden; how the Grand Orient Lodge of France sent a letter of congratulation to his royal highness, as they had done to his predecessors in office, the Earl of Zetland and the Marquis of Ripon; and how the Grand Lodge of Italy sent him a congratulatory address in which the following words occur, liberty, fraternity, equality. . . . By this event English Masonry, which hasalready deserved so well of universal humanity, will acquire ever fresh titles to the gratitude aud admiration of the whole civilized world. Italian Masonry therefore rejoices at this new lustre shed upon our world-wide institution, and sincerely prays that between the two Masonic commtttees may be drawn ever more closely those fraternal ties which, . . . have always bound us to our English brethren, whose profouud intelligence and unwearying activity we constantly appreciate and seek to follow.'" Truly the last words would seem to show that there was some other activity in the English lodges to excite the emulation of the Italians, besides eatnig and drinking. The Times moreover of July 19, 1875, announced that the English Grand Master had given official recognition to the Grand Orient of Italy. He also, after his installation, is reported to have appointed Brother Wendt to be Grand Secretary for German correspondence. It is much insisten on indeed that since the latter refused to make acknowledgment of God a condition of membership,and erased the mention of God from their formularies. It seems to us to matter little whether they acknowledged or did not acknowledge a "Grand Architect of the Universe," for in saying Architect they already implicitly deny the true God, who is the Creator of heaven and earth. Let us suppose, however, that the recent refusal to communicate with the Grand Orient of France was intended as an act of homage to God. But are not the English Freemasons who are Christians thereby judged aud condemued out of their own mouths? If to erase and omit all mention of God be an insult to God, why is not the omission of all mention of Christ in their owu lodges an insult to Christ! If they will not communicate in their rites and ceremonies with an avowed atheist why do they so freely and readily communicate in them with avowed auti-Christians, such as Jews, Turks and infidels? If their conscience tells them that they dishonor God by commuuicating with those who deny and blaspheme him, it ought to tell them that they dishonor Christ by communicating with those who are his professed enemies. Is not Jesus Christ their God aud Lord? As regards the objec tio that lay and ecclesiastical, would never countenance such schemes, the answer is furnished us by Brother Louis Blanc, who said in his letter to a Freemason, taken from Bien Public, Brussels, 1855, p. 74, "Thanks to its clever system of mechanism, Freemasonry found in princes and aristocrats patrons rather than enemies. Even monarchs, as for instance Fredrick II of Prussia, have condescended to handle the trowel and tie on the apron. And why not? As the existence of higher grades of Freemasonry was carefully concealed from them, they only knew as much of Freemasonry as could be revealed to them without danger. They had no reason for concerning themselves about it, seeing that they were kept in the lower grades in which they perceived nothing but an opportunity for amusement, joyful banquets, principles forsaken and resumed at the threshold of the lodges, formulas that had no reference to ordinary life, in a word, a comedy of equality. But in these matters comedy closely borders upon tragedy, and the princes and nobles were induced to offer the cover of their name and the blind aid of their influence to secret undertakings directed against themselves." Dear reverend brethren and children in Christ, we have been longer thau we had intended on this branch of the subject, and must omit for the present much that we intended to say in exhorting you to be loyal and zealous for the church, the Spouse of Jesus Christ, now that she is furiously attacked by such terrible and bitter enemies. We had much to say on your duty of serving her by assiduous prayer, energetic action, and liberal tribute, and in particular we wish to exhort you to support diligently, in accordance with the Holy Father's wishes, the beautiful associations of the Propagation of the Faith and of the Holy Infancy.

THE ENGLISH LODGES HAVE DISOWNED THOSE OF FRANCE,

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND OTHER GREAT PERSONAGES,

EDMUND ABOUT'S PALL-BEARERS. — Edmund About was a man of genius and an unbeliever. He not only hated the despotism of the Romish church, but also all forms of the Christian religion.

Edmund About was very recently elected a member of the French Academy: its membership is limited to forty, and when a vacancy occurs the contest for the succession is hot. The greatest and highest in France struggle for the coveted honor of a seat. Louis Napoleon sought in vain to be elected. The members are called the immortals, not because they do not die, for they do die like other men.

Edmund About died a few weeks ago. The Academy recognized him as one of their members, though he had not taken his seat. According to custom they appointed pall-bearers to represent the Academy at his funeral. It is reported in the papers that when these gentlemen learned that the burial was to take place with no religious services they refused to serve. This fact has great significance as one of the evidences of the present position of the mind of France, and so of the world, in regard to religious faith.

The Academy has no official relation to religion. Its members are not elected for any services they have rendered or are capable of rendering to good morals. Perhaps many of them are unbelievers, as Edmund About was. Their chief work is the preservation of the French language. The question is never asked what a man believes. It is enough that he is master of his native tongue and is famous as a man of letters.

The proper way to bury infidels is pointed out Jerem. 16: 19, "He shall be buried with the burial of an ass."—Lutheran Witness.

—A scoffing blacksmith in Bristol, Conn., lately declined pay for shoeing the minister's horse, saying he would take it out in preaching. As he never attended church, the minister appointed a meeting at his smithy. Several crowded meetings have since been held there, and a revival has followed. The blacksmith has been converted, and many who never went to church have been reached.

—Of Park College, Mo., President McAfee writes to the Presbyterian, Feb. 19th: "Wonderful blessings since the Day of Prayer for Colleges. Our College students are all Christians. Over thirty have expressed hope in Christ since Thursday of last week. There has beeu no preaching. Prayer meetings and inquiry meetings conducted by our excellent pastor, with no loss of recitation or work."

—A school for Christian workers has been established at Springfield, Mass., on a new plan, and having in view the traiuing of laymen for religious work in the various fields opening up so rapidly in all our large cities. The aim is to fit them to take charge of the Y. M. C. Associations, to become superiutendents of Sunday-schools, to help pastors in mission work, and in fact, to prepare young men for the general work of the church.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E. E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XIII.—Concluded.

Comparative quiet, however, had reigned since the discovery of the dynamite plot, owing to the refusal of the frightened "scabs," as the strikers called those who had taken their places, to go back to work until there had been a thorough examination of all the premises. But under the calm were strange elements of fierceness and fury. It was the ominous quiet that precedes the cyclone.

Nelson was popular with the best class of the workmen. They greeted him with cheers as he came out of the court-room, and altogether he was considerably more of a hero after his unpleasant experience than he had been before. The sight of their honest faces, and the real joy which they showed at his release, touched him.

"How I wish I could get all the workmen together and talk a little common-sense into them. I think I could," he said to Martin Treworthy, who had accompanied him to his lodgings for a little conversation over the day's events.

Martin only gave a low grunt, which, if it expressed anything, expressed skepticism. And Nelson so understood it, for he continued eagerly:

"They are under bad leaders, and they don't know it. Even that faction among the workmen who have a grudge against me I do not feel like greatly blaming. They are so ignorant, and they have real wrongs. These men who claim to represent them, and don't represent them no more than wolves represent a flock of sheep, hold them in a state of the most complete vassalage. This strike has opened my eyes to a good many things, and one is that some new form of organization on a free, open democratic basis would be a great deal better for working men than these secret labor unions which afford such dangerous facilities of leadership for mere adventurers and deadbeats and blacklegs. I have been a fool, Mr. Treworthy. I dare say you enjoy the confession."

"Mightily," chuckled Martin. "I knew you'd cut your wisdom teeth after a while. But we ain't through with trouble yet. They are going to try starting up the works again to-morrow. The men have got pretty much over their scare now and can't afford to loaf round, but as the strikers can't play the dynamite game over twice, a riot will most likely be the next thing in order. Last night I happened to be going past when one of them Socialist fellows was holding forth, and I thought I would just turn to and listen a while. The chap stole a sight of his talk from Ingersoll, and forgot to put in his quotation marks every time. And he could quote the Bible, too—told them it would only be 'spoiling the Egyptians' as the Israelites did if they should rase to their foundations a few of the fine houses of the rich, and take all they could lay their hands on. The rabble he was talking to cheered like mad when he said that. They were just primed for a riot."

"A good part of the crowd that gather to hear such talk," said Nelson, "is supplied from a class outside of the workmen. The increasing number of no-license towns has brought into Jacksonville more of the saloon element than ever before. There are always plenty of that kind of fish round where there is any labor disturbance. These Socialist chaps can swill down beer by the hogshead, and bluster and rant; but that is about all they can do. Their bark is terrific, but their bite is of small account. It is these liquor saloons, these underground doggeries at every street corner that are going to play the mischief. I believe that without their inspiration Socialism, at least here in America, would be as harmless as a viper with its head cut off. But we've dethroned King Cotton and put up King Whisky, and the end will be—nobody knows what. Take foreigners, now, like many of the workmen here in Jacksonville, ignorant of the first principle of free government, self-government; take our rich capitalists, caring for nothing but to get rich faster; take these Socialist firebrands, and then add the liquor element, and we certainly have the material for riots, dynamite explosions, or everything else of a lawless nature."

And, as it happened, Nelson was just then, like all of us at times, more of a prophet than he thought.

CHAPTER XIV.

IN WHICH JACKSONVILLE REAPS THE WHIRLWIND.

Matthew Densler, the chief proprietor of the works, had begun life himself as a common operative, had amassed his large fortune by a combination of shrewdness and diligence, and had also developed in his early struggles with adversity a temper as unbending as his own iron and steel. He had no unkindly feeling towards the class from which he had risen, but he made very little allowance for their peculiar weaknesses; in fact, he was rather inclined to look with a slight contempt on the laboring man who had not been able to do as well as he had himself. Trade unions he hated above everything else on the face of the earth, and all his stubborn powers of resistance were brought into play by the present crisis.

He made a point of visiting the works himself in person, and thus trying to infuse something of his own feeling into the new hands, who were in truth a rather cowed looking set. To have to be escorted back and forth from their work by policemen, and be subjected to a course of terrorizing and intimidation harder to bear than open violence, were not things especially inspiriting, and the majority heartily wished themselves back where they came from.

The day passed quietly, but groups of strikers had been slowly gathering on the street, and when the non-unionists left off work at night, they had to pass through a gauntlet of foes, yelling, shouting all manner of derisive epithets, and armed with stones and clubs—a few with concealed knives.

But at the very commencement of the melee, a tall figure in a workingman's garb stepped forth from one of those groups, and mounting on an empty barrel called out in a clear commanding voice, which for an instant silenced the rioters.

"Fellow workmen, I want to speak to you."

It was Nelson Newhall.

His audacious movement had taken the mob completely by surprise. A man thoroughly in earnest always possesses a strange magnetic power over others, and in that instant of astonished, startled silence, both the attacked and the attacking parties waited, curious to hear what would come next.

"I want to talk to you for five minutes as one intelligent working man may talk to another. Is it any worse for the capitalist to oppress and ill-treat you than for you to oppress and ill-treat your brother workmen? By what right do you forbid them to earn their daily bread? Is it the right of the strongest? That is the right the capitalist pleads. How long will you handle this two-edged sword? How long will you imagine that one wrong can right another? that riots and strikes and unlawful violence will ever alter cause and effect, or change your condition one iota except for the worse?

"But now I want to talk to you about the chief cause of all this trouble. Run it right down to the roots. What causes strikes? Low wages. And what causes low wages? Dull times. And what causes dull times? I will tell you in a few words. You pay away your money for beer and tobacco instead of bread. You go to the saloon, order a drink, and pay your dime over the counter. One dime paid over the counter of the two hundred and fifty thousand dramshops, licensed and unlicensed, in these United States amounts to twenty-five thousand dollars in one day. In a year it would amount to over a million and a half. This is only the price of one drink daily, remember. Multiply this by the actual number of drinks sold and the sum goes into the hundred millions. Supposing these hundred millions went to buy the things the world needs and wants, would anybody lack employment? How quick every iron and cotton and woolen mill would start up all over the country Now when times are dull, there are always fools enough to say, 'It is all owing to over-production,' when the fact is there can't be too much to eat or to wear, or too much of anything, in short, which goes to make human beings happier or more comfortable. It is all owing to under-consumption. People get along without things they want, or with less of them, because, to put it in plain words, these two hundred and fifty thousand dramshops have taken the money. I don't deny that in our land to-day there are men who have made big fortunes by grinding the faces of the poor." Cries of "That's so," greeted Nelson at this juncture, and a voice, thickened by heavy potations of beer or something stronger, shouted out savagely, "String the rascals up to the lamp-posts." The young workman was dealing with turbulent material, but he took no notice of these interruptions except to calmly continue.

"While you are cursing capitalists, just remember that the liquor dealers and distillers whom you support by your money and your votes are capitalists too, and the amount of their united capital is over one billion of dollars. Now this vast sum invested in honest manufactures would give work at good wages to every laboring man in the United States. These are hard facts, but you won't hear them from politicians dependent on the rum vote, and you won't hear them from men who counsel murder and arson and pillage as a remedy for the wrongs of labor. Suppose the late plot to blow up the source of our daily bread here in Jacksonville had succeeded, would you have been any better off to-day? The fact is, we working men don't know where our real power lies. With one stamp of our feet we could put down this miserable dramshop business that has more to do with low wages and dull times than all other causes combined. By a system of intelligent co-operation we could make every monopolist shake in his shoes from Maine to California. By voting in our own interests instead of the interests of whisky politicians, we could make our hand felt where it needs to be felt—on the wheels of government. Instead of sending millionaires to Congress, whose first thought will be when this or that measure comes up for consideration, 'How is it going to affect my stocks or my bonds?' we could send men from our own ranks whose first thought will be, 'How is it going to affect the working classes?' Now the great iron and woolen interests are represented in Congress because they are backed up by the money power behind them, and labor, without which those interests would be valueless, ought to find full as efficient a backer in its millions of votes—thrown away every election because one half of you don't understand the intelligent use of the ballot and the other half are bound to sustain a party because some office-seeking demagogue tells you that the whole country will go to rack and ruin if you don't."

Now this speech was not exactly "made on the spur of the moment." It had been thought out in his hours of respite from toil. It had been as a fire shut up in his bones through all the long weary days of the strike, and now that he had an opportunity to let it forth, his burning, trenchant sentences came like the rush of many waters. The electric fire with which his whole being was charged even passed to a few of the more sober and thoughtful part of his audience. They began to cheer.

Nelson might have finished his speech in good order and had the satisfaction of quelling the incipient riot in its first stages, but two untoward things prevented. For in the first place scattered through the crowd of workmen were numbers of that loose, floating class of whom he had spoken to Martin Treworthy, and who were not at all suited by any such tame ending of affairs. They had joined the mob for the fun of seeing a riot, and a riot they meant to have. And in the second place his scathing arraignment of the saloon as the chief source of their ills was not agreeable to those of the workmen who had imbibed the theories of Socialistic speakers. They were accustomed to hearing all the blame laid on the shoulders of the manufacturers, and preferred decidedly that solution of their difficulties. Such wild and lawless elements were not to be controlled, though they might receive a momentary check by the array of statistics and argument in the young workman's speech. To the majority of the rabble it had only been, to use the words of Jeremiah, "like a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice and can play well on an instrument." The novelty over the reckless, rioting spirit again began to manifest itself.

"Come, dry up now. We've heard enough of your talk. You are the feller that's been standing up all along for these rich, lazy, lollypops of manufacturers. And that's what I think"—here followed an expression rather too emphatic for these pages, while a brickbat whizzed uncomfortably close to Nelson's head, and struck against the walls of the building behind him—"of you or any other working man who will take the part of bloated aristocrats, and go agin his own flesh and blood."

"That was a weighty but not a convincing argument," said Nelson coolly and sarcastically as he dodged the missle. "The friend who just interrupted me must take surer aim next time if he wants to shut my mouth. This wild, communistic talk may do for Europe, but God help us working men of America should we ever make assassination and dynamite the weapons of our warfare, for then hate will rise up to answer to hate, passion to passion, and I warn you the contest will be a very unequal one. Bad leaders and bad liquor do the cause of labor more harm than all the 'bloated aristocrats' in the land."

"If the rich uns mought 'ev their wine, the poor uns mought 'ev their beer," shouted out a brawny Cornish man, whose Vulcan-like strength was only to be surpassed by the ugliness of his temper when too full of his favorite dram. While another chimed in derisively:

"I'll be bound old Densler keeps plenty of the real stuff in his cellar. Maybe we'll make a visit there to-night and find out."

The mob laughed and shouted at this piece of ravado.

Nelson opened his mouth to reply. A stone ruck him squarely on the jaw. The spirit of riot ad once more taken possession of the crowd, and iere was only time for the heartsick feeling that he as indeed a prophet without honor to rush over im in a bitter wave, before the necessity of looking ut for his own personal safety became pressingly pparent. In vain the policemen used their clubs. tones and brickbats flew promiscuously.

(To be continued.)

Reform News.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

RST AND ROUSING REPORT FROM THE NEW LECTURER.

Belleville, Ill., Mar. 19, 1885.

Editor Cynosure: I called on Rev. W. F. Davis, astor of the First M. E. church, who has belonged a number of secret orders, Masonry among the st, but has left them all and says he never shall ive anything to do with them hereafter. I visited ev. Geo. Klein, of the First Baptist church, who ever has belonged to any secret order; also Rev. C. Phillips, of the First Presbyterian, and others. early all of the above mentioned testified that the orest material in their churches are those who are tive in the lodge. But all three were opposed to y preaching in their churches.

Dr. West and his excellent wife are devoted Chris- ans. His is a notorious case of secession from cret orders in general and Freemasonry in partie- ar of recent date; and it resulted entirely from his nvictions that penal secrecy is in antagonism with e Christian religion. Prof. W. A. Snook and he rected me to Dr. Jas. L. Perryman, who is regard- l as one of the ablest writers on any subject in is part of the State. I called to see him and his xcellent wife, and found him to be a gentleman of lture and of charming conversational powers, upled with a fearlessness of expression admirable the extreme, in view of the fact that he is a Mason. e says: "Masonry and rum must fall together, as ey are united. It is no use to resist it; it will me; the cloud is rising. No great reform has ever t taken place and held its position without being mented with blood, and before ten years, sir, we all have war—Masonry and rum will stand or fall gether."

I tried in vain to present the truth in respect to is reform in some of the churches, but all were osed, and all I could do was to circulate tracts, etc.

March 20.—At the Thomas House a Knight Tem- ar asked me what business I was engaged in—What line of goods do you carry?"

"The Gospel," I replied; "especially the glad lings respecting secret societies."

"Ugh! Ugh!! And what good do you expect accomplish?"

"Lead Christians in those orders to see the right ay out and keep young men from going in."

As there were a number of Masons present there as a great commotion. Knight T. continued, You'd better go home, young man, and shut up; hat do you know about secret societies? The ab- rdity of you men undertaking to denounce a ing of which you know nothing is remarkable?"

"I know all about blue lodge Masonry. Let me ll you, as there are a goodly number of the craft re it may entertain you, although some parts of it e quite familiar to you of the craft."

I then related my experience in Masonry briefly d when I quoted the penalty of the first obliga- on, one of the craft in a terrible rage yelled, "You ut up!" I just proceeded to the end, then the tter said, "If you should be here at noon, and me of the iron men [meaning iron workers] ould hear those words out of you they would amp the life out of you!" I turned to a young dy who was near and said, "Now you have an in- ght into the religious culture attained in the lodge. ou hear him say that these pious Masons 'would amp the life out of me.'"

At the request of a friend I called to see Mrs. albert, who is an active worker in the W. C. T. She received me very kindly and contributed the tract fund. She was pleased with reform erature as are all who have seen it and regard agi- tion as the right way to bring the reform to the ont.

By request I led the noon prayer meeting of the M. C. A. of which Dr. West is president. They ve a fine, large room on the corner of one of the incipal streets of this city, and there are some de- ted, earnest, Christian young men in it. In its oms I had the honor of an introduction to Gen. . H. Powell and the pleasure of a conversation with him. What most impressed me was his testimony to the power of religion in the soul. To hear him say, "I'm a Christian," and repeatedly assert his allegiance to Jesus Christ, and then to look on his battle-scarred face while he dwells with emphasis on his faith, the mind is carried back to the time when through the carnage and smoke of battle he led the 2d Cavalry division in the Shenandoah valley under Sherman, and we mentally exclaim, Honorable scars! Blessed testimony! Then when he said, "I never go near them; I have not attended a meeting of the Masonic lodge for fifteen years! Young man, I've been through all these secret orders and I never go near them; not even their street processions!"

Of course he has his doubts as to the propriety of open warfare on these orders, and as freely expressed them; but one of two things impresses itself on the mind: either he is not good enough for Masonry, or Masonry is not good enough for him. And we appeal to every candid reader to decide which is the just inference. When I told him my own experience, and how the W. M. of the lodge to which I belong "ordered" me back to it and "ordered" me to work in the Senior Warden's station against my will, he pronounced it "unheard-of tyranny."

How strange that on my return to the Thomas House that evening after this interview that the Masons should swarm into the large commodious office and repeat these threats: "Go off and shut up;" "You perjured villain;" or, "You'll never get out of this town alive." "I don't say Masons would kill you, but some man on hearing you talk might get mad and do it." Surely he'd be a bold man who would attempt such a thing when these Masons give one such public warning. Another would then chime in, "O, no! he's too dirty and low-lived a dog for any man to kill him." Yet another stepped forward and informed me that one of the most respectable(?) merchants in town offered "to donate the eggs and assist in throwing them to egg me out of town."

I just paced the floor, and when they had exhausted their ammunition I said, "Gentlemen, I received just such a warning respecting my life as you utter on my first arrival, and told my informant that I thought that it was as near heaven from Belleville as elsewhere, to which he objected and said, 'Young man, you are mistaken. It is just a little nearer the other place.' At first I doubted that, but from the number of your secret societies, the spiritual poverty of your churches, the deathly silence on this question of the pastors—one of whom said, 'If I thought that my trustees would let you preach or lecture on this subject here, my resignation would date from that moment'—coupled with the fact that not less than four or five times I have been threatened with death if I did not leave town and shut up, I confess that the first man who warned me had the advantage of me, and am inclined to the opinion that you are a 'little nearer' hell than any other place, and if the tyler's sword is not taken from the doors of these churches the sulphurous crust of the pit will soon close over you all, and the entire city will sink in its depths. Your secret lodges, according to your city directory, outnumber your churches, and I've been told it is in the ratio of ten to one. I have not made the estimate, but I know it is safe to say eight lodges to one church. No wonder then that one blood-bought liberty, as dear to our hearts as our country's flag, is here trampled under the iron heel of so much lodge despotism. I mean the liberty of free speech. I cannot get a church or place in which to preach or lecture on this subject in your city. All I could do was to scatter reform literature along your streets. I'm now going to leave you, hoping that the next time I come I shall have a chance to tell the people of Belleville how I was finally emancipated from the death-grip of Masonry."

Since the above transpired I have arrived in Marissa. More anon. Geo. T. Dissette.

A WONDERFUL MEETING AT NEW ORLEANS.

St. Paul, Minn., March, 1885.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

Dear Brother:—Perhaps it would interest the readers of the Cynosure to know that the Baptist ministers of New Orleans listened to a lecture against Freemasonry. Such was the case. At the close of the lecture a professor in the Leland University, who is a Baptist minister, stated that he had taken nine degrees of Freemasonry; and to his colored brother ministers, many of whom are Masons, he said, "No doubt it seemed to you as if your flesh was creeping upon your bones while you listened to the details of your horrid Masonic obligations, as they have just been exposed before you; but I have come to regard Masonic obligations as of no moral power to bind anybody."

Another minister arose and said that he, too, had taken nine degrees of Freemasonry, but since he became a minister, he had abandoned the lodge. Another minister, also a professor of theology in the same University, and formerly president of that institution, arose and testified that he took much interest in Freemasonry, although not a Mason, at the time the Masonic fraternity kidnapped and executed Captain Morgan for writing the secrets of Masonry; and he corroborated much that I had said about the men interested in that Masonic murder, he having been personally acquainted with some of the men concerned in it; he unhesitatingly denounced Freemasonry.

I was told that one white minister went away from the meeting with "a sore head," because he is one of the prominent Masons of New Orleans and a chaplain of a lodge. May God give him repentance.

On my way to New Orleans I observed a colored man enter the car and take his seat; as the conductor of the train entered, the colored man drew his right hand across his forehead, the penal sign of a Royal Arch Mason, the conductor nodded in recognition. The colored man afterwards told me that he was a Methodist minister and a Freemason. He appeared to be especially delighted with Masonry, and has been connected with that murder-sign fraternity thirty years; he said that nearly all the Methodist ministers of that country were Masons, and that the conductor of our train was a Mason. Query. Did the colored minister make that murder-sign to avoid being thrust into a smoking car, or put off the train? If so, what a reproach to our National government that it tempts the black man to sneak into the Masonic fraternity to secure the rights of an American citizen traveling on the public highway.

While in New Orleans I listened once to Dr. Palmer, of pro-slavery notoriety, it being quoted of him that he publicly declared it to be his mission as a minister of the Gospel to do all in his power to extend and perpetuate the institution of slavery. While listening to his sermon I could but rejoice in the failure of his mission. His congregation numbered about 2,000, all of the pews were filled, also chairs in the aisles. I saw only three black faces in the audience. The text was Phil. 3: 10. He presented the doctrines of vicarious atonement, faith and repentance, and in as substantial a manner as any Princeton theologian could, either to-day or in the palmy days of slavery. It is said that the Dr. has given up his slavery mission and has taken the oath of allegiance to the United States government. But if he has not got repentance such as those had on the day of Pentecost who had been clamorous for the blood of Jesus, I fear that his heart may still be in sympathy with "the middle passage," the slave pen, the auction block, the slave driver's lash, and the blood-hounds on the track of the black man in the search of that liberty God gave him. Something more potent than oaths are necessary to remove the stains of such sin as that from the soul. A soul stained with such sin as that needs the doctrines the Dr. so clearly presented applied to it by the Holy Ghost. I hope he has felt the power of that repentance. But there is another commission, and another bondage more awful than human slavery, namely, that commission from the prince of darkness to extend and perpetuate forever the immortal soul bondage of the Freemasons. It would be interesting to know also how the Dr. stands on that commission. Yours truly, W. Fenton.

Correspondence.

THE CYNOSURE IN THE SOUTH.

THANKS FROM SECRETARY ROY OF THE A. M. A.

Atlanta, Ga., Mar. 18, 1885.

I have a long time been thinking that I would like to express my appreciation of the kind and judicious investment made by some good friend in sending the Christian Cynosure to the entire list of our ministers under commission of the American Missionary Association, whose names, upon application, I had furnished to your office. In my rounds, as Superintendent, I have been delighted to find this paper in the homes of all those pastors, and to learn that it was greatly appreciated. It is doing much good by way of generating a healthy tone of sentiment in regard to secret societies, and by way of affording the news and the articles of a pure and high-toned Christian newspaper. As myself included among the number of the recipients, I desire to express my own thanks to the generous donor.

Truly yours, Jos. E. Roy.

BE STEADFAST, WHEATON!

ROWE, Mass.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Allow me to express a word of encouragement on the subject of the Wheaton church trouble. I say, stand your ground. Do not yield to the enemy for fear or favor. The truth you promulgate must triumph in the end, though many may be called to suffer before that joyful day. Make no compromise with the works of darkness.

You have fully shown that the secret empire is more dangerous to human welfare than any open foe. Slavery was bad enough, but it could be seen and its character understood and exposed. Mormonism is an open outrage against woman, and no decent man will defend it. Drunkenness is an unmitigated evil and its abettors dare not defend it on its merits. They rely on subterfuges. But the "Secret Empire" claims to be excellent above all else; and yet when the curtain is raised just a little it is shown to be thoroughly "earthly, sensual, devilish." James 3: 15. And it seems to possess a capacity above all other empires to "lie against the truth."

I have read some on a great variety of subjects, but have not seen anything equal to to the secret societies for lying. Some of them seem to prefer lying where the truth would be better for their own purpose. It is utterly inconceivable to me how any man who has any fear of God or love of man can take their oaths or submit to their horrible teaching. It makes one shudder to think of men consenting to such barbarity, and especially men claiming to believe Christ, who said "swear not at all.

I wish there could be a perfect unanimity in sustaining every true reform, and it is my intention to do all in my power in that direction. I admire the persistency of the Cynosure in resisting secretism, while it supports at the same time all other true reforms. Go on, and your helpers are sure to multiply, and you will have the cordial approval of all lovers of truth. Very truly and fraternally yours.

JACOB DAVIS.

SHALL HE LEAVE THE M. E. CHURCH?

WATERVLIET, Mich., Mar. 16, 1885.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have been a constant reader of your valuable paper, and am greatly encouraged in your defence of right as against the secret empire. Since circulating the Remonstrance I meet looks that would be hard to deseribe upon paper.

At our praise service last Sabbath, one brother in witnessing for Christ testified against secret societies. The minister, an M. E., defended them by saying there were present members that belonged to secret societies who were good men, living up to all the light they had. If this is so, with whom will the responsibility rest? My class leader is an Oddfellow; his wife belongs to a Rebekah lodge. They claim to be very spiritual. I cannot get them to say anything about their secrets, professing to walk daily as for eternity.

Believing as I do that the revealed word is true and holy, am I justified in remaining in the M. E. church? There is no other class that I can reach less than four miles away that is free from secrecy. This is a vital question with me; I want the right. If others can associate in mixed company behind bolts and bars at the midnight hour, is the leanness of the church to be wondered at? There has been seven weeks of revival effort here, with but one convert. Has the Word lost its power? No; all hail the power of Jesus' name. It has power to save.

C. KENNICOTT.

UNION FOR REFORMERS.

WAUPUN, Wis., Mar. 15, 1885.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am glad that your position is so elevated that political earthquakes and cyclones have not in the least diminished your clear and steady light. It is still the same. The American platform, methinks, is the platform for all Christians to adopt. It is well to keep it before the people.

If, as M. A. Gault writes, "The evils against which those parties [reform parties] are organized, are entrenched behind the Constitution," then surely, as he says, "we must dislodge them from this bulwark. We must make the Constitution speak out decidedly on the side of God and Christianity, and against all false religions."

May there be union in the reform army. "In union there is strength." "United we stand, but divided we fall." Oh, for pure, wise, honest Christian men to fill all the offices of our country; then we shall have LIBERTY indeed; not the lawless license of desperadoes and vagabonds, but a Christian people with pure, holy and blessed liberty, gladly obeying all the laws of God, trusting for salvation in the Atoning One, Christ Jesus, who is the Resurrection and the Life, and who has given bright visions of eternal glory for himself and his redeemed.

MRS. LYDIA C. ANDREWS.

MASONIC OYSTERS,—SOUP TOO THIN.

The Masons of Montmorency, Ind., have tried with only poor success to build up a prosperous lodge, during the six or seven years of its existence. Recently, late one Saturday night, they gave a free oyster supper in their lodge-room, sending invitations, very discreetly as they thought, to even the wives and their husbands whom they thus invite to join their fraternity; careful also to invite only those men who were most likely to join. Some of our most prominent citizens did themselves the honor to decline their baited invitation. Others who did go spoke sportively of the Masonic oysters and soup, as altogether too thin to be respected only as a bait.

We also learn by a Manistee, Mich., paper that the Masons there have resorted to having what they call "Open Lodge" occassionally, at which they purpose installing their officers, even before those "cowans"—the mothers, wives, etc., of Masons, whom the tyler and his sword excludes when the lodge is in the idolatrous act of making a Mason, i. e. converting a free man into a slave by murderous oaths. The institution feels heavily the pressure of the claims of mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters knowing and seeing what is done in these secret chambers of iniquity where those dearest to them are so wickedly alienated from their loving confidence and manly candor. These things are sure tokens of a speedy and perpetual overthrow of these works of darkness; and very encouraging to reformers.

L. D. BROWN.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON I.—April 5, 1885.—Paul's Voyage. Acts 1, 2, 14–26.

GOLDEN TEXT.—I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me. Acts 27: 25.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The result of unbelief in a God-sent warning. vs. 14–21. Paul's advice to anchor in Crete had not been taken, the centurion preferring the counsel of the ship's officers who wished to seek a more commodious haven. From a human point of view their advice no doubt looked the most reasonable. It was expediency set against revelation. This is a perfect picture of the way in which nations as well as individuals are apt to treat the warnings of "prophets and righteous men." When a question comes up that involves the putting away of some great national sin, it is handed over to politicians to settle; and when policy instead of conscience is left to settle any moral issue there is always "harm and loss." Our national ship was well nigh wrecked on the rocks of the slaveholders' rebellion as the consequence of committing this fatal mistake, and history will repeat itself if the voices of the wise and good against the infamous liquor traffic are not heeded, for a revenue derived from licensing sin in any shape is the greatest possible source of national corruption, and when a country's integrity is gone its ruin is not far off. Secret societies are in one respect different from an open evil like the saloon. The danger is more hidden and so proportionately greater. It is like the sunken rock in the sea, over which the waves sparkle and play, but there is death lurking under them for any brave ship that mistakes her course, or does not have the proper position of those perilous rocks laid down on her chart. The indifference with which warnings against Masonry are heard is the result of not seeing the danger. But under its grips and signs and oaths of concealment all manner of treason can be plotted, and the danger is only perceived when too late.

2. God often shows mercy to sinners for the sake of the righteous. vs. 21–26. Julius Cæsar's famous saying to the frightened boatman, "Fear not; you carry Cæsar," might have been paraphrased, though with a far different meaning, in the case of Paul, and this trembling, tempest-tossed crew. They carried the great apostle to the Gentiles, and his presence among them was a guaranty of their own safety. His life's work was not yet finished. He was to see Rome. And till his mission was accomplished, even to the crowning act of surrendering his gray head to the executioner's stroke, he was as immortal, as much beyond the reach of death, as a glorified spirit. And in this immunity his companions shared as a part of the natural course of Providence. Among hardened convicts and rough soldiers and seamen this man moves with his words of sublime assurance, and instills into them his own courageous faith. "I believe God that it shall be even as it was told me." We must believe ourselves before we can make others believe, either in a coming judgment or a coming mercy. Reforms grow from the seeds of faith planted in a few hearts, and as this ship's crew were saved because they carried an apostle, so we may hope that our government will be saved from fatal wreck while the voices of righteous men are heard in warning against the sins which so provoke His wrath, and even a feeble remnant have not bowed the knee to Baal.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How should all questions of mere expediency be answered when set against a Divine command? 2 Chron. 25: 9. Are righteous men the strongest defence of a nation? Gen. 18: 32.

EXPLANATORY.

"And when it was determined that we should sail into Italy." The use of the first person shows that Luke was Paul's companion on this voyage. He had, in all probability, remained in Palestine, and in the neighborhood of Paul during his two years' imprisonment, perhaps being variously occupied in Gospel work under Paul's direction. —Alford.

"And entering into a ship of Adramyttium." A vessel belonging to Adramyttium, and destined for that port, which was a seaport of Mysia, opposite Lesbos, on the western coast of the present Asia Minor. Paul's voyage to Italy was accomplished in three ships. The first was probably a coasting vessel, carrying passengers and cargo and touching at various ports. The course of this vessel was in the direction of Italy; and in some of the harbors at which it would touch in its way, Julius might expect to find another western-bound ship in which he and his prisoners could pursue their voyage.—Rev. Com.

"Called Euroclydon." Better, Euraquilo; from euros (Greek), east wind; aquilo (Latin), northeast wind; euraquillo (compounding the two), east northeast wind. To the objection (in favor of euroclydon) that Greek and Latin are thus compounded, it is to be replied that no one would be likelier than sailors, passing from country to country, to make such a compound; and no one likelier than Luke (whose nautical phraseology is scrupulously accurate) to put the wind on record as so "called" (just as a similar wind in the Mediterranean is now known to our seamen by the name of the Levanter).— Gloag.

"We had much work to come by the boat." Literally, we were able with difficulty to become masters of the boat. Here they . . . availed themselves of the temporary shelter to prepare the ship more thoroughly than had been possible before to encounter the fury of the storm. The first step was to get on board the ship the boat, which hitherto apparently had been towed through the waves, left there at first because the weather was fair and the anticipated journey short.—Abbott.

"They used helps, undergirding the ship." Cables passed under the keel, round the hull and made fast on the deck. The process is called "frapping a ship. Lord Anson had recourse to it in 1743, and Sir G. Back, on his return from his arctic voyage in 1837; and the Albion frigate was frapped after a hurricane in coming home from India in 1846 . . . Under-girdles were among the regular sea stores of the Athenian galleys.—Speaker's Com. The ships of the ancients had one mainmast and one mainsail; any other masts or rigging were comparatively small and insignificant. Hence the strain upon the vessel from the leverage of the mast was terrific, and it was impossible that the Alexandrian ship, however stoutly built should have scudded with her huge sail set in the grasp of a typhoon without her timbers starting. It is evident that she had already sprung a serious leak —Farrar.

"When neither sun nor stars . . . appeared." We have to remember that before the invention of the compass the sun and stars were the only guides of sailors who were out of sight of land. Now, "for many days," the sky was overcast, (a circumstance not unusual during a Levanter), and this guidance failed. The ship was driving, but whither they knew not.—Plumptre,

"For there shall be no loss of . . . life." In warning them not to sail from the Fairhavens, Paul had said that the voyage would be with hardship and much damage, not only of the lading and ship, but also of their lives; but here as the messenger of God, he asserts that no life would be lost. Then he spoke from a calm consideration of the state of matters (led by the spirit of God); but now he speaks from revelation.—Gloag.

Ignatius, a convert of the Apostle John, thus wrote concerning the name Christian, "Let us therefore prove ourselves worthy of that name which we have received. For whosoever is called by any other name, beside this, he is not of God, for he has not received the prophecy which speaks thus concerning us: "The people shall be called by a new name, which the Lord shall name them, and shall be a holy people. This was fulfilled in Syria, for the disciples were called Christians at Antioch, when Paul and Peter were laying the foundation of the church."—Epistle of Ignatius to the Magnesians, chapter 10.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

State Agents.

Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Iowa, D. P. Rathbun, Wayne.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

Degree Workers.—[Seceders.]
Jas. Furguson, Clarence, Iowa.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun. Wayne, Iowa.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans.
D. A. Richards Clarkville, Mich.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

The Cynosure and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. Phillips,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially by his wife. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. Price, fifteen cents. Ten for a dollar.

The American Party.

First Nomination for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

Platform Adopted at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

Name Adopted at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Capwell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

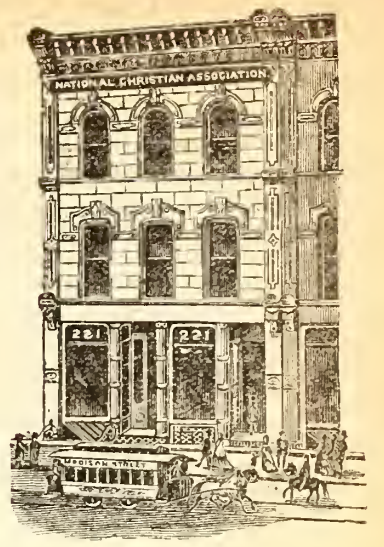
Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.

Eli Tapley, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. Galloway, Okahumka Florida.

Wm. Hazenburg, Cape Town, S. Africa.



A. D. Zaraphonithes, Andros, Greece.

C. B. Ward, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. Please designate to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

President.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

Vice-Pres.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

Rec. Sec.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.

Cor. Sec. and Gen. Agent.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Treasurer.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Directors.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

Form of Bequest.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

President.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D
Secretaries.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

Alabama.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

California.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

Illinois.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

Indiana.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

Iowa.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

Kansas.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

Massachusetts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

Michigan.—Pres., C. C. Foote, Detroit; Rec. Sec'y, W. H. Ross, Williamstown; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

Minnesota.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

Missouri.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler, Albany.

Nebraska.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. pooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

New Hampshire.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

New York.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

Ohio.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

Pennsylvania.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

Vermont.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

Wisconsin.—Pres., J. W. Wood. Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

West Virginia.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 26, 1885

We must go about politics, as we go about religion, daily, and with constant prayer. A godless government will give us a godless education, and soon a Masonic or godless religion.

The excellent and well-beloved Dr. A. M. Milligan writes to Our Banner from Oakland, Cal., with all his old time cheeriness, and full of zeal for the cause of Christ. His sickness was peculiar and a puzzle to the medical faculty; but as diseases have their courses and 'run out' so we trust it may be with this excellent man of God.

THE Earnest Christian, by Rev. B. T. Roberts, of North Chili, N. Y., answers to its name more perfectly than most religious publications. It is deeply earnest, sound, practical Christianity. We never lay it down after perusal, without our faith strengthened in God and the teachings of his Word.

BRO. J. D. GEHRING clips from the Kansas City Journal (which falsely informed the public that St. John was burnt in effigy at Olathe) that another Washington apron was found in Kansas City Lodge, Feb. 23rd. "The apron," says the lying legend, was made in England and presented to Washington about 1794. Bro. Gehring wishes us to "offset this story with proof." This is asking "an hard thing." Cords of wood have been exhibited as parts of the literal cross of Christ, and each lying relic deceived some who "love darkness" for a time. The claim that Washington was an adhering Mason has been disproved by his letter to Rev. G. W. Snyder and the Gov. Ritner documents. But Masonic lies are like musquitoes, kill one and twenty come to bury it.

PREGNANT SILENCE.—The American Reformer, New York, pleads ably for "Harmonizing" the temperance forces. "Partizan," "Non-partizan," "Law and Order," "St John," and "Prohibition party," are words which swarm in its editorials; but "The American party," these leading temperance prints seem not to have heard of; and, curious enough, the temperance organs are getting to shun all mention of the "Good Templars," "Templars of Honor," and other secret temperance lodges! Look through weeks of the Reformer, of Law and Order, etc., and one misses altogether the once familiar "G. W. C. T.," and similar initials. They are alike silent on secrecy and anti-secrecy, saying neither "Good Lord," nor "Good devil," but shun to mention both. Is it to see which is likely to win? The American party should heed this and be astir. Lodges, like brothels, thrive by silence, and grow by public neglect. Virtue must be active. Let the Americans be heard from by clubs and conventions.

Our American at Washington proves its importance to our cause more clearly from week to week. Prof. Bailey makes his sheet a moving panorama of events at our national capital. The Monument dedication, with the desperate struggles of the lodge for recognition and public notice, February 21st; then the Inauguration, March 4th, with its personnel, and moving masses, followed by the crowds of groaning and grasping office-seekers, afford a revolving cylinder with the pictures changed every week. No investment has paid better.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE must make slow progress because nine women out of every ten depend and must depend on the good will of husbands and lovers; and the mass of men do not reason on moral but on material grounds, the interests of the hour and the day. When the first leaders of the woman suffrage movement were infidels or skeptics, spirit-mongers, non-resistants and what not: and no cause can make sound progress under men and women of defective natures. But when such leaders are shaken off, as they will be, the ballot will be seen to be as fit a protection for mothers as for sons; for women as for men. The size of the fingers does not give force to the vote, but the mind that wields it. It is a fallacy to speak of "the absolute equality of the sexes." In one sense they are, and in another they are not equal.

HOW DO WE KNOW GOD?—We know "his eternal power and Godhead" by "the things which are made," and we "know," not "guess," this with the same absolute certainty, and by the same faculty that gives us matter and mind. Thus: The senses give us the color, shape, hardness of a piece of wood or iron, and though we never saw, touched or tasted it we infer—that is, know,—there is a substance which holds those material qualities together in one. So the reason gives us matter. So from our thoughts, feelings, and volitions we, by the same reason know, i. e., irresistibly infer, our mind or self; so by the finite and limited and imperfect "things that are made" we know irresistibly the Infinite and perfect: that is, God. The affirmations of reason are as positive as sense; and to deny matter, mind, or God, is to deny that knowledge is possible; that is to say: we know there is no knowledge, and it is certain there is no certainty, which is a suicidal proposition, affirming what it denies.

THE BOSTON HERALD, Mar. 9th, contains an account of a Masonic ceremony which it says, "was never equalled in this country." It was gotten up in Park Theatre on the night of March, 8th. It was, or rather shammed to be, a burial service for eight Masons of the 32nd degree with one of the 18th, who had died at different dates, many years before. As the lodge grows odious under discussion, we may expect an increase and repetition of these displays, as pageants were multiplied to amuse the populace, when Rome was tottering to its fall. The theatre was crammed with ticket-holders, and when the curtain rose it presented the following scene, paid for by the laboring men of Massachusetts:

> Grouped about the arches of the cathedral and upon the balconies erected on either end of the catafalque were 24 neophites of the order, clothed in black robes and chasubles, and golden fillets upon their heads, and each holding a blazing torch. In front of the catafalque were seated eight officers of the order, clothed in white robes and chasubles with barrettas. Upon the left of the catafalque was a platform, upon which were seated the two orators of the body, dressed in robes and chasubles, with miters resting upon their heads. On the right was a throne, on which was seated the most wise and perfect master, clothed in a rich white robe and red chasuble. Upon the front of the latter was a white satin cross, and the stoles were heavily mounted with jewels. Upon his shoulders rested a rich lace cape and upon his head a red barretta."

MASONRY BEARING FRUIT.

The Dead Sea of the lodge is agitated,—"Casting up mire and dirt." The papers bring us news of an "Anti-Deist society which has just been formed in Paris, to suppress the Word of God and all its equivalents in all languages. Its members are pledged never to use it in conversation or correspondence." A correspondent, J. Y. S., believed to be Mr. J. Y. Scammon, an early and well known citizen of Chicago, and one of the founders of the Inter Ocean, writes for that paper:

"It has begun its operations by holding a sort of anti-prayer meeting in one of the public halls of Paris; and its motto, set forth conspicuously on a placard is 'Dieu, voila l'enñenies' (God is the enemy). Even the familiar Adieu, which means 'To God,' is dropped by them and 'A ton Souvenir,' used in its place. And an atheist priest has preached a sermon under three heads: 'The Creation,' Providence,' and a 'Future State.' The preacher denied all three."

Mr. Scammon justly observes: "Such open infidelity and profanity, while it shocks all Christian decency, is much less dangerous than the hypocritical profanity which exists in many pulpits, where the minister takes a text from Scripture as the basis of his sermon, while he denies the inspiration of the Sacred Book, or, like Heber Newton in New York, while calling himself a Christian, thinks our Lord was mistaken and exaggerated his statements."

"But," some one will say, "what has Masonry to do with this?"

Masonry omitting Christ, denies God in practice, as one shuts you from a house by stopping up the door. Christ is the "door" and the only "door" or "way" to God for finite minds. John 10: 9.

It is well known that the Grand Lodge of France, L'Orient, has erased the name of God from its ritual. And a late London dispatch says: "The Prince of Wales replying to a recent letter of the French Grand Master says: 'English Masons have always held to the belief that God is the first great landmark of genuine Freemasonry. It is expected that the Grand Orient will convene a meeting in London to explain the attitude of the Orient which is intended to allow the fullest liberty of conscience.'"

Liberty of conscience, after striking out the name and government of God! But explained or unexplained, what is there to prevent French Masons who are atheists entering American lodges in New Orleans? And, besides, Masonry, French or English, is atheism. For "he that hath not the Son hath not the Father." French atheism is related to Masonry as apples to the tree which bears them. "And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge," they are given "over to a reprobate mind." Rom. 1: 28. "Filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness."

We give in this number a remarkable article by a Catholic priest, showing with intense clearness the oneness of the whole lodge system. Read it with care.

WASHINGTON'S FUNERAL.

The National Republican, Washington, D. C., Feb. 21, gives a long, pretended sketch of "Washington as a Mason." No name accompanies the article, which makes him out a devoted, adhering Mason, and that in the face of his own written declaration that he had "entered a lodge but once or twice in the last thirty years;" which, in a regiment or church, would be desertion; and if the lodge did its duty, he had long been dropped for non-payment of dues.

But the baldest, most shameless falsifying is done concerning his funeral. This Masonic falsifier, in the Republican, asserts that "Alexandria lodge had charge of all the arrangements;" and makes throughout that Washington was buried by Freemasons according to their ritual. Whereas, though Masons squeezed in toward the foot of the procession they had not charge of the coffin, threw no evergreens in his grave, nor performed their disgusting, "grand honors." In short, Masons did not bury Washington, as any newspaper of the day will show. He was buried as a Christian, by the Protestant Episcopal church. In proof of these assertions we give a minute account of his funeral taken from the Ulster County (N. Y.) Gazette, Jan. 4, 1800, a paper now eighty-five years old; published fifteen days after his burial. The clergy, Masons, and citizens were at the tomb, as they were lately at his monument. But their senscless incantations were not allowed, as Gen. Sherman permitted them at the late dedication. But suppose they had been able to force their mummery over the corpse of the hero who had shunned and shaken them off during the last thirty years of his life, it would only have proved, as Edmund Burke said of another mercenary class; that "They would untomb the dead to steal the lead from their coffins." The motive of Masonic funerals is purely mercenary.

WASHINGTON ENTOMBED.

GEORGETOWN, Dec. 20.

On Wednesday last, the mortal part of Washington the Great—the Father of his Country and the friend of man—was consigned to the tomb, with solemn honors and funeral pomp.

A multitude of persons assembled, from many miles round, at Mount Vernon, the choice abode and last residence of the illustrious chief. There were the groves, the spacious avenues, the beautiful and sublime scenes, the noble mansion—but, alas! the august inhabitant was now no more. That great soul was gone. His mortal part was there, indeed; but, ah! how affecting! how awful the spectacle of such worth and greatness, thus, to mortal eyes, fallen!—Yes! fallen! fallen!

In the long and lofty portico, where oft the hero had walked in all his glory, now lay the shrouded corpse. The countenance still composed and serene, seemed to depress the dignity of the spirit which lately dwelt in that lifeless form. There those who paid the last sad honors to the benefactor of his country, took an impressive—a farewell view.

On the ornament at the head of the coffin was inscribed SURGE AD JUDICIUM—about the middle of the coffin, GLORIA DEO—and on the silver plate,

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON,
Departed this Life on the 14th December, 1799, Æt. 68.

Between 3 and 4 o'clock the sound of artillery from a vessel in the river, firing minute guns, awoke afresh our solemn sorrow—the corps was removed—a band of music with mournful melody melted the soul into all the tenderness of woe.

The procession was formed and moved on in the following order: Cavalry, infantry, guard, with arms reversed; music, clergy, the General's horse with his saddle, holsters and pistols; pall-bearers Cols. Simms, Ramsay, Payne, Gilpin, Marsteller and Little with the corpse; mourners, Masonic brethren, citizens.

When the procession had arrived at the bottom of the elevated lawn, on the bank of the Potomac, where the family vault is placed, the cavalry halted, the infantry marched towards the Mount and formed their lines—the clergy, the Masonic brothers, and the citizens, descended to the vault, and the funeral service of the church was performed. The firing was repeated from the vessel, in the river, and the sounds echoed from the woods and hills around.

Three general discharges by the infantry, the cavalry, and 11 pieces of artillery, which lined the banks of the Potomac back of the vault, paid the last tribute to the entombed Commander-in-Chief of the armies of the United States and to the departed hero.

The sun was now setting. Alas! the SON OF GLORY was set forever. No, the name of Washington—the American President and General—will triumph over death! The unclouded brightness of his glory will illuminate the future ages!

THE SCANDINAVIAN REVIVAL.

"The Northern Hive" is again swarming. From e earliest dawn of history, through historic fables, m and dark as their twilight mists, the North- en were professional pirates. But the Scandian- ians beat all the others. Franks, Goths and Van- ls were all inferior to them. Under the general me of Danes, as Denmark was their port to sail om, they conquered the bloody, land-robbing Sax- s; who, under Hengist and Horsa had come over om the German forests; driven Britons, Picts and ots to their mountain fastnesses, and possessed e island of Great Britain. From Egbert to Al- ed these Saxons were invaded, robbed, pillaged, d driven out by these avalanches of Northern pi- tes. But the Saxons conquered their conquerors, d we, the descendants of these mixed races now speak Saxon-English.

Tempores mutant; et nos mutamur cum illis. "The nes indeed change, and we change with them." alf a million of these children of the northern hts have already settled in and through the nited States; and fifty short years will transmute em into Americans whose children will not be le to read the inscriptions on the headstones of eir blue-eyed Swedish and Norwegian grand-par- ts! And so far are we from letting "slip the gs of war" on these children of the North, we il their coming. For does not every ship load of em, which lands here, raise the price of our nds?

"The best spoils into the worst." This Scandina- an movement is some forty years old. Like all ue reformations it started from the Bible. While uther stood for the Bible, his successors fought for utheranism. There are two ways to save men: e false and the true,—by ceremonies, and by rist. These north people wearied of formal Luther- ism, and longed for Christ. They met in circles and ad the Bible. For this, they were called "Read- s." And now the one article of their creed is the ible. Waldenstrom, Ekman, Fernholm and the st say, with their Mission Society of Osterunda; We would be founded upon the Word of God." ell, and can this be carried to excess? Let us e.

About thirty years ago, Eric Jansen, and a colo- of these Readers, came and bought open prairie- nd at Hoop-pole Grove, Henry county, Illinois. asen had preached in Sweden, and was imprison- for it. He was an ignorant, capable, sincere, cun- ng man. They all worked and read the Bible in- ssantly. Rattlesnakes bit them. Jansen prayed r them, and if they died they were infidels. For ould they not "tread on serpents" with impunity? they were sick, Jansen prayed for them, and if ey died they were infidels, not "having faith to be ealed." We saw the sick tottering to their daily sks, denying that they were sick. For did not hrist heal "all manner of diseases;" and their jus- ce of the peace, an Ohio Yankee, said to us: Mr. Jansen has all the power in the church, which esus Christ had, except to atone for sin." "The ayer of faith shall save the sick;" therefore those ho died had disbelieved Jansen and "made God a ar" by refusing to believe the Bible. Families ourned their dead with a double anguish; sorrow r their death, and horror at their impiety. the rpses were thrown into a dead hole, and buried by rangers employed to do it, in a pit at night.

An adventurer named Root, who had been in the exican war, married a young Swede girl and abused er. She fled to Jansen, and the Swedes sheltered er. Root joined a Masonic lodge near by and went Jansen in the county court house at Cambridge; here he shot Janseu while the court was adjourned r dinner. Jansen fell dead within eight feet of the dge's seat. Several persons were in the court om and coming in at the time. We saw Root brought p, the day after the murder. The facts were proved; ut the Masons cleared the murderer.

Poor Jansen was a sincere fanatic. His people ved then in huts, half underground. He had a su- erhuman spirit-power over his followers. His eath broke up the community, and they and their hildren live in good houses now; and his prophets, irty of whom were then training for missions in ll parts of the world, are scattered. These facts re given from a multitude familiar to the older cit- ens of Henry county; and they prove that fanati- sm is not confined to believers in "Articles of Faith;" ut that good Bible Christians may become slaves Satan by being "ignorant of his devices."

President C. A. Blanchard has a pleasant home- ead of forty-five acres of good land, which he ould sell for a reasonable price. The house is mfortable, barn commodious, and the situation de- lightful, with fruit and forest trees. A farmer with a family of children to educate would find this place admirably suited to keeping a small dairy near to a milk depot, while but a short walk for his children to the College. There are other places in Wheaton which could be bought for much less now than a few years hence, when the town is increased as it increases every year. There are two depots in the village.

—From the best information the Cynosure is able to obtain we believe President Cleveland is not a Freemason.

—While attending the funeral of his grand-sou last Friday, the day being quite wintry, Pres. J. Blanchard took cold and suffered a severe congestive chill next day from which he is confined to his bed, but hoping to recover speedily.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard has an appointment on Wednesday of this week in the Swedish Methodist church, corner of Oak and Market streets in this city, where he will speak upon the lodge. Friends iu the city who may read this notice in time will do well to attend.

—Rev. H. H. Hinman who returned to Washington a few days ago, writes that he has determined to go to Willimantic, Conn., and give a portion of his time to the Independent church of that place, lecturing in New England as the way opens. While we must regret for the reform at large that Bro. Hinman has thus determined to "locate," yet it is no doubt wisest for himself, for years and infirm health make the privations of the lecture field doubly severe.

—A brief note from Bro. Irvine of Portland, Oregon, informs of the death of Bro. Thos. C. Haines, a correspondent of the Cynosure. He died trusting in his Redeemer, on the 8th inst, at the age of 42 years. He was confined to his house by sickness for over six years, and to his bed a month before his death. Thus we sorrow again for the loss of a true friend of our reform.

—The Inter Ocean prints the portrait of an old Freemason who died lately in Southern Illinois at the extreme age of ninety-five years. His lodge gave up its charter in the Morgan times; but forty years later the Masons persuaded the old man, theu eighty years of age, to renew his membership. In his imbecility he was easily persuaded and has ever since been given the dubious honor of the "oldest Mason."

—The Christian Observer, a Presbyterian paper of Louisville, Ky., wants to know in its simplicity (?) if "Masons endorse Sabbath-breaking." The daily press of that city announced that a German singing society was to render an opera in the Masonic temple on Sabbath evening. The Observer is horrified, and asks: "Did the Masons of Kentucky erect this building that it should be used to desecrate the Sabbath, and to draw people away from the house of God?" The Observer is blind because it won't see. Masonry, as a distinct religion not recognizing the Lord Jesus Christ, has no particular regard for the Sabbath as a Christian institution. A Masonic lodge, so far as Masoury is concerned is just as good a place for Sabbath desecratiou as a theatre or a Turner hall. Since Freemasonry as a system is entirely hostile to Christianity it is indifferent whether people go to worship God or hear a comic opera. If the Observer has never observed this to be Masonic practice, its editors should be more wakeful on the Lord's day.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To District Deputy Grand Master B. S. Kingman, of Newmarket, N. H.:

It was my privilege to listen to your essay upon the Masonic character of George Washington, read in Webster Hall in this village, February 23, 1885. You state with truth that Washington was made a Master Mason when twenty-one years of age, and that Madame LaFayette presented him with a Masonic apron. Also that he was elected Grand Master of the Virginia Masons but declined to accept the office. As to the rest of your essay, permit me to say that having devoted some time to the study of the Masonic character of Washington, I do not find your conclusions supported by credible historic evidence. As a whole your essay was conspicuously unhistoric. You support your assertions by not one word ever uttered or written by Washington himself; by no quotations from Bancroft, Irving or Marshall. Indeed, you assert that Washington once met in a Masonic lodge with Chief Justice Marshall, which is possible, but proves nothing to your purpose, since Judge Marshall himself in a letter to Hon. Edward Everett says: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned, as one capable of producing much evil, and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means." Although an intimate friend, Judge Marshall wrote to John Bailey, Esq., October 18, 1833, in reference to the Masonic views of Washington: "I do not recollect ever to have heard him utter a syllable on the subject." Washington stated to his aid de camp, Gov. Jonathan Trumbull, that Masonry "might be empleyed for the best or worst purposes; but that for the most part it was merely child's play."

When accused, as you accuse him, of being Master of a Masonic lodge, Washington replied in a letter to Rev. Mr. Snyder, September 25, 1798: "The fact is, I preside over none, NOR HAVE I BEEN IN ONE MORE THAN ONCE OR TWICE WITHIN THE LAST THIRTY YEARS."

President John Quincy Adams writes: "The use of the name of Washington to give the odor of sanctity to Freemasonry as it now stands exposed to the world is, in my opinion, as unwarrantable as that of my father's name."

As their custom is, the Freemasons sought to claim Washington as one of them, while he was yet alive and able to resent the insult. We learn by the record of King David's lodge, 1781, THAT IT WAS NOT AGREEABLE TO WASHINGTON TO BE ADDRESSED AS A MASON.

If you will take the trouble to consult the public records of the House of Representatives of the State of Pennsylvania for the year 1837, you will find an official communication from Gov. Ritner fully vindicating the character of Washington from the reproach and slander of being an adhering Freemason.

Do you not see how overwhelmingly conclusive are such well-authenticated historic facts when set over against a few trumped-up relics, such as old chairs, gavels and aprons? I deem it not worth while to refute your childish claim that King Solomon was a Freemason. Speculative Freemasonry as now practiced originated in a London grog-shop in 1717. The Blue Lodge ignores Jesus Christ and the Templar degrees blaspheme him. I look, sir, with moderation on yourblindness, as I am not aware that you profess to be a Christian, but I marvel when I see professed ministers of the Gospel denying the Lord that bought them and putting him to an open shame by mingling in the profane ceremonies and horrid wickedness of the Masonic lodge. S. C. Kimball.

Newmarket, N. H.

The Annual Convention of the National Reform Association is to be held in the First Presbyterian church, Pittsburg, April 21 and 22. Two of the district secretaries, Revs. J. H. Leiper and W. J. Coleman, will spend the next month in and around that city preparing for the convention. The claim of King Jesus to the recognition and obedience of our nation will be presented and explained by an able array of speakers. Yours truly,

W. J. Coleman.

OBITUARY.

Died, at Wheaton, Ill., about dawn in the morning of Thursday, March 19, 1885, Blanchard Kellogg, eldest son of Henry L. and Mrs. Nora E. Kellogg, aged 9 years and 4 months.

This is the second heavy sorrow which has fallen on the associate editor of the Cynosure and his wife in this month. Their daughter, Carrie S., had preceded her brother only seventeen days. To borrow words from Ossian:

"They fell, like two young trees, which the traveller passed in the morning and wondered how they grew so lovely. The blast of the desert came and laid their green heads low. He returned at morn. They were withered and their branches were bare."

Carrie, though but seven years old, had the experience of a mature Christian. She once requested prayers that she might recover, but was perfectly calm and reconciled to die. She said she "wished they might all go to heaven together," and as the hour drew nigh she hoped "Jesus would come and get her quick."

Her brother had read the Bible through, by course, soon after his eighth birth day. With the consent of his parents and the recommendation of the pastor, he was to have presented himself, with his older sister, to the College church for admission to its membership at its last communion. But at the time the footstep of death was already in their home. When told that he had the diphtheria, his eyes filled and his mother encouraged him that his illness might be light. "It isn't that," he replied, "but who will see to my work?" He seemed to have a presentiment that he would die; was perfectly clear-minded, and beckoned answers when past speech. Just before that he awoke and looked as if he expected to see some one. "Do you wish anything?" said his mother. "I want to see Jesus," he replied. He again closed his eyes and soon said: "Mamma, I am going to die; I want you and papa should sit by me." These were his last words. Isa. 65: 20—"The child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner being an hundred years old shall die accursed."

THE HOME.

IN THE FOLD.

The snow drives fast across the height;
The day died young and gray,
Without a gleam of crimson light
The gloaming passed away;
Blow winter wind—the snow drives fast
O'er dreary wood and world;
Safe sheltered from the cutting blast,
The sheep are in the fold.

The shepherd's child, with rosy face
Close press'd against the pane,
Looks out with eager eyes to trace
The footpath on the plain;
The child laughs softly, sweet and low
Safe sheltered from the cold;
The path is lost beneath the snow,
The lamb is in the fold.

The mother sits beside the fire,
And fast her needle flies,
With busy hands that never tire,
And thoughts that end in sighs;
She knows the churchyard on the hill
Is lone and white and cold;
Hush, throbbing bosom! peace, be still;
The lamb is in the fold!

—By Arthur Clive in Sunday Magazine.

COMPENSATION.

God gives for every thing he takes away
Some other thing and something better far.
The crowns, which in their setting hold a star,
As crosses once upon our shoulders lay;
The flame of joy that lights our upward way
Is fed with beaten oil from things that mar;
And all the noblest gifts we cherish are
The flowers of some dead seeds passed away.
Nor is it all the truth that loss and gain
So alternate that all will have their share
Of both within their lives. 'Tis by the pain
The Lord can best our fallow hearts prepare
For joy; and love can never in us reign
Except it be as sorrow's first-born heir.

—Christian Intelligencer.

THE LOVE OF GOD.

[Geo. F. Pentecost, D.D., in the Independent.]

We must not confound love with mere good nature. There is a mass of weak sentimentality in the thoughts of men concerning the love of God. I find all sorts of sinners basing their hope of salvation on what they call the love of God. "Oh! I believe that God is a God of love. He will not punish a soul forever for his sins. I would not punish my child for his sins so severely as the Scriptures say sinners will be punished; and yet I believe God's love must be greater than mine," etc. This kind of trash and nonsense is very common. By love these sentimentalists mean weak good nature. There are parents who are so weakly good natured that they will allow their children to go on in disobedience and sin without punishing them for it, or laying the hand of correction upon them. They "cannot bear to punish their children." They become blind to their faults, and weakly indifferent to the perverse and wicked tendencies in their lives, which are daily hardening back into character. Like poor old Eli, they say, "tut, tut," to the evil doing of their children, but do not sternly and uncompromisingly rebuke and punish willfulness and sin. Now to transfer this weak quality of good nature to God, and label it "love," is not only a stupendous mistake, but a fatal blunder on the part of those who are counting on such love as a ground of escape from the consequences of their sins. We have before explained that the various attributes of God's love were only different manifestations of that love under different circumstances, or, I might say, upon different objects.

I may be able better to illustrate my meaning than to explain it. I was invited not long ago into the laboratory of a scientific friend, who, after showing me many of the latest wonders in scientific apparatus brought out a new and powerful microscope to which was attached an objective of highest power. After giving me half an hour with the microscope, he added that he wished now to show me some of the wonders of the polariscope. He then placed the polariscope attachment in position on the microscope. Having gotten his instruments into perfect adjustment, he proceeded to show me some of the same objects under the polariscope which I had been just looking at through the microscope. First he placed a quartz crystal under the instrument. I looked at it as it was magnified by his powerful microscope together with the added revelations of the polariscope. Now, the remarkable thing to which my attention was especially called was the singular determination of colors about and upon the quartz crystal by means of the polariscope. Then he placed a bit of agate under the spar, and to my surprise the colors determined upon and about that crystal were entirely different. And so of the gold and silver crystals. Now all the colors in their different combinations were gathered and determined by means of the polariscope; but the determination of color depended not on any new adjustment of the instrument, but upon the nature or properties of the crystal upon which the light fell. It seems that each crystal called out the colors of light, according to its own nature. This remarkable fact could not be discerned with the naked eye.

So I mused: As the white light of the solar rays is determined upon different substances in different colors, according to the nature of the substances themselves, so do the colors or attributes of God's love determine themselves upon men according to their moral attitude toward him. For instance, here is a man who will not hear the Word of God—who loves his sin and will not forsake it—either for the love or the fear of God. Mercy has surrounded him, as he is an object of the love of God; but that mercy he will have none of. Goodness has fallen upon and about him; but he will not repent toward God. He still lives, and determinedly so, with his back toward God, loving and clinging to his sin. Now, upon such a sinner, one who will not turn from his sin, the "color of God's love becomes black," or, in other words, the attribute which falls upon the impenitent sinner, who will not turn at his reproof, is "wrath." But, on the other hand, when a sinner hears the Word of God and turns to him, lo! the color of God's love is that of "mercy" made permanent upon him. Now, the love of God has not changed, but the sinner has changed his attitude toward God, albeit it seems as if God had changed his mind toward the sinner. But, in either case, it is the action of love toward the sinner. The action of love is manifested in justice if the sinner will not turn from his sins. The action of love is manifested in mercy upon all who hear and obey the Word of God. This is a most important truth. Justice is no contradiction to mercy, nor is it a contradiction to, nor another movement in the divine nature other than love. It is only the love of God acting as it needs must act in the case of a sinner who will not be reconciled to God. This truth is beautifully brought out in two or three passages of Scripture. We may suppose that Jesus in all his wondrous personality and fullness of glory is that medium through which God's love is manifested toward men. The quality of his love is manifested accordingly as we stand related to Christ. Therefore it is said: "The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand. He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." (John 3: 35, 36.) Here life and wrath are determined by the attitude we sustain toward Jesus Christ, as he is the manifestation of God's love to the world. But this is not a new truth; as long ago as the Psalmist's time, we have such declarations as this: "For thou, Lord, art good and ready to forgive, and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee." Again: "I will hear what God the Lord will speak; for he will speak peace unto his people, and unto his saints; but let them not turn again to folly. Surely his salvation is nigh them that fear him. . . . Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other." (Ps. 85: 8–10; 86: 5.) Now we know that this harmony of all the seemingly contradictory attributes of God was first perfectly realized in Jesus Christ. In him met both the justice and mercy of God; and when a sinner turns to Jesus Christ and meets God in him, then the white light of his love falls upon him and encompasses him as the sunshine at noonday. In that sunshine there is as much justice as there is mercy. For we are saved both by the justice of God which wounded, bruised and laid the stripes of the law upon him who stood for us under the law, as well as by the mercy of God which appointed him to be our sin-bearer and sin-purger.

IN DUE TIME.

Frederick W. Robertson used to say that never a prayer went up to God from a sincere heart, but it was sure to come back some time, some where, purified by having passed through the heart of the Lord Jesus Christ.

A few years ago, in the sun-land of the Southwest, I stopped with a family from New England who had not been long in their new home in that frontier village. After tea, the good lady asked me to look at the photograph of her brother. "Before that brother was born," said she, "my mother gave him to God to be a minister, moved thereto, she felt, by the Holy Spirit. After his birth she took him and gave him to God, in the presence of all the people, and she always called him her boy-minister. But he grew up so strangely wild, so careless and wicked, that father and the rest of us often laughed at mother, for my brother was really the worst in the family. He grew to young manhood; the whirlwind of war swept him from us; he came back bronzed and strong, untouched by harm of sword or bullet—but oh! so wicked, and, worst of all an open scoffer at things sacred or holy. Then father and the rest looked sad, but mother never gave up. She said, often, 'I gave him to God to be a minister. God has heard my prayer. He will answer.'

"Two years went on. Mother lay down on a sick bed to die. My brother, strangely enough, was unmoved. The last word mother said as we took her hand in parting, that summer afternoon, when the angels were coming for her, was, 'Watch for God's answer. My boy will be converted. I gave him to God. God will give him back to me. He will be a minister.' Then she died, without seeing any answer to her prayer, but in the faith that has comforted and sustained so many. Within three months my brother was on his knees, crying to God for mercy. Less than a year after he was studying for the ministry. He is now preaching at the First Congregational church in——," mentioning a certain city in Wisconsin. "Need I tell you that brother believes in prayer, or that I do?"

And as the little family gathered about their altar that evening for prayer we read together of Christ's promises in the 7th chapter of Matthew, and then sang with quickened faith,

At some time or other
The Lord will provide;
It may not be my time,
It may not be thy time,
And yet in his own time,
The Lord will provide.

—The Advance.

BIBLE READINGS FOR THE YOUNG.

THE TEN VIRGINS. Read Mat. 25: 1–13.

Watch, therefore; for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh. Mat. 25: 13.

1. What does the coming of the bridegroom in this parable represent? Acts 1: 11; Rev. 1: 7.
2. Who are represented by the wise virgins? John 1: 12, 13; 21: 17.
3. What is the oil in these lamps? Zech. 4: 2–6.
4. Who are the foolish virgins? 1 John 4: 20; Titus 1: 16.
5. When ought we to get oil for our lamps? 2 Cor. 6: 2; Heb. 4: 7.
6. What may we learn from our ignorance of the time when Christ will come? Luke 12: 35–40.
7. What should be our attitude? Titus 2: 13.

—Notes for Bible Study.

A WORD TO THE BOYS.

How can the boys make the most of themselves, and best fill the niche in the social fabric which is waiting for them? Remember, you do not find yourselves where you are to-day, almost or entirely young men, by virtue of your own forethought and your own will. You do not belong to yourselves; you have not the right to dispose of yourselves. You had no part in originating your own existence, or in prolonging it. You are here to-day by the will of God. He owns you, body, soul and spirit. Whatever talents you possess,—life, health, intelligence, opportunity, employment, money, all are his. In view of this, what better can you do than consecrate yourselves entirely and at once to God, to be employed in his service, and to be used for his glory. The young are apt to think that it is well for their parents and older persons to be Christians, but that, as for themselves, they have time enough. Many seem to feel that they do not need to be Christians, and that it is unmanly to be serving the Lord. Do not be deceived, my young friends. You will have one day, to grapple with the King of Terrors, like all others of our race. Then all your bravery will forsake you and you will need the eternal God for your refuge. The greatest men in history, both in Bible times and in later days, have been earnest, humble Christians, not ashamed of Christ or his Gospel. There lies before me at this moment the life of Philip Doddridge, which I have been reading recently. As I glance at the open page, I see that at the age of fourteen he commenced keeping a diary, in which he accounted for every hour of his time. He was one who employed his time to the greatest possible advantage. When he was in his twentieth year he wrote out a number of resolutions by which his life in the future was to be guided. A few brief extracts are here given; "Begin the day with God. Be conscientious and diligent in the business of the day. Be moderate and innocent in recreations. Guard against the temptations of the day. Govern my thoughts when alone, guard my tongue when in company. Let me never delay anything unless I am sure that another time will be more fit than the present. Never do anything which I should be afraid to do, if it were the last hour of my life. Study the Scriptures so steadily, consistently and frequently that I may plainly perceive myself to grow in the knowledge of the same. Improve every opportunity when I am in suitable frame of mind to cast my soul on the Lord Jesus Christ, to trust and confide in him, and consecrate myself wholly to him. That I may thus have assurance of my eternal saftey, knowing that I confide in my Redeemer." Among other powers God has given every young man the power of the will. If you will come to Christ Jesus, you will be saved; but if you use your will to refuse or neglect salvation, you will perish. "Choose you this day whom ye will serve."—The Standard Bearer.

LIFE AND DEATH.

"What is Life, father?"
"A Battle, my child,
Where the strongest lance may fall,
Where the wariest eyes may be beguiled,
And the stoutest heart may quail,
Where the foes are gathered on every hand,
And rest not day or night,
And the feeble little ones must stand
In the thickest of the fight."

"What is Death, father?"
"The rest, my child,
When the strife and toil are o'er;
The angel of God, who, calm and mild,
Says we need fight no more;
Who, driving away the demon band,
Bids the din of the battle cease;
Takes banner and spear from our failing hand,
And proclaims an eternal peace."

"Let me die, father! I tremble, and fear
To yield in that terrible strife!"
"The crown must be won for heaven, dear,
In the battle-field of life;
My child, though thy foes are strong and tried,
He loveth the weak and small;
The angels of heaven are on thy side,
And God is over all!"

—Adelaide Anne Proctor.

A PUMPKIN FLOOD.

"I don't like it, mamma," and Lulu Warren refused the bowl of oatmeal and cream brought her by Katie the cook.

Lulu was a convalescent, and Mamma Warren was very tender with her little sick girl. Grandma Lane, an old and valued friend, was taking tea with Mrs. Warren, and became weary of Lulu's fault-findings, and decided she was quite strong enough to improve a bit.

"I am sorry, Jane, that you care so little for your husband, Lulu, and myself as to set us down to a table with nothing eatable on it," said grandma gravely.

A scarlet flush flamed into Mrs. Warren's face, and Lulu looked indignant, but papa understood it all.

"When you think of my great age, and poor health and teeth, also my delicate appetite, it seems to me I ought to have something better than sloppy tea, dry bread, musty cake, soured preserves, and bad butter"—

"I'm sure mamma tries"—

"Lulu found out all these things for me; she doesn't want grandma made ill from eating indigestible things."

Lulu's eyes were opened as to the kindly reproof, and she saw herself in just the light grandma meant she should. With shining eyes, and heightened color, she ate in silence the detested oatmeal prescribed by the physician.

"I must tell Lulu of the pumpkin flood in early times, and the privations of the early settlers along the Susquehanna river."

"Did it rain pumpkins, grandma?" asked Lulu wonderingly.

"I suspect my father and the older folks thought so, when they saw the river full of floating pumpkins. No, it was the result of a long-continued autumn rain, that swelled the Susquehanna until it overflowed and swept the harvests not yet gathered from the lowland farms. My oldest sister was fourteen and remembered the flood quite well. Lulu, I was born in 1800, and Patience was fifteen years older than myself.

"Patience told me that the settlers were forty miles from a mill or store, and white bread and store tea was indeed a rare treat, but the year of the flood had been one of great and abundant harvest, and many hearts were rejoiced.

"September brought a gentle rain; the wheat and corn were in the field, and the yield of pumpkins was enormous.

"For days the rain continued, the river grew wider, and the farmers' faces lengthened, but they never thought of personal danger.

"One night father drew all the family around him and read aloud the story of the building of the ark, and when it came to the raining forty days and forty nights, mother gave a little sigh and clasped sister Hannah closer.

"Father went about looking after the stock and poultry, covered up the fire, and made all safe for the night. The river made a little bend near our house, and in the bend was a little fall, and mother lay awake a long while listening to the gurgle-gurgle of the water and uneasy chipper of the chickens.

"At early dawn we were aroused by a messenger riding for life, to warn the settlers that the water was upon them; and then it was that stout hearts worked untiringly.

" 'Your chicken-house has gone,' and away he rode to the next neighbor.

"Patience mourned for the chickens; half of them were her own pets; poor Bossy and Star and Diadem with the calves had been swept away too, and Prince and Scrib were swimming, trying to reach father, who whistled to entice them to higher ground.

"And wasn't they glad when the poor, tired things did manage to get to father and crouched, shivering, at his feet?

" 'No use to cry over spilt milk, mother, the house is bound to go, but trees are plenty and we'll soon have another. Fly too, and help to get everything out of it,' said father.

"All day we watched the house. The water came up to the window sill and it didn't move, and they began to hope it would not go. With a stout rope they tied it to a tree, and left it, to go to a neighbor's for the night.

"There was but little sleep for any of the heads of families; the minister was among the anxious people at Farmer Strong's, and he read aloud comforting words, and cheered the hearts of the discouraged ones amazingly.

"Everybody went to father's house, and 'twas saved by the strong, stout rope, but not quite clear of water. The Susquehanna was full of yellow spots; it had been robbing the cornfields and pumpkin patches.

"Pumpkins, green and yellow, large and small, bobbed about and floated down the stream. Father made a roaring fire in our log house, and the men and boys went to rescuing pumpkins, and everything they could from the river.

"After that, began the hard times; the bread was scarce. For meat they depended upon game, and it was boiled pumpkins at morning, noon and night, until the thought of a pumpkin was odious.

"With brave, stout hearts, they worked to better things, and in the winter a farmer prepared a happy surprise, by inviting all the settlers to a feast of short cake. He had collected wheat sufficient for one large cake and carried it upon his horse forty miles to mill, and his good wife luckily had a little bear's fat to make it short and flakey.

"Patience said she never should forget the short cake. No charlotte-russe had ever since tasted so good. Lulu, those were days of toil, and poverty, but Christian love and fellowship helped one and all to endure them."

"Thank you, grandma; we shall remember the pumpkin flood when we are inclined to grumble at what mamma sets before us. I speak for Lulu and myself," said papa. Lulu nodded an assent, and mamma smiled.—The Pansy.

TEMPERANCE.

A GOOD SCHEME.

Wives who have drinking husbands should cut this out and paste it on the looking glass. A western journal has the following very practical remarks for those who cannot get along without frequent whiskys: "Liquor dealers pay on an average two dollars per gallon for whisky. One gallon contains an average of sixty-five drinks; and at ten cents a drink, the poor man pays six dollars and fifty cents per gallon for his whisky. In other words he pays two dollars for the whisky and four dollars and fifty cents to the man handing it over the bar. Make your wife the bar-keeper. Lend her two dollars for the whisky for a beginning, and every time you want a drink go and pay ten cents for it. By the time you have drank a gallon she will have six dollars and fifty cents, or enough to refund the two dollars borrowed form you, and to pay for another gallon of whisky, and have a balance of two dollars and fifty cents left. She will be able to conduct future operations on her capital; and when you become an inebriate, unable to support yourself, and shunned and despised by all respectable persons, your wife will have money enough to keep you until you get ready to fill a drunkard's grave."—The Washington Punch Bowl.

We are told by the secular press that the punch-bowl is one of the favorite institutions of fashionable society in Washington. It is found at afternoon and evening receptions, and is freely patronized by young and old of both sexes. It is said that there has been a great increase in society drinking in the past five years, and as a matter of course, in drunkenness in our national capital. The punch-bowl is the devil's bowl, and it is hard to see how respectable and intelligent people can so lower themselves as to countenance it. If they are intelligent, they know that they are graduating wine-bibbers and drunkards; if they are respectable, they ought not to be engaged in such immoral work. But Washington is ruled by custom as few other cities are ruled. The habits of the "court" become the inflexible law for the society that revolves about the court. The foreign diplomats and their families regard it as shockingly discourteous not to provide abundance of wine for guests, and were scarcely less scandalized than a certain class of Americans at President Hayes's plain dinners. Mr. Hayes and his good wife set a glorious example in this respect, and we hope that the time is not far distant when this precedent will become the law in the Presidential mansion. It required great courage to brave the sneers of society; and it is proof of the true nobility of the character of Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, that they did their duty quietly, firmly and without ostentation. Those who affect to despise their temperance principles and their hymn-singing, are not of the class who do most for their fellow-beings. We are to have civil service reform; let us have a yet more important reform in the hurtful habit of social drinking—Independent.

The mischief of beer is well reported by "Gath," who says that the chief of police of Baltimore states that he regards lager beer as having done more harm to the boys of the United States than anything he has ever heard of. Said this gentleman, "Boys were never seen in drinking places as long as whisky was the standard. But after lager beer was introduced, the boys would go to saloons, where games were prepared for them, such as bagatelle and pool, and in a little while you found drunken boys." Often and often, the cheap lunch with the glass of beer at the saloon entices boys whose slender wages cut off the warm dinner which they should have in view of hard work, long hours and the demands of growth. Some of our large and wealthy firms will find much written against them in the long account of God's ledger. These great houses are filled with young men who willingly work for a mere pittance in the hope of promotion, and for the sake of learning the business in well established firms. They never see their employers, never hear a word of counsel from them, and are only cheap particles of a great machinery which grinds out wealth to the firm. These boys—their present and their future—their manner of life and habits should be the care of men who no longer need to care for dollars and cents, but have earned the luxury of time to do good.—Union Signal.

The Archiv fur Hygiene exposes some of the frauds which are practiced in the manufacture of sherry wine. An alaysis of a "superior" grade of it—sold in Hamburg—showed that there was a small proportion of Spanish wine, but that the phosphates and tartrates of good sherry were replaced by table salt. The artificial wines—for export—were composed entirely of sugar, water, alcohol, and table salt.

Dr. Dio Lewis comes to the front with the unblushing declaration that he "found no difficulty in getting into bar-rooms in all parts of Iowa." The purpose of the remark is, of course, to show the failure of prohibition in that State. Yet it must be admitted that under it is a little reflection on the Doctor. People will naturally inquire why he sought to get into bar-rooms all over the State.—Cleveland Leader.

Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, recently expressed the belief that legal prohibition of the liquor traffic would prevail throughout the majority of the Southern States within four years. The North rid the South and the country of the curse of human slavery. It would be a splendid return for that act if the South would lend her aid to rid the North and the country of the slavery of the drink traffic.

LITERATURE.

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, by Father Chiniquy. Pp. 296. Price, $1.10. Published by C. Chiniquy, St. Anne, Ill.

Since the celebrated ex-priest Chiniquy first issued this remarkable volume a few years ago it has run through twenty-seven editions, and has become almost a standard work on the relations of the confessional to the mothers and sisters—by far the largest part of the Roman Catholic church. The argument is, that the prescribed questions, which every priest is sworn to put to the females of his church, who must all come to him in private confession, are of such a nature as to break down female modesty and put the penitent utterly in the power of the ecclesiastic. The fearful power and results of this system in Father Chiniquy's own experience, as one of the most successful priests of Canada, fills the book with dreadful details, which are impressed upon the reader as true. The revelation of these doctrines of the Romish church must be accepted as true, as much as we accept the revelations of Masonry which are confirmed by a thousand proofs furnished by the order itself. This work is one of the most powerful attacks on the Romish superstitions, and for such hostility Chiniquy has been repaid by mob after mob, as he has been urging Roman Catholics to abandon such evils and accept Christ alone and his Word for salvation.

On the Sublime and Beautiful, by Edmund Burke. pp. 272. Price 50c. John B. Alden, New York.

We turn to Burke's celebrated essay as to a fountain from whence all subsequent rhetoricians have drawn for their own argument and illustration; as we go back to Aristotle for logic, or to Homer in poetry. His celebrated essay "On the Sublime and the Beautiful" has generally, in American editions been incorporated with his other works and inaccessible except through some library. The publisher has therefore done the American reading public a good service in issuing this, one of the handsomest volumes issued from his press, at so low a price. The unique form adopted we hope to see often reproduced for pocket volumes, and ease and convenience in reading.

In the North American Review for April, William E. Bear, of the Mark Lane Express writes on the "Agricultural Crisis in England." With all her other troubles—in Egypt, and Ireland and Asia—old England has also been passing through a serious Agricultural crisis, in which the ancient proverbial expression, "as good as wheat," lost its force, for the price of that commodity touched the lowest point it has reached it the life of this generation. What brought on the crisis, what were its effects, and what remedies have been proposed, are questions that concern the American almost as much as the Englishman, whether he be a producer or consumer of wheat. Charles Dudley Warner presents an interesting "Study of Prison Management," which reviews and condemns the shallow sentimentalism that prevails in some parts. Robert Buchanan, the English poet, discusses "Free Thought in America," T. V. Powderly, the head of the Knights of Labor lodges, "The Army of the Discontented," and Prof. Hunt, "How to reform English Spelling." The other articles are: "The Law's Delay," by Chief-Justice Thomas F. Hargis," and "Characteristics of Persian Poetry," by A. R. Spofford.

The current number of the Missionary Review furnishes some valuable tables for the missionary student in the report of British contributions for foreign missions and the continuation of the review of American societies. The troubles of the Presbyterian Board in India are reviewed at length in an open letter to one of the secretaries; and the survey of the whole mission field is most complete and satisfactory. Published at Princeton, N. J., $1.50 a year.

Benson J. Lossing, LL. D., writes in the March number of the Library Magazine (John B. Alden, publisher, New York) on the question of "Secret or Open Sessions of the Senate. Few writers on American historical topics stand higher as an authority than Mr. Lossing, who though credited as a Freemason yet takes the reasonable position that the secrecy of the Senate business is needless, being outgrown with the development of the country.

THE CHURCHES.

—Mr. Moody, the evangelist, is expected to spend the first Sunday in April in Chicago.

—The Advance has reported 7,544 accessions to the Congregational churches since Jan. 1st.

—The Moody meetings at Omaha last Thursday and Friday were very largely attended, hundreds of people being unable to get into the Opera House. Overflow meetings were held in the First Baptist church. Many people came in from the interior of the State.

—The Gospel Banner, the Mennonite paper of Canada, says: "Bishop Weaver, of the church of the United Brethren in Christ, proposes that their law on secrecy be changed, so as to enable them as a church to work to better advantage in the cities. This will be joyful news to the compromisers in that church, and, as we understand it, gives the loyal brethren ground for alarm. God forbid, that any change should be made in favor of the Secret Empire."

—A delegation of about 200 Christian workers, mostly ladies, composed mainly of the Women's Temperance Union and Tempeance Alliance of the District, called at the White House, at Washington, last week. Miss Cleveland received them in the blue parlor. The call was not for the purpose of making any request regarding temperance matters, but Miss LaFetra, who addressed Miss Cleveland on behalf of the visitors, stated that they simply desired to pay their respects and to express their confidence in her Christian character and that as mistress of the White House she would perform her duty. A small plush album was presented to Miss Cleveland in which the sentiments of the visitors were inscribed.

—The Texas Baptist Herald says that the Roman Catholic Bishop of Coahuila visited Saltillo the day after the Baptist excursion to that town, in a special train, and ordered that the bells of the city be rung as he approached. General Cervantes, the military Governor, forbid it, saying they did not ring the bells for the Baptists, and they should not ring them for the Catholic Bishop—that all should be treated alike in Mexico. It is said the Bishop was greatly enraged, and in disgust soon left Saltillo.

—Dr. Philip Schaff, Chairman of the American Committee, announces that copies of the revised edition will arrive in the United States about May 10th. All the work of the revision has been concluded, and the matter is now in press. In answer to inquiries as to how it would differ in appearance from the present version, Dr. Schaff lately said: "The most of it will be arranged, not in verses, like our Bible, but in longer paragraphs, like any other prose. The poetry of the Bible, that is, the Song of Solomon, the Psalms, the Proverbs, the Book of Esther, etc., will be arranged in parallelisms—virtually lines, like other poetry. There are no books omitted and no chapters. The canon has not been altered, or even considered, as there are no older Hebrew manuscripts in existence than those to which the forty-seven had access who made the present version of King James. Our work has been merely a question of translation. We have passed our version, as they did theirs, on the Masorethie text, which rests on Hebrew manuscripts of the eighth or ninth century."

—The statistics of the Reformed Presbyterian church show 25 students of theology, 7 licentiates, 113 ministers and 125 congregations, with 10,671 members. The contributions for the year ending April 30th, 1884, were, Foreign Mission, $14,590; Home Mission, $4,586; Freedmen's Missions, $3,886; National Reform, $6,665; Theological Seminaries, $8,199; Education Funds, $16,273; Church Erection, $31,949; Partors' Salaries, $83,926; Miscellaneous, $56, 932; Total, $230,006, or an average of $31. 55 per member to all purposes. The congregations of the church extend from Nova Scotia to San Franeisco. The foreign mission is located in Latakia, Syria, and in Tarsus, Asia Minor, as centers. The home missions are located in the Provinces of Canada, in our Northwest, among the Chinese in San Franeisco, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati, and among the freedmen in and around Selma, Ala. They have a College located at Beaver Falls, Pa., which is doing good service in edueating our youth. The Theological Seminary is in Allegheny City, and has three professors.

—The services at Jefferson Park Presbyterian church last night were of a peculiar character, says the Chicago Herald of March 9th. Father Chiniquy, formerly a French Catholic priest, preached from the words in Psalms 66, "Come and I will show you what great things the Lord hath done to my soul." During his discourse the speaker referred to the great work that Father P. A. Seguin had been doing here. He had succeeded he said, in converting some eighty persons. The services are now being held at Father Seguin's residence, where there are no facilities for baptism. During the exercises thirteen of these converts had the rite of baptism administered after the manner of the Presbyterian faith. Father Chiniquy made an urgent appeal to the people of the evangelical faith to put forth a helping hand in the endeavor that was being made here to bring the French people into the church. To do this he said they should have a stated place of worship.

George Muller in his last report, summarizes his benevolent and evangelistie labors as follows:

"Since March fifth, 1834, when it pleased the Lord to enable me to found the Scriptural Knowledge Institution for Home and Abroad, he has graciously sent me, as the result of prayer and faith, the sum of $5,063,850. Perhaps readers who are not acquainted with our former reports, may be led to ask, 'and what has been accomplished by this large sum?' I therefore reply: 95,143 children or grown-up persons have been taught in the 119 schools, entirely supported by the funds of the institution, besides ten thousand have been benefited in the schools which have been assisted by its fnnds; 5,947 now attend the schools; 189,349 Bibles; 647,775 Testaments; 19,907 copies of the Psalms; and 999,961 other small portions of the Holy Scriptures in various languages have been circulated since the foundation of the Institution; 80,219,334 books, pamphlets and tracts, in several languages, have likewise been circulated from its commencement. From the earliest days of the Institution, missionaries have also been assisted by its fund. On this object alone $983,165, has been expended from the beginning; 6,895 orphans have also been under our care, and five large houses at an expense of $575,000, have been erected and fitted up for the accommodation of 2,050 orphans and 110 helpers.

"Besides all this, during the past ten years Mr. Muller has undertaken no fewer than ten missionary tours, extending over twenty-three countries, namely, England, Scotland, Ireland, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, France, Spain, Italy, Canada, the United States, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Asia Minor, Turkey, Greece, Austria, Hungaria, Bohemia, Russia, Russian Poland, and last, and latest of all, India."

Missionary Statistics.—The missionary work of the world now includes 100 societies—fifty American and fifty European—which report an income of $9,623,850, of which $3,420,613 came from America, and $6,203,237 from Europe. The American socities report 975 ordained missionaries, 129 lay missionaries, 1,132 female missionaries, 1,102 ordained native preachers, 10,936 other native helpers, and 248,079 communicants in the churches. In connection with the European societies there are 1,780 ordained missionaries, 549 lay missionaries, 1,030 women missionaries, 1,241 ordained native preachers, 15,420 other native helpers, and 396,715 communicants in churches. The total Protestant missionary work of the world has, therefore, 2,755 ordained missionaries, 678 lay missionaries, 2,162 women, 2,343 ordained native preachers, 26,356 other native helpers, and 644,794 communicants of churches. These totals show a gain over the preceeding year of $656,350 in income, 26 ordained missionaries, 70 lay missionaries, 140 women, 133 ordained native, 3,637 native helpers, and 26,137 communicants.

These figures themselves are enough to silence all opposers of missions, and to dispel all doubts as to the success of the work, especially when it is found that the progress of Christianity in missionary lands is nine times greater than in the churches at home. If the indirect influence of Christian missions on the heathen could also be reckoned, the argument in their favor would be still more impressive.—Instructor.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the Tract Fund for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	3
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	4
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	5
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	2
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	4
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	8
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	3
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	4
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	4
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	2
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	8
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	4
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
43	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	4
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	4

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

A Wonderful Woman,
A Wonderful Life,
AND
A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

Is a charming illustrated magazine, published by J. F. Avery, Halifax, Nova Scotia, containing forty pages monthly of anecdote and argument for the Christian home. Every number is profusely and finely illustrated. We shall be happy to introduce this magazine to hundreds of American homes and have secured a special arrangement from the proprietor. Buds and Blossoms is 75 cents per year. With the Cynosure the two will be $2.25, or any subscriber who has already paid for this paper can get the magazine at the same rate.

The Master's Carpet
BY
E. Ronayne.

Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should procure and carefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 429 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance,

Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND BOOK
OF Freemasonry,
BY
E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge. No. 639 Chicago.

Gives the correct or "Standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. In short, it is

A Complete and Accurate Lodge Manual.

The high standing of Mr. Ronayne in the fraternity, his popularity and success as a teacher and lecturer in the Lodge, together with the testimony of high Masonic authority, leaves no doubt of the accuracy of this work. It is rapidly becoming a standard work in the hands of ACTING LODGE OFFICIALS, and those who desire to post themselves on the workings of the order. The price is so low that it is within the reach of all. Sent postpaid securely wrapped on receipt of price 184 pages, Paper covers, 35 cents. Elegant cloth with beveled edges and gilt stamp, $1.00. Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 75 cents; per dozen $1.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

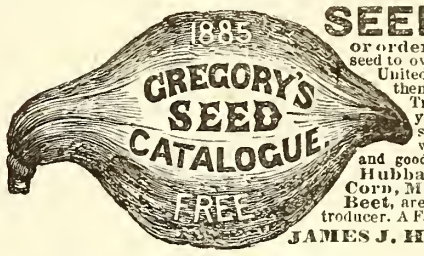
"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER
IS THE
"WAUKESHA GLENN!"



HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS, NATURAL OR ARTIFICIA.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

SEED Warranted to Grow.

or order refilled gratis. I have sold vegetable and flower seed to over a million farmers and gardeners in the United States, perhaps some are your neighbors, if so ask them whether they are reliable. Mr. Thomas Henshall of Troy, Kansas, writes me: "For 26 years I have dealt with you. I have lived in Iowa, Missouri, Colorado, and Kansas, and no matter what the soil or climate, the result was always the same, to wit:—religiously honest and good." This is the kind of seed I raise and sell. The Hubbard and Marblehead Squash, Marblehead Corn, Marblehead Cabbages, Ohio Potato, Eclipse Beet, are some of the vegetables of which I was the original introducer. A Fair with $500 in premiums. See my catalogue, free to all.

JAMES J. H. GREGORY, (Seed Grower), Marblehead, Mass.

Reliable AGENTS Wanted in Every Town.

STERNBERGER'S Folding Dress Pillow.

folds into one-twentieth of its size when closed and weighs but two pounds.

Perfection, Durability, Simplicity.

The Folding Dress Pillow is simply perfect. Can be folded in a second and put anywhere. We guarantee one pillow to outwear a dozen old style stuffed sham pillows. Housekeepers buy them on sight.

$2.00 PER PAIR,

delivered on receipt of price.

OR Frank A. Hall, 200 Canal St., New York. John P. Fowler, 306 State St., Chicago, Ill. Fred. Walpert & Co., 28 N. Gay St., Baltimore, and Furniture Dealers Generally.

THE PIQUA M'F'G CO., Piqua, Ohio,

Guizot's France

CELEBRATED HISTORY of FRANCE, from the Earliest Times to 1848. By M. GUIZOT, Prime Minister of France, continued from his notes, by his daughter, MME. GUIZOT DE WITT. Complete in 8 vols., small octavo, large type, bound in fine cloth, beveled boards, gilt tops. Per set, $8.00; postage $1.20.

426 Fine Illustrations

Also a CHEAPER EDITION, just issued, in 8 volumes, large 12mo., with 64 Fine Illustrations, otherwise the same contents as the other edition. Paper, press-work and binding all first-class. Bound in fine cloth; price of the set, $5.00; postage 60 cents.

This is the only complete American edition of this magnificent work, which is known as the best popular history of France. The cost of the imported edition, with substantially the same illustrations is $36.00, and the cost of the only other American edition (which is incomplete, coming down to, and NOT including even the French Revolution, and of course not the wars of Napoleon) is at the time of this announcement $33.00, while THIS is commonly considered the BEST for the library.

$36.00 Reduced to $5.00

"In style of cover, firmness of binding, quality of letter-press, affluence of illustration, and lowness of price, this edition of one of the noblest historical works in existence, is one of the most remarkable publications now offered to the public."—Star, Dover, N. H.

"The matchless brilliancy of Guizot's style, his graphic descriptions of men and events, his painstaking minuteness of detail, the lucidity and ease of his style and the admirable philosophic reflections, all combine to render it worthy of the description it bears as the most popular history of France. It is as fascinating as a novel, and as life-like as a theatrical representation of the events and personages it describes. How the set can be sold for that price remains, after much reflection, a mystery, for the work is not sham work, it is well done; altogether it is a marvel of cheapness. Mr. Alden has done much for the cause of good literature, but nothing better that this."—Daily Times, Buffalo, N. Y.

"It is far the best history of France that has been written. It is a wonder of cheapness."—Christian Advocate, Richmond, Va.

"What Victor Hugo is in fiction, Cousin in philosophy, Guizot is in history. Among Frenchmen he had but few peers."—Christian Leader, Boston, Mass.

"Such a history, by such a writer, and at such a price, should gain readers by the thousand."—Churchman, Richmond, Va.

Seven Great Monarchies

Of the Ancient Eastern World. By GEO. RAWLINSON. Chaldea, Assyria, Babylon, Media, Persia, Parthia, and New Persian Empire. In three large 12mo. volumes, large type, with notes, index, and over 700 illustrations and maps, bound in fine cloth, gilt tops. Price reduced from $18.00, to $3.00: postage 42 cents extra.

"No better specimens of book-publishing could be desired than the volumes of Rawlinson and Guizot which Mr. Alden has issued."—The Mail, Toronto, Canada.

"Then there is Guizot's admirable and fascinating 'History of France,' in eight nicely made and well illustrated volumes, with good print and gilt tops. But, in our judgment, the best bargain of all is his three-volume edition of Rawlinson's notable work, 'The Seven Great Monarchies.' Professor Rawlinson has no equal as a historian of the ancient Eastern Empires to which he here introduces us. We stand far back at the beginnings of history, and those strange Oriental peoples, and their habits and customs, their lives and deeds, transpire before our very eyes. At his magical touch the dead arise and recount the story of their time. These books are full of illustrations which illumine the text. They are well-made, thick books, on good paper, with good maps, and gilt tops. Once, these volumes,—the same text, maps, and illustrations—sold for $18."—Golden Rule, Boston.

COUPON 25 CENTS. This Coupon will be received in lieu of 25 cents cash, toward the price of either work above named, if sent within 10 days from date of this paper (give name of paper). This offer is to secure your PROMPT response and indicate the paying advertising mediums.

100-PAGE CATALOGUE sent free. The best literature of the world at the lowest prices ever known. Books sent for EXAMINATION BEFORE PAYMENT on reasonable evidence of good faith. Address JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl Street, New York.

FARM NOTES.

BRIEF HINTS AND POINTS.

Open the spring campaign.
Brain to plan, muscle to execute.
Now fix up the gates and fences.
It is best to engage farm help early.
A map of your farm will be useful.
Have you a farm journal for 1885?
Don't stop feeding stock too early.
Put working teams in good condition.
Secure plenty of good seed early.
Get ready for pruning, grafting, etc.
Take good care house-plants now.
Grow plenty of small fruits this year.
Get tools, etc., ready for spring work.
Don't miss meetings of farmers' clubs.
Adopt all real improvements in culture.
Give the girls a good lot for flowers.
Let the boys and girls raise chicks.
Bad drivers often spoil good horses.
Be kind and patient in training colts.
Don't turn out your stock too soon.
Care well for young stock nowadays.
How about fertilizers for spring use?
Near time to "slick up" your premises.
Look well to cows soon to "come in."
Look well after the maple-sugar crop.
Plan for a good rotation of crops.
The vernal season opens March 21.
Never kill insect-destroying birds.
How about a fish-pond this season?
Look after the early calves and lambs.
Whitewash stables; open surface drains.
Pick over apples; manure the orchard.
Dispose of your unprofitable stock.
Grow plenty of rhubarb this season.
Make lazy tramps work or "move on."
Never smoke or light lanterns in barns.

Don't neglect the paying pigs and poultry.

Buy seeds, etc. from reliable parties only.

Better purchase of principles than of agents.

"Get the best" seeds, trees and implements.

Have you secured a supply of good fuel?

Plan and prepare for plowing and planting.

Yes, "Plow deep while sluggards sleep."

It doesn't pay to breed from scrub animals.

Better grow berries than brambles in 1885.

Every farmer should have a workshop for repairing tools, etc.

Never allow wagons and implements to be used as hen-roosts.

Winter-split rails are less durable than summer-split ones.

Nine to ten pounds of milk will make a pound of cheese.

Oak branches will outlast body timber for fence posts, two to one.

Cows do better on mixed feed than if confined to a single ration.

The Prentiss grape is not giving entire satisfaction in Michigan and Illinois.

Don't throw away bones, but convert them into fertilizers.

Jersey cows averaged over $400 a head at a recent auction sale in this city.

Resolve to raise more and better small fruits and vegetables than ever before.

Don't buy black bees because they are cheap if you can get Italians.

The more feed can be varied for sheep the better will be the results.

Manure is the key to all good farming Add to the compost heap.

Young vines produce the handsomest but old vines the richest fruit.

California has 12,000 acres devoted to the raising of grapes.

Windows for plants should be as much exposed to the light as possible.

Look well to the surface drains in the grain fields and see that they are kept open.

Don't neglect the poultry, for eggs and broilers pay good dividends.

As spring advances nail on the pickets and fix up the fences generally.

Slanting with a drill, instead of sowing broadcast, saves one third in seed.

There is no live-stock on the farm that needs warmer quarters than hens.

In selecting breeding animals, look to form and perfection before large size.

Give the boys as good tools to work with as you do able-bodied men.

Are your farm tools and implements in good repair for spring work?

Never allow any animal to suffer from hunger, thirst or cold.

Make experiments yourself and also note the result of other people's.

See that your live-stock is well protected during rain storms and blizzards.

Ensilage is good for old cows, being as succulent and easily digested as grass.

Warm milk fed to weanlings will, it is said, tend to prevent scours.

Encourage the children to love flowers and to cultivate them also.

All live stock should be kept in a thriving and healthy condition at this season.

Do all your work well, so that it will not have to be done over again.

Get your crates and baskets ready for small fruits early in the season.

It is not advisable to plant or sow while the ground is cold or wet.

—The Independent.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

Cures all Lung, Nervous and Chronic Diseases. Office and "Home Treatment," by
A. H. HIATT, M. D., Central Music Hall, CHICAGO.
Price Reduced. Write for Pamphlet, Information, &c.

NELSON'S

Sunday School Books and Cards.
Approved by all Evangelical Denominations.
Send for Catalogue.
T. NELSON & SONS, 42 Bleecker St., N.Y.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,
To Sunday-Schools, r quarter. .... 21-2cts.
Per year..... .. .. 10cts.

SUNSHINE,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.
IT CONTAINS:
1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.
Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address
T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contraditions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"A WEEKLY SHOWER OF REFRESHING."

Such is the language of a minister in writing of the

CHRISTIAN NATION
OF
New York.

—)o-o(—

Read some of the many high opinions of the CHRISTIAN NATION expressed by people and papers:

The True Radical Ring.

I like your paper. It has the true radical ring, and is growing better every week.
(Rev.) T. C. Sproull.

A Weekly Treat.

I have enjoyed a weekly treat, as the CHRISTIAN NATION is just to my taste. I like the fearless stand that it has taken for Prohibition. H. M. Pollock.

Par Excellence.

Allow me to congratulate you on the appearance and make-up of your paper. The matter is very good, and in fact the whole is par excellence. I hope you may receive many thousands of subscribers. S. O. Lowry.

In the Front Rank.

I congratulate you most heartily upon the success which has thus far attended your enterprise, and wish you the largest measure of success in the future. This undoubtedly you will have, and simply because of the merits of your paper, which already holds its place among our best religious Journals, and has put itself abreast of the advanced movements in journalism. (Rev.) J. F. Carson.

Hold the Fort for Prohibition.

I am very much pleased with your paper. It is not a yearling, but I hope that it may be, like England's queen of old, hale and hearty at sixty—that it may live to see this nation a Christian Nation indeed and in truth. Hold the fort for Prohibition! Some of us have had to pass through the fire of persecution because we dared to vote our sentiments on that question, and your paper has been a weekly shower of refreshing to us. May it prove a blessing in this, and be a great power in the work of overturning the greatest evil that ever cursed our nation, and which does more than any other agent in hindering us from becoming a Christian Nation. (Rev.) A. H. Orr.

Able Corps of Writers and Contributors.

Sacramento, Cal., Daily Record-Union.—A new paper entitled the CHRISTIAN NATION has been started at New York, under the conductorship of John W. Pritchard, and with an able corps of writers and contributors.

Deserves a Noble Support.

Christian Cynosure, Chicago.—Among recently started Journals we have forborne to speak heretofore of the CHRISTIAN NATION of New York, a weekly of beautiful proportions and able management lately begun by John W. Pritchard....Thus ably manned the CHRISTIAN NATION is a worthy addition to the ranks of journalism, and deserves a noble support.

Fast Making its Way.

The National Republican, Washington, D. C.—Mr. Joseph Bowes, the leader of the Sabbath-school teachers' class at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, this city, is the writer of an article on the "International Sunday-school Lesson," which appears each week in the CHRISTIAN NATION, a journal published in New York. This journal is fast making its way into the hands of the Sunday-school teachers of the country on account of the superior and exceedingly helpful character of its articles on the Sunday-school lesson.

Send for the Christian Nation and get Posted.

Pine Bluff, Ark., Reformer.—The National Reform party is rapidly coming to the front. Among the host of friends that rally round its standard, we see the CHRISTIAN NATION of New York. It should be found in every family. Every lawyer, politician, minister, teacher and editor, should take it to keep abreast with the times. It is a Journal of enlightened statesmanship, sound public morals, choice literature and general information. A better gift could not be made to literary friends, bringing you weekly to remembrance, and feeding them with the choicest food and strengthening them for National Reform work. The National Reform party is destined to take the lead. Its platform meets every issue, maintains all morality, removes all prejudice, partisan strife and bitterness. It satisfies the best elements of either party that want reform, but dislike to appear as turning traitor to their party. The National Reform party obviates their trouble. Send for the CHRISTIAN NATION and get posted.

The CHRISTIAN NATION is $2.00 per year. Subscriptions taken for 3, 6, 9 or 12 months.

Address,

CHRISTIAN NATION,
Tribune Building, New York.

IN THE COILS;
— OR —
The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifully bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED

Five Dollar
LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.
National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW
Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the most powerful arguments put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.
Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Price, 25 cents.

Hallelujah and Victory!

Sing the Songs of Reform at home, in the field, in the shop, in the convention—sing them till the day of triumph comes.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—
Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.
SING THEM!
HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!
Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.
Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in Batavia, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN BRIEF.

Lieutenant Young, who assisted in the prosecution of Swaim at Washington, is a son of Brigham Young.

The expenses of the White House, including the salaries of the President's secretaries, foot up $75,000 a year.

The Examiner's Washington correspondent says that of the seventy-six U. S. Senators at least thirty-two are professors of religion, including one Jew, one Roman Catholic, and two Unitarians. Sixteen, or just one-half, are Presbyterians.

According to Industrial America there are in Michigan 117 firms engaged in the manufacture of salt with the aid of machinery, and 4,500 covers for making solar salt. The manufacturing capacity of the wells is 3,875,000 barrels. The amount actually manufactured during the year ending Dec. 1 was 3,252,175 barrels. In Marine City a solid bed of pure salt was lately struck at a depth of 2,000 feet.

Henry Jones, a farmer residing near Waynesboro, Ga., was greatly annoyed by the invasion of his pea fields by crows. He packed some peas with dynamite and scattered them in the field. One of the birds which had taken the bait exploded as it rose in the air. Since then not a crow has been seen on the place.

The burial of a young lady who died of pneumonia recently was postponed by relatives, who noticed color and warmth about her which suggested to them that she might be in a trance. After five days however, all prospects of restoration to life vanished, mortification set in, and the body was buried. Physicians could give no satisfactory explanation of the warmth.

The San Francisco Board of Education after a contest extending over several years has decided that the position of any female school teacher who marries becomes vacant. Another rule adopted by the board abolishes corporal punishment in grammar and primary schools, except by the principal, and he is forbidden to chastise on the same day that the offense is committed.

An interesting estimate of the amount, in weight, of one inch of rainfall on one acre of ground is thus given: An acre contains 6,272,640 inches square. Rain one inch deep would give that many square inches; 1,728 cubic inches make one cubic foot. An acre of rain one inch deep would give 3,630 cubic feet. A cubic foot of water weighs 62½ pounds; this will give 226,875 ponnds, or 113 tons and 875 pounds, as the weight of an inch of rain on an acre of ground.

The Chinese take their history back to the time of Noah. The empire has borne in its time many names, for it was a custom when a new dynasty ascended the throne to give another name to the empire, as Hai-que, Chum-que, Han-que, etc. according to the name of the ruling monarch. The true name is said to be Chum-que, "the center kingdom of the world." This term was by usage corrupted to Chin-que, and from this word the Portuguese gave it the name of China.

Anciently in many parts of France when a sale of land took place it was the custom to have twelve adult witnesses, accompanied by twelve little boys, and when the price of the land was paid and its surrender took place, the ears of the boys were pulled and they were severely beaten, so that the pain thus inflicted should leave an impression on their memory, and if required afterward they might bear witness to the sale. Later, when a criminal was being executed, parents whipped their children, so that they might take warning and keep in the path of virtue.

Dr. Hiatt, who first introduced to Chicago the "Compound Oxygen Treatment," is having remarkable success in curing Catarrh, Lung, Nervous and Throat diseases which had proved intractable to the most skilfully devised medical methods. Dr. Hiatt sends his "Home Treatment of Compound Oxygen" safely to all parts of the United States and Canada. Has sent several treatments to missionaries in India.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

The Horsford Almanac and Cook Book mailed free on application to the Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can donbt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysterics of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1 00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1.25.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen. $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on one Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees or Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Lonisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that sec societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages; cloth, $1.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

President Cleveland sent to the Senate Wednesday the following nominations: Martin V. Montgomery, of Michigan, for Commissioncr of Patents; Malcolm Hay, of Pennsylvania, for First Assistant Postmaster General; and Milton J. Durham, of Kentucky, for First Comptroller of the Treasury.

The Senate in executive session has confirmed the following: Martin V. Montgomery, Commissioner of Patents; Milton J. Durham, First Comptroller of the Treasury; Malcolm Hay, First Assistant Postmaster General; Joseph R. Ryan, of Nevada, Coiner of the Mint at Carson City; William Garrard, of Nevada, Superintendent of the Mint at Carson; J. D. C. Atkins, of Tennessee, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and James D. Porter, of Tennessee. Assistant Secretary of State. Also to be Envoys Extraordinary and Ministers Plenipotentiary of the United States—Edward J. Phelps, of Vermont, to Great Britain; Henry R. Jackson. of Georgia to Mexico; Robert M. McLane, of Maryland, to France; and George H. Pendelton, of Ohio, to Germany.

Carroll D. Wright, the new Commissioner of Labor, recommends that three special agents be sent to Europe for three to five months, and eight or ten such agents be appointed for the United States to investigate the labor questiou in all its ramifications. The suggestion meets the approval of Secretary Lamar.

The Senate has ratified the treaty with the Khedive of Egypt and the convention relating to the boundary lines between this country and Mexico. The former extends to the United States commercial privileges which Great Britain enjoys by virtue of the treaty between Egypt and Greece made about a year ago. The treaty with Mexico recognizes the principles of international law in the settlement of disputes which may occur over the changing of the bed of the Rio Grande river.

A prominent Democrat who is in close relations with President Cleveland, is authority for the statement that it is the President's intention to make no changes in any of the thousands of four-year term offices, except for cause.

COUNTRY.

The city council of Cleveland, O., has refused to repeal the law prohibiting billiard-playing on Sunday and making it a misdemeanor.

Dr. Nagle, registrar of vital statistics in the New York Health Department. attributes the great increase in pneumonia to the skating rinks.

The invitations to President Cleveland's official Tuesday night reception are said to have been printed on ordinary notepaper with a type-writer.

The fish commissioner of Kansas reports that he has distributed in streams of the State 20,000 brook trout, 350,000 shad, 700,000 pike, perch, bass, and catfish, and 13,000 carp.

The flour production at Minneapolis for the week ending last Saturday was 92,140 barrels against 82,040 the preceding week. The water power having increased the weekly production is expected to reach 100,000 barrels.

The resolution for submitting to the people an amendment granting suffrage to women was ordered to a third reading in the Wisconsin Assembly Wednesday evening by a vote of 48 to 40.

The loss to Texas cattlemen during the winter is placed at 3 to 5 per cent of the herds. At least 150,000 head wandered southward and their recovery will require much time and heavy outlay. The ranges are said to be overstocked, and the throwing of the surplus upon the market will reduce the price of beef.

Captain John McKenzie, the Prohibition candidate to succeed the late Mr. Logan in the Illinois Legislature, denies that he is being supported by the Democrats, and states that if elected he will only vote for some Republican prohibitionist.

After a rush down a steep grade two sections of a freight train came in collision Thursday near Allequippa, Pa., fifteen loaded cars being wrecked, one man killed and three others probably fatally injured.

The Parkersburg, W. Va., Journal, in a lengthy article, portrays the desperate condition of the people in Wirt and Pleasant counties that State. Rev. A. D. Hodam writes that the suffering is past description Death must inevitably ensue if speedy and ample aid is not rendered. A special session of the Pleasant county court has been called to afford relief.

By fires at Seattle, W. T.; Bridgeport, Conn.; and Pittsburg, Pa., five persons lost their lives and a number of others were seriously burned or fatally injured by jumping from windows.

Joseph Schenck, a Swede, placed in jail at Steele, Dak., charged with the murder of Anton Liepowskie, was found dead in his cell next day. The doctors pronounced it a case of death from fright.

The Supreme Bench of Iowa were unanimous Tuesday in the decision that the prohibitory law is constitutional in every particular. Injunctions to abate saloons as nuisances are declared to be valid. The question came up on an application for an injunction of this kind. The writ was issued and appeal was taken to the Supreme Court. The Court holds that as the Legislature had the constitutional power to enact the law, and as the law defines a saloon as a nuisance, there can be no denial of the right of action.

The papers give daily bulletins of Gen. Grant's condition, which does not promise an early termination of his life. He is engaged daily upon his books, and suffers little pain. The Medical Record an aounces that his physicians, after a thorough examination of his throat, discussed whether a radical surgical operation was advisable, but abandoned the idea when they felt assured that there was no guaranty of the knife reaching the limits of the disease. The Philadelphia Medical News states that the malady from which the ex-President suffers, as a rule, speedily terminates fatally, and that the duration of the life of those who survive an operation averages nineteen months.

The Langham hotel (formerly the Burdick house), southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Adams street, Chicago, was entirely destroyed by fire Saturday evening. The fire broke out about 7 o'clock in the basement and spread beyond control in a few minutes. The occupants had many narrow escapes and the falling of the south wall buried six members of the fire patrol, two of whom were killed. William Bane and John Hennessey, employes of a paper store adjoining, which was demolished by the falling wall, were also buried in the ruins. Hennessey was taken out dead on Sunday and Bane died of his injuries. Mrs. C. V. Belknap, in her excitement, jumped from the window of her room in the 5th story and was killed.

FOREIGN.

The British officials at Cairo are urging the government to appoint Gen. Wolseley as Governor General of the Soudan This would reassure the natives who joined the Mahdi for fear the English would abandon the Soudan and place them at the mercy of the Mahdi if they hesitated now. The government refuses to make the appointment because it might prolong the British stay in the Soudan beyond the limit intended.

A terrible explosion in a colliery at Camphausen, Germany, in which over 200 men were at work, resulted in a great loss of life. On Thursday 137 bodies had been recovered. Fifty-one persons were rescued.

Gen. Graham had a series of engagements near Suakim last week. He first drove the Arabs with severe loss to them; but a day or two later they attcked him fiercely, and though hundreds were killed they pressed the British severely.

The annexation of the Samoan islands by Germany is confirmed, and was accomplished in pursuance of a secret treaty between Germany and England, the latter desiring to offset the aggressions of France.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl. 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

BUSINESS.

LETTERS

Containing cash for Cynosure received during the week, ending Friday, March 20:

Bennett's News Agency, J. M. Kent, Wm. Mosher, D. J. Wilson, L. S. Minich, J. B. Galloway, Mrs. S. McConoughey, H. DeKruif, J. W. Suidter, H. Avery, W. W. Wilcox, J. N. Norris, John Livingston, Henry G. Judson, J. G. Scott, Hiram Cole, Aaron Hawkins, W. Hamlyn, Mrs. H. Hamilton, James Peterman, Burton Doolittle, A. A. Johnson, H Upton, Jno. Lusk, N. P Eddy, M. M. Morse, James Gates, J. M. Marvin, Rev. S. C. Scott, O. A. Williams, W. H. Layton, K. A. Orvis, Peter H. Griggs, Henry Roth, Linus Clark, John J. Cox, Jacob Davis, Philester Lee.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		@77
No. 3		@68
Winter No 2		@78½
Corn—No. 2		40
Oats—No.2	31	33
Rye—No. 2		63
Bran per ton		13 75
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@12 00
Mess pork per bbl		11 80
Butter, medium to best	12	@25
Cheese	05	@12
Beans	55	@1 40
Eggs		15
Potatoes per bus	35	48
Seeds—Timothy	1 25	@1 38
Flax		1 45
Broom corn	01	@ 05
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@14¼
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 50	@6 00
Common to good	4 40	@5 45
Hogs	3 90	@4 70
Sheep	3 25	@5 75

NEW YORK.

Flour	2 90	@5 25
Wheat—Winter	84	@ 95
Spring		89
Corn	46	@51
Oats	37	@41½
Mess Pork		13 25
Eggs		25
Butter	8	24
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	3 00	@5 35
Hogs	4 00	@4 25
Sheep	1 50	@3 25

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET. CHICAGO.

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees, in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and n xt, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND-PAINTED SILKS for Patchwork, Tidies, Screens, etc. Send $1 for package, or 50 cts. for beautiful samples. WESTERN ART CO., Salem, O.

LADIES CAN SECURE Light, Pleasant and Profitable EMPLOYMENT at their Homes, in the city or country. Instructions free by calling, or we will mail you printed instructions and full particulars for 15 cts. Address TOILET MFG CO., 52 E. Madison St., Chicago. Manufacturers and dealers in Toilet Articles, Rugs. Yarns, Patterns, etc.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

THE NOVELTY RUG MACHINE.

[PAT. DEC. 27, 1881.]

Makes Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc., with ease and rapidity. Price only one dollar. Single machine, with full directions, sent by mail on receipt of price. Agents wanted. Apply for circulars to E. ROSS & CO., Patentees and Sole Manufacturers, Wauseon, Ohio; also dealers in Rug Patterns.

$1 WORTH OF TESTED Seeds Free

To any person sending us 50 cents for one year's subscription to the Rural Home, and seven cents to help pay postage, packing, etc., we will send the Ten Packets of choice Vegetable seeds named below free. We make this offer to induce you to become a regular subscriber to the Rural Home, and to test the value of our seeds (specially grown for our use). Following are the seeds we offer: Early Oxheart Cabbage, Imported Blood Turnip Beet, Livingston's Perfection Tomato, New Italian Onion, Early White Turnip, Early Montana Sugar Corn, New Perpetual Lettuce, Premium Green Pea, Valparaiso Squash, New, Imported, Large Sugar Parsnip. We want every farmer and gardner in the United States to give these seeds an honest and fair trial. They are warranted to be of the very best quality, true to name, fresh and pure, and of the growth of 1884. Full directions for cultivating on every package. Address

THE RURAL HOME, Philadelphia, Pa.

TREES!

By the million at the

ELGIN NURSERIES.

(Established 1854. Thirty-first year.)

The Leading Nurseries of the West. Our

Annual Catalogue and Price-List,

containing valuable hints on the planting and management of trees,

FREE TO ALL.

Farmers and planters, do not fail to send for it.

Address, E. H. RICKER & CO.,
Please mention this paper. Borden Block, Elgin, Ill.

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $40 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill. Chicago.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts., sent post-paid. Address,

BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.

MENTION THIS PAPER

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its u thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standi have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficac that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VAL UABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.

Furnished in any quantities at

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 28. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 2, 1885. WHOLE No. 779.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by nnregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
The American Party... .. 8
The Unmixed Evil of War 8
Yale College Societies.... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
World's Vernacular..... 1
Week-day Sermon..... 2
Reason Why Masonic Oaths are Null and Void 2
The Oath to God and the Oath to the Devil..... 2
SELECTED:
What of the Night (Poetry) 3
Notes for the Sabbath.... 3
Ingersoll and Frothingham..... 3
Another Assassination Lodge..... 5
REFORM NEWS:
Minnesota; Michigan State Meeting; From the General Agent; A Swedish M. E. Church Open. 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
Church Union; War Between Secret Societies; Snubbed a Brother; Burke and Ingersoll.... 5,6
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
The Request to Joseph Cook 9
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chap. XIV.—Continued 4
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
LITERATURE..... 12
THE CHURCHES..... 12
SECRET EMPIRE..... 13
FARM NOTES..... 14
IN BRIEF..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 13

James F. Legate, the "good friend" of St. John whose confessed attempt to corrupt him with a Republican bribe, gave some of the papers a brief space to vomit their malign hate upon the prohibition leader, has his reward. The Republican Senate has confirmed his appointment to a fat land office in Idaho.

The State Senate of Indiana has just passed a bill prohibiting professional base ball on the Lord's day. As an expression of the disapproval of that body for snch desecration the action may be well, but if the general laws of the State cover the base-ball business as they should, a special enactmeut of this kind will tend to weakeu the force of the general law. The sentiment of the country last year, as the Sunday game became frequent, promises that such an enactment will be euforced. Mr. Spalding of this city, one of the best known patrons of the game in the country, has just given an emphatic condemnation of Sabbath playing, believing that it would be ruinous to the business. It wonld also have some effeet on the morals of the players.

The condition of General Grant was reported last week with bnt little ehauge from day to day. But early Sabbath morning a change came on unexpectedly, which caused the family serious alarm, and the physcians were requested to stay by him the next night. It is evident that America has paid all but the last of her honors to one of her most distiuguished sons. Joseph Cook in a late Boston lecture referred to General Grant and his disease: "Now, to-day, I am reqnested to answer the question: 'What is the cause of his present illness?' We are told by the physicians that his illness was due to the excessive use of tobacco. I suppose that physcians will admit that not more than five out of every hundred can use tobacco with impunity. After all we have seen, is it not time to ask the great preachers of the country to look at what Providence has done in this country? The greatest of the historic characters is likely to be cut off twenty years before his time because of a habit which, before it becomes a habit, is loathsome and is not at all fascinating. We tolerate in meu a habit we would not iu dogs."

Though treating his subject with the calmness of philosophy rather than the fervor of religion, we rejoice to see the subject of Mr. Cook's Boston lecture of the 16th ult.—"The Holy Spirit a Present Christ." The Christian church we fear loses much of present joy and spiritual power by a slight regard for the words of Christ: "Lo! I am with you always," and frequently in the 14th and 16th of John's Gospel: "He shall give you another comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth;" "For if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you." This Divine Spirit and Comforter, Mr. Cook proclaims from the argument of theistic science to be Christ, Immannel, God with us. The Monday lectnre of last week was not given by Mr. Cook, who was at his father's funeral at Ticonderoga, New York. But Dr. Plumb read the prelude prepared by Mr. Cook on a new Congregatioual creed. Mr. Cook has given in Boston one hnndred and seventy-seven lectnres, and has discussed nearly twice as many subjects; and yet his popularity, like Mr, Moody's, seems to increase the more he is heard by the nation. The practical nature of his discussions this year, and the courageous stand he takes on reform questions, encourages the hope that he will, if spared, speak with all the power of logic and eloquence on the secret lodge system.

Miss Frauces E. Willard, the soul aud center of the great temperance work among women, shonld be able to give correct information on the effect of the St. Johu vote npon the temperance cause. To believe that cause has been set back half a century would demand a singular and iufatuated credulity in the presence of such figures as Miss Willard gives through the Advance. It is uow five months since the election, and never in an equal nnmber of months have so many new W. C. T. U. societies beeu organized, nor so large audiences gathered; the work of the National Temperance Society of New York was never so hopefnl and influential; in Alabama a local option law and a temperance education statnte have been adopted; Missouri has also adopted the latter, and so has the Pennsylvania Senate. Oregon, New Jersey, Maine, Nebraska, Nevada and Kansas have also joined the five States (Michigan, New York, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island) which had before voted for scientific temperance edncation; Oregon submits a prohibition amendment to popnlar vote; Tennessee expects to, aud that is a leading question iu Georgia, South Caroliua and Florida; while Dakota, Colorado and Massachusetts promise well for temperance legislation. With such a record for a few months, something must give way in the breakwater the liquor bnsiness has built around Washington. There is already an ominous eracking of the timbers as the pressure of the temperance tide rises higher and higher.

The high heat of war-fever in England last week, following the proelamation of the Queen calling out the reserves, seems to have served its purpose and to be as rapidly subsiding as it arose. It proved to the British Cabinet and to Russia that the English people were ready to fight, which was enough for the confidence of the one, and for the stomach of the other. The Russian dispatches talk of war as one of the most remote expedients for settling the questions that have arisin over the Afghan boundary. There seem to be some disputed sectious which the commission appointed by either government have been tardy in laying off. Englaud left Afganistan, when she withdrew her army at the command of Gladstoue, with some necessary engagements of protection and alliance, which have drawn her into this dispute. She is ready to answer any eall, while Russia is uot: and now that the object of a little blus ter has been gained, no doubt good sense and Christian prudence will allow the negotiations to proceed quietly which shall settle every dispute reasonably and without the insane crime of war. Aside from the moral considerations with the Soudan war and the Irish in incipient rebellion, England might find the strain of war with Russia too great for loug endurance.

WORLD'S VERNACULAR.

BY ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.

Since the confusion of tongues at Babel we had supposed that no such language had existed till more mature observatiou and reflection taught us differently. We now conclude that there is a world's vernacular, and that is profane swearing.

There is, I am informed, in a mining town in Pennsylvania, a confirmed idiot, now grown to manhood, who has never spoken a word in his life except of the most revolting profanity. This is accounted for by his living where he heard not much else in the family and community. It is reported that his profane sentences are in good keeping with the customs of profane society. What a judgment of God against this vile custom! Any body, even an idiot can swear, and we would that this idiotic habit were restricted to them, if it must exist at all. We think that profane swearing is the most idiotic habit that ever found a place in intelligent communities. Well may it be said that it is "serving the devil without wages." It is worse thau that. The profane man pays an enormous tax for the privilege of working for nothing, and working, too, for the worst of masters.

In the judgment of any man whose opinion is worth anything, the profane man places himself at a ruiuous discount when he stoops to this bnsiness which an idiot can do as well as he. It is said of Howard the philanthropist that when hearing the sound of profanity near him he would begin buttoning his coat, concluding his purse might be in danger. Man's good opinion of us is indeed important, but that goes into insignificance in comparisou to "God's loving favor," and he will not hold him guiltless who taketh his name in vain. "Swear not at all," says God. Awful gnilt, to trifle with the uame of the incorruptible Jehovah! Judging from facts, I fancy no man can even hold due self-respect who is profane. But we are told that men in high life swear. Doctors, lawyers, generals, Congressmen, etc., swear, and preachers, and even bishops swear. There is a story of a profane archbishop who swore in the presence of a peasant, who was shocked to hear an arch-bishop swear. The bishop explained, that he swore, not as a bishop but as a prince. The peasant replied, "When the devil gets the prince who will have the bishop?

Let us now look after the cause of the prevalency of profanity over the globe, aud enquire for a remedy.

All sin lies embedded in nnbelief, and in this corrupt soil we find this obnoxious plant, irreverence to God's holy name. Whatever tends to unbelief and consequent irreverence, will culminate in profanity of some sort. Is there not a world-wide system of special agencies at work among men, destroying the very foundations of all Scripture faith in and reverence for the Triune One? A system which pretends to swear meu in the awful name of him, whose character shonld ever impress our inmost soul with a sense of loving and holy awe; a system which puts into burlesque and supreme ridicule, every holy emotion, every godly exercise of which the soul is capable; a system which burlesques God the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit; burlesques convictiou for sin, regeneration, the resurrection; desecrates the Bible and the New Testament rites of baptism and the Eucharist; and in fact, tending to sweep out of the world "the faith once delivered to the saints." This system, be astonished, O ye heavens! is nourished and petted by the so-called church of our Redeemer! Does the real chnrch nnrse this modern demon?

Is there a power above the abyss of doom, that is half so potent to engeuder unbelief and irreverence to the Eterual Name as this lodge scheme of profane swearing? If so, name that system.

The Masonic boast is that "Masonry is world-wide." Yes, and its vernacnlar tongue is profane swearing. Swearing by rule—on naked knees, and with body uearly nude, with bandaged eyes, with cabled neck and body, fore-sworn soul, death-penalty-bound in both soul and body. This is no eommon profanity, caused by mere fits of passion and carelessness, but deep-dyed, studied, deliberate—the type that embraces and includes the sum of all profane swearing. This kind that doctors, lawyers, generals, Congressmen, and even clergymen do, "in the chambers of imagery" (Ez. 8th). No common street profanity here. No, in the "secret chambers" from which man's Redeemer is shut out, profanity is generated and then culminates at large in the saloons, gambling hells, and so runs like rivers in the streets, in the fields and shops and "stock exchanges" where "bulls and bears" take up the chorus and do dishonor even to the brutes, whose names they assume.

Where is the remedy? Sure enough, where? God's real people must find and apply it. The church must disfellowship profanity in the "secret chambers," if she would take it out of the field, the shop, and the street. Men in high life have their wine and brandy indoors, at home. They do not need to drink and stagger in the saloon and in the street. So some high-toned (?) men do their swearing in the lodge, in the temple, and omit it when out. The "Grand Master" who presides over all profanity, will excuse him from street swearing, since he has done his duty so thoroughly in the lodge, or in the chapter. The church must excuse him, too, if he does not swear in public, though she knows he swears in secret places. So reason lodge-ridden churches. If the church refuses to apply the only remedy to this evil, by rebuking and disfellowshipping it; if she fosters it in her sacred offices, and takes the emblems of the death and resurrection in baptism—the body and blood of Christ in the Lord's Supper—at the hands of these profane swearers, in the lodge, chapter, and commandery, who can wonder that profanity should be the world's vernacular?

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

I wonder what would would be the result if our Christian hope in all its infinite largeness could be wrought into the life of every believer not as theory but as a practical principle—not simply the hope of endless glory but of wonderful and unknown blessings yet to be in the present life. How do we know what Elims are waiting for us by the way? But we shall know if we only keep on advancing,—just a little nearer heaven to-day than we were yesterday. It is the halting; standing still, looking back Christian who is always missing the Elims.

Mrs. F. suggested to me this subject of thought by asking me to read her that chapter in Corinthians which contains the verse: "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miscrable."

"Now that has been in my mind a good deal," she said. "What did Paul mean? If he meant that we shouldn't be a thousand times happier serving the Lord, even without any reward, than the wicked, I am afraid I shall have to disagree with him; but then I don't doubt if I could hear his explanation of it, it would seem all right to me. So I stopped puzzling over that, and took up the word 'hope' to think over, and my life has just been filled these last few days with the glory of it. In the first place I asked myself 'what is my hope?' Christ. 'Then what is the evidence of my actually possessing it?' Love. These two questions and answers are the plummet and line of all true Christian experience. They measure all possible heights and depths. Christians ought to hope more, then they would love more."

And is it not so? When we gather Canaan's grapes of Eschol, and catch glimpses of our heavenly home from the Delectable Mountains, or drink of some fountain of promise that opens to us "by the way," the first feeling of our hearts must be that we want somebody else to share the rest, and beauty and refreshment with us. Our hopes of a heaven after death are apt to grow very dim and shadowy when there is no hope of a heaven in this life.

"Why should the children of a king,
Go mourning all their days?"

Why these fretful, careworn faces on people that call themselves Christians? Because they have put their hope far away from them, instead of walking with her hand in hand and making her an everyday guest, they have exiled the celestial visitant into a distant region that is not very much in their thoughts, but where they trust some day to meet her and be better acquainted; and meanwhile they lose the glory of her smile, the flash of her rainbow wings, and their lives are dull, and dark and full of drudgery, when they might be full of sunshine. Certainly a praying Christian ought to be an expectant Christian. We forget that the best way to get great things from the Lord is to expect great things. The joy witholden to-day may come to-morrow. The bread cast upon the waters in weariness and discouragement will surely return to you after many days. The blessing you have prayed for so long is on its way, or else something a great deal better. The Lord is not keeping all the joyful surprises which he has in store for his children till they pass over Jordan. How life's dull places would be gilded with light could we realize in its fulness all those wonderful words cover, "Christ in you the hope of glory."

THE REASON WHY MASONIC OATHS ARE NULL AND VOID.

BY L. D. BROWN.

"If you promise to do a thing you ought to do it, and especially if you swear to it."

How common it is to hear the above statement made as though it was a self-evident fact. A slight change in the statement will show its sophistry, thus: If you promise to do a thing that you ought to do, promise or no promise, you ought to do it, with or without an oath. Will God thank you for keeping an obligation he has warned you not to take? Or, if having taken it before you knew of this warning, will he thank you for holding it sacred when he has declared it profane, and that you are free from such covenants if you will confess and forsake them? Lev. 5: 4. The agreement you have made with hell and with death, Jesus Christ came to break for you (Isa. 28: 14–18), making it null and void, so that with honor you may go free from this prison-house; otherwise you would be bound to keep your wicked oath forever. But now God has opened the prison doors for you and bids you go free because he saw that it never was just that you be required to keep honor with your deceivers and destroyers.

But if you refuse to go free, then will you be a servant of sin forever. Ex. 21: 6. Because you have been led by designing men to swear you will lie to hide the evil that ensnares you, will God thank you for holding such an oath sacred? Who demands this at your hands? You know God does not as he has commanded all men everywhere to repent. Acts 17: 30. Then who does, save alone wicked men and devils? Is it any one's duty to fear and obey wicked men and devils? or acknowledge them to be our masters? Are the claims of such through the means of Freemasonry more sacred than all else, from the mere force of the fact that it has the impudence to say they are? If so, then every wicked deed ought to triumph over every good, and every lie over every truth, and every vice over every virtue.

Masonic logic is the devil's logic: "You swore you would lie by concealing the truth about Masonry. Now stick to it, be a man (or a mouse), live and die in this lie, as devilish things are so much more sacred than godly things, and ought to be protected, even if we must destroy ourselves and others to do it! Deceive your dearest friends. Call this evil good. Conceal this serpent in your bosom. Tell them it's a lamb and not a serpent; or be a traitor to that serpent who will immediately inspire your brothers in sin to brand you a "perjured villain," "liar," "wretch," since you dared to be true to your struggling conscience, your God and your innocent fellows, whom it is in your power to bless and save from this serpent's snare by your testimony (Rev. 12: 11).

Remember, friend, you may be forgiven for taking a wicked, ungodly, unlawful oath' that God forbids any man to take (Lev. 5: 4), provided when you see yourself in the snare you decide to fear and obey God rather than those who designedly put the fear of man on you. "The fear of man bringeth a snare, but he that feareth God shall come forth of them all." (Prov. 29: 25; Eccl. 7: 18.) There is no true honor in keeping honor with any party whose object and practice is to deceive and destroy the innocent. To whom do we owe our truest service, sacrifice and heroic deeds? To the innocent or the guilty, the wicked or the good? To whom is a repentant member of a robber band morally bound to be true, to his companions in crime, or to the innocent of the community who are the victims of their crimes? Your deceiver, oppressor and destroyer cannot possibly have any just moral claims on your fidelity to him. Suppose he could, he must then yield to the same claims that regulate all contracts in society.

Freemasonry in the person of the master of the lodge, contracts with the candidate before he takes the oath, and solemnly declares "Upon the honor of a man that there is nothing in the oath that in any way interferes with the free exercise of his conscience," and it is on this condition every candidate takes the Masonic oath; but no sooner taken than the conscientious man finds Masonry attempting to make his conscience for him as he goes along, by dictating his duty instead of allowing his conscience to do it. In this it lied to ensnare him with its own devilish oath, with which it menaces its victims, saying to them: "He is now bound by a tie that cannot be broken" (his oath or contract with Masonry); though it then an there broke its contract with him by falsehood, by administering an oath that his conscience always rebelled against. It taunts him defiantly at his ignoble subjection and loss of all liberty to speak truly about Masonry, by putting him under fear of man and not of God. It knows God won't punish for exercising the freedom he has given; hence the necessity of placing him in a relation of cowardly fear to man and the most dangerous men too, as they lied to ensnare him, and will continue that lie to rule or ruin him.

Masonry in the above is a party to a contract, and the candidate entering it is the other party. Masonry first breaks its own contract with its candidate by promising not to interfere with his liberty of conscience, but immediately dictates over it. Is a contract binding on a person when the other party making the contract with that person first breaks the contract? Surely not in Masonry, when in all other contracts it is not.

Freemasonry is a devilish compact because propagating itself by deception; and you know that no promise made to the devil is any one's duty to keep, as no innocent one would knowingly enter into any obligation with Satan, the enemy of God and deceiver of mankind. No relation of life can make it any one's moral duty to obey the devil or keep honor with him; for overthrow is at the bottom of all his pretended motives of keeping his kind of honor, viz., "To lie and continue living in the lie."

But is it not more honorable to rebel against that kind of honor that we may be true to the honor that God approves, viz., "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness but rather reprove them?" You ought not to agree with them; God requires you to rebel against their deceitful and wicked claims on you; for it is impossible to serve two masters whose character and claims on you are so different. Satan is the very embodiment of the spirit and life of Freemasonry which is his church. And God is the very embodiment of the spirit and life of his holy church and people. How vast the contrast between them! The one a system of lies and death; the other a system of truth and life. Which will you choose? You cannot be loyal to both, you cannot keep honor with both. But you can be true to both only by rebelling against the evil and testifying for the truth. It is the only way of escape from the dominion of any system of falsehood and evil. You who are ensnared, will you do it? O that is the question! Will you have courage to do it, and just now? God will help you if you will.

THE OATH TO GOD, AND THE OATH TO THE DEVIL.

Yes, there are two characters to the oath—one was authorized by man's Creator, the other by the "evil one." The one was intended to confirm the truth, the other might bind a man to hide the same truth. In every way the true purpose of the divine authority for an oath was, if possible, defeated.

The curious thing is that the very men who should have guarded the character aud sanctity of the oath were those who were the very best agents for the other (Acts 23: 12–24); and even to-day, we have in our Sabbath-school papers some writers who are "false teachers" on this subject. For example, one writer whose volume was published in Boston, thus comments on the oath or curse of the forty to kill Paul:

"In case they were prevented, without any fault of theirs, from carrying out their oath, they could be absolved from it: but they invoked on themselves the most terrible penalty in case they failed to do what their oath required of them."

Not a word of warning against the siu of such oaths; but here we have the fact stated, as if the oath to kill a man of God was an oath which must be fulfilled or forfeit the swearers own lives! As if God could reward them, or waive the penalty of their oath, if they violated successfully his own law! Could the fanatical delusion of the devil carry men any further than that?

No doubt this instructor of youth in our land tries to send his books in all parts of the country, and scarcely a voice can be heard against such teaching, which fact, we fear, can only be regarded as a proof of the power of such oath-taking, secret brotherhoods as the Freemason's agents, Molly Maguires, the Mormon Danites, etc. The S. S. Times "Oriental Lesson Lights" articles often err in this way, and is equally guilty in this lesson of pandering to such oath-taking, as these murderers by intent took.

A Scot.

WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

Is it the night when the streets
  Are filled with the happy throngs
Who take up the new year's tasks
  After the new year songs,
In courage that has no fear,
  With assurance that does not quail?
Is it night when the world is brisk
  And no one expects to fail?

Night, when we are all taught,
  And are sure that we understand?
Night, when a right has been given
  To every man in the land?
Night, when our modern thought
  Has the magic of Aaron's rod?
Night, when the people's will
  Is obeyed as the will of God?

As far as the life is false,
  As far as the love is feigned,
As the Christ hath been shut out
  From the hearts in which he reigned,
As the righteousness is small,
  And the selfishness has might,
And the proud and mean have power,
  So far it is still the night.

But so far as the people's voice
  Is really the voice of God,
So far as the eager feet
  In the paths of the meek have trod,
So far as Christ is King,
  And the people him obey,
So far is the dark night past,
  And we live in the light of day.

Lord, give us a year of light!
  With liberty grant us grace,
A passionate love of truth,
  And a longing to see thy face.
Make us humble as well as strong,
  And wiser the more we see:
Give the nation to seek for the day,
  O Light of the World in thee!

—Marianne Farningham, in Christian World, London.

NOTES FOR THE SABBATH.

LEGISLATIVE SABBATH-BREAKING.

From the Christian Intelligencer.

Again with deep regret and forebodings of evil in days to come we read on Monday morning that the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives had been engaged last Sabbath, from ten o'clock in the morning until seven in the evening, on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill. If this committee had attended to its work promptly during the more than two months of the present session there would have been no need of this invasion and misappropriation of the Lord's day. What will be the result of the violation of the law of the Sabbath by the men chosen to frame and execute the laws! Such men ought to be exemplary in the observance of existing law. Their Sabbath-breaking is, in our judgment, worse than intemperance or infidelity openly avowed by them would be. We know of no more fruitful source of immorality and unrighteousness, and vicious and hard selfishness, and defiant ungodliness than an habitual desecration of the Sabbath. Who of us desire counsellors and leaders abandoned by God and left to their own devices? The prayers and desires of God's children will secure for Sabbath-breaking officials a measure of Divine help, a Divine influence restraining from foolish and wicked legislation, but this cannot be expected to continue. The forbearance of God will be exhausted, as it has been in the past, and the men who abuse his Sabbaths will be given up to the folly of their own hearts. Sabbath-breaking is a sin, a most fruitful sin, one that leads to the degradation of individual, social and national life. The Christian people of the country have a right to ask, to demand that they be spared these open manifestations of disregard for the Sabbath on the part of men in office.

THE SABBATH AND OVER-PRODUCTION.

From the United Presbyterian.

Colonel Wiestling, Superintendent of the Mont Alto Iron Works, gave his experience lately of an experiment tried at his furnace, when it was "banked every Saturday night, and opened again every Monday morning." Colonel Wiestling states the facts very clearly, and then presents a business argument which is worth considering. He says:

"The depression in the iron business of the world has been intensified each succeeding month until the situation is admitted to be critical. Various causes have been assigned, and various remedies proposed. It is singular how many strange opinions prevail as to 'what is the matter,' what caused the trouble, and what protracts the evil. Probably the cause is more generally assigned to over-production than to any other one thing, and restriction of production is accepted in this view as the panacea. Assume for a moment that over-production has been, and is the trouble. To restrict production in the way recently proposed (i. e., by 'banking up' every furnace in the United States for four consecutive weeks), if it is practicable, may be palliative, but surely not curative. It would be compensating for a flood with a severe drouth, to be followed ad infinitum by spasmodic floods and droughts. Would it not be a more practicable and healthy restriction to bank up every furnace over every Sabbath? In 1883 the Sabbath product of the furnaces of the United States was probably not less than 735,000 tons. If, from the assumed over-production which pressed on the market, the safety-valve of 'Sabbath rest' had each week relieved the market of upward of 15,000 tons, where now would be the opportunity to bewail over-production? Is not 'Sabbath rest' a sound business proposition, independent of all its moral and Christian aspects?"

RAILROAD WORK.

New York Witness.

There is no doubt whatever that a great deal of railroad work now done on Sunday might just as conveniently be done on a week-day. We heard the story, not long since, of a large amount of Sunday work ordered to be done on a large railroad wharf in Boston by a new superintendent who proved to have little fitness for his place. He succeeded in making a considerable number of men commence work against their own preference, but the police finally interferred and the work stopped. Those who were acquainted with the facts knew that no necessity for the work existed, except in the brain of this upstart of a superintendent, who thus showed an inexcusable lack of consideration for the rights of other men.

The Massachusetts Railroad Commissioners.

These gentlemen have lately made the following excellent and humane suggestions:

"We recommend that the managers of the Boston and Albany Railroad Company carefully consider the question whether there is any need of many of the freight trains which now are run on the Lord's day, with the object of greatly reducing their number; that to this end they confer with the management of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad, and other connecting roads, so that in delivering freight to the Boston and Albany, regard may be had to this object, and that live stock arriving on Saturday may be, so far as possible, delivered in whole trains and not in parts of trains composed largely of merchandize, so as to reduce the number of trains which humanity requires to be forwarded on the Lord's day. And we recommend that they pursue this end of lessening Sunday work, and thereby promoting the welfare of their employees, not in a formal and perfunctory manner, but with the same zeal and interest with which they always seek to perfect the equipment and physical condition of their road.

"We also recommend that, when Sunday work is necessary, care be taken that one day's rest in seven be secured to every man. And we give the like advice to all railroad managers in the State. Above all, we recommend that no unwilling employee shall be compelled to labor habitually on Sunday, but that all employees be effectually assured that they shall not be exposed to risk of discharge or to any molestation because of their objection to such labor. For the Commonwealth will not endure that the corporations, which are its creatures, shall inflict anything resembling punishment upon any man because his conscience forbids him to work on the Lord's day."

A committee of the Congressional General Association of Connecticut have presented to the Railroad Commissioners of that state a protest against Sunday trains. They urge that it is hard to see why railway traffic should be allowed on Sunday, while factories are required to stop work.

INGERSOLL AND FROTHINGHAM.

Robert Buchanan, the English poet, writes in the North American Review for April of Ingersoll, the infidel leader, and Frothingham, the apostle of free thought in America. His criticisms are the more striking because not made from the Christian standpoint. A few selections from the article are given below.

"There is a notion even in refined circles in America that the influence of a man like Colonel Robert Ingersoll may be an influence for good. I altogether fail to see it. While doing full justice to the honesty, the courage, and the good humor of this remarkable orator, I am convinced that he is precisely the sort of teacher—I had almost written devil's advocate—to whom Americans should just now shut their ears. Free thought should be distinguished from the offenses against common intelligence committed by a Philistine of the Philistines. Ingersoll enters the temples of religion with his hat on one side, a cigar in his mouth, and a jest upon his lips."

"To take Colonel Ingersoll seriously, of course, would be like asking for reverence from Mark Twain. He represents the natural reaction of American Bohemianism against the Puritanism of Boston and the overstrained transcendentalism of Brook Farm. But he is just the sort of person of whom America does not stand in need. The predominant vices of America, especially as represented by its great cities, are its irreverance, its recklessness, its impatience—in one word, its materialism. A nation in which the artistic sense is almost dead, which is practically without a literature, which is impatient of all sanctions and indifferent to all religions, which is corrupt from the highest pinnacle of its public life down to the lowest depth of its primalism, which is at once thin-skinned under criticism and aggressive to criticise, which worships material forces in every shape and form, which despises conventional conditions, yet is slavish to ignoble fashions, which, too hasty to think for itself, takes recklessly at second-hand any old-or-new-clothes philosophy that may be imported from Europe, yet, while wearing the raiment openly, mocks and ridicules the civilization that wove the fabric—such a nation, I think, might be spared the spectacle of an elderly gentleman in modern costume trampling on the lotus, the rose, and the lily in the gardens of the gods. The exhibition can do no good; it may do no little harm."

"Elsewhere in the same book from which I have quoted, Mr. Frothingham's language becomes less contradictory, but even more extraordinary—so extraordinary, indeed, that, if it came from any other pen, one might presume that the writer had no spiritual claim to speak in cathedra on religious topics at all. In proclaiming his revolt from the Christian religion, and his rejection of the Christian idea, he admits, regretfully, that the Christian faith still prevails, that it keeps alive the potent activities that sustain the life of Christendom. Nevertheless, he adds, 'it is a superstition; it is not grounded on history, on knowledge, on science, on fact, but it is a fancy, an imagination, a tradition;' and now, in the natural course of things, it is dissolving away before the breath of science. People, he naively affirms, reject it in the great centers of activity—in Paris, in Berlin, in London, in New York! Among other reasons for the long permanence of this false faith, and its still surviving power, he gives the following: 1. The exceeding antiquity of the system; 2. The hindrances so long thrown in the way of Biblical criticism; 3. Mirabile dictu, the persistence with which the faith is taught. The last reason is a superb non sequitur; it is simply affirming that the zeal with which an army fights its battles is in direct ratio to the weakness of its cause. But, not content with so wonderful an affirmation, Mr. Frothingham goes on to arraign Christianity because it is the 'religion of sorrow.' He quotes both Jesus and Paul in illustration of his statement."

"What Jesus did teach, or what we have learned at least by the divine ideal that he afforded, was, and is, that worldly knowledge, worldly prosperity, worldly success and happiness, are poor things compared with the heaven of sin vanquished, the other world of supreme love and insight. If the triumph of the political economist were quite secure; if the earth were equally divided among men according to some such scheme as that of Henry George; if there were no work-houses in it, and no prisons, the poor would still inherit the kingdom of heaven; for the true poor of the Christian idea are those who despise ignoble prizes, who are indifferent to vain knowledge, who have found in the certainty of human failure the sublimity of sympathetic love and insight. It must be borne in mind, too, that Jesus could sit down with the rich man as well as the poor, when the rich man was poor 'in spirit.' To refute Mr. Frothingham here would be to refute the whole argument of utilitarianism, which has already been done, or attempted, and is, of course, far beyond the scope of this paper."

"But where I join issue with Mr. Frothingham is at the one point where issue is possible—that the idea of immortality is irrational and opposed to common experience; for if it were so, there can be no doubt that it would have been 'obliterated' long ago in the process of evolution. It is not because it is preposterous, but because it is probable, that it has kept its strenuous hold on the hearts of mankind. Jesus, in his supreme practical wisdom, in his re-

WHEATON COLLEGE LIBRARY
Wheaton, Illinois

lentless logic, perceived this fully, perceived that this very idea was the natural, indeed the only, escape from between the horrors of our mundane dilemma. And forthwith (for I hold that this man, whatever his credentials, was scientific or nothing) he proceeded to verification. Opening the human heart, he found that it demanded ampler life on account of the infinite possibilities of love without it. Examining the social organism, he saw that its structure was welded together by the blood of human martyrdom, that every hope and every aspiration within it were based upon the certainty that consciousness, and all its consequent affections, must be permanent, and therefore immaterial. The law of growth was absolute, the indestructibility of force was sure, and the permanence of force was the certainty of the soul. As for his creed being one of sorrow, that is not strictly true; it is the world that is sorrowful, not the creed that redeems it, which, after all, has never until now had a fair trial. Christianity in its essence, apart from its miraculous pretensions, is, like the mind of its founder, strictly simple and scientific. It may not be feasible, we may be altogether unable to believe it, its history is a long chapter of horrors and enormities, and for some inscrutable reason its priests and paid professors have almost invariably been the enemies of human progress; but, compared with any other creed that has been offered in God's name to men, it has the solitary merit of logical truth and commonsense. If we admit its fundamental proposition, that spiritual personality is permanent, and is at the same time directly conditioned by unselfish love and brotherhood, all the mystery and pain, all the struggle of the ages, becomes clear. Moral salvation, being independent of dogma or of worldly happiness, was as possible for the first half-savage human product as it is possible now for the highest and the meanest of mankind. Knowledge is nothing, power is nothing, material success is nothing; the insight of love is everything, and looks right up into the heaven of heavens, crying, 'Oh, grave, where is thy victory? Oh, death, where is thy sting?' "

"For this is the fatal tendency of transcendentalism—to soften the lines of conviction, and to strain the anguish out of sentiment. There is no pathos in Emerson; never once does his gentle hand, grasping its soothsayer's wand, touch the fountain of tears; yet even such a man as Spurgeon can stir that fountain, if only with the mere breath of a phrase. And no creed without pathos will ever justify the great human hope, or conquer the great human heart."

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XIV.—Continued.

Nelson was agile and quick in expedients. He turned down an alley with half a dozen of the rioters at his heels, intent on giving him rough usage if they should succeed in getting their hands on him, then darted through an open doorway, the door kindly shutting to behind him and interposing a strong barricade of bolts and bars against his baffled pursuers, who hung around it for awhile like enraged wasps, and then left him alone with his deliverer, who was no other than our old friend Pat Murphy. Ever since casting his vote for the W. C. T. U. Pat had stood fairly by his newly discovered principles, considering all the temptations to do otherwise which were in his way. It must be remarked, however, that the women of the W. C. T. U. have a habit (inconvenient for liquor sellers and their political allies) of not abating a whit of their fervor and zeal when election day is over, and their lines of effort are wonderfully varied. Mrs. Judge Haviland herself had sent flowers and hot-house grapes to his daughter slowly dying of consumption, and baskets of warm clothing for the younger children; and it cannot be denied that such ministrations in the saloon-cursed homes of Jacksonville had, to illogical minds like Pat's, a peculiarly convincing power. Anyway he held "the temperance women" in high regard, and had they been veritable canonized saints could not have spoken of them on all occasions with more reverential respect.

Pat knew Nelson and liked him.

"Och, Misther Newhall, but ye're safe now. Bad luck to the murtherin' villains."

"I wish I could see Mr. Densler," said Nelson, after he had duly thanked his rescuer. "I wonder if he has left his office yet."

"The boss?"—and Pat grinned—"He come here about tin minutes ago in about as big a hurry as yerself. Ye'll foind him in that little room beyant, but och, he's cross as a bear with a sore head."

Nelson started in very natural surprise to find that his retreat was shared by his employer, but the fact was Matthew Densler enjoyed the distinction of being the best-hated manufacturer in Jacksonville. He had left his office by a back way, but when he saw that the rioters had full possession of the street he would have to traverse in order to reach his home, he concluded that it would be more prudent to seek some place of safety and wait, either till the disturbance was over, or a guard of policemen could be summoned to escort him. At present those officials had their hands full, and all that the discomforted manufacturer could do was to watch the progress of affairs from the cobweb curtained window of his retreat—a rough, unfinished room used for purposes of general storage.

He was, as Pat had informed Nelson, in a decidedly bearish frame of mind, and gave only a surly nod to the latter, who now, that the excitement was over, felt both weary and heartsick. He had cast his pearls before swine. Was it strange that they should turn again and rend him? But the heart of the young workman throbbed too deeply in pity and sorrow for his misguided brethren to feel altogether sympathetic towards his irate employer.

"The mob is threatening to sack your house, Mr. Densler," he said. "They would not attempt such a thing till night, of course, and they may not attempt it at all, but I think it would be wise to set a guard over it."

Nelson received but small thanks for his information.

"A pretty pass things have got to when an honest citizen has to seek the protection of the civil authorities in his own home! But they needn't think to frighten me into giving in. No; not while my name is Matthew Densler."

Nelson had spoken his mind to the riotous workmen. Here was an excellent chance, often longed for, to speak his mind to the other side.

"Mr. Densler, I want to say a word."

"Say on," was the gruff response.

"Supposing you manufacturers all went by the Golden Rule, and treated your employes exactly as you would like to be treated yourselves, do you think there would be all this strife and violence?"

"Yes;" was the furious response. "While they have their Grand Worthy Something or other, like that Gerrish—I can't remember all the fellow's titles—to come between and stir it up. Curse their confounded impudence! The other manufacturers may give in. They'll find I am made of sterner stuff."

"I think myself," said Nelson, steadily, "that these secret labor unions are not for the good of either side, though I myself belong to one. But, Mr. Densler, if I mistake not, you yourself belong to a Board of Trade whose only object is to so control the market as to add to the already colossal fortunes of its members. While you capitalists combine together to inflate or depress prices at your own will, can you blame working men for combining too? Can you set them an example of selfishness and greed and not expect that they will follow it?"

Some men rather like a blunt presentation of the truth. Matthew Densler was one of that class. He smiled grimly.

"Go on. You are just the kind of a chap I like to hear talk, and if I had had two or three like you to treat with in the beginning of the fuss there might not have been any at all."

"I have but one thing more to say, Mr. Densler. The working man's enemy is yours. When drink steals away his brains he is ready for riots—ready to kill and burn and destroy. But you manufacturers think too much of your business, your comfort, or your convenience, to attend the caucusses and primaries, and look out for what the saloon interest is doing. If you allow it to bribe, to corrupt, to control, do not wonder when you reap the bitter fruits of your own sowing."

Matthew Densler called himself a temperance man, and in one sense this was true. He did not drink liquor himself, nor did he offer it to others, and if the mob carried out their threat of visiting his house they would have been likely to be disappointed in the contents of his cellar. But at the same time he had never taken any strong ground for prohibition. A political measure was of interest to him merely as it might injure or benefit his business. Prohibitionists and reformers generally he was a little inclined to despise—they did not know how to make money.

We take pleasure in sketching Matthew Densler's portrait thus minutely, not that he has much to do with our story, but because he represents very fairly a class of "penny-wise, pound-foolish" manufacturers who are quite too common. But this much must in justice be said of him. If he was a hard, obstinate, irrascible man, he was at least an honest one. He had the Anglo-Saxon instinct for fair play and no favor, and was not at all displeased with the young workman for this frank statement of his opinions.

"Go on," he said, with the same grim smile. "You seem to have taken it upon you to set my sins in order before me, and as it happens I haven't anything to do just now but to listen."

"Mr. Densler," said Nelson, flushing, "my remarks were not intended to have a personal bearing. I believe you are full as just as the average, but while you rich manufacturers care more for making money than for the bodies or souls of your workmen, these foreign anarchists and socialists will find a fair field among them. Not a third of the hands are concerned in this riot, but of that third beer and whisky are the leaders. If you persist in ignoring the greatest issue of the age, why, look out. The time may come when you will have to call for armed soldiers to defend your property instead of a few policemen."

But even as the last words left Nelson's lips an unwonted sound for the streets of Jacksonville caused them both to start. Above the roar and yells of the mob came the sharp and simultaneous report of firearms. In the melee one of the strikers had drawn his knife, seriously stabbing a policeman, and the men of law, tired of using their clubs, had at last opened fire on the rioters.

Matthew Densler was not an unfeeling man. With a pallor in his face and a shiver through his limbs he turned to Nelson.

"You've come down on me hard, but I don't think any the worse of you for it. God knows I would have given my right hand not to have this happen."

"I believe it, Mr. Densler," said Nelson, earnestly.

At that moment employer and employed had a much better understanding of each other than ever before.

The riot was soon over. The mob melted away in confusion, leaving two of their number prostrate on the pavement—one stone dead, the other breathing faintly, but shot through a vital part.

They carried him into the works, it was the nearest place, and made him as comfortable as possible for the few hours which remained to him this side of the unseen.

The streets were soon quiet—abnormally quiet. Business and pleasure were alike suspended. All sorts of wild stories were flying about, rumors of wholesale incendiarism were in the air, and many of the citizens formed themselves into armed bands to patrol the streets till daybreak. Lodge-ruled and saloon-ridden Jacksonville was beginning to eat the fruit of her own doings.

Just as Nelson, seeing that the danger was over for the present, was about to leave his place of refuge, a summons came for him to hasten with all speed to the side of the dying man.

"His name is Schumacher," said the messenger, in response to Nelson's inquiry. "He's seemed awful restless and uneasy—'pears to have something on his mind like."

Socialist and infidel though he was, Nelson had always felt a certain liking for Schumacher as a man capable of better things, and he felt shocked and grieved.

He found him lying on his hastily improvised couch, with his eyes closed and the pallor of death upon his face; but when Nelson approached he opened them and said faintly:

"I want to see you alone."

The standers-by respected his wish and withdrew. In the presence of this soul going into eternity, even curiosity to know what he had to say to him grew dormant in Nelson's mind. The rough room, the dimly-burning lamp, which happened to be so placed that his own figure was cast in grotesque outlines on the wall, all seemed to waver and shift before him like the figures in a dream, while with straining ears he listened to the dying man, who spoke in faint but distinct whispers.

"I made that machine for blowing up the works. I didn't put it in the building. I don't know who did. But I never thought of their accusing you. On my soul I didn't."

"Let that all go," said Neson, soothingly; for on the whole he was not much surprised at the revelation. "Had you meant to injure me I should have forgiven you all the same, for I hope I am a Christian, and as it is there is nothing to forgive. It is against God and your fellow-men that you have sinned."

"But I had to do it. I must tell you that. We were detailed. Each one had his share in the job, and if we had refused or let on, it would have been death."

Horror-struck, Nelson listened. He had read of the Nihilists, Invincibles, and Black Hand, but always with a faint and far-off kind of interest as something that did not and never would directly concern him. Yet right here in Jacksonville there was, according to Schumacher's statement, a secret organization which, whatever might be its name, was modelled after them, both in purpose and methods of working.

"That isn't all," he added, speaking with a strange, feverish energy. "We've got our list of marked men—obstructionists, we call them. Matthew Densler is one; you are another. Last night we held a meeting and drew lots. We don't go by our own names, we go by numbers. The red paper with your name on it was drawn by No. 10. I am No. 10."

Nelson gasped for breath. He felt a horrible sense of suffocation, and then a sudden wave, half of pity, half of incredulility, rolled away the nightmare feeling sufficiently for him to speak.

"You never would have taken my life, Schumacher. I don't—I can't believe it."

"I was bound by my oath to do it or be killed myself. That's a kind of a tight place to put a man into. But now you must go away from Jacksonville; there's no other way. I couldn't die without warning you. You must go—go—quick."

(To be continued.)

ANOTHER ASSASSINATION LODGE.

The fearful stories of secret assassination from Florida and West Virginia seem to be eclipsed by the account from Texas which appears below, taken from the Sun of Gatesville in central Texas, and is condensed from the Fort Worth Gazette. Vernon, the seat of this infamous organization, is in the extreme northern part of the State in one of the Red river counties. The origiual object of this lodge, like the Ku-Klux, was a laudable one—to rid the country of cattle thieves and incendiaries. It ended in an effort to kill all objeetionable persons and to assist each other regardless of eonsequences. The Sun says:

Imagine a scenc in whieh the sheriff, his deputies and about twenty others of the most prominent citizens of a county in Texas standing face to face with the charge of having murdered, or conspired to murder, in cold blood, three of their intimate friends and associates, and you will get a faint idea of the condition of affairs at present existing at Vernon, the county seat of Wilbarger county in this state.

They are accused of being members of a seeret order whose avowed object was murder. Even in Wichita Falls, sixty miles away, an intense excitement is raging over this alleged retribution for a carnival of crime.

The origin of this thrilling drama, from the evidence now on hand, can be traced to what is probably the most prevalent of all Texas crimes, the theft of eattle. Early last fall, it became a notorious fact that stolen beef-cattle were being sold in Vernon, and the sheriff and a number of citizens determined to attempt to ferret out the thieves but, it seems, with poor success. An old man whose name is not obtainable at this writing, was arrested in Vernon on the trumped up charge of theft of cattle. He was not believed to be guilty, but the real villains were known to be behind this decoy. The old man plead innocenee and said he was selling the beef for other parties, giving their names. A hide of one of the beeves, supposed to be stolen, was found at the home of a man named Byers, who lived near Vernon. The brand had been eut out of the hide and the old man said it had been thrown into a pond of water. He was then employed to wade in the pond to search for the piece of hide containing the brand marks. He soon found it and it exactly fitted the hole in the hide in possession of the sheriff and citizens, who were attempting to ferret out the crime,

Upon this evidence and some other, but not of so strong a character. warrants were issued for the arrest of Byers, George Mills, and others who were believed to be implicated in the theft of the cattle. The preliminary trial resulted in the defendants being bound over to await the aetion of the Grand jury. Since then, in consequence of succeeding occurrences, it is said that no distriet court has been held in Wilbarger county, because the court officials were afraid to open the court in Vernon. A feud sprung up between two factions, and the citizens and officials of Vernou who are now under arrest, entered into an organization, whose object was said to be to assist the officers in maintaining the sanctity of the law. But this law-and-order organization, according to the evidence, seems to have stepped over the limit of their intentions as will be seen by a perusal of subsequent events.

In the meantime the cut hide and brand were placed in J. P. Wilson's stable, at Vernon, for safe keeping. Soon after this the stable was set on fire and destroyed, together with all the horses and livery property of the owner. Several arrests followed this crime, but the preliminary trial resulted in producing no evidence against the accused. Thus arson was the subject of the second act of the tragedy of Wilbarger county.

THE FIRST HUMAN VICTIM

was Hillis Jones, a well-to-do resident of Wilbarger county, who owned a place near Vernon. He was in Vernon one night on a spree, and during his drunken mutterings he was heard to say, "I know more about the burning of Wilson's stable than I told, and I'll tell it when the proper time comes." Jones was a witness for the prosecution during the examination trial of the men charged with burning the stable. His speech is supposed to have been a fatal one; for that very night he was murdered while on his way home, and was found stiff and cold, lying dead in the road—the first victim of the Wilbarger vendetta, which has since compromised about twenty-five highly honored and respected men. His death sent a thrill of alarm and fear through the community and iuto each household a shadow entered which has not yet departed.

The second victim was W. R. (Roy) Morrison, a liveryman in Vernon. He was called to the door of his stable and shot dowu in cold blood by two men on horse-back. His death darkened the shadow in the homes of Vernon, and men were afraid almost to speak of his tragic end for fear they would be dealt with in the same manuer.

The morning after Morrison's assassination the following notice appeared posted on the door of the court house:

"No one wanted to investigate this case. The man that does will go, too. No law wanted in this case. Signed CITIZEN."

Subsequent to the killing of Morrison, W. H. Ney, a warm personal friend of the murdered man, joined the eitizens' organization to find out (as he has since stated) if any of the members were guilty of the murder of his friend. He was initiated and became a member of the law-and-order party. He took the oath of allegiance, which was as follows, and to whieh were attached the signatures of the members:

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE.

"We the members of this committee, bind ourselves to kill all bad men whose names may be given by any of our members, unless some cause can be given, and then it shall be left to the majority.

"We further pledge ourselves to assist any of our brother-members in all undertakings and regardless of cause, even to the extent of our lives. Any of the members who gives any of our transactions away, by sign or action, we bind ourselves to take their lives. Signed:

G. T. Douglas, sheriff, Wilbarger county; J. P. Wilson, cattleman and deputy; A. T. Bogar, ex-sheriff and deputy; John Davidson, deputy; C. G. Forbes, deputy; R. D. Rector, cattleman; E. B. Kinsey, deputy; C. G. Kinsey, deputy; J. Johnson, constable; Dic Duncan, deputy, J. A. Creager; B. W. Edgell, editor Vernon Guard; Joseph Schmidt; John Bland, sheriff of Hardeman county; James Langham; Tom Gibson, deputy and foreman Worsham Cattle Company; Newt Gibson; John Steagald, assessor Hardeman county; J. F. Moody; Paul Hoeffel; W. H. Terry; James Beard; Stayton; W. H. Ney; Bell.

All these men are now uuder arrest, except C. G. Kinsey, who is out of the State.

After Ney had become a member of the order he was shown what he says was called the DEAD LIST,

whieh was as follows:

C. M. Byers; George Mills; Dr. Johnson; Judge Doane, ex-county judge: Tom Clay; P. C. Spencer; H. S. Hayes; Bob Sumner; Hillis Jones; W. R. Morrison; Heck Garrison.

It is alleged that Ney says there were ex-marks after the names of Jones and Morrison, and the word "killed" immediately following.

After Ney had obtained all the evidence about the organization that was possible, he consulted with Capt. Sehmitt of the State ranger force, and the two went to Austin and laid the facts before Gov. Ireland, and his excellency advised Capt. Schmitt as to the proper eourse to pursue.

In the meantime another killing had occurred in Vernon. Heek Garrisou, whose name is alleged to be on the "dead list," was shot by Deputy Sheriff John Davidson. The official was trying to prevent Garrison and a man named Tom Gibson from fighting, and killed Garrison as the latter was drawing his own pistol. The town was again thrown into great excitement, but gradually cooled down until it was thrown into a state of consternation last Wednesday by the arrest of twenty of the leading citizens on the dreadful eharge of murder.

Capt. Schmitt had matured his plans, and on the 11th inst., and after he had been about the town some time, he made affidavits against all the men who were members of the citizens' organization. Warrants were issued by the county judge and Capt. Schmitt and his rangers commenced quietly to arrest.

The whole affair is viewed with horror and consternation by the people in this section. The oath signed by the members of the organization causes many persons to wonder how names of sueh men could be attached to such an instrument. No opinions are given on the subject, but as each new piece of information is gained the people shake their heads and wonder how it will end.

In Vernon the citizens refuse to be interviewed and a feeling of intense, though suppressed excite ment pervades every one in the town. On the day of the wholesale arrest the rangers were entreated to release the men. Women and ehildren were in tears and men stood round with the cloud of a great calamity on their brows, and wondered how many others would be compromised in the terrible charge.

The accused claim that the organization was one whose object was to aid in enforcing the law, and not to do the damnable deeds attributed to them.

God does not delay to hear our prayers because he has no mind to give, but that, by enlarging our desires, he may give us more largely.—Anselm.

CORRESPONDENCE.

CHURCH UNION.

Brethren Fee and Chittenden have recently urged the subject of chureh union upon the attention of Cynosure readers. It has especially interested me as a subject to which I have given earnest thought. Two small churches, Congregational and Presbyterian, have made three attempts at union and have failed. The efforts occurred at different times during a space of three years, so that the several plans of union were well considered, and all gave the subject the most vigorous thought. Though both partics remained friendly, the union failed. Any light ou the subject would be heartily welcome.

In this state of mind I read the articles of the brethren referred to, especially brother Chittenden, as he wrote at length; but I have failed to get any light. All hold it very desirable, but what one thing should or cau be done no one has said. Bro. Chittenden thinks that in admitting members, it should be taken for granted that they are right in sentiment and practice on all questions of reform so long as they apparently believe in and love the Lord Jesus, and then apply discipline when it is found out that they are in great error, both in sentiment and practice. It is true questions of reform should not be made pets and hobbies and specialities in examining candidates for admission to the church, as though these were the all-important things, but they should have their relative place and importance. Examinations should be faithful and thorough, or you cannot have union in individual churches, much less between churches of different denominations.

The great trouble in the way of union is there is not thorough reform principles, and vital religious life enough in the churches to constitute a union. Where these exist you do not have to force a union, Christians run together and unite heart with heart spontaneously, as their normal eondition. They need to have common employment, common conflicts, common trials, common sufferings, to bring them into union. Let peculiar methods and organisms alone, as we let our innocent personal peculiarities alone, and call out the marshalled hosts of Christ iuto the moral battlefield. Call upon them to harness themselves with spiritual weapons, and engage under Jesus their Captain in deadly conflict with the world, the flesh and the devil, with the expectation of becoming conquerors, as eonquerors they must be if they are fit to be united with the people of the Lord, and this will bring them into that union for which Jesus prayed they might be brought. It is a union in Jesus, not in an ecclesiastical organization that we want. So that Christians cast out the devils of intemperanee, Sabbath-breaking, indolence, selfishness and dark lodges, and the whole brood of viees, that rot out and destroy true manliness and vital piety. They will then be perfectly united though they do not follow one another, but each do his own work in his own way. What closer union do we want than exists between brethren Fee, Muller, Moody, to cut it short, all true reformers? How the Advance, Interior, Midland and Catholic papers and editors come together when they stand side by side against Freemasonry? Let us all pray together as Jesus did,—take right hold of the work together, which Jesus puts into our hands and we shall find ourselves perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment in him.

AN OLD CHRISTIAN.

WAR BETWEEN SECRET SOCIETIES.

Mr. Simon states in an able article in the Cynosure of March 5th that the frequent strikes, riots and explosions indicate that a secret warfare is being maintained between Freemasonry and the minor societies. This is apparently proved by the many attempts of the socialists on the life of the German Emperor, who is a Freemason. On the other hand it is disproved by the report that the life of the Prince of Wales, who is at the head of the British lodge, would be protected by his membership, which is rendered probable by the statement of a member in a Brooklyn paper that the Clan-na-Gael was organized by a Mason and the initiations little changed.

The minor societies are generally organized and controlled by representative Masons. Then why are labor unions permitted to make war on capitalists? Is it because the interests of Masons may be protected and the interests of non-Masons injured?

Wars are sometimes waged between minor orders, as between Orange and Ribbon men; but would they dare attack Freemasonry and its allied societies? It is a hydra-headed monster and "guarded by spies everywhere." I saw it stated that a newspaper man, claiming private information, had reported to the British government that dynamiters were organized in America by a society who were plotting against all government and religion, and supplied men to organize other societies. Are not these the ear-marks of Freemasonry? and if so will it wage war against itself? The Pope proclaims it the source of all present evil and all other societies its servants and companions and circumstances generally confirm the charge. Beta Tau.

SNUBBED A BROTHER.

Goodwine, Ill., Feb. 18, 1885.

Editors Cynosure:—In Hoopeston Journal of February 12th a writer who signs his name "Three Links," in nearly a column article among a number of assertions says: "I attended the funeral services of Bro. G. Fendt, held in the M. E. church of this city, [Hoopeston] Wednesday of last week, Rev. J. P. McIntyre, the pastor officiating. In his remarks on this solemn occasion he branched off from his subject and made a statement that he was an Odd-fellow and wishing to attend a meeting of the order in this city he presented himself at the outer door of the lodge room and was admitted to the anti-room but not being in possession of the pass-word for the current term was refused admittance." (Italics in above extracts are mine.)

Rev. McIntyre is quite a popular and talented minister in the M. E. church, and just why the Odd-fellow lodge should turn such a man from their doors I can't understand, as they must have known he was an Odd-fellow and entitled to admittance—if that was the only disability they could have given him the pass-word instanter. We will try and find out the reason that they failed to give him the pass-word and refused him admittance. The reason may be that he had offended them in some way. Since he has been here some time, they want to teach him and all other ministers, who are members, that they must dance attendance regularly, even if they have to neglect the real work of the ministry.

Rev. McIntyre knowing this, perhaps, wanted to gain their friendship and thought that to visit them even once would cause them at least to be friendly, but like Paul's endeavor to pacify the Jews, as found in our recent Sunday-school lesson, he may yet find that instead of pacifying the Odd-fellows it may even make matters worse. Rev. McIntyre will find that unless he worships regularly at their heathenish and Christless altar, they will not be satisfied—the lodge wants a whole worship or none.

This writer further says: "A brother in the church can be in good standing sometimes without paying dues, but not so in this order." But as Rev. McIntyre neither visited nor paid, he no doubt was purposely turned away from their doors to teach him that Odd-fellows could not be trifled with. We hope, for the good reputation and learning that he is reputed to have, that this cold shoulder will do him for life.

This writer further says that Odd-fellowship "teaches us to regard the great family of mankind, as our brethren." What a falsehood when none can be members unless they have money and plenty of it and pay their dues!

He further says: "Bad men gain admittance to the lodge as they do in the church, and this will continue to be the case until the great harvest when the chaff shall be separated from the wheat and the sheep from the goats." Evidently this writer wants us to believe that Odd-fellowship will stand the test of the great day; but I think this writer will find that even Odd-fellowship is "chaff," and will be blown away. It is a false and Christless religion. Its very manner of its acting shows it to be a grand fraud in chaining and hoodwinking its candidates for membership.

This writer winds up by saying, "As a friend and well-wisher, Bro. McIntyre, we recommend you to the explanation of the answer to the sign of the third degree." As the writer quits with this admonition it may be because this brother failed to put the index finger of the right hand in the center of the forehead, as he should, he was refused admittance to the Odd-fellow lodge! If so, it was a lucky misplace. J. S. Hickman.

BURKE AND INGERSOLL.

A young disciple of Ingersoll has called, and during his brief stay he repeated many of his leader's sayings, among which was the following: "If the world was made by God, then God was made by chance; for it is certain that either the world or God is the product of chance," etc.

These remarks reminded me forcibly of an extract of a work written by the great and good Edmund Burke something over a century ago, but its truth will apply as aptly now as then. Burke says he is "satisfied that a mind which has no sense of its own weakness, of its subordinate rank in the creation, and of the extreme danger of letting the imagination loose upon some subjects, may very plausibly attack everything—even the most venerable and excellent; that it would not be difficult to criticise the creation itself; and that if we were to examine the divine fabric by our own ideas of reason and fitness, and to use the same method of attack by which some have assaulted revealed religion, we might with as good color and as good success make the wisdom and power of God in his creation appear to many as no better than foolishness."

This observation, as striking as it is just, seems suited to all ages and countries; but is there not especial reason, at the present day, to give it careful reflection? Are we to throw aside the past? is experience to pass for nothing? is the sanction of ages nothing? is the instinct of veneration to be spurned? and is human reason to break everything to pieces without considering that reason itself demands as one of its promises that what has been approved by the slow, steadfast judgment of time is entitled to our respect—not to be overthrown till experience can be cited against it? M. P. N.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON II.—April 12, 1885.—Paul's Shipwreck. Acts 27: 27-44.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble and he bringeth them out of their distresses. Psalms 107: 28.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Doctrines and duties rightly understood never conflict. vs. 27-32. Our lesson is a fine illustration of the harmony between the doctrine of predestination and the duty of human effort. Paul's assurance that they would all be saved, so far from slackening the hands of the crew seems to have infused into them fresh courage and energy. Work out your own salvation is a command perfectly consistent with the truth that God works in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure. No great agencies for good were ever set in motion, no reforms accomplished or wrongs righted without the harmonious blending of these two great forces of divine will and human action. The tempest-tossed crew seem at first in their despair to have abandoned all effort. So the Christian would sink down in hopeless despondency if unsupported by the assurance of final victory. God has decreed the downfall of every form of iniquity, and the thought should nerve us to fiercer onslaught against the hosts of sin. The liquor traffic, with all its wealth and political influence, and the secret empire, with its world-wide power over the souls of men are alike doomed, but the day of their destruction will tarry or hasten according as our faith prompts us to effort, or want of faith keeps us silent and inactive.

2. Thanksgiving does not cease to be a duty even in the midst of danger. vs. 33-36. There may be even more occasion for thanksgiving in circumstances of distress and trial than at other times. Without a great peril there can be no great deliverance. Only when anguish takes hold of us and we sink in deep mire can we feel the uplifting hand. We have also here a lesson of care for the physical health. We have no right to neglect the body even when sorrow and trouble press most heavily on the soul. Asceticism has no place in God's word, but Christian cheerfulness is everywhere enjoined. Such cheerfulness is but reasonable. No cloud so dark but has its bow of promise; no affliction too heavy to be counterbalanced by the "eternal weight of glory;" no furnace of trial so hot but there may walk with us a form like the Son of Man.

3. The sure fulfillment of God's promises. vs. 37-44. "They escaped all safe to land"—through numberless perils, it is true, but saved at last. God's promise of final salvation does not mean exemption, even from spiritual trials and dangers, but rather the opposite. His promise of final salvation does not mean exemption, even from spiritual trials and dangers, but rather the opposite. His promise of victory at last to all who battle in his cause does not mean that they may not at times be sore-pressed by the enemy, even so as to despair of life. Here we must have tribulation. It is a part of our human discipline. This world is a sea full of storms and shipwrecks, but we have an anchor that is sure in Christ's precious promise, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How is the consistency of divine decrees with human effort taught in the lives of Old Testament worthies? Joshua 1: 9; Jud. 4: 14; 6: 14. What is the Christian's duty in regard to thanksgiving? Phil. 4: 6. In regard to cheerfulness? Phil. 4: 4.

EXPLANATORY.

The average rate at which such a ship would drift before a gale of wind is calculated at thirty-six miles in twenty-four hours. Having left Clauda late in the evening, she would by midnight on the fourteenth be less than three miles from the entrance to St. Paul's Bay in Malta, the distance being 480 miles.—Speaker's Com.

"The shipmen [sailors] deemed that they drew near to some country." On the 10th of August, 1810, the British frigate, Lively, fell upon these breakers in a dark night, and was lost. The quartermaster, who first observed them, stated in his evidence at the court-martial, that at the distance of a quarter of a mile the land could not be seen, but that he saw the surf on the shore.—Hackett.

"Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved." There was reason in these words. The sailors understood managing the ship; the soldiers could have done nothing. As Paul had been "given" (ver. 24) their lives, his words are more than an appeal to a "personal intent" (Meyer); he has a right to name conditions, a recognition of which on their part is evinced by the instant action of verse 32.—B. Here we see an object lesson where absolute divine decrees are harmonious with human freedom of will. Philosophically, there may remain difficulties in the way of reconciling the two, but practically they are reconciled, and the practical difficulties are removed. The Bible facts explain the Bible doctrines.—Pel.

"Not a hair fall from the head of any of you." This was a proverb denoting exemption from the slightest harm (1 Kings 1: 52; Matt. 10: 30; Luke 21: 18).—Revis. Com.

"He took bread and gave thanks." No hurry, no fear of ridicule from heathen soldiers and sailors, no imminency of peril was allowed by St. Paul to interfere, in his own practice, with the discharge of an obligation which he enforced in his teaching (1 Tim. 4: 3-5).—Cook. This was a special opportunity for Paul to point these heathen to the true God. They were in a condition to receive the truth from Paul. The true man has many opportunities of presenting his religion. This act was a sermon on Christian gratitude more eloquent than the appeal of the orator, and more convincing than the reasoning of the logician.—Taylor.

"And we were in all," etc. In the reign of Commodus one of the Alexandrian wheat-ships was driven by the stress of the weather into the Piræus, and excited great curiosity on the part of the Athenians. Lucian visited this vessel, and has laid the scene of one of his dialogues on board of her. From the information furnished by him it has been estimated that the keel of this ship was about 100 feet in length, and that she would measure between 1,100 and 1,200 tons. Her dimensions, therefore, although inferior to those of many modern vessels, were "quite equal to those of the largest class of modern merchantmen." Luke's ship was engaged in the same commerce (being, to use Lucian's language, one of the ships transporting grain from Egypt into Italy), and we have no reason to be surprised at her containing such a number of men, 276 (ver. 37).—Hackett.

"Loosed the rudder bands." Ancient ships were steered by two large paddles, one on each quarter. When anchored by the stern in a gale, it would be necessary to lift them out of the water and secure them by lashings or rudder bands, and to loose these when the ship was again got under way.—James Smith.

"The forepart stuck fast." In Admiral Smyth's chart of the bay, the nearest soundings to the mud indicate a a depth of about three fathoms, which is about what a large ship would draw. A ship, therefore, . . . would strike a bottom of mud graduating into tenacious clay, into which the forepart would fix itself and be held fast, while the stern would be exposed to the force of the waves.—James Smith.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

State Agents.

Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Iowa, D. P. Rathbun, Wayne.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

Degree Workers.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun. Wayne, Iowa.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans.
D. A. Richards Clarkville, Mich.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

The Cynosure and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. Phillips,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially by his wife. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. Price, fifteen cents. Ten for a dollar.

The American Party.

First Nomination for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

Platform Adopted at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

Name Adopted at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Cowell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimhall, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile hands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised hy the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed hy their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should he associated with hooks of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

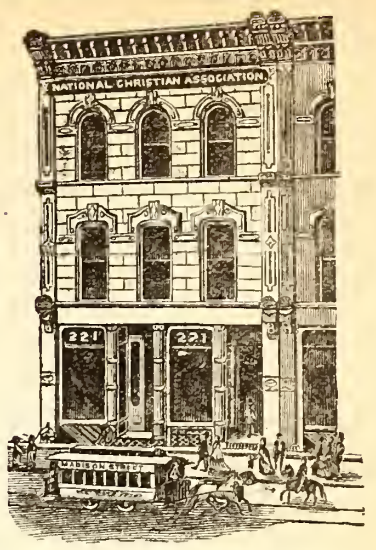
Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.

Eli Tapley, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. Galloway, Okahumka Florida.

Wm. Hazenburg, Cape Town, S. Africa.



A. D. Zaraphonithes, Andros, Greece.

C. B. Ward, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. Please designate to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

President.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

Vice-Pres.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

Rec. Sec.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.

Cor. Sec. and Gen. Agent.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Treasurer.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Directors.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton-W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

Form of Bequest.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

President.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D
Secretaries.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

Alabama.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

California.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

Illinois.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

Indiana.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

Iowa.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

Kansas.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

Massachusetts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

Michigan.—Pres., C. C. Foote, Detroit; Rec. Sec'y, W. H. Ross, Williamstown; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

Minnesota.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

Missouri.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler, Albany.

Nebraska.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. pooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

New Hampshire.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

New York.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

Ohio.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

Pennsylvania.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

Vermont.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

Wisconsin.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

West Virginia.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H. B. Higgins, Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

Editors.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 2, 1885.

THE AMERICAN PARTY.

The growth and final triumph of the American party can only be prevented by the inactivity, weakness, rivalry or mismanagement of its friends, It has the most popular name and the only strictly American platform. The old (native) American party of forty years ago, was not American. Its attempt to exclude foreign born citizens from office, killed it. Our independence was gained, and our government built by citizens of foreign birth and their lineal descendants. And they founded what they intended and named, "A Christian Commonwealth." Declaring men free and equal they, in theory, and at last in practice, ruled out slavery and titled "orders." In 1620, a Dutch slave-trader brought in slaves; and in 1733 a lodge in secret set up the shells and shams of privileged "orders" to dazzle and corrupt us by the toggery and regalia of priests and kings, and confound our ideas of liberty and equality, by secret, sworn and unmitigated subjugation and despotism. It took two hundred and forty-three years to learn that slavery was the certain ultimate death of Republicanism. But after 7,000 voters in 1840 put this lesson into their political platform, it took the country only twenty-three years to learn and reduce it to practice by Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation.

Thirteen years ago (1872) in Shakespeare Hall, Syracuse, the American party received its baptismal name. It has ten years yet to work before it is as old as the anti-slavery party was before slavery fell. But though the lodge is universal while slavery was local, and therefore more easily overturned, the fall of the slave-power has uncovered the hiding place of the lodge in this country and placed it within reach of our guns. When the slave system fell; the devils who had run it took shelter under liquor and lodges; and the liquor question now, as the slave question did, is seeking to shelter and postpone the fall of the lodge.

But if the Americans are wise the postponement will not be had. Two or three years ago, every popular temperance paper bristled with advertisements of the secret temperance lodges. Now in those very papers, the secret lodges are slinking out of sight. They dare not plead to our indictment. They confess judgment by their silence. Two of the leading temperance workers who had both been Good Templars, said lately, to the writer, "If every Good Templar's lodge in the Untied States was dead I would not turn my hand over to bring them back to life." Why then should they live? Why play dog-in-the-manger to keep us from voting for St. John?

But it is not the secret temperance lodges that keep Americans and Prohibitionists apart. It is the hope of welding the Prohibition party with the Green-back and Labor parties; and the labor unions are secret, and the Green-back leaders are Masons. But if once the Americans and Prohibitionists join, every honest, virtuous labor-union man will join them, and again form a "Party of moral ideas," and prevail by it!

Will not every thinking, far-seeing man who reads this; aye, and every woman who reads it, set him or herself to work to bring about "A consummation so devoutly to be wished."

THE UNMIXED EVIL OF WAR.

The Inter Ocean (in a late Sunday edition) replies to the criticism of the Cynosure upon the remarks of that able daily on the effects of great wars in removing business depression, that we allow our ethical notions to lead our financial conclusions. Its excellent facility with dates and figures permits a specious argument that commercial prosperity and business activity always attend great wars, and promote permanently the wealth and power of nations.

Let us see. The great fire of 1871, followed soon after by the Boston fire and the second fire in this city, have always been regarded as potent agencies in the financial crash of 1873 from which we are hardly yet recovered. Yet these fires were the occasion of great business activity. But the immense losses, becoming soon distributed, were felt by the whole nation and strained financial credit beyond endurance. The losses occasioned by a great war utterly eclipse the fire record; and they are absolute losses, which must in time be distributed and borne by individuals. No feverish business energy produced by war can compensate for such immense losses. The whole operation of war is abnormal: the slaughter of human beings, the destruction of property, the decay of morals, the perpetuation of strife and revenge between nations; and if this inhuman and brutal method of settling international disputes is not profitable as a business engagement much less is it to the enlightenment of nations. "War," says Burke, "is a temporary repeal of all the virtues." Much more reasonable is the Inter Ocean's argument for the universal peace and brotherhood of nations which it lately expressed thus in an editorial:

"The world is getting to be something of a unit after all. There is such a thing as the fellowship of nations. Whittier sings of the time when "nations drunk with blood shall come staggering to take the pledge of brotherhood." This vision of the poet may have considerably anticipated the facts of history, but there are many signs which help one to cherish such a hope. The spirit of a most real internationalism is abroad, and is constantly acquiring greater distinctness and momentum. England and Russia cannot go to war with each other without profoundly affecting the interests of the other nations of Europe. And when Emperor William of Germany interposes the full weight of his influence, and of the great power he represents, in order to preserve the peace of Europe, he does only that which he has the clearest right to do, and the world applauds his pacific voice. A certain confederation of the more favored and progressive nations is inevitable. It is just as inevitable as was that of the American colonies before the revolution."

In connection with this topic the unwise criticism of the late administration for entering the Congo Conference may have another word. The Cynosure urged that the time was past for a strict interpretation of the Monroe doctrine; that America in the sisterhood of nations should make her calm and powerful influence for peace and harmony of human interests felt the world over. Such was the effect of our counsel in the Conference. We are glad to note that these views are thus approved by so able a contemporary as the Christian Intelligencer:

"Even the American, of Philadelphia, one of the most thoroughly American journals in the country, suggested only a fortnight ago that the Monroe Doctrine has become a sentiment and is hardly sufficient for the demands of the present. Our relations with the world have become so intimate, our intercourse with other nations so constant, our interests are becoming so involved in the affairs of the world that it is not improbable that we will be shut up before long to a formal acceptance of a World Doctrine. Besides, does not the world need the participation of representatives of the United States in certain conferences and an expression of American opinions and principles? It has also frequently happened that American missionaries, men of the highest character, noble attainments, and of great value to civilization as well as to morals and religion, have, in times of peril, been dependent for protection upon the officers, consuls, etc., of the British government; American officials pleading the policy of non-interference in justification of their inaction. President Arthur and Mr Frelinghuysen are conservative men and well-informed in regard to our foreign relations. They have in a measure abandoned the Monroe Doctrine, have acted upon a modification of it."

The Yale College Societies.—It is some two years since the Nation, of New York, opened its columns to a free discussion of the College secret society question, and especially the Yale Senior societies. The argument was carried on by students and graduates and though warm, had little of general interest, and its results were not very manifest. The Cynosure noticed the discussion, but there was little to our purpose developed during its course. However, the principles of open and honorable dealing and the anti-secrecy sentiment have been gaining ground, and at a late meeting of the Yale Senior class, the following resolution was debated at length, and though defeated it was by a very close vote:

Wheeras, The present senior-society system creates a social aristocracy, exercises an undue influence in college politics, fosters a truckling and cowering disposition among the lower classes, creates dissensions and enmities in every class, alienates the affections of the graduates from the college, stifles the full expression of College-sentiment by its control of the College-press: Resolved, That we believe the system detrimental to the best interests of Yale, and injurious to ourselves, etc.

So severe an arraignment of a long-standing and wealthy system marks the rising of a tide that will some day overwhelm the whole realm of lodgery.

Some years ago William M. Evarts, just elected to the U. S. Senate from New York, urged at a Yale Alumni dinner that these needless and injurious attachments to student life be abolished. His words of wisdom will yet have their harvest.

—Secretary Stoddard returned from the East last Wednesday in good health, and the gainer of some useful experience during his long absence.

—D. D. Miller near Durham, Iowa, extends a cordial invitation to any of the lecture force who may pass that way to make their home with him.

—The condition of Pres. J. Blanchard was much improved on Monday morning. During last week his physicians regarded his state as extremely critical, and recovery doubtful, but a good constitution and temperate habits are assisting with God's help to change the doubt to a good hope of recovery.

—A private letter from Bro. H. H. Hinman says that he left Washington on the 20th ult. for Connecticut, and finds a very favorable outlook at Willimantic. On the first Sabbath Mission Hall, where he spoke, was too small for the afternoon audience, and a larger room, Franklin Hall, has been engaged. His youngest son, Herbert, is with him. Mrs. Hinman and the eldest son remain in Washington, the latter being employed in the American office.

—We learn privately, not having seen it in print, that Elder Rathbun has been definitely engaged at Syracuse as "connectional evangelist" for the Wesleyan churches. The Iowa executive committee ought to take action immediately about a new man in their field. So important a work as theirs ought not to be untouched this year.

—The Associate Presbyterian in an excellent note on the Washington Monument protest, seconds strongly the suggestion that the protest be made permanent in a Congressional action prohibiting lodge ceremonies about national buildings or monuments.

—Bro. J. M. Femster, who has been connected with the Cynosure office much of the time since its purchase by the N. C. A. as compositor, died at the house of Prof. O. F. Lumry, at Wheaton, on Saturday morning. His disease was consumption, from which he had been suffering for ten or twelve years. He came North some three years ago hoping to take a full course at Wheaton, and continued his studies until last June. He was as faithful as Abdiel, an honest, earnest, humble child of God, of whom the world need more examples.

—Mrs. L. A. Parry, wife of Rev. A. W. Parry, pastor of the Free Methodist church in Sycamore, Ill., died suddenly on the 17th of March. Mrs. Parry was a student at Wheaton for several years, and many of the old students will remember her as Luella Harnden. Bro. Parry bears a faithful testimony for Christ in Sycamore, and his church was open to welcome bretheren Stoddard and Lloyd during the past winter. He has our sincere sympathy in this heavy loss.

—Bro. James Ferguson of Clarence, Iowa, requests that his name be removed at present from the list of degree-workers, as he is so situated that he cannot until further notice respond to calls for work against the lodge of this kind. When his present circumstances change, as we hope they may soon, he will gladly renew his more active relations to the reform. It must not be understood that Bro. Ferguson abates one jot of his hostility to the lodge. He does not, but only postpones degree work for the present.

—Prof. L. Davis and Halleck Floyd, in the last Telescope, ably confute the sophistry of Bishop Weaver in his plea for the lodge to control the United Brethren church. Dr. Wright, in the Richmond Star, also deals faithfully with the matter, and in an article on the Union Biblical Seminary debt shows how the lodge element has allowed the institution to lose credit, and there is no conceivable reason except for the integrity and loyalty of the faculty to God.

—In a commendatory notice of Judge Smith, anti-ring candidate for mayor of Chicago last week, we did not mention that a meeting of out-and-out Prohibitionists also nominated a city ticket. Carter Harrison has also been nominated by a Democratic convention, so-called. The Prohibitionist candidate for treasurer, Dea. W. W. Waite, is an excellent man, the son of old father Waite of blessed memory, and by all means the superior of the other nominees. The real question at issue is whether the saloons and gambling dens and lodges, which are the props of Harrison's administration, shall continue to rule Chicago, or there shall be one respecting and upholding the laws. It is unfortunate that any "party" issue has been allowed to becloud the real one. The Lever does itself an injustice by assuming indifference between the candidates, Smith and Harrison.

—Bro. E. I. Grinnel, of Iowa, replies at some length in the Wesleyan to Rev. H. A. Day, of Michigan, who criticises the present position of the Wesleyan church in the columns of his church paper as well as in the Cynosure. Bro. Day may have overstated the case to the understanding of the general reader, but no one questions his sincerity, and from his experience as lecturer for a year or two in Michigan, he is doubtless able to give some facts that show a decay of interest in reform on the part of some churches which he has visited. But as for the Wesleyan churches throughout the country he would not probably say that they were lowering the standard of reform.

THE REQUEST TO JOSEPH COOK.

In speaking of secret societies Joseph Cook once said to the writer, "It is my business to discuss the great questions that are up for consideration before the American people. Push your question to the front and I will give it attention, or words to that effect. Thinking that by reason of the silence of the press, and the pre-occupancy of his mind with other leading topics, this eminent thinker and champion of free speech was not aware of the extent of interest and the general desire to hear from him on this subject, a simple form of request was prepared and sent to several hundred ministers and Christian business men asking those who desired Mr. Cook to give his views of Freemasonry and kindred secret orders to sign their names and return the requests to Rev. David McFall, East Cambridge, Mass. The response has been even more general and hearty than was anticipated, including professors of theological seminaries, college faculties, and a number of clergymen ranking high in the departments of religious and scientific attainments.

The objects in circulating this request was; 1st, to learn the wishes of ministers and Christian men, and if the response proved favorable, to furnish proof that this question is now under prayerful consideration by an influential portion of our Christian people; and 2nd, In the event of Mr. Cook's acceding to the request, that his great personal influence and power might be augmented by the influence of those at whose request he speaks.

Mr. McFall presented the matter to Mr. Cook, accompanied with a list of signers which was only partial, and received a very encouraging reply. Topics for his present course, which closes soon, have been selected, but if friends are diligent in obtaining signatures they may expect the discussion of the lodge to appear in the programme of a later course. It is deserving of systematic effort and I will present a plan soon by which if properly urged thousands of names can be secured.

J. P. Stoddard, Sec'y N. C. A.

Reform News.

MINNESOTA.

The Minnesota Christian Association has employed Rev. J. P. Richards, of St. Croix Co., Wisconsin, to engage in the lecture work throughout the State. It is now most one year since I undertook to raise by subscription, means for the support of a lecturer in this State. I have received up to the present time subscriptions amounting to upwards of thirty dollars per month, ranging from ten cents to five dollars per month. By far the larger portion of the readers of the Cynosure in this State have not as yet responded to our call for help. O friends, will you not come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty? The subscriptions should be at once run up to at least fifty dollars per month. That amount subscribed, with what he will receive on the field, will insure him a fair salary and expenses. Shall he have it?

Mr. Richards, I suppose is already engaged in the work. He wrote me he would be ready to commence about the 20th inst, and he will continue at it one year if he is supported. Please inform me by mail at once of the amount per month for one year that you will pay for his support, get others to subscribe with you if possible. Forward, when due, your monthly payments to the treasurer, W. H. Morrill, St. Charles, or hand to Mr. Richards when in your vicinity. Notice will be given how to reach him when you want him in your locality.

Now let us all take hold and press this reform upon the attention of the public. It will surely win if we do.

"For right is right since God is God,
And right the day must win."

R. J. Williams.

Winnebago City, Minn., March 27, 1885.

MICHIGAN STATE MEETING.

The second annual meeting of the Michigan State Christian Association opposed to secret societies (incorporated) will be held, D. V., at the Wesleyan Methodist church in the village of Brighton, Livingstone Co., commencing Tuesday evening, April 21st, 1885, and continuing Wednesday and Thursday. Every member who has taken stock in the Association should certainly be present if possible.

The old association will also meet at the same time and place and we hope for a large attendance.

Now, brethren, if the effort to enlighten the people on this question is allowed to fail, where will the responsibility rest? Will it not be with those who have seen their brethren struggling under heavy burdens and have refused to lift them with one of their fingers?

We make our appeal in the name of the Lord Jesus, whose banner of reform is allowed to trail in the dust for want of the sympathy and co-operation of those who profess to serve his name.

Those intending to be present should send a card to Rev. D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich., who will provide them with free entertainment. Let there be a general rally in the name of Christ.

Will all papers friendly, please copy.

W. H. Ross, President.
C. L. Preston, Secretary.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

TRAIN INCIDENTS.

Seated beside a gentleman on the train from New York to Chicago, we were conversing familiarly when I asked if he was a Christian. His reply was, "Freemasonry is my religion and no man can be a good Mason unless he is a Christian." He produced the proof of his lodge standing as a Knight Templar, and I became a student of the "mystic brother." In some way he inferred that I was a bond slave and cautioned me against the too free use of sacred words in public, and it was with great difficulty that I succeeded in convincing him that I was not a subject of the "secret empire" like himself. In process of time the teacher became the learner and subsequently brought several of his fellow bondmen to receive light in the higher degrees. I incidentally learned that the business of this Masonic Christian is raising, importing and training horses for the race track. He seemed to know the pedigree and speed of the fast horses in this country and in Europe, and to be conversant with the rules and laws of the course and club; but when I began to question him on the teachings of God's book he referred me to H. W. Beecher and asked me what I thought of Bob Ingersoll, and said his father, grand-father and great-grand-father were all preachers; but for himself he had never given much attention to the subject. Like multitudes of others he had sworn to defend the Christian religion with his sword in the degree of Knights of the Red Cross, and had taken the oath and communion of devils, out of a human skull in K. T. degree and therefore he was a Christian! A few ministers are sanctioning this religion by their presence, and multitudes are partakers of their sins by witholding their testimony against a system that they know to be anti-Christ and a delusion and a snare to many souls. I am glad, however, that there is much greater freedom of speech on this subject than there once was, and I am hoping and praying that the lips of many now sealed in silence by fear of lodge persecution may soon be open and free to speak the truth.

WORK IN WESTERN NEW YORK.

Returning from New England, I spent a few days, spoke several times, and met a number of old friends in western New York. Some expressed their interest by contributing of their means, and on the whole I felt that a good work for the cause was accomplished. The work done by Bros. Starry, Mallory and my son Williston has been reported only in part, and I will give a brief synopsis as received from the State Agent.

Following the State Convention at Fredonia, Jan. 20th and 21st, the public working of the Master's degree created quite a stir in the Masonic camp. This meeting was followed by the first and third degrees at Villenovia, Pine Valley, Forrestville, Cattaraugus, Ellington, Jamestown, Tonawanda, Albion and Lockport; the first degree at Wilson, the third at Medina, in Arcade and in president F. W. Capwell's parlors at Dale, making in all twenty-two meetings, at which one or the other of the Blue Lodge degrees was worked besides a few others addressed by the State Agent and lecturer. Other meetings had been planned but brother Starry was called home by the illness of his wife and so work on that line was suspended for the time being.

The friends whom I met gave an excellent account of the "boys" and commended brother Starry's work as that of a master. Should he return to that field he would receive a hearty welcome and the cordial co-operation of many friends. I hope friends who were in attendance at these meetings will give some account of them for the "good of the order" and the encouragement of others who take a deep interest. The extreme cold weather and scarcity of funds were hindrances which were overcome only by the most strenuous and persistent efforts. The return of springtime is melting away the impediments of snow and frost, and now if friends who have received circulars with blank form of pledges will respond promptly to their Treasurer, D. Peter Miller, at Wright's Corners, Niagara County, so that there is powder sufficient in this safe magazine to "keep the ball rolling," the work will go grandly on. "Many a little makes a mickle." Who will express "faith by works?"

J. P. Stoddard.

A SWEDISH M. E. CHURCH OPEN.

Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard lectured on secret societies Wednesday night of last week, in the new Swedish M. E. church, at Oak and Market streets, Chicago. Both the body of the church and the galleries were well filled, and the audience showed good appreciation by close attention to the lecture, which was more than an hour in length. The speaker first showed the appropriateness of discussing such a subject in a church. It was one in which the church was vitally interested. With half a million Freemasons in this country, as was claimed, it was either a great wrong or a great good, and the church ought to know which. It was the duty of every Christian to find out which. This could easily be done, for Masonry was not such a hidden thing but that it was possible to find out a great deal about it. First, by use of the eyes and common sense one could see what Masonry was doing and judge whether it was good or bad. Second, by reading the Masonic books. These contained a great deal about the order. Third, by what the Masons themselves were willing to tell. Some of them would tell the truth about it. And fourth, by what seceding Masons had told about it. From these four sources of information the speaker argued that it was possible to know all that was necessary to know about Masonry. Its ritual was no longer a secret, and there was no good in the order that could not be better accomplished in the open day. Its real secrets were in midnight plottings for the control of elections, the protection of criminals, and other wicked deeds. He showed that the evils of Masonry and intemperance were closely allied and were more to be dreaded than a scourge of cholera. The lecture was replete with anecdote and forcible argument, bringing the points clearly to the comprehension of all. It was impossible not to follow the speaker and appreciate in some measure, as he does, the gigantic wrong of Masonry and other secret societies, which were also alluded to.

At the close the pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Eklund, said that he had never belonged to any such society, and there was no likelihood that he would. He could say amen to every part of the lecture. He spoke to his people both in English and Swedish.

The choir closed the exercises with a beautiful anthem. All their music was in English. The audience unanimously extended an invitation to Pres. Blanchard to come again and lecture for them on the last Wednesday evening in April. He said he would be pleased to do so if possible.

THANKS.

Editor Cynosure:—Please announce through your columns our many sincere thanks to the contributor of the library we asked to be donated to our library in March 12th of the Cynosure. The books are here safe and in good order. We can hardly express our gratitude for this great favor to us. Yours truly, Mrs. C. M. Snodgrass,

Freedmen's Academy,
Dunlap, Kans., Mar. 25th, 1885.

—The Russian Government has retracted its intolerant policy towards the Tract Society. The tracts that were seized by the authorities have been restored to the Society, and they are again authorized to circulate their publications.

—The Moravian Missionary Society has recently celebrated its 152nd anniversary and encouraging reports were received from its 100 missions and the 332 missionaries connected with them.

THE HOME.

THOUGHTS OF HEAVEN.

No sickness there—
No weary wasting of the frame away;
No fearful shrinking from the midnight air—
No dread of summer's bright and fervid ray!

No hidden grief—
No wild and cheerless vision of despair;
No vain petition for a swift relief—
No tearful eyes, no broken hearts are there.

Care has no home
Within the realm of ceasless prayer and song;
Its billows break away and melt in foam,
Far from the the mansions of the spirit throng.

The storm's black wing
Is never spread athwart celestial skies!
Its wailings blend not with the voice of spring
As some too tender flowret fades and dies!

No night distils
Its chilling dews upon the tender frame;
No moon is needed there! The light, which fills
That land of glory from its maker came!

No parted friends
O'er mournful recollections have to weep!
No bed of death enduring love attends,
To watch the coming of a pulseless sleep!

No blasted flower,
Or withered bud celestial gardens know!
No scorching blast, or fierce descending shower,
Scatters destruction like a ruthless foe!

No battle word
Startles the sacred host with fear and dread!
The song of peace creation's morning heard,
Is sung wherever angel minstrels tread.

Let us depart,
If home like this awaits the weary soul!
Look up, thou stricken one! Thy wounded heart
Shall bleed no more, at sorrow's stern control.

With faith our guide,
White robed and innocent to lead the way,
Why should we fear to plunge in Jordan's tide,
And find the ocean of eternal day! —Selected.

"IN A MYSTERIOUS WAY."

"No," said the lawyer, "I shan't press your claim against that man; you can get some one else to take the case or you can withdraw it, just as you please.'

"Think there isn't any money in it?"

"There would probably be some money in it, but it would, as you know, come from the sale of the little house the man occupies and calls 'home;' but I don't want to meddle with the matter, anyhow."

"Got frightened out of it, eh?"

"No, I wasn't frightened out of it."

"I suppose likely the old fellow begged hard to be let off?"

"Well—yes, he did."

"And you caved, likely?"

"No, I didn't speak a word to him?"

"Oh, he did all the talking, did he?"

"Yes."

"And you never said a word?"

"Not a word."

"What did you do?"

"I believe I shed a few tears"

"And the old fellow begged you hard, you say?"

"No, I didn't say so; he didn't speak a word to me."

"Well, may I respectfully inquire whom he did address in your hearing?"

"God Almighty."

"Ah! he took to praying, did he?"

"Not for my benefit, in the least. You see,"—the lawyer crossed his right foot over his left knee, and began stroking his left leg up and down, as if to help state his case concisely—"you see, I found the house easily enough, and knocked on the outer door which stood ajar; but nobody heard me, so I stepped into the little hall, and saw through the crack of another door, just as cozy a sitting-room as there ever was. There, on a bed, with a silver head way up on the pillows, was an old lady who looked for all the world just as my mother did the last time I ever saw her on earth. Well, I was right on the point of knocking, when she said, as clearly as could be, 'Come, father, now begin; I'm all ready'—and down on his knees by her side went an old, white-haired man, still older than his wife, I should judge; and I couldn't have knocked then for the life of me. Well, he began; first, he reminded God that they were still his submissive children, mother and he, and no matter what he saw fit to bring upon them, they shouldn't rebel at his will; of course it was going to be terribly hard for them to go out homeless in their old age, specially with poor mother sick and helpless, but still they'd seen sadder things than even that would be. He reminded God, in the next place, how different it all might have been if only one of their boys had been spared them; then his voice kind of broke, and a thin, white hand stole from under the coverlet and moved softly over his snowy hair; then he went on to repeat that nothing could be so sharp again as the parting with those three sons—unless mother and he should be separated. But at last he fell to comforting himself with the fact that the Lord knew it was through no fault of his own that mother and he were threatened with the loss of their dear little home, which meant beggary and the almshouse—a place they prayed to be delivered from entering, if it could be consistent with God's will; and then he fell to quoting a multitude of promises concerning the safety of those who put their trust in the Lord; yes, I should say he begged hard; in fact, it was the most thrilling plea to which I ever listened; at last he prayed for God's blessing on those who were about to demand justice ——"

The lawyer stroked the lower limb in silence for a moment or two, then continued, more slowly than ever:

"And—I—believe—I'd rather go to the poorhouse myself, to-night, than to stain my heart and hands with the blood of such a prosecution as that."

"Little afraid to defeat the old man's prayer, eh?" queried the client.

"Bless your soul, man, you couldn't defeat it!" roared the lawyer. "It doesn't admit of defeat! I tell you he left it all subject to God; but he left no doubt as to his wishes in the matter; claimed that we were told to make known our desires unto God; but of all the pleading I ever heard, that beat all. You see, I was taught that kind of thing myself in my childhood, and why I was sent to hear that prayer I'm sure I don't know; but I hand the case over."

"I wish," said the client, twisting uneasily, "you hadn't told me about the fellow's prayer."

"Why so?"

"Well, because; I want the money the place would bring, but I was taught the Bible all straight enough when I was a youngster; and I'd hate to run counter to such a harangue as that you tell about. I wish you hadn't heard a word of it; and another time I wouldn't listen to petitions not intended for your ears."

The lawyer smiled.

"My dear fellow," he said, "you're wrong again; it was intended for my ears, and yours, too, and God Almighty intended it. My old mother used to sing about God's moving in a mysterious way, I remember."

"Well, my mother used to sing it, too," said the claimant, as he twisted his claim-papers in his fingers. "You can call in the morning if you like, and tell 'mother and him' the claim has been met."

"In a mysterious way," added the lawyer smiling. Christian Union.

HOW THEY DO THINGS IN WALES.

The elder brother of Rev. Dr. Roberts, of Princeton, N. J., who has just returned from a visit to Wales, tells a couple of stories about how they do some things in that country, which are interesting in themselves, and afford an example for the whole world, worthy of imitation. The facts related are characteristic of the population generally, of every district. It is highly probable, that in no other spot on earth are like scenes enacted.

The facts relate to some religious habits of the people. Mr. Roberts was visiting at a farm house. After dinner, he says, the family and farm-hands, withdrawing from the table, took seats around the room and, with Bible in hand, each one read in turn. The reading ended, prayer followed. In this particular instance, there were about a dozen men; and two of these prayed. This is not an isolated case. The like abound. We can readily see the benefit which must result, in various ways from this habit, as in religious instruction and impression, rest, kindly feeling promoted, and better work afterwards done.

The other fact shows the hold which religion has upon the public; growing, doubtless, out of the above private habit, in each family. Mr. Roberts was in Bangor, at the time of a great and general annual denominational gathering. An immense wooden structure had been provided, by the citizens of Bangor, to accommodate the people that should assemble. On the day Mr. Roberts was present, there were six sermons preached, and, as he estimates, full twenty thousand people were gathered to hear them. One of these discourses was by one of the famous Welsh preachers of the day, a pastor in Liverpool, a man of great learning but of popular sympathies and adaptation. In speaking of the joy in heaven over penitents, he represented God and the sinner drinking out of the same cup. And carrying the people forward, in increasing climaxes, they burst forth, at the close, in great and protracted shouts of rejoicing and praise. This emotional effect was further developed and prolonged, by the preachers on the platform commencing to sing one of their popular Messianic hymns, in which soon the whole congregation joined, and which ceased not, until one of the stanzas had been repeated thirty times.

There's for you. No denomination in these United States, to-day, can show the shadow of such scenes, public or private. The two go together. They are telling upon the national, social, Christian, individual life of Welshmen, and open to us a field of study worthy of closest attention. Whence these public gatherings in Wales of such magnitude and interest? Because of their habit of family religion. Like Abraham, the men of Wales "command their households after them."—Princeton Press.

THE COMING ONE.

Christ was foreseen and foretold as the Coming One for whom all waited in expectation. "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?" was the question that arose in many a heart.

On his coming much depended. Without it there was no sacrifice for sin; no salvation for sinners. He came and brought salvation, but his work is not yet completed. He has said: "I will come again," and to that coming Christians look as the time when he shall crown and consummate his work.

If Christ had not come in lowliness, there would have been no corner-stone laid in Zion. We should have been building our hopes upon the sand. But if he does not come again, there will be no head-stone brought forth to crown the mighty temple, with shoutings of "grace, grace unto it," The saints before his incarnation looked, and longed, and waited for his coming. The church on earth still waits, till he who once was here to bear the cross, shall come again to wear the crown—the crown of glory that fadeth not away. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."—The Christian.

FASHION.

Fashion not only tortures her votaries, but also commands them to make themselves ridiculous and hideous. One is surprised to see the pains people take, not only to ruin their health but also to make themselves positively ugly.

A girl will go about all the day with her hair tied, twisted and puckered, and pinned upon her forehead, looking like a perfect fright, for the sake of having the privilege at night of combing her tresses in kinky waves, or brushing them down in her eyes in the shape of contemptible frizzes; thus appearing like a guy all the morning, for the sake of looking like a chimpanzee at night; and losing the respect of those who know her best, for the sake of attracting the attention of those who never saw her before, and may never wish to see her again.

"I desire therefore that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array, but, which becometh women professing godliness, with good works. 1 Tim. 2: 10.—Safeguard.

BIBLE READINGS FOR THE YOUNG.

THE GREAT SHEPHERD. Read John 10.

He shall feed his flock like a shepherd; he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom. Isa. 40: 11.

1. What are the duties of a shepherd? Ezek. 34: 12, 14–16; 1 Sam. 17; 34, 35.
2. Who is the shepherd of Israel? John 10: 11, 14; Heb. 13: 20.
3. Who are the sheep of his pasture? John 10: 27.
4. What has the Great Shepherd done for his sheep? John 10: 15, 28; Isa. 53: 5, 6.
5. How does the Great Shepherd show his love for the lambs of his flock? Mark 10: 13–16: John 21: 15.

—Notes for Bible Study.

APRIL FOOL.

A STORY FOR BOYS.

It is strange, that there should be one day in the year in which disregard for truth is not considered wrong. There are many boys and girls who fib all day long on the first day of April, yet who would resent your telling them that they were not truthful. A harmless joke is pleasant; and if you can get up some amusement upon April Fool's day which does not involve the telling of a lie, there can be no objection to doing so. Some children seem to think that they can torment the whole house, or even the whole neighborhood, if they only say "April Fool!"

I have known boys, however, who while they were very willing to April-fool other people, were not so amiable when it came their turn to bear the joke.

There was a little fellow,—Barty King they used to call him, his name was Bartholemew King,—who determined one April morning to make the most of the privilege accorded by the day, and have all the fun he could get out of it.

All the morning he tormented the Swedish girl who tended the door, by ringing the bell; and when she opened the street door, he would exclaim, "April Fool," and run off. Finally she would not answer the bell any more, being angry; and when a gentleman called to see Barty's father on business, no one opened the door although he had pulled the bell until he was tired. Fortunately, as he was about to leave, Mr. King found out the true state of affairs and opened the door himself. Then there were three vexed people in the house,—the Swedish girl, the gentleman who called on business, and Barty's own father.

Next, Barty sent Bridget, the cook, up-stairs twice on supposititious errands to his mother. As breakfast was already late, and Bridget was obliged to leave an omelet which was burned on her return, both Bridget and Barty's mother were vexed; so that made five vexed people even before breakfast time.

He tormented his two sisters who were studying their lessons, by telling them that Jenny Cross from the next door was waiting in the parlor to go to school with them; and when they came down stairs only to see Barty spring up from behind the sofa and call out "April Fool," there were seven vexed people in the house.

Little Tommy, aged four, not understanding jokes whether on April 1st or any other day, roared at the top of his lungs when Barty tried similar pranks on him; and, as this made the nurse angry and woke up the baby, aged two, who joined her infantile protest to the general noise by beginning to cry, we can add three more to the number of the vexed. When ten people in one house are tormented by one person, it is time that the one should be driven out,—and so he was.

Barty, having not yet exhausted the pleasure of the day, went out to the stable. There was a fresh subject to be tormented. Pat Maguire, a poor half-witted laborer, was at work gathering up wood. He was club-footed, dreadfully marked with small-pox, and somewhat cross-eyed; but he was an honest, industrious fellow, and Mr. King often hired him to do little jobs about the door-yard, such as his weakened intellect would permit of his doing. "Hello Pat," began Barty, "You ought to be a waiter in some gentleman's house. Do you know that Mr. Summerfield's waiter is going? and I'm sure he has been getting fifty dollars a month. What's the use of your working for fifty cents a day?" Mr. Summerfield was a very wealthy gentleman who had built a very elegant house in the town. The garden was terraced, down to the edge of the river. There were fountains, summer-houses, green-houses, and everything that betokened wealth, both without and within this costly mansion; and, as the owner entertained a great deal of company, he hired a great many servants.

"O aye, Zur," exclaimed Pat, as the thought gradually made its way through his dimmed intellect, "I dun noa, as I'd suit, Zur."

"You would, Pat; you've only to apply. He'd like just such as you for his head-waiter!"

"It's a foine place, that;" and Pat raised his greasy cap and scratched his head, thinking,—at least as near as his wits could approach that mental process—what a "foine" place it must be. The breakfast bell rang and Barty speedily answered the summons, soon forgetting poor Pat, at the elegent table of Mr. Summerfield waited upon by the limping creature in the barnyard,—a picture which had wonderfully amused his fancy. Pat had one failing—a not uncommon one we must admit,—of overrating his ability. He was not conscious of the fact that he was below the average standard of ordinary minds. In short, he was not wise enough to know that he was not wise at all. The thought that he had only to apply for that lucrative position in order to obtain it, struggled through his mind all the morning; and he finally determined to ask Mr. King for a recommendation, remembering having seen this done by others on similar occasions. Mr. King, being asked by poor Pat for a "recommend," thought it was for the place of stable-boy perhaps, or some such position, and being very busy told him to come in the morning.

When Barty came in late that afternoon, his sister informed him there was a letter on the hall table, which father said he was to take to Mr. Jacobson who lived a mile away, and that he was to wait for an answer. Barty would rather have played, but father's commands must be obeyed, so he reluctantly took up the letter. On the opposite table he also saw a letter directed to Mr. Summerfield. He had always been anxious to see the inside of that beautiful house. Here was an opportunity to do so. He took both letters, and having received the answer from Mr. Jacobson, hurried to the river side of the town to deliver the other letter to Mr. Summerfield. It was late when he entered the beautiful grounds, and he was ushered into the library by a tall and, as Barty thought, elegant gentleman in evening dress.

Mr. Summerfield was writing. His pen went rapidly—scratch, scratch, scratch—across the paper. Barty stood at the door, for, after reading the letter which the waiter handed in, Mr. Summerfield bid him wait there. At last, the writing finished, he turned to Barty, who meantime was feeling quite awed by the beauty of the apartment in which he stood. There were books in beautiful carved cases, pictures, statuary, vases, a fire-place in which a "gas log,' threw reflected light upon the tiles and brasses; and a chandelier, the globes shaded so as to throw a softened light over the room. The table at which Mr. Summerfield was writing had upon it a lamp, also so shaded as to throw light down on the writing utensils. Barty, therefore, could not see the surprised expression of the gentleman's face, when he raised his head to look at the boy, cap in hand, at the door. Mr. Summerfield opened the letter and read it again. It was to the effect that the bearer, although of weak intellect, was honest and industrious. He would like to get a place suited to his capacity, and that he (Mr. King) might recommend him as stable-boy, or for some inferior position under a gardener, etc. "Are you 'the bearer' of this note?" asked Mr. Summerfield.

"Yes, sir," replied Barty.

"What can you do?" Barty looked surprised at such a question, and not knowing what to say, his manner somewhat justified the allusion as to the weak intellect of "the bearer."

"How long have you lived in your present place?" inquired Mr. Summerfield. As the family had lived just two years in their present house, Barty thought reference was made to that, and he answered accordingly.

"It seems to me you might be something more than a stable boy!" said Mr. Summerfield, looking closely at Barty from under his very bushy eyebrows. As Barty had in view studying law in his father's office, and had complacently looked forward to seeing himself in the far future appointed a judge in that district, he was so puzzled that he could only look in wonder at his questioner.

"What sort of a stable-boy do you think you would make?" persisted Mr. Summerfield.

"I wouldn't be a stable-boy!" indignantly returned Barty.

"Well, you might be under my gardener,—he needs an assistant. If you are 'honest and industrious,' (Mr. Summerfield looked at Pat's "recommend") I would in time promote you." Barty had heard a great deal of Mr. Summerfield's wealth, executive ability, and business talent; but the wondering boy thought he must be crazy!

"To be candid, I rather like your appearance. As to your 'weakened intellect' (looking once more at the note which Barty had given him), I will make allowance for that. Probably you have never been taught. You may come to-morrow morning. My coachman, Mike, will set you to work, and—" A waiter here interrupted, to say that the gentlemen who had been invited to dinner had arrived; and, not even seeming to notice that the boy stood in speechless astonishment looking indignantly at him, Mr. Summerfield passed out without a word, and went forward to welcome his invited guests. A servant, seeing Barty there, opened the door for him as a hint to go away. When he reached home in an angry mood, he found Pat waiting at the door for his "recommend," and all the family looking for it and wondering what had become of it. The truth flashed upon him. He had himself been caught in the trap he had laid for Pat. He had April-fooled himself!

Somehow it leaked out, although Barty did not mean it should; and the school-boys thought it the best April-fool joke of the season. They teazed him continually about being a hired stable-boy.

Boys, the moral of my story is: Never tell a lie, even for a joke; and never in your play hurt the feelings of others. When Barty suggested to poor Pat that he should apply for the situation of waiter, he had forgotten the Golden Rule. When he made a fool of himself, he reaped the mortification he had intended for poor Pat.—Christian Intelligencer.

TEMPERANCE.

GOD'S CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS.

Hearts that have fed upon husks must have substitutes when asked to leave them. God believes in substitutes. He has prescribed a substitute for strong drink. The failure of many temperance efforts may be traced to the ignoring of substitutes for abnormal appetites and sinful lusts. Here it is, "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit." Eph. 5: 13. This will displace the desire for that.

The reason some children stand for half hours in front of baker's windows, wistfully gazing at the bread and cakes, is because they do not get enough at home. The reason some Christians go hankering after semi-sinful amusements, cider, and other midway indulgences, is because they have not got enough of the Holy Ghost to satisfy them. They are living out in the kitchen on the scraps. God says, "Come in." There is a Christmas dinner spread on his table all through the year, and your chair is empty. "Be filled with the Spirit!"—J. H. Smith, in the Christian Standard.

Avoid a drunken man; he may get you into a quarrel. Avoid the same man when he is sober; he may get you drunk.—N. O. Picayune.

No liquor has been sold for the last six years in one of the wealthiest and most prosperous counties of Texas, and consequently the jail is empty.

The Birmingham Coffee-house Company, England, which has twenty-one houses open, has paid during the last year a dividend of ten per cent and a bonus of 6d. per share.

No one but a total abstainer is allowed, under the laws of Michigan, to be employed as engineer, train-despatcher, fireman, brakeman, or other railroad servant. Any railroad violating this law is liable to a fine of $500 for each offence.

Superintendent A. N. Towne, of the Central Pacific railroad, has issued an order announcing that "hereafter, train-men who are in the habit of visiting places where intoxicating liquors are sold will not be retained in the service of the company."

At Mitchell, D. T., a temperance meeting is held once a month in each of the churches; other congregations are not asked to discontinue services on that evening. After each congregation is thus visited in alphabetical order, a mass-meeting is held in the court house, all congregations joining together at this time. Printed slips of temperance songs are distributed, and in every way the occasion is made as interesting as possible.

Prof. A. B. Palmer, in Wide Awake, discussing the action of alcohol upon the lungs, declares there are no statistics—no recorded observations and comparison of numbers of cases—which afford the slightest indication that the use of alcohol in any form or quantity prevents consumption. It grows more and more difficult to find really unassailable excuses for liquor-drinking. The consumption cure theory has had a long service, and now that it has been annihilated it will be hard for the topers to devise one as useful.—Current.

Indians do not often act as temperance missionaries among the pale faces, but the Independence, (Cal.) Independent relates this as something overheard there recently: Said an Indian to a white man: "You go to party at Independence?" "No," said the white man, "I am broke and can't go." "What for you talk so?" said the Indian, "you work all time, earn money; what for you no keep him? Some time I broke, too; buy whisky, drink him up, money all gone. Now, no drink long time, work, plenty money, no broke; you do all same, no broke, too."

James Hale, in "Homes for the Working-Classes," writes of Saltaire, a manufacturing town in Yorkshire, England: "Not a public-house or beer-shop is there, and what are the results? Briefly, these. There are scarcely ever any arrears in rent. Infant mortality is very low as compared with that of Bradford, from which place the majority of hands have come. Illegitimate births are rare. The tone and self-respect of the work people are much greater than that of factory hands generally."

Mrs. P. D. Brown, President of the Northern California W. C. T. U., stated in an address lately that in Sonoma county scholars were permitted by their parents to take wine to school with their lunches, and that in afternoons such scholars were too stupid to study or learn. The teacher got disgusted with an evil he was powerless to correct, and gave up his situation. The lady mentioned another instance near San Francisco where beer was used.

LITERATURE.

In the April number of The Century Admiral David D. Porter contributes to the War Series a striking paper ou "The Opening of the Lower Mississippi." While Admiral Farragut led the men of-war past the New Orleans forts, Porter paved the way for and supported the attack with the Mortar-Fleet. At the beginning of his paper Admiral Porter speaks of the New Orleans Campaign as "the most important event of the War of the Rebellion, with the exception of the fall of Richmond." He writes from a knowledge of the secret history of the campaign, and has made graphic descriptions of the many stiring incidents which befel the fleet in its memorable battle with Forts Jackson and St. Philip. George W. Cable, in a brief article, gives a spirited description, from personal observation, of "New Orleans before the Capture." These articles are illustrated with numerous portraits and more than twenty-five maps, plans and pictures of striking incidents in this memorable expedition. This number also contains a reply to George W. Cable's recently published and much discussed article on "The Freedman's Case in Equity." It is entitled "In Plain Black and White," and is written by Mr. Henry W. Grady, one of the editors of the Atlanta Constitution. Mr. Grady claims that Mr. Cable does not truly represent the South; that there is a general protest against his statement of the case, and universal protest against his suggestions for the future; "that the South will never adopt Mr. Cable's suggestion of the social intermingling of the races. It can never be driven into accepting it. So far from there being a growing sentiment in favor of the indiscriminate mixing of the races," Mr. Grady says, "the intelligence of both races is moving farther from that proposition day by day." The argument is specious but narrow and reveals the strong Southern prejudice. Mr. Cable will probably soon reply.

The Library Magazine for March presents us an attractive table of contents by some of the best English and American writers. The publisher, Mr. Alden of New York, is to be congratulated on his success in supplying the people with lean purses so abundantly and well. The articles in this number are: The British Revolution of 1884, Two Sun-like Planets, The Disabilities and Limitations of Sex, New Testament Text Criticism in 1884, Secret or Open Sessions of the Senate, Vaccination and Small Pox, Monopolies and Pools, Shakespeare's Country, Experts in Handwriting, A Word more about America, (Mathew Arnold), Imperial Federation, Socialism and Rent Appropriation, Dublin Castle, The American Audience.

St. Nicholas for the month opens with a frontispiece illustration, of "The Gilded Boy," a true story of a Florentine pageant in 1492. In the "Historic Girl" series E. S Brooks tells the story of the girlhood of "Zenobia of Palmyra," as based on information recently brought to light by Eastern scholars, which is timely, in so far as it shows a prototype of the events of to-day—a mighty European power humbled and held at bay by the Arabs of many centuries ago. Coming to more modern days, there is a sketch of Bach, which forms the first of a series of brief biographies, by Agatha Tunis, of the great musicians "From Bach to Wagner." Lieut. Schwatka tells, in "Children of the Cold," of some of the popular games of the Eskimo; while Charles Barnard, in "The Boys' Club," relates how some little New York Savages, that have been caught and tamed, amuse themselves in a fine club-house. Another "Ready for Business" paper discusses the chances for young men in the field of practical chemistry; and E. P. Roe, in "Driven Back to Eden," contributes some sound and timely advice to young tillers of the soil.

The last number of Father O'Connor's Converted Catholic magazine will be read with interest by all engaged in bringing men from the idolatries of man-made worship into the liberty of Christ. "Reformed Catholic Work," "Converts from Rome," "Father Chiniquy in Montreal," "Monsignor Capel," "Rome: Pagan and Papal" are among the articles. The next number announces the beginning of an important series on the "Moral Theology of the Jesuits."

The circulars of the World's Travel Company of New York are valuable for reference to any who are looking forward to a European trip. Their spring and summer parties offer many facilities for sight-seeing and pleasure-taking which might be otherwise lost. They have planned an attractive Norway trip this season.

Everybody interested in small fruit raising needs for frequent reference Purdy's Catalogue for 1885. The best of new and old varieties are described and valuable hints are added for the instruction of the novice. A. M. Purdy, Palmyra, N. Y.

Crawford's Small Fruits is not so much a catalogue as a valuable compilation of practical papers on this important business, which every gardener will prize. Especially valuable is his paper on "Growing Small Fruits as a Business for Women" presented at the annual meeting of Mississippi Valley Horticultural Society in January. M. Crawford, Cuyahoga Falls, O.

—At a recent meeting in Westminster Abbey, London, a member of the Universities' mission in Zanzibar stated that they had thirty-five native evangelists, formerly slaves, and among their converts was an earnest Christian youth, formerly page to the Sultan of Zanzibar. The released slaves had printed at their printing-office the whole of the New Testament and a large portion of the Old in the Swahili language understood throughout the interior.

THE CHURCHES.

—The African mission of brethren Shemeld, Kelley, and Agnew has received the total sum of $2,-124 in contributions sent to T. B. Arnold, publisher of the Free Methodist in this city.

—Miss Eunice Knapp, for some time associated with Mrs. Mumford in the faith mission at Philippopolis, Bulgaria, has just returned to this country.

—The closing exercises of Zenia Theological Seminary occurred last week. The Baccalaureate sermon was preached by Rev. D. Mac Dill, D.D., of Monmouth, on Sabbath, March 22nd. Dr. W. T. Meloy, of this city, delivered the annual address before the students on Tuesday evening. The graduating exercises took place Thursday.

—Bro. J. M. Hitchcock, Superintendent of the Chicago Avenue (Moody) Sunday school in this city, reports the following attendance on a recent Sabbath: Adults, 573; intermediate, 649; primary, 274; teachers, 61; officers, 14; visitors, 7; total, 1,578.

—Rev. R. C. Wylie, who assisted nobly at the State Convention at Monmouth, Ill., last fall, has since been installed over the Covenanter church at Ray, Indiana. The Reformed Presbyterian in its notice of the service says: "Mr. Wylie enters upon the pastorate in that congregation under circumstances peculiarly encouraging, he, himself having the experience of a former pastorate, together with some years of labor in the cause of the National Reform. There is a remarkable degree of good feeling and harmony in the congregation; the session is active and efficient; the Sabbath school is well conducted; the teachers are all intelligent and efficient; the land is fertile; the climate healthy, and Mr. Wylie has the field comparatively to himself, there being no pastor to compete with him nearer than the village of California, some miles distant, where the Rev. Mr. Kown of the U. P. church, is located."

—A committee of the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian church appointed to draw up a summary of the doctrines of that denomination for popular use, has completed its work and is ready to report. The article in this summary touching the secret lodge, is as follows:

Of Lawful Oaths and Vows.—Confession, chap. 22; Testimony, art 15; Larger Catechism, question 112; Shorter Catechism, question 54. An oath is lawful under the New Testament, when, on a just and solemn occasion, it is taken in the name of God, with holy fear and reverence, and with an intelligent assurance that what is affirmed is the truth, and that the thing promised is in itself right and proper. No oath can oblige to what is sinful; but in that which is right it binds to performance, though to our own hurt. Oaths or obligations of secrecy, that is, to do unknown things, or obey unknown laws or rules, are sinful and ensnaring and to be avoided. A vow is of the nature of an oath, and is to be made to God only, freely, intelligently, in faith, and from a sense of duty; in dependence upon divine grace, and from gratitude for mercies received, or to obtain blessings desired, Popish monastic vows are sinful, as they hinder commanded duty in the ordinary walks of life.

—A dispatch from Truro, Nova Scotia, early in March, says: "The religious revival still continues in this town of 4,000 population. It is the most remarkable religious revival ever known in Nova Scotia. Two months ago a young man from New Glasgow came here and held meetings after the method of the Evangelist Moody. For the first week he met with indifferent success. Since then a furore has prevailed and he has held two meetings daily, at nine A. M., in the Y. M. C. A. hall, holding 500, and in the evening in the First Presbyterian church, the only building that can hold the throng that crowd to hear him. In the morning merchants leave their stores, professional men their offices, and women their household duties to attend the meeting. In the evening it is the masses who flock to hear him. Three meetings a week are held for children. Last Sunday thirty converts were immersed in the Baptist church, and one hundred and twenty joined St. Paul's Presbyterian church. This is the largest number that ever joined, in any one day, any church in Nova Scotia and probably any of the Maritime Provinces. Numbers will join other churches tomorrow and next Sunday. Mr. Meikle aims to do, in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, what Mr. Moody has done in the States. All local amusements are paralyzed."

—"The cost of the maintenance of religion in the United States is estimated at one-half a cent per annum for each individual," said the Rev. Stephen Dekins, in the Fourth Street Methodist Protestant church, Brooklyn, a few Sundays ago. The last census shows that while 33,163 lawyers receive $35,000,-000 every year in fees, 37,000 ministers get only $6,000,000. Mr. Dekins also said that $50,000,000 was spent to support the dogs of the country. Only think of it, $50,000,000 for dogs and $6,000,000 for the clergy, and yet people will complain of the expenses of religion!—New York Sun.

—"According to Dr. Nevin," says the Churchman, "the Roman church has made Italy well nigh an infidel country. Not only has skepticism and materialism eaten deep into the vitals of the Roman church itself, but the larger part of the Italian people have strayed entirely away from Christianity itself, as acknowledged in any dogmatic form."

—A new schooner is to be built for the Gaboon and Corisco missions, West Africa, which is to be paid for and supported by the children in America. The school work in these missions must be done largely in the French language, because of the orders from France, but the mission work is almost entirely in the native tongue.

—The Japan Mail states that the prefect of the Province of Cochi is much distressed on account of the spread of Christianity throughout his province, and has expressed his fears to Count Yamada, who shares his distress in this matter. It is said, however, that Count Saigo, to whom the facts were reported, was as much pleased as the others were displeased by the state of the case.

—It is reported from Japan that the pilgrimages are lately decreasing in popularity. The annual festival of Nishi Hong Wanji, in November last, drew from the country only eight hundred and thirty-seven pilgrims in place of the usual ten thousand of the preceding years. The assigned cause is partly the failure of Buddhism to hold its adherents and partly the severity of the times.

—Nearly all the Esquimaux of Greenland are adherents of the Lutheran faith, having been converted through the missionary enterprise of the Danish church. They have neat little churches, where they hold religious meetings every Sunday. To all appearances they are a happy and contented people, and in their ways and life greatly resemble the Finns and Lapps, as these have been so graphically described in Du Chaillu's "Land of the Midnight Sun." The Moravians, also, have been missionizing in this little sea-bound world for about 150 years, and have recently lost their leading missionary there, Pastor Brodbeck, who has labored very successfully on the eastern coast of the island. From Greenland the Moravians are now also trying to extend their labors to Alaska, and systematic work was commenced there with the new year.

—"Of twenty-one missionaries of the London Missionary Society sent to Central Africa since 1876, fully one-third have died, and several have been compelled by illness to go to other fields. A new route has now been opened by a Scotch trading company, by the way of steamers on the river Zambezi and lake Nyassa and lake Tanganyika, by which the difficult land journey will be reduced to 280 miles." In planting the mission of the London Society in the Tanganyika country, as the missionaries entered from the coast, it involves a travel of many miles to reach their field of labor. From the nature of the country, etc., the distance of actual travel in a torrid clime, with so many obstacles to overcome, accounts for the fatality and sickness among the missionaries. The new route is one our missionaries take.—Free Methodist.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the Tract Fund for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

No.		No. Pages.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	2
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	3
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	4
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
46	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

—The United Workmen order is organizing drill corps and a miniature standing army like the Knight Templar Masons.

—It is reported that the lately organized secret society, the National Union, has 140 councils and 6,000 members.

—"Right Worshipful Brother John C Smith, Grand Senior Warden, Grand Lodge of Illinois," is the distinguished title given to the humble lieutenant-governor of Illinois.

—The most popular organ of Freemasonry in New York city is the Dispatch a Sunday paper. The Sunday Times, of the same city is largely devoted to Freemasonry and is published by a "society of Freemasons," so says the veracious Rob. Morris.

—The Knights of Pythias issue their "brigade" orders with all the pomp and circumstance of glorious war. Sancho Panza, as governor of his island, could not have assumed more mock dignity or bravado. The Illinois regiments of this grand army of feathers are under orders to come to this city—to have a dance and eat a big supper. Brave knights!

—The Scotch Rite Masons of Chicago held their annual reunion last week, conferring the higher degrees upon a number of young men infatuated with the folly of the lodge. The visitors from abroad were welcomed by our demagogue mayor Harrison, whose complicity with thieves and gamblers is as notorious as his connection with the lodge; there being no apparent inconsistency in the two relations.

—Two men, James H. Thompson and William A. Stiles, are not ashamed to put their names to a public notice like the following, which is a proclamation from the Masonic "Nobles of the Mystic Shrine:" "Our next monthly festival occurs on the 11th day of the seventh month of the Hegira, 1302. Jamaz ul Akhir, corresponding to Saturday, March 28, A. D. 1885, at 19:30 o'clock, at Corinthian Hall, No. 187 E. Kinzie street. The magnificent celebration. Yunas ibu Saad ed-Din, who had the remarkable power of riding a horse over glass without breaking it. Gorgeous processions, numerous sons of the desert, incense of Ahmar and Samawi, the attack of the Milligani, the hot sands of the desert, traditional feast of Ib-tihaj; mournful tableau of the lost camel, by Zayir al Mukaddam. All candidates who have been elected to receive the degrees conferred by this order should qualify at this meeting, so as to be full-fledged nobles on the occasion of the grand carnival and reception which is contemplated in the near future."

A Wonderful Woman,

A Wonderful Life,

AND

A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Flizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

Anti-Masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, Williams, M'Nary, Dow and Sarver; the two addresses of Pres't Blanchard, the addresses of Pres't H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion" and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		@79⅝
No. 3		@69
Winter No 2	80	@82
Corn—No. 2		40⅝
Oats—No. 2	27¾	28
Rye—No. 2		64
Bran per ton		13 75
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@12 00
Mess pork per bbl		12 20
Butter, medium to best	12	@25
Cheese	05	@10½
Beans	55	@1 40
Eggs		13
Potatoes per bus	35	48
Seeds—Timothy	1 28	@1 40
Flax		1 48
Broom corn	01	@ 05
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@14½
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 65	@5 90
Common to good	4 40	@5 40
Hogs	4 00	@4 80
Sheep	3 00	@4 50

NEW YORK.

Flour	2 90	@5 25
Wheat—Winter	82	@ 96
Spring		90
Corn	46	@51
Oats	37	@41
Mess Pork		13 25
Eggs		15
Butter	8	28
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	3 00	@5 40
Hogs	4 20	@4 45
Sheep	1 50	@3 25

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

IN ADVERTISEMENTS AGGREGATING

100 lines	15	per cent discount
200 "	20	" "
300 "	25	" "
500 "	35	" "
1000 "	40	" "
2500 "	50	" "

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $ 25	10	per cent
" " " 50	15	" "
" " " 100	20	" "
" " " 250	25	" "
" " " 500	30	" "
" " " 1000	35	" "
" " " 1500	40	" "
" " " 2500	50	" "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

History and Minutes of the National Christian Association. Containing the History of the National Christian Association and the Minutes of its Conventions at Syracuse, N. Y., and Pittsburg, Pa. 289 pages; cloth, 75 cents.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the National Christian Association. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Steeet, Chicago.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl. 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees. in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER IS THE "WAUKESHA GLENN!"

HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS, NATURAL OR ARTIFICIA.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

WANTED AGENTS FOR OUR NEW AND FAST SELLING BOOK OF BOOKS

Entirely new and original. Fresh from the press; sparkling with choicest selections from over 1100 of the Worlds's BEST AUTHORS. Elegantly Bound; and profusely Illustrated.

'WORDS THAT BURN, OR TRUTH & LIFE.'

Nothing like it ever placed before the people. Already proven a brilliant success. Absolutely a mint to agents who are wide awake. Salary and commission paid to suitable canvassers. ☞It will PAY YOU to investigate. Address nearest house to you. J. H. CHAMBERS & CO., Chicago, Ills., St. Louis, Mo., or Atlanta, Ga.

Seven Great Monarchies

The SEVEN GREAT MONARCHIES of the Ancient Eastern World. By George Rawlinson. Chaldea, Assyria, Babylon, Media, Persia, Parthia, and New Persian Empire. In three large 12mo. volumes, large type, with notes, index, and over 700 illustrations and maps, bound in fine cloth, gilt tops. Price reduced from $18.00, to $3.00; postage 42 cents extra.

"It contains the studies of a learned lifetime, and the faithful student will rise from its perusal with a mind enriched by a more vivid knowledge of that ancient world whose mysteries the race of scholars has been endeavoring to elucidate."—Mail, Toronto.

$18. reduced to $3.

"The books, as books, are EXCELLENT. Paper, type, press-work, illustrations, and binding are all good, and the price extraordinarily low."—Literary World, Boston.

"These books are a marvel of cheapness and excellence."—The Examiner, New York City.

"It is one of a series of historical works Mr. Alden is publishing, in which he seems to have discovered or invented the art of combining standard literature, good type, tasty and strong binding, numerous illustrations, with the lowest prices. Mr. Alden certainly leads the cheap book movement at present."—Christian Advocate, Buffalo, N. Y.

"The high character of these volumes is not in dispute. They cover the ground as that ground is perhaps covered by no other publication."—Christian Standard, Cincinnati, O.

"A magnificent book, comprehensive and exhaustive of the subject of which it treats."—Christian Index, Atlanta, Ga.

"Put forth by Mr. Alden at a price the most penurious could not grumble at. As a work of reference it is one of the essentials of a library, like the dictionary and the atlas and the cyclopedia. It is a monument of learning, and throws a strong light upon the manners and customs, as well as upon the arts, history, the geography, and antiquities of Persia, Chaldea, Assyria, Babylon, Media, Parthia, and Sassania. The maps and illustrations are clear and copious."—Times, Brooklyn, New York.

Prescott's History.

History of the Reign of Ferdinand and Isabella, the Catholic. By William H. Prescott, Corresponding Member of the French Institute, Member of Royal Academy of History at Madrid, etc. New Illustrated Library Edition, in two volumes, small octavo, including portraits and other illustrations. Long Primer type, fine heavy paper, fine cloth, gilt tops. Price $2.00; postage 30 cents.

Popular Edition, from the same plates as the above, the two volumes bound in one, neat cloth. Price $1.25; postage 15 cents.

Guizot's France.

A History of France from the Earliest Times to 1848. By M. Guizot and his daughter, Mme. Guizot De Witt. Translated by Robert Black. With 426 fine illustrations. Complete in 8 volumes, small octavo, of about 500 pages each. Price $8.00, postage $1.20. Cheaper Edition, 8 volumes, 12mo. Price, $5.00; postage 72 cents.

100-PAGE CATALOGUE sent free. The best literature of the world at the lowest prices ever known. Books sent for EXAMINATION BEFORE PAYMENT on reasonable evidence of good faith. Mention this paper. Address

JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher,
P. O. Box 1227. 393 Pearl Street, New York.

FARM NOTES.

LIABILITY FOR ACTS OF HIRED MEN.

Few farmers have a correct idea of the extent of their liability for acts of hired help. Judge Parrish, in a late address before the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Farmers' Club, explains the rules of common law in relation to the torts and negligence of farm employes. The essential portion of his remarks is thus condensed:

The farmer is responsible in damages to third persons for wrong acts or negligencies of hired help occasioning injury, whether the act be one of omission or commission; whether in conformity to his orders or even in disobedience of them, by negligence, fraud, deceipt, or even wilful misconduct, so long as it was in the course of the employment. For instance, the farmer has a horse affected with glanders or heaves and he orders his hired man to take it out on the road and sell it or trade it off. He is told not to warrant or recommend the horse, or resort to any jockey tricks in order to make a sale. The first person met is stumped for a trade. The hired man is asked if the horse is sound, and he answers, "Perfectly; not a blemish or a fault about him," and adds that he would not be afraid to warrant him. The trade is made, and the employer is liable for the deceit, because the swindle was in the course of the employment.

A hired man, in driving a neighbor's cow out of his employer's cornfield, killed it with a stone. The court held the employer liable for the value of the cow.

A hired man taking by mistake a bag of barley instead of oats, fed some to a horse, put a clevis in the bag and left it in the old place, saying nothing about the matter. The farmer filled the bag with ears of corn and took it to the mill; in grinding, the clevis damaged the cracker; the farmer was held for the damage.

A farmer is liable for trespass of his hired man, done honestly in the course of his employment—as cutting timber on land of an adjacent proprietor.

It being the duty of an employe to unload a certain load of wood, and by throwing it overboard he accidentally or purposely wounds a by-stander, the employer is liable. But if the unloading was no part of his duty at the time, there would be no liability. The test of responsibility is not whether the act was done according to instructions, but whether done in the prosecution of the work he was doing for his employer, If the hired man, in performing a particular act in a particular manner, departs from instructions to inflict a wanton injury on a third person, the employer is not liable.

There are other grave reasons why care should be exercised in choosing help, but this is sufficient for the present. Negligent, careless men can inflict serious loss upon their principal, even when he thinks himself least liable.—Prairie Farmer.

St. Anne, Ill., March, 1885.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

My Dear Sir: Allow me to present to you a volume of the 27th edition of "The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional."

I have thought it my duty to publish this new edition as the antidote to the sophisms of Rome and of the High Episcopal church party on that subject.

When so many efforts are made to deceive the old and the young, the rich and the poor, about that stinking relic of Bacchus' priests, is it not the duty of every Christian and patriot to warn the unawares against the impending dangers ahead from that moral and social plague?

It was in the confessional box that the Pope had forged the chains which kept so many noble nations among his vile slaves, for so many centuries, and it is through auricular confession that the same Pope hopes, in the near future, to tie this young republic to the wheels of his chariot.

This book is the most complete refutation ever presented to the world of the dogma of auricular confession. It is the fruit of my twenty-five years spent in hearing the confessions not only of the common people, but of the nuns, the priests and the bishops of Rome.

Nothing has been neglected by me to make this book worthy to have a place in the library of every father of a family, every patriot and every legislator in the United States. For them especially it has been written. Yours truly,

C. Chiniquy.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

Cures all Lung, Nervous and Chronic Diseases. Office and "Home Treatment," by

A. H. HIATT, M. D., Central Music Hall, CHICAGO.

Price Reduced. Write for Pamphlet, Information, &c.

NELSON'S

Sunday School Books and Cards.

Approved by all Evangelical Denominations.

Send for Catalogue.

T. NELSON & SONS, 42 Bleecker St., N.Y.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 8cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 8cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, r quarter. .... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... ... . 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address

T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contraditions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the Cynosure who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his name to the letter, but attaches his affidavit to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

Or the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE,

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100, $3.60. Address.

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND BOOK OF Freemasonry,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Gives the correct or "Standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustriated and explained. In short, it is

A Complete and Accurate Lodge Manual.

The high standing of Mr. Ronayne in the fraternity, his popularity and success as a teacher and lecturer in the Lodge, together with the testimony of high Masonic authority, leaves no doubt of the accuracy of this work. It is rapidly becoming a standard work in the hands of acting Lodge officials, and those who desire to post themselves on the workings of the order. The price is so low that it is within the reach of all. Sent postpaid securely wrapped on receipt of price. 184 pages, Paper covers, 35 cents. Elegant cloth with beveled edge and gilt stamp, $1.00. Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the most powerful arguments put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Price, 25 cents.

Hallelujah and Victory!

Sing the Songs of Reform at home, in the field, in the shop, in the convention—sing them till the day of triumph comes.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—

Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in Batavia, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addressos of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN BRIEF.

There are said to be 534 seamstresses in New York City, each of whom earns only $1 a week.

The silver product of the United States in 1884 was $40,000,000, and the egg praduct $80,000,000. There's a bigger bonanza in hens than in silver mines.

The public library committee of Concord, Mass., have unanimously decided to exclude from the shelves of that institution Mark Twain's new book "Huckleberry Finn."

The Massachusetts Legislaturc is considering a bill to abolish the rule of law which excludes the testimony of persons who doubt or disbelieve the existence of a Supreme Being.

A penguin weighing ten pounds was recently killed near Dublin, Ga. As the bird is unable to fly and is found only in the south temperate and frigid regions, how it got there is a mystery.

A good brother, anxious to see his people come up to their great opportunities, writes to one of our contemporaries: "Will the church see the pillar of cloud and the pillar of fire, and, mounting the crest of opportunity's wave, sweep out into the sea of infinite possibilities?"

A distillery has lately been put in operation in Charleston, S. C., for manufacturing oil from pine wood. The wood is subjected to intense heat in sealed retorts and one cord is said to yield fifteen gallons of turpentine, eighty gallons of pine-wood oil, fifty bushels of charcoal, 150 gallons of wood vinegar, and a quantity of inflammable gas and vegetable asphaltum. The oil alone is worth about 25 cents a gallon and is used by painters and ship-builders. Apart from its commercial value, the process is interesting as showing how modern chemistry is able to supplant old and destructive chemical processes by which but a single article was produced from a given material, and all the rest wasted or ruined.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Hannibal Hamlin tells that when he was speaker of the lower house of the Maine Legislature there was among the members a very dandified old fellow whose chief weakness was in trying to conceal the baldness which was rapidly stealing over his head. He came into the House each morning with his hair so carefully combed that it looked as though each particular hair had been pasted in its place. Even then there was scarcely enough to cover the bald spot. One morning Speaker Hamlin, thinking to have some fun, called the gentleman to him and said: "My dear Blank, I beg your pardon, but one of your hairs is crossed over the others." The member grew angry at once and replied: "You insult me, sir; you insult me!" and walked stiffly back to his seat. He refused to be reconciled, and became Hamlin's life-long enemy. A few years later, when Hamlin was a candidate for the United States Senate, this man's vote decided the con test for his opponent.—N. Y. Tribune.

CATARRH CURED!

A clergyman, after suffering a number of years from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, after trying every known remedy without success, at last found a prescription which completely cured and saved him from death. Any sufferer from this dreadful disease sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Dr. J. A. Lawrence, 199 Dean St., Brooklyn, New York, will receive the recipe free of charge.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbytorian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, clai ms and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each: per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 25c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can donbt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, drese of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accnrate that Freemasone murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hnndred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explaine the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry ie identical with the "Ancient Mysteriee" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony uf the first three degrees. Paper cover, 88 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1 00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Danghter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scriptnre, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fnnd of argnments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly intersting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritnal of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that sec societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Ornlion by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and nims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in thie title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abdnction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages; cloth, $1.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The President has nominated Samuel S. Cox, of New York, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Turkey.

Secretary Manning has sent a circular letter to the heads of bureaus and chiefs of divisions of the Treasury Department requesting them to report to him in writing as soon as practicable whether in their opinion the force employed in their respective offices can be reduced, and to what extent, without detriment to the public service.

The Secretary of State is informed by the United States Minister at Stockholm that the Swedish Diet has voted to admit pork, all grain, flour and meat into the ports of Sweden duty free.

Drs. H. R. Naylor (Methodist), W. A. Bartlett (Presbyterian) and W. A. Leonard (Episcopal), ministers of Washington, called upon President Cleveland on Thursday and presented a memorial earnestly urging him to enforce the Edmunds anti-polygamy act. The memorial was signed by over 1,000 clergymen and laymen, and the names of some of the most prominent divines of the country are attached to the document. The President said he would give the subject careful attention at an early day.

The United States Supreme Court rendered a decision affirming the constitutionality of the act creating the Utah Commission to supervise elections. The Court maintains the power of Congress to make such laws for Territories as may fit them for becoming States, and asserts that the statute for preserving sacred family ties by dispensing with a plurality of wives in the household, is praiseworthy and commendable.

COUNTRY.

The bills providing for a diet of bread and water for vagrants, and giving women the right of suffrage at school elections, have passed the Wisconsin Legislature.

A bill introduced in the Illinois Legislature Monday provides a penalty of $2,000 or two years in the penitentiary for pool-selling, and a fine not exceeding $5,000 upon persons who rent buildings to pool sellers.

The Indiana Senate has passed the bill prohibiting ball-playing on Sundays, and postponed consideration of the measure for instruction in the public schools on the effects of alcohol.

The steamer Michigan which was held forty-two days in the ice on Lake Michigan, sunk March 22. The crew saved themselves but were nearly frozen and exhausted traveling over the rough ice dragging their life-boat. The steamer Wisconsin is still in the ice but a tug has gone to her rescue.

A bill to punish wife-beaters with thirty lashes has passed the New Jersey Assembly.

Coal mine No. 7 at McAllister, I. T., was the scene of a terrible explosion last Friday evening in which twelve men lost their lives. All others had left before the explosion occurred.

The Mormons are greatly disappointed at the Supreme Court decision in the Utah Commission case, and allege that the ruling that Congress is supreme in territorial matters is opposed to a territorial form of government.

The Fairbank Canning Company of Chicago received an order from the British government last week for 3,100,000 pounds of corned and canned beef.

An epidemic of small-pox has broken out at Mound City, Ill., chiefly among negroes. Fifty cases have been reported among the 1,500 inhabitants and eight deaths occurred last week. Only two white families were affected.

Wells are being opened rapidly in the new Macksburg, O., oil district, and the product is about 4,000 barrels daily. It is impossible to provide houses for the people, they are arriving in such numbers.

A troop of cavalry has been ordered to destroy the permanent improvements on the ranches of two cattle-firms in Oklahoma, which is taken to mean that all unauthorized stockmen will be driven out.

Notwithstanding that saloon-keepers throughout Iowa are closing up their places, the Iowa Brewers' and Bottlers' Association has been incorporated at Marshalltown with the avowed purpose of raising funds to further test the constitutionality of the liquor law.

Two women living near Wadesboro, N. C., gave a tramp shelter Tuesday night, locking him in a closet. A negro robber invaded the house at midnight, aroused the women and demanded money. One of the women, saying she would get the cash, unlocked the closet, liberating the tramp who shot the burglar dead. He was found to be a white man belonging in the neighborhood who had blackened his face.

The steam-boat "Mark Twain," running as a ferryboat between Memphis, Tenn., and Mound City, Ark., exploded her boilers Friday afternoon killing two men from Louisville engaged in newspaper advertising schemes, the fireman, a deck hand and an unknown negro.

The condition of the people in the foodless counties of West Virginia is reported more desperate. The terrible roads and frozen streams render it impossible to reach them speedily with aid; still the people of the State are at work helping where they can. Many farmers have neither seed nor money with which to buy it. In many instances the fare is parched corn and sorgum molasses. In Wirt county rations of corn meal were issued. A traveler in one day's journey counted thirty head of dead cattle. The Kanawha, Ritchie, Pleasants, Wirt, Nicholas and Braxton county courts have all met in special sessions to provide relief.

FOREIGN.

An explosion in the mines at Dombrau, Austrian Silesia, buried forty-five miners, and all are supposed to have perished. In the mines of Baron Rothschild at Ostrau, Moravia, an explosion killed forty-six men.

The British cabinet held a special session Wednesday afternoon on the Afghan difficulty. It was resolved to firmly demand of Russia that she commence forthwith the work af de-limitating the Afghan frontier, in accordance with the understanding under which Sir Peter Lumsden and the British surveying party passed so mady months in the Ameer's dominion.

Queen Victoria's message on Thursday calling out the reserves and militia for permanent service was received by the country with great enthusiasm, especially marked at the various military stations throughout the kingdom. Lord Dufferin, Governor General of India, demands an army of 25,000 for Afghanistan, and all the available troops will be sent to India. Several of the largest ocean steamships have been chartered by the government.

The Manitoba insurrection of farmers and half-breeds under Riel is assuming grave proportions. News was received Friday that the rebels captured Major Crozier and his force of over 100 mounted police, after an engagement in which several were killed on both sides. Two rebels tried to wreck a train carrying troops from Winnipeg west. They were arrested. One had dispatches from Riel to the half-breeds around Winnipeg and in Southern Manitoba urging them to rise.

Latest advices from Egypt state that Gen. Wolseley, after making an inspection of the military stations from Dongola to Cairo will go to Suakim. Gen. Graham's army was to advance on Tamai Wednesday, having obtained sufficient water supply.

It is officially announced that the Chinese troops on the Tonquin frontier on Saturday made a desperate attack upon an intrenched camp established by Gen. Negrier, and drove the French back beyond Lang Son and recaptured that town. In the series of fights Gen. Negrier was grievously wounded, and the casualties among his troops were very serious. The latest accounts represent the French in full retreat with the Chinese pursuing.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

No Physician Need Hesitate.

Dr. S. V. Clevenger, Chicago, Ill., says: "Horseford's Acid Phosphate should be made officinal. It is the most eligible form for the administration of phosphorus, and no physician need hesitate to order it on his prescription blanks."

BUSINESS.

LETTERS

Containing cash for Cynosure received during the week, ending Friday, March 27:

J. D. Laflamme, D. Molyneux, John Collins, Mrs. Maria Spaulding, D. Needham, H. G. Hanson, S. B. Patterson. Jas. Ferguson, J. C. Wellcome, G. F Albrecht, Wm. H. Sawyer, S C Buck, Sam'l A J Long, Wm Matthews, R Loggan, J H Fake, Jemaima Kuns, Rev Jas I Welo, H C Fox, Wm Machemer, Jas Shigley, Alfred Cowley, S C Hart, Mary Pinkney, A Helton, Dr E C Guild, M Caldwell, Jas E Parker, Jas Day, R Reames, A H Wilcox, P W Wright, Rob't H Buttermore, G Marcy, W R Morley, Jno Cozier, Alva Fenton, Alfred Cleveland, C D Coppock, S Dodge. Isaac N Jack, Jno H Foster, L E Lincoln, Jas Brandt, Mrs M E R Jones, Rev Wm Moerdyk.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

Is a charming illustratcd magazine, published by J. F. Avery, Halifax, Nova Scotia, containing forty pages monthly of anecdote and argument for the Christian home. Every number is profusely and finely illustrated. We shall be happy to introduce this magazine to hundreds of American homes and have secured a special arrangement from the proprietor. Buds and Blossoms is 75 cents per year. With the Cynosure the two will be $2.25, or any subscriber who has already paid for this paper can get the magazine at the same rate.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to Rev. Chiniqay, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

AGENTS WANTED! Rider's Improved Pillow-Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars and see what it is any way. E. W. RIDER & CO. Racine, Wis. Mention the Christian Cynosure.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms. PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

TREES!

By the million at the

ELGIN NURSERIES,

(Established 1854. Thirty-first year.)

The Leading Nurseries of the West. Our

Annual Catalogue and Price-List,

containing valuable hints on the planting and management of trees,

FREE TO ALL.

Farmers and planters, do not fail to send for it.

Address, E. H. RICKER & CO., Borden Block, Elgin, Ill.

Please mention this paper.

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $40 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill, Chicago.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large and elegant volume of plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern dwellings, costing from $400 up to $6,500, for all parts of the country. So complete a book of the kind usually costs $5. Our price, postpaid, only 50 cts., sent post-paid.

BUILDING ... TION, 24 Beekman ... 702,) N. Y.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y

LOOK AT THE

YELLOW TAG

AND SEE IF YOUR SUBSCRIPTION EXPIBES THIS MONTH. IF IT DOES, PLEASE LET US HEAR FROM YOU AT ONCE.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND-PAINTED SILKS for Patchwork, Tidies, Screens, etc. Send $1 for package, or 50 cts. for beautiful samples. WESTERN ART CO., Salem, O.

LADIES CAN SECURE Light, Pleasant and Profitable EMPLOYMENT at their Homes, in the city or country. Instructions free by calling, or we will mail you printed instructions and full particulars for 15 cts. Address TOILET MFG CO., 52 E. Madison St., Chicago. Manufacturers and dealers in Toilet Articles, Rugs. Yarns, Patterns, etc.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

THE DOLLAR SEED SOWER.

Sows all kinds of grass, garden and flower seeds as well as any drill made. Holds one quart. Weighs three-fourths of a pound. Cannot clog. Is easily adjusted. Durable; sows in drills. Saves time and seed in planting small gardens, beds, test grounds, cold frames, hot beds. Warranted to give satisfaction. Sent postpaid to any address in the United States on receipt of ONE DOLLAR. Address, mentioning this paper,

GREENWICH MFG. CO., Greenwich, O.

THE NOVELTY

RUG MACHINE.

[PAT. DEC. 27, 1881.]

Makes Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc., with ease and rapidity. Price only one dollar. Single machine, with full directions, sent by mail on receipt of price. Agents wanted. Apply for circulars to E. ROSS & CO., Patentees and Sole Manufacturers, Wauseon, Ohio; also dealers in Rug Patterns.

$1 WORTH OF TESTED Seeds Free

To any person sending us 50 cents for one year's subscription to the Rural Home, and seven cents to help pay postage, packing, etc., we will send the Ten Packets of choice Vegetable seeds named below free. We make this offer to induce you to become a regular subscriber to the Rural Home, and to test the value of our seeds (specially grown for our use). Following are the seeds we offer: Early Oxheart Cabbage, Imported Blood Turnip Beet, Livingston's Perfection Tomato, New Italian Onion, Early White Turnip, Early Montana Sugar Corn, New Perpetual Lettuce, Premium Green Pea, Valparaiso Squash, New, Imported, Large Sugar Parsnip. We want every farmer and gardner in the United States to give these seeds an honest and fair trial. They are warranted to be of the very best quality, true to name, fresh and pure, and of the growth of 1884. Full directions for cultivating on every package. Address

THE RURAL HOME, Philadelphia, Pa.

Quit Cutting In-growing Toe Nails

USE DR. STEOMAN'S AUTOMATIC CURE

This instrument is made of Solid Silver, and is easily applied to any case. It affords immediate relief by gently lifting the inverted nail from the flesh, and effects a permanent cure by the steady pressure upon the top, which causes the nail to gradually flatten, thereby changing its formation. Can be worn day and night with comfort. Its simplicity and practicability is shown in the above cut. One pair sent with full directions on receipt of 27 cts. Address

AUTOMATIC CURE CO., Cincinnati, O.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S

ORIENTAL CREAM, or MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER.

PURIFIES as well as BEAUTIFIES the Skin. No other Cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth-Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of thirty years and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayre, said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin. Mme. M. B. T. GOURAUD, Sole Proprietor, 48 Bond St., New York. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the United States, Canadas, and Europe. Beware of base imitations. $1,000 Reward for arrest and proof of any one selling the same.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 29. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 9, 1885. WHOLE No. 780.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Mr. Moody Speaks Again. 8
Mormons Skulking..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Tom Paine and American Independence..... 1
The Age of Masonry..... 2
Royal Templars of Temperance..... 2
A New Papal League..... 3
SELECTED:
The Anvil of God's Word 1
Anarchist Organization in the U. S..... 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chaps. XIV. and XV... 4
REFORM NEWS:
Conventions and Workers; To Wisconsin Friends; Michigan State Meeting; From the Illinois Lecturer; From Manhattan, Kans..... 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
Swedish-American Bible Seminary; Ancient Order of United Workmen; The One Body; The Old Jail at Canandaigua; Good Templarism in New York; Pith and Point.....5,6
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
LITERATURE..... 5
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
THE CHURCHES..... 12
HOME HINTS..... 12
SECRET EMPIRE..... 13
FARM NOTES..... 14
IN BRIEF..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

The Red Men lodge in West Virginia does not give up yet to publicity or prosecution. They have begun again in Jackson county, which borders on the Ohio river, near Gallipolis, Ohio. It is often remarked that the devil is especially active in the vicinity of a revival. The wonderful news of grace from the Ohio towns in the neighborhood prepares for this news of lodge work, in which men are beaten with hickory withes and ministers threatened unless they emigrate.

The Voice, of New York, has been printing letters from Iowa mayors. We are surprised to see how many decide against the prohibition law and declare its action bad. But on the other hand a large proportion of these gentlemen are local politicians or Freemasons, and their opinions are to be taken with some discount. The decision of the Supreme Court, March 17th, in which the constitutionality of the prohibition law and the right of any citizen to get out an injunction against a saloon to abate it as a nuisance, will change the tone of these Iowa mayors. The case before the court was brought upon the latter issue. The opinion of the Court was unanimous, sweeping and conclusive, maintaining the law, and the right of decent citizens to defend their homes and communities from the terrible saloons.

Some American Freemasons who can spend more money on their clothes, banquets, dances and sprees than their fellows, and, therefore, call themselves "Knights Templar," are also more religious and go to church once a year all belted and spurred. Over in France the Freemasons are anxious to annihilate the name and remembrance of God. They support an anti-clerical league to promote their atheistic notions. Last week while the ritualistic churches were holding special services, they prepared a ball in Paris intending to mock all kinds of religion. At midnight on Friday they would dance a polka, called the "Sacred Heart" polka, and other travesties on religious ideas would be provided. In a year or two some Appollo Commandery will make another European trip and show the universality of the lodge brotherhood by embracing these French infidels and atheists with the warmest Masonic affection.

General Grant has disappointed the fears of his family and the country. Early last week the farewells of earth were spoken, but he lives to have them sadly repeated. His condition Monday was more easy and painless. There is no hope, however, held out by his physicians that he can live more than a few days. It is a matter of gratitude that he was able some two weeks ago to give his testimony in the suit against Fish, president of the Marine Bank, who with young Ward engineered the financial ruin of the Grant family. This testimony clears General Grant from personal responsibility for the disastrous failure. General Sheridan made even more clear the reasons for that remarkable failure. He says that General Grant conceived the idea that he could go into Wall street and carry on a successful business. He believed his boys to be good financiers, and himself able to cope with the shrewd dealers of New York. In this he mistook his power. His confiding nature was against him. He could easier spend than get. And when two sharpers got the reins they drove him over a precipice.

Anthony Comstock, the hero of the war against vile literature, had the honor lately of speaking on Joseph Cook's platform, in Boston, before a Monday lecture audience, and being introduced in a very complimentary manner by Mr. Cook himself. Mr. Comstock was in Chicago last week and spoke in one of the Y. M. C. A. rooms to a select audience. He told of the encouragement the reform he represented had received in the legislation against vile papers in New York, Texas, West Virginia, South and North Carolina, and probably soon to be completed in Kansas and Tennessee. Bills to the same effect are being considered in California, Michigan, Minnesota, Vermont, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. Three of these papers of blood, lust and crime have been suppressed, and the circulation of another cut down one-half. The facts relative to crime among boys, originated or aided by these vicious boys-and-girl's papers, were astonishing. In the last year he had the record of seventy-four murders and over a hundred attempted murders by boys; fifty-nine girls were abducted and eleven bands of boy bandits were broken up. Mr. Comstock is giving more attention to lottery schemes which are slyly springing up in States where open lotteries are prohibited. He has a hard battle with this giant crime, but he wields the sword of Great Heart, and many who cannot fight with him stand by and pray. God give him many victories.

The Massachusetts legislature is considering a bill (if it be not already voted upon) abolishing the rule which requires a belief in the existence of God necessary for the admission of testimony in courts of justice. This is but another step in the secret war made by the lodge against the administration of justice. The solemn appeal to God in the civil oath removed and nothing remains but a man's inclination to prevent the lodge oath from ruling in every court-room, and that objection is easily overcome, as can be learned any day from an adhering Mason. While it is not easy for the lodge to show why its oath should be regarded before the oath to God, but little trouble will be experienced in making it paramount to an individual judgment. The celebrated case of the infidel Bradlaugh, whose admission to the British Parliament was several times refused because he could not take the oath required of members, and the more recent case of an atheistic witness in the Swaim trial at Washington,—these reveal the dangers to which we are liable if the solemn appeal to God in the court is abolished. Verily, "because of swearing the land mourneth;" not because of the heedless blasphemy of the street so much as because of the false, heathenish, savage oaths of the lodge which penetrate all parts of our social fabric until it totters and seems ready to fall in ruin.

THE ANVIL OF GOD'S WORD.

Last eve I paused beside a blacksmith's door
And heard the anvil ring the vesper chime;
Then looking in I saw upon the floor
Old hammers worn with beating years of time.

"How many anvils have you had," said I,
"To wear and batter all these hammers so?"
"Just one," he answered; then with twinkling eye,
"The anvil wears the hammers out, you know."

And so, I thought, the anvil of God's Word
For ages skeptic blows have beat upon;
Yet, though the noise of Paine, Voltaire was heard,
The anvil is unworn—the hammers gone. —Current.

TOM PAINE AND AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE.

BY REV. B. W. WILLIAMS.

Infidels, in the vain attempt to make it appear that they have done something for the good of mankind, not infrequently refer to the service rendered by Tom Paine to the cause of American independence, during the Revolutionary War; and by shamefully perverting the facts of history they succeed in making the impression upon many minds that infidelity deserves great credit for the assistance rendered in that memorable struggle. Mr. Ingersoll, the champion blasphemer of America, in his "Lecture on Thomas Paine, makes the following reckless assertions:

"The colonists wished for, hoped for, and prayed for reconciliation. They did not dream of independence. Paine gave to the world his 'Common Sense.' It was the first argument for separation; the first assault on the British form of government; the first blow for a republic, and it aroused our fathers like a trumpet's blast. He was the first to perceive the destiny of the new world. It is simple justice to say that Paine did more to cause the Declaration of Independence than anw other man."

As such statements are often made by the disciples and copyists of Mr. Ingersoll, it would perhaps be well to briefly state the facts in regard to that matter.

It is a fact that Tom Paine by his writings, did much to inspire and encourage the American patriots in their struggle for liberty; but is not true that he originated the idea of independence. He was not the first to advocate a complete separation from the mother country. He did not arrive in America until some time in December, 1774, and his first political pamphlet, entitled 'Common Sense,' was not published until the 8th of January, 1776. Years before that time, independence had been talked of, predicted, and earnestly advocated by leading men in the colonies. Proof of this statement may be found by consulting the standard histories of our country, such as the works of Bancroft, Lossing, and Hildreth. As Bancroft'sis perhaps the most extensively used, and everywhere recognized as a standard authority, I shall quote mainly from it. I use the Centenary Edition, in six volumes. According to this illustrious historian, as early as July, 1704, the chief justice of New York assured the secretary of State that there was some talk of independence among the colonists, using the following language:

"Anti-monarchical principles and malice to the church of England daily increase in most proprietary governments, not omitting Boston; and, to my own knowledge, some of their leading men already begin to talk of shaking off their subjection to the crown of England."—Bancroft's History U. S., vol. ii., p. 281.

It is a great mistake to suppose that the American colonists had no thought of a complete separation from Great Britain before the arrival of Tom Paine. It is stated upon good authority that "the idea of independence was familiar among the common people much earlier than some people pretend." (Life and works of John Adams; Boston, 1854 vol, ix., p. 598.) As the colonies grew in wealth, population, and intelligence, their tendencies toward independence increased. Bancroft says that "with every year of the increase of the colonies, prophecies had been made of their tendencies to independence." (Bancroft, vol. ii., p. 288.) Upon investigation, it appears that the first man who openly and publicly declared in favor of a total independence was that sterling patriot and Christian statesman, Samuel Adams. Let the following grand and glowing testimony be embalmed in the memory of every patriotic American citizen who appreciates the blessing of liberty:

"The approach of military rule convinced Samuel Adams of the necessity of American independence. From this moment he struggled for it deliberately and unremittingly. . . . . He gave himself to his glorious work as devotedly as though he had in his keeping the libertics of mankind, and was a chosen instrument for fulfilling what had been decreed hy the divine counsels from all eternity. . . . . Henceforward, one high service ahsorhed his soul, the independence ot his country. To promote that end, he was ready to serve, and never claim the reward of service."—Bancroft, vol. iv., p. 109.

Let it be remembered that the historian is here speaking of the events of September, 1768—six years before Paine reached America. And yet Mr. Ingersoll would have us believe that the colonists "did not dream of independence" until Paine published his pamphlet! Richard Henry Lee, another earnest Christian, was also an early advocate of independence. The historian Lossing says of him:

"He was one of the earliest opposers of the Stamp Act, and was the first man in Virginia to stand forth in public as its avowed opponent. From that time until the war hroke out, he was a leader among the patriots in his State; and long before the idea became general, he spoke of the necessity of independence"—Eminent Americans, p. 187.

Other leading men in America had spoken out on the question of independence. In November, 1774, Dr. Franklin explicitly avowed "that there was no safety for his native country but in total emancipation." (Bancroft. vol. iv., p. 430.) Washington and Greene were also decidedly in favor of independence. The latter in a letter to a friend who was a delegate to the general Congress, used this language:

"Permit me from the sincerity of my heart, ready at all times to hleed in my country's cause, to recommend a declaration of independence, and call upon the world and the great God who governs it to witness the necessity, propriety, and rectitude thereof."—Bancroft, vol. v., p. 156.

It might also be easily shown, did time and space permit, that James Otis, Patrick Henry, Rev. Timothy Dwight, and perhaps others, had given utterance to sentiments pointing to independence, long before Paine left England. Another important fact bearing upon this subject, which we cannot omit to mention, is this: The first formal declaration of independence ever issued by a public assembly in America was made by a company of Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, at Charlotte, Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, in May, 1775,—seven months before Paine's "Common Sense" was published. That I may not be suspected of mis-stating the facts in the case, I submit the proof.

"The region was peopled chiefly hy Presbyterians of Scotch-Irish descent, who hrought to the New World the creed, the spirit of resistance, and the courage of the Covenanters. . . . . The people proposed among themselves to ahrogate all dependence on the royal authority. . . . . At the instance of Thomas Polk, the commander of the militia of the county, two delegates from each company were called together in Charlotte, as a representative committee."—Bancroft. vol., iv , p. 577

"Among the delegates to that memorahle assembly was Ephraim Brevard, one of a numerous family of patriot brothers, himself in the end a martyr to the public cause. Trained in the college at Princeton, ripened among the brave Presbyterians of middle Carolina, he digested the system which was then adopted, and which formed in effect a declaration of independence, as well as a system of government."—Ibid, p. 578.

"On the thirty-first of May [1775], the resolutions were signed hy Brevard as clerk of the committee, and were adopted hy the people with the enthusiasm which springs from the combined influence of religion and the love of civil liberty. Thus was Mecklenhurg county, in North Carolina, separated from the British empire."—Ibid, p. 579.

It is true that the Mecklenburg declaration was local in its character, and formed only a kind of prelude to the final declaration of independence by Congress in July, 1776; but I refer to it to show the falsity of the oft-repeated statements as to the priority of Paine's utterances on the subject of independence. I will now endeavor to give the facts in regard to Tom Paine and his services in behalf of American liberty. I have no desire to detract from his merits or to exaggerate his faults.

It is well known that Tom Paine was raised by religious parents (his father being a Quaker and his mother a member of the Church of England), and the correctness of his early life is doubtless the result of their influence. It is also true, but perhaps not so well known, that the infamous author of the "Age of Reason" was once a preacher; although he seems to have exercised the functions of the ministry only a short time. Lossing says:

"Paine's father was a Quaker from whom he learned the business of stay-making. He went on a privateering cruise in 1755, and afterwards worked at his trade and preached as a dissenting minister. He was an exciseman at Thetford. Being accused of smuggling he was dismissed from his office. He came to America, and in 1777 was elected clerk of the committee on foreign affairs, and was compelled to resign for some indiscretions in connection with the quarrel with Silas Dean."—Encyclopedia of U. S. History, vol. ii., p. 1045.

We have no evidence that it was the desire to aid in the struggle for liberty that induced Tom Paine to emigrate to America; on the contrary, it appears to have been a bread-and-meat question with him. Having lost his place as exciseman, and being out of employment, he seems to have come to the New World simply to make a living and better his fortune. Before coming, however, he obtained an introduction to Dr. Franklin, then U. S. Minister to England, who gave him a letter of introduction to Mr. Bache (Franklin's son-in-law) commending him as needing employment, and so far as he could judge, worthy of confidence. He arrived in America in December, 1774, and through Mr. Bache's influence obtained employment as editor of the Pennsylvanian Magazine. When he had been in the country about a year, he wrotc and published, in January, 1776, a political pamphlet addressed to the American people. This had been written at the suggestion of Dr. Franklin, and Dr. Rush had given it the title of Common Sense. (See Bancroft, vol. v., p. 157.) Just at that time, it was peculiarly appropriate and effective, and helped very much to popularize the idea of American independence. Subsequent to this, Paine published a series of papers called The Crisis, which were issued at intervals during the war. That these works were helpful to the cause of liberty is cheerfully conceded, and he deserves due credit for the service thus rendered. It is an interesting fact, however, that at that time Paine was a professed Quaker, and not an avowed infidel. He did not avow his infidel sentiments until some years later; and I challenge the world to point to a single word or act of his in favor of American liberty, (or anything else that was good) after he renounced Christianity and published his detestable works against the Bible.

I have before me at this writing, his Common Sense, and I find, upon examination, that it is written from a Christian standpoint, and throughout the work the author constantly appeals to Scripture to sustain his positions. The same may be said of his Crisis. I cannot forbear taking space in which to give a few quotations.

"As the exalting one man so greatly ahove the rest, cannot be justified on the equal rights of nature, so neither can it he defended on the authority of Scripture. for the will of the Almighty as declared hy Gideon, and the prophet Samuel, expressly disapproves of government hy kings."—Common Sense, p. 13.

"We claim hrotherhood with every European Christian, and triumph in the generosity of the sentiment."—Ibid, p. 23.

"For myself, I fully and conscientiously helieve, that it is the will of the Almighty, that there should he a diversity of religious opinions among us: it affords a large field for our Christian kindness . . . . . I look on the various denominations among us to he like children of the same family, differing only in what is called their Christian names."—Ibid, p. 42.

"I wish with all the devotion of a Christian, the names of whig and tory may never he mentioned."—Crisis No. 1.

"As individuals we profess ourselves Christians."—Ibid, No. 7.

Be it ever remembered, then, that it was as a Christian, using Scriptural argumvnts, and not as an infidel, that Tom Paine wrote his works in defense of American liberty. Hence, the credit for such service properly belongs to Christianity and not to infidelity.

It is also worthy of remark, that Paine's services to the patriot cause were duly appreciated, gratefully acknowledged, and liberally rewarded: although he afterwards damaged himself greatly in the estimation of decent people, by his scurrilous abuse of Washington. In 1787 he went to France, and subsequently returned to England where he published his Rights of Man. He returned to France again in 1792, and took part in the French Revolution; after which he published his blasphemous tirade against the Bible, which he called—or rather miscalled—the "Age of Reason." In 1796 he published what he termed a letter to Washington, in which he shamefully abused the "Father of his Country." I quote the following as a specimen:

'And as to you, Sir, treacherous in private friendship, for so you have heen to me, and that in the day of danger, and a hypocrite in public life, the world will he puzzled to decide, whether you are an APOSTATE or an IMPOSTER! Whethor you have ahandoned good principles, or whether you ever had any?"

This unscrupulous vilifier of our beloved Washington, during the last years of his life became very intemperate, adicted himself to beastly habits, and finally ended what might have been a glorious career in obscurity, dishonor, and wretchedness. In conclusion, I quote the following epitaph, which was written for his tombstone while he was yet living:

"Here lies Tom Paine who ably wrote in Liberty's defense,
But in his 'Age of Reason' lost his
'Common Sense.'"

THE AGE OF MASONRY.

Grand Master John F. Saulsbury of the Grand Lodge of Delaware opened the session of that body in an address in which he says: "The Masonic Fraternity, as you all know, was founded by good and true men at the very earliest dawn of civilzation for the purpose of elevating mankind to the standard of excellency which the Great Architect in his infinite wisdom and goodness intended men to occupy."

Speaking of the reputed age of the order, Grand Secretary T. S. Parvin, of Iowa, says: "No, my brother, tell it not in Gath and publish it not in the streets of Askelon, lest the ignorant be deceived and the uncircumcised triumph. 'Tis a history handed from ages a-down; a nurse's tale which children open-eyed and mouthed devour; and thus as garrulous ignorance relates we learn and believe.'"

This is doubtless true; but the pretension that the order has for its purpose to elevate mankind to the standard of excellency which God intended them to occupy, is still more false and absurd. It is a sufficient evidence of this, that such purpose has ever been a most conspicuous failure.

ROYAL TEMPLARS OF TEMPERANCE.

OBLIGATION.

"You, of your own free will and accord, in the presence of these witnesses, do solemnly promise that you will NEVER reveal any of the private work, ceremonies, or business of this council to any person not entitled to know the same; that you will not communicate any password, test, sign, signal, grip, or token to any person except it be in the discharge of your official duties within the body of a legally constituted council; that you will abide by the constitution, by-laws, rules, and usages of this council and those of the grand and supreme councils. You also promise that should any books, papers, or other property belonging to this council be placed in your hands, you will keep, preserve, and protect the same, delivering them up when legally called upon so to do. You also promise that you will not knowingly present the petition of an improper person for membership in this council; that you will not wrong a member, or see one wronged, if in your power to prevent it; that you will assist any worthy member who is sick or in distress; that you will use your moral, social, and religious influence for the promotion of the cause of temperance, the suppression of the rum traffic, and the elevation of our race, and that you will not cease to labor (God giving you strength) while life shall last, or until the demon of intemperance is driven from our land. To all of which you pledge your sacred honor." If so, answer, "I do thus promise."

THE PLEDGE

Signed by candidates before obligation:

"I promise I will not buy, sell, use, or give to others, as a beverage, any spirituous, fermented, or distilled liquors, wines, or cider; nor frequent places where such liquors are kept for sale; but will discountenance their manufacture, use, and sale in the community, in all proper and lawful ways."

NOTES.

Five prayers occur in the ritual, two of which have no reference to a mediator.

On p. 27 of the ritual occurs the following: "Total abstinence is the rock we have placed in the great sea of intemperance, and upon this rock are founded our hopes. Let us there firmly place ourselves, our families, our common brotherhood; and though the rains descend and the floods come, I will, with the blessings of God, remain immovable and unshaken."

A great deal of religion in the teachings of this ritual, but the religion is deism.

In the installation of officers, the grand chaplain addresses the chaplain of the council (or lodge) as follows: "It is your duty to perform those solemn services which we should constantly render to an Infinite Creator, and which, when offered by one whose holy profession is to 'point to heaven and lead the way,' may, by refining our souls, strengthening our virtues, and purifying our minds, prepare us for admission into the society of those above, whose happiness will be as endless as it is perfect." R.

The tendency to military display and to pseudo-military organization by civic societies is not an encouraging indication of the continued simplicity of our republican institutions nor of the republic itself. The present status of feeling in these circles seems to be that unless they have a military aspect and something of a military character they are of little account. The seventeenth of March witnessed a parade in our midst as military in its aspects as that of a corps-drill of United States soldiers. A few years ago such was not the aspect of the parades of this same organization. When our Knights of Labor shall have completed their purpose in the amalgamation of all the labor associations, and shall have drilled and equipped them, these with other existing pseudo-military bodies will become the dictators of our national destiny. The influence of one of these bodies gave us a nominee in the late Presidential election; while it was attempted to coalesce the votes of the labor associations to carry to the presidential chair one who had not the nomination of either of the leading political parties. The signs of the times teach the necessity of a return to simplicity and transparency; a simplicity and transparency that will give us a confidence toward God and an abandonment of dependence in political parties. —Free Methodist.

A NEW PAPAL LEAGUE.

The church, by her various denominations, is trying to establish the dominion of Christ in the hearts of all mankind. She is sending to foreign lands her missionaries, and she is fighting unbelief at home. But we see a power, hoping to obtain a supreme position, which the Protestant portion of the world thought was forever dead and unable to strike a temporal blow. It is popery. The pope wants power, popular power, pecuniary power, polytheistic power. This is pontificial power and prohibited power.

The Journal of Rome announces "the formation of a Temporal Power League, to establish committees throughout the world with the object of advocating in the press, pulpit and platform, the restoration of the temporal power and domains of the pope."

How do the adherents of popery here presume to work? They here presume to fight lawfully. If they are endeavoring to obtain something which is not lawful they should be complimented on account of choosing lawful means. The church of Rome is accused of doing many things which would cause a barbarian to blush with shame, but if now they throw aside that which would cause a stigma, on any religious or secular power, we may well give them praise for it.

By the press, pulpit and platform they will endeavor to establish the temporal power of the pope. Then those who are not adherents to the pope will be able to see why his temporal power should be established, and also have an opportunity of showing by the same three ways why it should not be established and in this way those on both sides of the fence may compromise the difficulty and take the fence away.

Who will probably be expected to work? Those who have a zeal for the cause and who are qualified to write so as to maintain the reputation of the paper for which they write, or who are sufficiently versed in the school of oratory that they might be capable of holding an audience.

Should the papists do this? Every man should be true to his own convictions. If they think it proper to labor for the pope, for the temporal power of the pope, they should by all means do it. Every one must run the risk of reaping the reward or bearing the penalty in whatever work that is undertaken. And if the papists think it is their duty, they are right in going forward and in due time God will show them more plainly whether they are right or wrong. A man who will do nothing is a difficult man to manage.

What must Protestants do all this time? (If we may be permitted to use the name Protestant.) They must fight for the truths which are so plainly delineated in the Word of God, by the press, pulpit and platform, and pray God that he will send the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, to use these weak instruments in overthrowing error and establishing truth.

Are we at a loss to find workers? By no means. There are thousands in the United States who continuously say, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" And it is those who are willing to do God's will, who can sanctify the press and the eloquence of our land. We may say the ministry have their hands full of work, but if the laymen and women would use their talent in the Master's service the ministry would be encouraged and strengthened and cause beneficial results. "We should work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work."

BETH.

ANARCHIST ORGANIZATION IN THE UNITED STATES.

A reporter of the Philadelphia Press some time ago became a member of the "International Arbeiter (or Working-men's) Association, with the express purpose of ascertaining the secret workings of the organization. This is the same body which appears in France as the "Commune;" as the Socialists of Germany and as the Nihilists of Russia. Its designs are the same with those of these European organizations. They declare that although their efforts have heretofore been expended mainly in European countries, it is only because Europe is more ripe for revolt. But their ultimate design includes the overthrow of government and the abolition of property in America as well.

From the rather sensational account given in the Press, the reporter appears to have gathered many items of interest. The Anarchists of America are nearly all foreigners—Germans, Poles, Austrians and exiles from the continental European countries. Within the past year the membership in this city has increased forty per cent. Where less than twelve months ago they had only four "groups" or branches, they now have seven. The society is now working with all its energy to induce Americans to join the Association. They feel that unless the sympathy of native born citizens is aroused to some extent, their projected revolution cannot be successful.

In their declaration of principles the Anarchists avow themselves in favor of "Agitation for the purpose of organization; organization for the purpose of rebellion." This is, in a few words, their whole object. They seek to overthrow the present system of law by any method—dynamite, murder and nitroglycerine. The different branches levy a tax for the distribution of printed matter when called upon by the Central Committee of their city. All money not assessed as for "actual service" is supposed to be devoted to the support of the main organization, expenses of meetings and so forth. Levies for "actual service" are spent on dynamite, arms and amunition.

A proclamation printed in German, makes capital out of the execution of Stellmacher by the Austrian government, and declares that "with burning hearts the Revolutionists go down into the pit which enfolds the beloved dead. There they are and must remain united each for the other and for all with him whose corpse has been flung into an untimely grave. In the meantime not a tear falls. Mightier than sorrow, hate is at work in the hearts of the struggling working-man. One thing alone concerns them. Revenge for their gallant comrade's destruction. . . . Working-men! honor this man. Honor this staunch champion, who died for you, by following the example he has set you, and stake life and all you own for freedom and equality. Fight with your last breath against despots and jailors, against robber capitalists and hypocrital priesteraft.

"You make wealth—SEIZE IT. You have the power to devote your masters and blood-seekers to distruction—seize them. It is both your right and your duty to clear the way for free labor and equal happiness, and so benefit yourselves and your descendants—DO NOT WAIT.

"Agitate—organize—revolt. Plant the banners of the Social Revolution on all churches and palaces. Let capital become the servant of labor, and cease to allow useless parasites to squander the fruits of your labor. Will—dare—act, and the world is yours."

The programme of the commune to be established contains explicit directions as to the steps to be taken on the day of the simultaneous organized uprising in Europe and America. The following items will prove interesting reading:

"In every commune where the people have been victorious revolutionary committees will assemble. These will execute the orders issued by the revolutionary army, which will strengthen itself by arming all the working-men and make use of its power as the conqueror of a new world.

"The present system will be the more readily and easily vanquished if those in authority, be they kings, kaisers, or presidents, be at once destroyed. In the meantime massacres of the enemies of the people should be organized.

"Insurrections must be excited in the districts round about the revolted communes. The revolutionary war can only come to an end when the foe has been pursued to his last hiding-place and destroyed.

"In order to solve the economic question more quickly and completely all lands and moveables shall b edeclared the property of their respective communes.

"Until the harmonious re-establishment of the new order of things the following principles, to be made public at once, shall have the force of law:

"Every pending debt shall be extinguished.

"Articles for personal use in pawn shall be returned to their owners free of expense.

"Rents shall not be paid, since all men have the right to protect their health by seeking shelter.

"Committees on Quarters, which will hold permanent sittings in the various districts, will issue billets to those who have no homes, or whose accommodations are inadequate, which will secure them comfortable homes. After the rich are swept away this will be an easy matter.

"Until everyone can be provided with employment, the Commune guarantees to every one the necessaries of life.

"Commissaries of Subsistence will select the property to be levied on and regulate its distribution If the supplies in one locality are inadequate, which may be the case with regard to provisions, regular agents will provide for the importation of the same. The simplest way in this case would be to clean out large country-seats by means of flying columns of armed men.

"Workingmen's associations may be organized at once in accordance with the exigencies of their calling, to take possession of the manufactories, tools, raw material, and so forth. This will form the foundation of the new society.

"The organization of good schools and kindergardens is a matter that may not be delayed. No more can universal instruction of grown persons, which becomes possible under the new system, be postponed or neglected. In churches, where in future, of course, no priestling has any business, people will assemble to listen to the gospel of Truth and of knowledge.

"All law books, criminal and police registers, records of mortgages, mercantile books and documents of every description are to be burned as soon as found.

"All persons in prison are to be set at liberty.

"The military and police are abolished. Those who are refractory or behave in a rascally manner are to be gotten out of this world in the quickest possible way.

"Private property must be abolished. All property belongs to the Commune or to unions of communes.

"Everyone, no matter whether able to work or not, can draw on these organizations for such articles of first necessity as he desires.

"Some must consecrate their unemployed time to the demands of their fellow citizens and take an active part in general management. Others make themselves useful in libraries, where they either perform the labors of authorship or collect materials for instructive lectures to be delivered at some future time. Others simply devote themselves to study. Others again attend the lectures at the University, which will be free to all.

"Academies for the development of painters, sculptors and musicians are to be particularly encouraged.

"Theatres and concert rooms must offer free seats to all, and the performers will be rewarded by the Commune.

"Forced marriages, or marriages of convenience must cease. Men must make a natural choice of a mate. When the causes of vice and crime are removed these latter will disappear themselves."

It is easy to see how quickly such a social system would issue in general idleness, in the waste of all existing property, in poverty, in famine; and how soon the mad experiment wouldreach its inevitable and fatal termination. The crazy experiment will never be attempted on American soil. The better forces of society would crush it into the dust before it could be organized. But, for all that these reckless agitators may do a vast amount of mischief, and may bring about outbreaks which it will cost blood and treasure to suppress. One safeguard against the possibility of such disturbances is thorough and timely exposure of the principles and designs of the bad men who are striving to organize them.

By the way, it is worth noting that of the seven meeting-places of the Philadelphia "groups," all but one are saloons. Almost all crimes are plotted in our saloons. There thieves meet to plan their depredations, and there they meet to divide the spoils. The poverty caused by drink begets discontent and envy and hatred which are the soil on which these agitators sow their seed. The brutalizing power of alcohol makes men capable of such crimes as are outlined above. The destruction of the drink traffic would, of itself alone, almost completely meet whatever of danger is suggested by the facts recorded above.—Christian Statesman.

MEN WHO OWN THEIR HOMES.

An artisan who is working industriously to pay for his little garden and home has a well-defined purpose in life, and when that purpose is attained he becomes the happiest of men. It is a laudible ambition to own one's own habitation, in which case a man's house becomes his castle. Rent-paying dulls the edge of effort, and helps to make a man a sort of drone in life's busy hive. Energy and industry will soon earn and pay for a home. The more a man accomplishes the more he may. An active tool never grows rusty. You will always find those men who are the most forehanded and most forward to do good or to improve the times and the city always busy. Who start our railroads, our machine-shops, our manufactories, and our new school houses and churches? Men of industry and enterprise—men who own their homes that they have earned by their own efforts. As long as they live they keep at work, doing something to benefit themselves and others. We go for activity—in body, in mind, in everything. Let the gold grow not dim, nor the thoughts become stale. Keep all things in motion.—Rochester Union and Advertiser.

Annihilate not the mercies of God by the oblivion of ingratitude; for oblivion is a kind of annihilation; and for things to be as though they had not been, is like unto never being. Make not thy head a grave, but a repository of God's mercies.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XIV.—Concluded.

The dying man sank back exhausted by the effort of speaking. Nelson hastily summoned the physician and watchers. A stimulant was administered and he partially revived, but his mind seemed to wander. The words he uttered were not coherent, only one several times repeated sounded like "mother." He was back in his childhood's home with his parents, simple, Bible-loving German Christians, who never dreamed when the old Lutheran pastor sprinkled the baptismal drops on his infant brow that their only son would be left to wander in the dark mazes of infidelity.

And how did it come about? Through association with the atheistic, communistic leaders of a secret labor union. And the same process is going on all over our land to-day; the subtle poison is being silently injected through the myriad Christ-excluding lodge worships that are paraded in the newspapers and defended by unthinking, Christian people as nothing but harmless benefit societies. Poor Schumacher had only become a convert to the universal religion of Masonry that puts the Bible, the Koran and the Vedas on the same level; and if to him Christ was only a great spiritualist medium, a mere man, of wonderful powers but perfectly to be accounted for, let not that minister or church member who offers strange fire at altars where the very mention of that Holy Name by which he is called is forbidden, cast the first stone at this bewildered and deceived workingman who simply followed out to their logical conclusions the doctrines taught in every Masonic or Odd-fellow lodge in the land.

Suddenly he opened his eyes with a gleam of consciousness.

"It is dark," he muttered, "dark, DARK!"

"Do you want a minister sent for?" inquired the doctor, who thought it about the right thing to propose, though he had no great faith in ministers, being himself a believer in the same "universal religion."

But he shook his head, and his eye fell on Nelson with a look of supplication. Over that sandy foundation of negatives on which he had built his faith, or rather no faith, was fast rushing the cold waters of death—fierce, inexorable, hungry for their prey.

Nelson was a Christian man; he knew that imploring glance was directed to him. He must say something. Slowly and distinctly he repeated that precious text, which, while the world stands, shall be as a beacon light flashing far out over the dark sea of eternity:

"God so loved the world"—Nelson's heart was tender with his own recent practicing of the God-like grace of pity, and perhaps for that reason he threw into the familiar words, all unconsciously to himself, a deeper pathos and power—"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Over the face of the dying stole a strange calm: whether the calm of dissolving nature or the peace which passeth all understanding, who shall say?

A moment's labored breathing, and Schumacher, infidel and socialist, lay dead.

CHAPTER XV.

A MODERN PUBLICAN.

We will now visit quieter scenes.

Fairfield is rejoicing in a flourishing Farmer's Grange, and though Israel Deming's trial of "the machine" had not been altogether satisfactory, none of the sanguinary results which Uncle Zeb's comparison had seemed to dimly predict have yet happened. As for Dora, she has found the grange precisely what she wanted and expected—a field for new conquests over the hearts of her rustic admirers, as well as a most advantageous theater for the display of her pretty features, and all those general feminine bewitchments which ever since the Fall have beguiled the foolish Adams of our race.

Uncle Zeb sometimes slyly inquired with an inward chuckle "if the machine was working well."

"Beautifully," broke in Dora on one of these occasions, addingly saucily, "You needn't ask father. He hasn't got his mind made up yet."

Mr. Deming laughed and gave her rosy cheek a playful pinch.

"I believe a good frolic is all you young folks care about."

"We were all young ourselves once," sagaciously observed Uncle Zeb. "I remember the husking parties I used to go to when I was a boy amost as well as though the last one only happened yesterday. And I remember the hogsheads of New England rum they used to tap whenever there was a bee or a raising or anything of that kind. How the times have altered. It does beat all. Our minister used to preach rousing sermons on election and fore-ordination and the eternal sovereignty, and I re'ly think he was a good man, but he used to like his glass of toddy as well as anybody, and it's a fact now—I've known him in his parish visits to take so much at the different places he went to that when he come to go home he couldn't walk straight. Talking about that makes me think of what Deacon Wetherby told me to-day about Snyder that keeps that doggery over to the east part. He's got converted."

"You don't say so," responded Mr. Deming. "Well, well; that's good news, if it is true," he added with a little touch of doubtfulness, which perhaps he ought not to have felt, considering how many times he had read the story of Zaccheus the publican.

"Oh, there ain't a bit of doubt," briskly responded Uncle Zeb, who could gossip about anything, a conversion or a revival as soon as a marriage or a death. "Deacon Wetherby says it makes him think of Saul of Tarsus to hear him a praisin' and a prayin'. And you know he was one of the lowest kind of critters before. And sez I, 'Deacon, that shows we ain't to despair of the most miserable sinner that walks the earth. The Lord's mercy ain't straightened.' And the Deacon, he jest grasped my hand and sez he, 'Uncle Zeb, I feel like goin' around and singin' "Amazin' grace" all the time since I he'erd on't.'"

Dora had slipped away while this conversation was in progress. We must confess the truth—neither temperance nor religion were to this young damsel very attractive themes. She hated the sight and smell of rum, and as for rumsellers, they were a miserable, degraded set, and drunkards' wives and children—why, they were to be pitied of course. But as she generally ended by putting all such thoughts out of her head as soon as possible, the reader will perceive that no very great drafts were made on her sympathies. She was glad in a general way that that wretched Snyder was going to quit rumselling and lead a better life. Why couldn't everybody be good and respectable? It would be so much easier for themselves and better all round.

The deep, solemn problems of human existence, that mystery of sin and misery under whose weight creation groans and travails, she either passed over entirely or touched with the same ignorant lightness with which a butterfly might be supposed to sun its wings alit on a page of mathematical diagrams.

This modern publican was no other than Peter Snyder, who, since he was cast out from Jacksonville, had wandered through dry places seeking rest, and finding an empty shanty in a part of Fairfield where he could ply his trade without much risk of molestation, he had taken possession thereof and set up what was ostensibly a small grocery store, but where the initiated could obtain at any hour of the day or night the very vilest brand of liquor in the market.

It is decidedly pleasant to look upon one's self as persecuted in a good cause. Peter Snyder considered himself a martyr to the doctrine of personal liberty, but we must confess that he showed very little of the martyr meekness. If, during his stay in Jacksonville, he had seemed possessed of an evil spirit to seduce and destroy, like the man in the parable, that evil spirit had returned to him since he settled in Fairfield intensified sevenfold. He had always sold rum for a living and he meant to sell it; and every bothering, fanatical fool, who, as he pathetically expressed it, "was trying to ruin a poor man's business," he consigned in no gracious terms to the adversary of God and men, with whom, judging from the frequency and freedom with which he used his name, Mr. Peter Snyder seemed to be on very intimate terms.

But why should the candid reader utterly condemn this poor, nineteenth-century publican for his resolution. He had the government permit to sell liquor. Why shouldn't he sell it? We are told in Holy Writ that earthly governments are God's viceroys; and if, standing in the place of Eternal Justice, Eternal Purity, Eternal Love, they dare to license that which is the cup of death to soul and body, to put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter, darkness for light and light for darkness, is it strange that in the minds of the governed, especially that class who, like Mr. Peter Snyder, are not in the habit of making nice moral distinctions, there should exist some confusion of ideas. Why is it right for the nation to sell rum, and wrong for the individual? And if rumselling is right, why may not some other things be right too? It is from the class of minds thus taught to question that the socialist will always make the readiest converts to his doctrine of dagger and dynamite. Congressmen, legislators, and "all in authority" from the Chief Executive to the local magistrate, can you afford to run the fearful risk that every government must run which makes right and wrong mere rhetorical terms by licensing iniquity, and then joining as an active partner by taking to itself ninety per cent of the profit? Is it not warming in its own bosom the serpent's eggs which in time will hatch the cockatrice of anarchy and revolution?

But to return to our publican. He was low and despised. Decent and respectable society would have shuddered at the very idea of admitting him within its pale; but was there in his heart some latent seed of good, or did the prayers of his long-sainted Methodist mother come up in remembrance before God, or was it that sublime, inscrutable purpose of Jehovah to have mercy on whom he will have mercy that wrought the miracle? For while theologians dispute over the nature and laws of miracles and look askance on cases of faith healing as a superstition of weak and simple minds, the work of the supernatural goes on in the same grandly immutable fashion with which the sun shines and the rain falls and the seasons come and go and ask no leave of any theological school.

Mr. Peter Snyder had moments when his conscience was not at ease, and like the troubled sea when it cannot rest it cast up mire and dirt. It was at these periodical seasons that he swore the loudest and declaimed most violently against "hypocrites," under which comprehensive term he meant to include in a general way everybody who made any pretensions to be better than himself. For it must be explained that Mr. Snyder decidedly resented being classed among the world's off-scourings—its pariahs and its Ishmaels. In his own opinion he was no worse than the professing Christian who, for the sake of gain, rents his property to a saloonist, or the politician who, for the sake of securing votes, caters to the saloon interest, or the public official who winks at violations of the law in his Masonic brethren; and on the whole, looking at the subject from an unprejudiced point of view, we are inclined to think him in the right.

So when it was reported that a series of revival meetings were going to be held in the neighborhood, Mr. Snyder had considerable to say on the subject, but we will not take the trouble of transcribing his remarks as the reader can easily imagine their general drift and tenor.

"They say Elder Woods is a goin' to come down on the Masons red hot. That'll suit you, Snyder," chuckled Jack Bender, who, with several other red-nosed and bloated specimens of humanity, was lounging round the bar-room stove, discussing the forthcoming meetings in that free and liberal style with which such matters are generally argued under the inspiration of an atmosphere reeking with oaths and tobacco smoke.

"You don't say so," responded the worthy proprietor of the establishment; and after an instant's reflection he brought his fist down on the counter and roared out with a tremendous oath:

"Then I'll go to hear him."

Jack laughed.

"Did ye hear that, boys? Snyder is willing to go to hear the water saint jist for the fun of hearing him blow up the Masons. If that ain't about the nighest to cutting off yer nose to spite yer face as anything I ever hearn on."

But Mr. Snyder's resolution was not of a kind to be shaken by a little harmless chaffing.

"I don't care if it is," he responded fiercely. "I've said I'll go, and I will go. And now jist look here. Any on ye as goes to acting off shines on the preacher will have me agin him square. I give ye fair warning."

This was not altogether an idle threat, as Mr. Snyder had been in former days a pugilist of considerable local renown. Even now he was a match for three rowdies like Jack Bender.

(To be continued.)

We are always suspicious of an interest, be it moral, religious, political, or personal, that seeks by a secret association rather than by an open advocacy of its aims, to secure its ends. With the spread of general intelligence, the enlargnment of social activity, with the diffusion of thought and opportunity to rise, there is no demand for secret combinations. The slight husbandry of good that is sometimes accomplished by them is counterbalanced a thousand-fold by the evils of which they are the direct or indirect cause.—Religious Herald.

Robert Ingersoll asked his auditors the other evening whether a poor wretch arriving in town without a dollar in his pocket would inquire the way to a Presbyterian deacon's house; and they greeted the sally with immense applause. He was trying to get off a smart satire upon the meanness of orthodox Christians, as contrasted with the generosity of infidels; but he missed his aim. Everybody knows that ministers and other well-known Christian people are the first to be besieged by beggars. I have frequently said to these persons, Why do you come here? Why do you always go to ministers' houses? The invariable answer is that they think they will be more likely to receive sympathy and help there than elsewhere. We might retort the question of the jolly lecturer and ask whether a poor stranger was ever known to inquire where the infidels of the town lived, or whether a person in any sorrow was ever known to seek out an infidel to afford him comfort. Will the man who goes about ridiculing Christianity tell his audience the next time he lectures where they can find an infidel hospital, or refuge of any kind for poverty or distress, or any society composed of infidels which seeks out and relieves the suffering, in this country or in any other on the face of the earth?—Christian Intelligencer.

A man never knows what a weak, fickle, and uncertain master he has in himself until he is at liberty to govern his own life and do as he pleases.

McKenzie and Patterson, of Quincy, Mass., have received a contract from William H. Vanderbilt for the building of a family tomb. It was designed by Architect Richard M. Hunt, of New York, and will be in the Romanesque style, 100 by 110 feet on the ground, and sixty-three feet from the surface to the apex of each dome of which there will be two. The exposed portions will be of Quincy granite, the vestibules and catecombs of marble, and the arches and piers of limestone. The structure is to be erected in the Moravian Cemetery at New Dorp, Staten Island. It will require about 8,000,000 pounds of granite, marble and limestone combined to complete it. The cost is estimated at $250,000. The tomb is to be finished by December, and will be the most elaborate house of the dead in America.

LITERATURE.

Literary Life for April is a Chicago number. Bayard Taylor's portrait and autograph embellish the first page. "Chicago Illustrated," "Emerson and Taylor," "The Sweet Antonio River," "The Claimant at Washington," "Thoughts on Mind," "Restraints, Cures, and Substitutes for Drink," "Anecdotes of Authors," "Conversation," are the titles of leading articles.

The Library Magazine for April comes out early like the birds of spring; and very appositely an American authority in ornithithology, Maurice Thompson, contributes a fine article on the woodpecker family. Other articles are, "Ophelia's Madness," "Hadrian's Address to his Soul," "The Inventor of the Steamboat," "Vittorio Alfieri," "The Elmira Reformatory," an exceedingly interesting article on the topic of prison-discipline ably discussed in the current North American Review, "Schliemanns' Discovery of Tiryns," "Beetles as Purifiers," "The Banana."

The English Illustrated Magazine for April continues Bret Harte's story, "A Ship of '49." Most readers will turn first to the finely illustrated article, "Highways and Byeways," descriptive of English scenery to the southeast of London. Archibald Forbes, the well known war correspondent of the London press, gives us in an entertaining style an incident of the defense of Schipka Pass during the Turko-Russian war. The illustrated poem, "The Siren's Three," follows the Persian poet, Omar Khayyam, and his illustrator, Elihu Vedder, but at a distance.

Vick's Monthly most beautifully opens with a colored plate of daisies, and continues its attractive and useful articles and hints on floral culture.

—General Lew Wallace, official representative of the Government in Turkey, says that his opinion of missionaries has decidedly changed by a residence among them. At first he was prejudiced against them, but now gladly records his testimony as to their character and service.

—Some acts of persecution by Buddhists have naturally followed the virtual disestablishment of Buddhism by the government of Japan, and Christians have suffered some annoyance, but not more than was to have been expected. The Governor of Kioto called the Buddhist priests together and advised them to restrain their followers from exhibitions of sectarian zeal.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SWEDISH-AMERICAN BIBLE SEMINARY.

St. Paul, Minn.

I like your evangelical articles and your labor in direction of reform, spiritual and political, as far as my views of truth correspond with yours. I am a believer in the old orthodox faith, held mostly by Presbyterians, Congregationalists, and Baptists, agreeing with the latter in the doctrine of baptism; yet thinking that the Baptist church too might need a more Scriptural organization and a higher spiritual life. Plurality of elders in one and the same local church was an apostolic institution, and would, I think, greatly add to the efficiency and spirituality of the church. One of these might be the preacher of the congregation, while the rest aided in the pastoral care of the whole flock, and might be spiritual business men, farmers, etc. Every member could thus be watched over and cared for spiritually, far more efficiently than now is the case.

We organized a Bible Seminary here in October, begun without means, trusting in God. By this time we have secured among the Swedish Baptists a subscription of $20,000 towards endowment, and a number of wills of property besides. It is of course difficult to carry the work without means, until the interest shall begin to come in; but so far the Lord has graciously made a way for us, and in him do we trust for the future. We have thirty-six students; over forty have availed themselves more or less of the institution. We call our school a Bible Seminary because we make the Bible itself our principal study, and next in order the usual critical and theological branches. We also intend to have a suitable preparatory course, as soon as we shall be able to secure a sufficient faculty. No members of secret societies can be members of this institution, and the institution will never confer honorary degrees. Its aim is ultimately home and foreign missionary work. Yours truly. (Prof.) J. A. Edgren.

THE "ANCIENT" ORDER OF UNITED WORKMEN.

Galva, Ill.

Editor Cynosure:—The lodge of Ancient Order of United Workmen gave a free entertainment here on the 13th of March. The chief speaker was Alexander McLean, of Macomb, Ill., "Past Grand Master," also "Grand Receiver for the State." P. A. Cool, Methodist minister, and Col. J. McClenahan, superintendent of the public schools, also spoke and testified to the good qualites of the order.

The handbills informed the public that "the foremost aims and purposes of this order are to strive to improve the moral, intellectual, and social condition of its members; to encourage useful industry; to promote fraternity and philanthropy; to render mutual assistance to each other, and to guard each member's family from suffering by want, when the time comes for him, as it must come to all, to pass from this life to another." The P. G. M. "set forth the objects and benefits of the order" in a masterly way, and but for the large amount of bombast and egotism indulged in might have made a good impression.

Whether the impression made on the audience was favorable or unfavorable I have not been able to ascertain. One young man, whom they had been trying to get into the lodge, was very much disgusted, and says they will get nothing from him. While it may enable them to draw in and hoodwink some who seem to love deception, I think the lecture and talks had a tendency to open the eyes of the thoughtful and better classes. Many who are opposed to secretism and the lodge rule, have been led to look upon this order with some degree of favor. Its freedom, as is represented, from the objectionable features of secrecy, with its "superexcellent system of life insurance," strongly recommend it, and even make anti-secret men slow to condemn it. The argument that though there may be harm in other secret orders, there can be no harm in this has not been used without effect, and by it many have been deceived as to the real character of the order. To decide this point I attended the lecture. After hearing and carefully weighing the evidence, (and all their own witnesses) I could come to no other decision than this: It is a branch of the deadly upas tree of secretism. It is simply Freemasonry behind the screen—secretism sugar-coated, to catch those who hesitate to swallow the bitter oaths and obligations of older orders.

Does Masonry bind its votaries with unscriptural and anti-Christian obligations? Can the A. O. U. W. do less and be a secret order? Is Masonry a selfish institution? So is the A. O. U. W. Their "charity" begins at home and ends there. "It is young and healthy men we want to get into our order." "We don't want old or sickly men," was the clear and strongly expressed sentiment of the speaker. The A. O. U. W. is not an institution to help or benefit the needy, but those who are able to help themselves; and is, therefore, at least, only a selfish arrangement, as all such orders and institutions must be that bind themselves to aid each other, and cut themselves off from all objects of true charity. While there may be exceptions, it is true in general, that a bastard or forced charity kills the true spirit of charity. If true charity is dead or banished from the land, as some claim, I charge its death or banishment upon the secret orders; and the A. O. U. W. is doing its part toward such a sad result equally as well as the others. I am fully persuaded that the follower of Jesus Christ has no more use for the A. O. U. W. than he has for Masonry or any other ungodly institution.

R. Canning.

THE "ONE BODY."—LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Chicago, Ill.

That the division of Christ's professed followers into sects is wrong, and a very great hindrance to the work of God is now plainly seen by many, perperhaps the majority of them, but the remedy does not so clearly appear.

But why this division? What is the cause? The same that divided the Corinthian church: "I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ;" that is to say, "I am of the Baptist; and I of the Methodist; and I of the Congregational; and I of the Presbyterian; and I of the Christians." (1. Cor. 1: 12.) "For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?" 1 Cor. 3: 3. Many to-day are doing just what the Jews did, "Teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." Matt. 15: 9. There is not the slightest command or warrant in the Bible for the Methodist, or Baptist, or Presbyterian, or Congregationalist church, or any one of the hundreds of other sects? Jesus in that last memorable prayer for his disciples recorded in John 17, made his most earnest prayer to the Father (21. v.): "That they all may be one: as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me;" and in the 19th verse he says, "For their sakes I sanctify myself [set myself apart to this earthly mission and crucifixion], that they also might be truly sanctified," (margin). He gave his life that they might be sanctified and thus made one.

The reason the remedy has not been found is that it has not been sought in the right place and by the proper means. Man by wisdom knows not God nor his ways. By thought, reasoning, discussion, the right of spiritual things is never found. "To the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to my word." And then more than union is wanted, "that they may be one" is the Bible plan. "But now are they many members, yet one body." 1. Cor. 12: 20.

Jesus in the Bible, tells of the remedy; and it is not in holding union meetings, talking over the matter, resolving to be united, but in having the carnality taken out. Throw away all the theories of men about the matter. "Come out from among them and touch not the unclean" tobacco, liquor, lodges, parties, rinks, suppers, theatres and popular worldly amusements. Sanctify yourselves, set yourselves apart to the service of God, consecrate every power to him, present your bodies a living sacrifice." Then ask God to apply the blood of cleansing, sanctify you wholly and fill you with the Holy Ghost, and tarry till ye be endued with power from on high. Then you will go forth as the disciples did after the ten days' prayer-meeting in an upper room, and Satan's kingdom will totter and fall before you

These two texts may then be aptly applied to you: (the first is a modern rendering by a prominent Englishman) "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds, and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge, according to the knowledge of him that created him, in that great creation where there is neither Englishman nor German, baptism nor want of baptism, Turk nor Russian, slave nor free; but Christ is all, and in all." "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." 1. Cor. 12: 13.

S. D. Kinne.

THE OLD JAIL AT CANANDAIGUA.

Canandaigua, N. Y., March 23, 1885.

With my son Williston I visited the old jail in this historic village of a few thousand inhabitants. It remains substantially as it was in 1826, when Mrs. Hall delivered the ill-fated Morgan to "the tender mercies" of his professed friends, whose subsequent treatment of their victim demonstrated the Scripture assertion of their malicious, unfeeling cruelty.

By permission of Sheriff Peck, we visited the room and the cell where Morgan was confined. It was the "inner" upper prison, reached by an ascent of two very narrow stairways, and gloomy as a sepulchre of the unforgiven dead. The "reception room" was, I should judge, about twelve feet in length and six in width, lighted by two small heavily barred windows, from which you look out upon the high, strong wall inclosing the prison yard. The ceiling is of a height sufficient to allow a person of ordinary stature to stand erect, and both walls and ceiling are profusely ornamented with designs drawn by occupants, disclosing the fact that in some instances taste, culture and crime have been immured within these walls. Two rude pine benches constitute the entire furniture of the room, which is now, as the remainder of the building, heated by steam. On one side and opposite the window wall are three cells, each furnished with an iron bedstead and guarded by heavy iron slat-doors. Some of the most notorious criminals in the county have been taken from these cells to pay the extreme penalty of the law on the gallows, and it was in one of these narrow, low, cheerless vaults (which one is not known) that Morgan was incarcerated, for the alleged offense of surrptiously obtaining possession of a shirt and cravat.

The well which was curbed and on which Col. Sawyer gave the signal raps to call the carriage, is still in use, and now supplied with a chain pump. Mr. Peck, the sheriff, gave every opportunity desired and sent a turnkey to unlock and lock the doors where we wished to go. He said, "I was only four years old when Morgan was here, but from what I have learned I have no doubt that the Masons killed him. But I do not believe the body found at Oak Orchard creek was his." He was much interested in the facts we gave him about the inquest, etc., and said, "You have evidently looked the matter up carefully and may be correct in your conclusions."

I was glad to know that at the jail, as at the arsenal, where he was last confined, the fact of his incarceration and the alleged crime he had commited were remembered and related by those in charge to visitors. The blood spot is still crimson on the lodge record, and even prison cells and sepulchral vaults echo the truth along down the ages.

J. P. Stoddard.

GOOD TEMPLARISM IN NEW YORK.

Schuyler's Lake, N. Y.

The Good Templar lodge in a neighboring township was first located at Exter, but subsequently removed to Schuyler's Lake where for a time it occupied the rooms of the Masonic lodge. The older society, however soon felt discommoded or degraded by their presence and insisted on removal, which excited the indignation of the Good Templars and was denounced as a want of courtesy to a kindred organization. The only other apartment available for the occupancy was the upper story of a cider mill, which was procured of her husband by a lady who was a prominent patron of the Methodist church and aspired to a controlling influence in the lodge. Matters are said to have gone smoothly until her sons were reported for violation of the pledge, when a rupture ensued and soon terminated in dissolution. The books were then appropriated to the ignoble use of recording the transactions of the cider mill.

The results, to this lady, have been that her sons, accustomed to the lodge by early training have since become Masons and are brought by nocturnal conviviality into closer relations with the saloon. She has sown the wind and may reap the whirlwind.

Soon after the dissolution of the lodge she insisted upon expulsion from church of a gentleman for alleged misconduct with a lady Templar in prayer-meeting. A protracted contest ended in dissensions which are not yet wholly healed.

One of the worst drunkards who had joined the lodge was elected Worthy Chief Templar (for encouragement, as alleged,) and attended the Grand Lodge. No appreciable benefit ensued, and he is more strongly addicted to intoxicating liquors than before and under frequent arrest. True to instinct, however, he has since joined the Grand Army.

The youth who were initiated extolled the opportunities for flirtation and "going home with the girls." They also stated that whisky was frequently carried in their pockets into the lodge and saloons patronized before and after meeting. The violations of the pledge were thus made a pastime and a school of cunning.

Some of the most prominent Masons of the vicinity belonged to this lodge, but none have since permitted their names to be used on a prohibition ticket, nor voted otherwise than with the old parties. The temperance lectures of one have been neutralized by his practices.

When the worst counterbalance the better features of an institution it is useless and corrupting. And when Masons grant the use of their hall and manifest interest for the reform by becoming Good Templars alone, they are merely promoting their own ends and plotting for control. They neither vote for prohibition themselves nor permit others.

The Good Templar lodge at Garattsville is said to have been broken up by the scandal that arose from a lady Templar of good family being forced to marry beneath her standing to escape a worse lot. *

PITH AND POINT.

THE O. F. RITUAL CORRECT.

"I have been an Oddfellow myself, but have severed therefrom forever, and I know your rituals are correct, I have initiated candidates with them. Pray forgiveness for me. The Cynosure opened my eyes and I am willing to do all I can to save others from the soul-destroying death-trap.—J. H. Jones, Jamesport, Mo.

PAR NOBILE FRATRUM.

We are having many good, earnest and lively temperance and reform meetings here in different parts of the city. Monday night I talked and sung to a large audience in the east part of the city and next Monday night I am to lecture in the same place. Last night Bro. Foote and I addressed a large audience at the "White Cross Club" chapel, and are invited there again. Many have been recently and hopefully reformed.—Geo. W. Clark, Detroit, Mich.

VOTE YOUR PRINCIPLES.

I consider the whiskey men more consistent in their voting than a great many of the prohibitionists, for just as soon as a man or party fails to meet their demands, they scratch him off their ticket and vote for the man that will work for their interest, regardless of what party he is. But so long as they can keep the temperance votes divided between the old parties by prejudice, just so long will they defeat any temperance legislation. But let every American assert his right and vote his sentiments, regardless of party ties, and leave the result with God and success will crown our efforts.—Joseph Garside, Girard, Kansas.

A LIVE CHURCH.

I have started a United Brethren church here, free from any secret society, no instrumental music, no choir, but congregational singing. We commenced September 1st with four or five members and now have thirty. We are doing a good work; it is like protracted meeting all the time. Yesterday an old man rose for prayers. I pay one hundred dollars for the poor besides my own tax. It is acknowledged that we are having the most spiritual meetings ever held in the city. All the other churches take in secret societies.—Nelson Z. Northup.

ONE THING MORE.

There is one thing more that would make Masons and all kindred secret societies tremble, almost the world over. If John P. St. John would just come out and make a clean breast of Masonry and confess that he had sinned in that thing God has placed him in a position that he could be one of the most powerful thunderbolts that could be turned loose amongst them. It would be like the barley cake of Gideon rolling into the camp of the enemies of the Lord. May God help him is my prayer.—John Thompson, Sabetha, Kan.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON III.—April 19, 1885.—Paul Going to Rome. Acts 28: 1-15.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He thanked God, and took courage. Acts 28: 15.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Hospitality is not dependent on any system of secret signs and pass-words. vs. 1, 2. These "barbarous people" who entertained Paul and his shipwrecked companions so kindly were not of the same religion, race or language. No Masonic oath or Masonic sign of distress bound them to show hospitality to this set of shivering, miserable, half-drowned wretches thus cast upon their shores. It was but the tie of a common humanity which made them hasten to relieve their sufferings, and open to them their scanty stores of food and clothing. The most common argument used in support of Masonry is the protection it is supposed to afford travelers. But we see how well Paul and his companions fared without it. Neither have the most distinguished travelers and missionaries of our own day owed their safety in foreign lands to any such source. In the Franco Prussian war the red cross of Geneva protected its wearer when engaged in her Christ-like labors of love among the wounded and dying, even among rude and hostile soldiery. And in the Union Signal instances have been given of protection and kindness from strange railroad officials called forth by the magic letters W. C. T. U. There is a beautiful story told of some adventurers landing on an unknown southern coast and meeting with a band of natives, who as soon as they saw them made the sign of the cross with their spear-heads in token of peace and amity with the new-comers. The tie of natural brotherhood between man and man is stronger than the artificial tie of Masonry. But the tie of Spiritual brotherhood, of being the children of one common Father, redeemed by one Saviour, led by one Spirit, is a three-fold cord which cannot be broken. A Christian should be ashamed to cast such dishonor on his Lord, and his Lord's Bride, the church, as to seek protection in traveling from an oath-bound, anti-Christian organization.

2. The fallacy of human judgments. vs. 3–6. Humanity is prone to two extremes, well illustrated in these barbarians who look upon Paul one moment as an atrocious murderer, and the next are ready to worship him as a god. Till we have learned to make in our own consciousness of well-doing an impregnable asylum against wrong judgment, we shall suffer loss of peace and have no courage to work for despised reforms. Said St. Francis D'Assisi, "A man is as great as he is in the sight of God and no greater." It is of vast consequence what God thinks about us but comparatively little what the world thinks.

3. The power of the Gospel to heal the body. vs. 7–10. Christianity does not teach that physical laws are outside the spiritual, but it does teach that the spiritual includes the physical in a divine oneness. Paul, like his divine Master, made the wants of the lower nature a stepping-stone on which to mount in his ministrations to the higher. A gospel which has no regard for the bodies of men is poorer than the old Judaism. It is in tangible acts of mercy that humanity learns to read the story of a higher love.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

What is the protection which God promises his people? Ps. 91. When a Christian becomes a Mason, does he throw discredit on these promises? Does the Bible couple God's power to heal sin with his power to heal the body? Ps. 103: 3; Math. 9: 8.

PRACTICAL QUESTIONS.

Ver. 1. What should we remember first when a calamity is just passed?

Vrs. 2, 7. What virtues can these heathen teach some Christians? Why especially should we be kind and sympathizing and hospitable to others? Matt. 25: 40. May we find opportunity for manifesting love everywhere?

Ver. 3. What teaching of Christ did Paul exemplify in gathering the sticks? Matt. 20: 27.

Ver. 4. Is it ever right to judge from appearances? Why? Matt. 7: 1; Luke 6: 37; Rom. 2: 1; 14: 3; Jas. 4: 11.

Ver. 5. Are afflictions sometimes permitted that men may see the victory which we gain through faith? What venomous beast must we resist as Paul shook off the serpent? What promise of the Lord's was fulfilled in this and the eighth verse? Mark 16: 18.

Ver. 6. May we be as calm as was Paul, whether the world malign or honor us?

Vers. 8, 9. Is the age of miracles past? What authority have we for believing Jesus will heal us now, in answer to the prayer of faith? Ps. 103: 3; Isa. 53: 4. 5; Matt. 8: 16, 17; Jas. 5: 15: Heb. 13: 8. Do you improve the delays you meet with in the journey of life?

Ver. 10. Were they right to receive this honor?

Ver. 11–15. Are even the strongest Christians refreshed by encouragement and sympathy? Are you so living that Christian brethren will always be glad to welcome you?—The Illustrator.

TEACHING HINTS.

1. A short history of a consecrated life, viz.:

Preserved by God (v.5); Used by God (v. 8); Honored by men (v. 10). Ah, how abundantly is pays to be wholly consecrated to God!

2. The impossibility of stopping the Gospel:

Paul is only a shipwrecked prisoner, but the Gospel seems to sweep the island and dominate the ship's company. Holy Ghost power in preaching, and divine interference in disease, go with Paul's labors.

3. Our duty to God's workers:

Show them our interest in them and Christ's work (v. 15), and so encourage their hearts. Your Sabbath school teacher or pastor may be fainting by the way for want of a word of encouragement, or, which is the best encouragement, for lack of seeing you accept his Saviour. Do something that will make him "thank God and take courage."—The U. P. Bible Teacher.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

State Agents.

Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Iowa, D. P. Rathbun, Wayne
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

Degree Workers.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun. Wayne, Iowa.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans.
D A. Richards Clarkville, Mich.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

The Cynosure and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. Phillips,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially by his wife. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. Price, fifteen cents. Ten for a dollar.

The American Party.

First Nomination for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

Platform Adopted at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

Name Adopted at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Cowell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

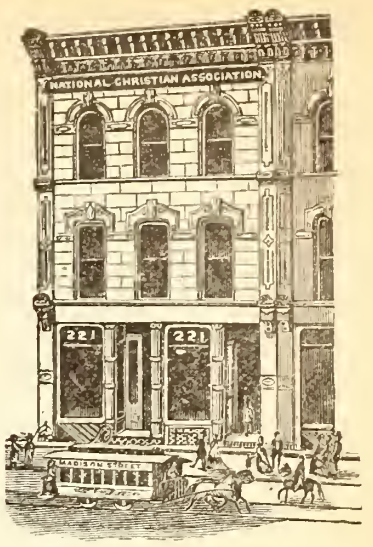
Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.

Eli Tapley, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. Galloway, Okahumka Florida.

Wm. Hazenburg, Cape Town, S. Africa.



A. D. Zaraphonithes, Andros, Greece.

C. B. Ward, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. Please designate to which one such funds shall be sent.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

President.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

Vice-Pres.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

Rec. Sec.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.

Cor. Sec. and Gen. Agent.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Treasurer.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Directors.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

Form of Bequest.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

President.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D
Secretaries.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

Alabama.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

California.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

Illinois.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

Indiana.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno· Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

Iowa.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

Kansas.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

Massachus tts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

Michigan.—Pres., C. C. Foote, Detroit; Rec. Sec'y, W. H. Ross, Williamstown; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

Minnesota.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

Missouri.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler, Albany.

Nebraska.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. pooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

New Hampshire.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

New York.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

Ohio.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

Pennsylvania.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

Vermont.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

Wisconsin.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

West Virginia.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton, Treas., H. B. Higgins, Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

Editors.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 9, 1885.

MR. MOODY SPEAKS AGAIN.

During the frequent brief meetings held by the great evangelist during the present season we have not forgotten that the Cynosure readers would be anxious to hear of any new word from his lips against the lodge evil, and to know whether his pronounced, clear, and Christian views given in 1875 and '76 were maintained, or whether the fine gold of his testimony was becoming dim. At the Omaha meeting, March 19th and 20th, Mr. Moody replied to the question propounded him through the query box—"Is it advisable for me, a minister, to join the lodge in order to increase my influence?"

He said: "What can be accomplished by going 'hand in glove' with the world? You will have more influence out of it than you will in it. Abraham had more influence in Sodom than Lot did, for after Lot moved into the wicked city, and did all he could to build it up and make it prosperous, and to increase the religious spirit of its inhabitants, 'they mocked him.' It is best to keep out of the lodge for it is of the world, and we become unequally yoked together. Twenty-five Christians go into a lodge with seventy-five unconverted and wicked men. The lodge votes to have a Sabbath excursion, the Christians are out-voted, and being yoked together become partakers of other men's sins. Men say to me, 'Mr. Moody, you ought to join the lodge.' I say to them, 'What have you got in the lodge? Any thing good?' 'O yes,' they reply. 'What is it?' 'O, we can't tell you until you go in!' 'O, that's the devil's snare'—'can't tell until after you get in,' then it's too late! I say to them, 'Then I'll stay out.' Christian men have no business in the lodge; they don't get power there. Better be walking alone with God, than to have all the world applauding and be without power. God's truth is laid to the line, and we want to score to the line, let the chips hit who they may. 'Separation' needs to be the watchword. God help us to keep out of the world."

MORMONS SKULKING.

The General Mormon Conference held usually in Salt Lake City was this year changed to Logan, a town 100 miles to the north. This extraordinary transfer is explained as the result of the vigorous prosecution of polygamists by the Federal courts. Neither of the three presidents of the church were present, at the meeting last Saturday; and the proceedings were tame and unimportant. The reports that Pres. John Taylor would issue a proclamation commanding obedience to the U. S. laws and the abandoning of polygamy have not been verified, neither has the promise, that there would be a convenient new revelation to abrogate the long-standing "divine" order of Brigham Young, been fulfilled.

But there are many appearances of a crisis in Mormondom. For the last year or two disaster has followed defeat. A few years ago the representative of Utah with his four mistresses could appear proudly on the floor of Congress, and demand recognition, though living in flagrant and open violation of the laws made by that body; and Mormon money was good enough to employ Jeremiah S. Black, one of the first lawyers of the country. But now Cannon and his harem are expelled from Washington; a score of the Mormon elders have been convicted of polygamy, and many others are indicted; the Supreme Court has approved the law under which the prosecutions have been made; and the last hope, that the new administration would remove the Governor, the judge, and prosecuting attorney who are pushing this law, and put in new and subservient party men, has been cruelly shattered by President Cleveland's inaugural. Murray, Zane and Dickson are left to continue their work; U. S. officers have searched "Amelia Palace," John Taylor's official residence in search of the president, and have subpœnaed the inmates. Cannon's house also has been raided and the hierarchy of Mormondom is in abject hiding for fear of the things that are to come. The people are astonished and their leaders are fleeing from Utah or hiding from public view. It is reported openly in Salt Lake that one of the wealthiest and shrewdest of the Mormons declared they must choose between three courses of action: fight, run, or surrender. Fight they dare not, run they cannot, for Mexico won't have them, and surrender they may pretend to until the storm blows over. The Salt Lake Tribune (Gentile) already suggests that if Taylor proclaims against polygamy a general amnesty should be granted by the government under certain conditions.

In this is the Mormon hope. They well understand the varying chances of party power and the fickleness of popular clamor. By yielding, perhaps only for a short time, the practice of polygamy, they may retain their hierarchy, their temples, their beautiful and fertile lands, their church and their Endowment House lodge.

Do they vainly indulge such a hope? The olive branch held out by the leading Gentile paper in Salt Lake does not disprove it; nor does the general chuckle of the press at the dodging of heads in Utah. Sometimes people laugh before they are out of the woods. The fact that for twenty years Mormonism flourished like a palm in the face of national prohibition need not dispel such a hope. Because one set of officers enforce these laws does not prove that the next will. A correspondent of the Boston Advertiser lately wrote: "Incompetent and unworthy administrators of the national law have, from the first, been the chief hinderance in the management of Utah affairs, worse, even, than the bitterest opposition of the Mormon church." That incompetence may not yet be at an end. Nor does the fact that the Masons have given up the Mormons, to be discarded along with old men, women, and fools, disprove it. There is nothing in Masonry to trouble Mormonism. A Grand lodge gave Mormons a dispensation sometime after Brigham Young had his revelation in July, 1843, establishing polygamy.

Nor does the tone of the Mormon hierarchy express any intention to submit to law, and lay down the despotic priestly power they have so long exercised. Twenty-five years ago David A. Burr, who had been clerk of the Supreme Court of Utah, in a lecture in New York thus described the higher degrees of Mormon Masonry:

THE "MELCHISEDEC PRIESTHOOD."—OATH OF TREASON.

The next step is taken only by those who are considered by the priests as sufficiently trustworthy to be leaders of the people. It is termed the first degree of the Melchisedec priesthood, and confers upon the recipient the privilege and authority of a high priest of the church. It is in this degree that the Mormon priesthood take their solemn oath to cherish constant enmity towards the United States Government for not avenging the death of Smith; to do all that they can towards tearing down or overturning that government; to endeavor to baffle its designs and frustrate its intentions: to renounce all allegiance and refuse all submission. If unable to do anything themselves towards the accomplishmentof these objects, to teach it to their children from the nursery, impress it upon them from the death-bed, detail it upon them as a legacy. To make it the one idea and sacred duty of their lives, so that the kingdom of God [the Mormon church and priesthood] may subdue all other kingdoms and fill the whole earth. Curses the most frightful, penalties the most barbarous, are threatened and combined in the obligation either for failing to abide by, or daring to reveal, these covenants.

THE HOLY OF HOLIES.

The succeeding degrees present certain forms of worship, etc., and at last give to the endowed privileges of immorality and licentiousness most shocking and revolting. Finally, those who have by a long case of fidelity fully proven themselves worthy, pass into the holy of holies, and enter a sacred order by which they are "sealed up against all sin"—that is they cannot be damned or lost for any sins except the sin against the Holy Ghost which consists in denying the faith, exposing the mysteries of the church, and shedding innocent blood. No blood can be innocent outside the Mormon church.

Has any one heard or read in all these years a word that would indicate that the Mormon hierarchy proposed to give up their special revelations, their priestly power, their lodge oaths of hatred to the government and fealty to Mormonism? Never! On the contrary, their great temple, begun in 1858, has gone up ten feet during the past year, and the side walls are finished at a height of ninety feet. It is said that there are thirty flourishing Mormon churches in Colorado, sixty in Idaho, and seventy in Arizona. For the past ten years the Mormon leaders have been laying their plans to gain the complete political power in these Territories. The headless General Conference Saturday did not deny the faith; they claim that nothing has been offered them that they could exchange for Mormonism. The Mormon church organ, only a few days ago, closed a long editorial with this unyielding sentiment: "The faithful who seek to know and do the will of God will not be shaken of their purpose, neither will they abandon their religious principles in whole or in part under any kind of pressure whatever. They would hold to their integrity in the full expectation of sooner or later beholding the salvation of God."

There is nothing that promises to take out the Mormon root in all our talk or legislation. The branch of polygamy may be lopped off, but a hundred hydra heads are likely to grow in its place, each of them as full of danger to American principles. But if the hand of government shall be laid upon the secret lodge of Mormonism and its oath, as it was upon the Kuklux, we may be assured that the knife has reached the core; that the Mormon cancer is being cut at its root.

—Mr. Moody announced, on Saturday at the Farwell Hall noon meeting, the death of a son of Major Whittle, the evangelist, a beloved and promising boy of nine years. Among the thousands who will sympathize with Major Whittle and his family in this deep bereavement, will be many who in Wheaton College chapel listened to his wonderful words of cheer and consolation and tenderest sympathy at the funeral of Mrs. C. A. Blanchard last fall.

—The new Methodist Episcopal church of Ukiah, Cal., having been laid with Masonic ceremonies by the Grand Lodge, the Pacific Herald of Holiness comments with great good sense upon the unhallowed performance: "Can we be surprised that dearth, and spiritual death reign over Zion, and the cry comes up, 'O Lord how long?' When the professed church of God will call upon or allow a Christless body to come in and conduct her services. Brethren, until you obey God and give up such yoking with unbelievers, you need expect nothing but death; you may build churches and endow institutions, but they will be but the icy coffins for dead bodies. It will take something stronger than the cry of 'loyalty to our church,' to keep spiritnal souls in such a dying institution. God help Methodists to obey their own teachings."

—The report of Bro. Dissette of his work in the unvisited regions of this State will be read with avidity in the "Reform News." He preached twice at Lebanon on Sabbath the 22d ult: in the morning for the Presbyterians, and for the Baptists in the evening. The latter congregation, without any motion from the speaker, arose in a body and voted to request him to address them on the next evening. He hoped to leave the place in the same condition as Sabetha, Kansas, where the lodge, as such, no more appears in public.

—J. W. Caldwell, of Corinth, Ky., severely criticises the last article of Rev. J. D. Gehring on the Good Templar society. He says he knows a lodge of forty members that never has fined or expelled a member; and that Good Templars are quite lenient toward offenders—which is a good explanation of his experience. He declares there is not a word of truth in the assertion of Mr. Gehring that "Good Templarism insists upon the right to expel its members for the most trivial offences, and refuses to regard any confession, evidence of contrition, or promise of amendment on the part of the one charged with the violation of a Good Templar's obligation." Perhaps Mr. Caldwell has been through all sorts of Good Templar experience, and was by Mr. Gehring's side when he found out what was the real character of the order. If not, his charge of falsehood looks itself like a lie and slander beside.

—Let none overlook the "Easter" story copied on another page from the Midland. The demand of unwise and self-appointed religious leaders for more and more days to be observed by the churches and made holidays by the temporal power does not abate year by year. There are ten thousand proofs that such celebrations are a mere world's substitute for piety and self-denial which must be a very pleasing sight to the adversary. A lesson comes just now to us from the devotees of the Greek church. A writer in the Pall Mall Gazette says that intemperance is exceedingly common among the Russians; and that the great number of holidays contribute much to this state of affairs. The people become frightfully drunk, and remain so until their money is entirely exhausted. They have a custom there called Pominki—a remembrance service forty days after ones death. Once a year they visit family graves. This is often accompanied by debauchery. Our own holidays are extending in the same direction. More men were drunk on the street last Christmas day and evening, says an exchange, than we have seen all the rest of the year.

They who sail on the largest ships should not think poorly of those who go on smaller crafts. On the other hand, the sight of the "little ships" tumbling on the waves and daring the great ocean, should inspire both their pity and admiration. Besides, it is the very small vessel that contains the pilot, who, because he is fitted for his duty and commissioned to perform it, guides the largest steamers into port. We should not despise "the day of small things" nor the small things themselves.—United Presbyterian.

The great Coligny, once seeing his soldiers wavering during an attack on the Spanish foe—entrenched behind solid bastions—rushed toward the standard, took it out of the hands of his own standard-bearer, then hurried forward at great risk and hurled it into the counterscarp, feeling sure that his men would never leave their banner to be disgraced and dishonored by the foe. He was not deceived. The men rallied and pressed on to victory.—Rev. T. Hastings.

Reform News.

CONVENTIONS AND WORKERS.

Encouraging tokens are to be seen at every point of the compass in our reform work. President Blanchard, though much enfeebled by his severe sickness, now seems likely to recover and continue to charge the enemy front and rear. More than two hundred and fifty pastors and Christian business men have signed a request to Joseph Cook, asking him to give his views on secret societies and the feelings of this advanced thinker are known to be favorable to this discussion. The waters are troubled and friends and foes are more anxious and quietly solicitous than at any previous period since I have had knowledge of the movement. Bro. Hinman's brief labors in Illinois have opened a large and important field among the Scandianavians and a letter just received speaks hopefully of his present work in New England. He is just the man to meet and overcome the difficulties by which our reform is beset in that land of steady habits.

Rev. S. A. George is pressing on the consciences and appealing to the almoners of God's bounties in Ohio. Bro. Dissette is waking up both the good and the bad elements through Central Illinois; and now that the winds have lulled and the snow-blockade has been lifted, Bro. Loggan is girding himself for the conflict in Kansas.

Michigan has summoned her brave men and women to meet in council at Brighton on the 21st and 22nd insts and promises free entertainment to all who report promptly in advance. Pres. C. A, Blanchard is announced as one who will attend to aid in carrying out the important programme proposed by the Michigan committee. I hope to meet the old guard and scores of recruits in that annual gathering.

J. P. Stoddard.

TO WISCONSIN FRIENDS.

As Secretary of the Wisconsin Association I was requested to send out a circular, requesting you to fill blank and return to me, the sum yon will agree to pay monthly for our State work for the current year. I was away from home from the time of our Convention till last week, and through a misapprehension, supposed the circulars were sent out in January. I blame no one but myself. I had supposed that the lack of responses was owing to the hard times. But, dear friends, please do not fail to fill out the blanks now, with a generous subscription, and forward the money for three months gone as promptly as possible, and pray that God will provide means and instruments to carry on the work.

Please ask those you know to be friendly, who are not subscribers, to help, and forward their names. W. W. Ames.

Menomonie, Wis., April 4.

MICHIGAN STATE MEETING.

The second annual meeting of the Michigan State Christian Association opposed to secret societies (incorporated) will be held, D. V., at the Wesleyan Methodist church in the village of Brighton, Livingstone Co., commencing Tuesday evening, April 21st, 1885, and continuing Wednesday and Thursday. Every member who has taken stock in the Association should certainly be present if possible.

The old association will also meet at the same time and place and we hope for a large attendance.

Now, brethren, if the effort to enlighten the people on this question is allowed to fail, where will the responsibility rest? Will it not be with those who have seen their brethren struggling under heavy burdens and refuse to lift them with one of their fingers?

Those intending to be present should send a card to Rev. D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich., who will provide them with free entertainment. Let there be a general rally in the name of Christ.

Will all papers friendly, please copy?

W. H. Ross, President.
C. L. Preston, Secretary.

FROM THE ILLINOIS STATE LECTURER.

Lebanon, St. Clair Co., Ill.

I preached here for brother Thompson and his people. This pastor is an old pioneer. Forty years he has preached in this section, laboring with his hands for his own support, and superintending the building of churches. He invited me to his home and tendered me a genuine Kentucky welcome. Rev. Mr. Adams informed me that he was not connected with any secret order and urged me "to do all the good you can."

Next day while scattering tracts and circulars I called at the house where a gentleman repeated the Masonic slander: "You don't care for souls, you've come here to break up the Masonic lodge."

"Are you a Mason?" I asked.

"I am," he replied, "and an Odd-fellow, too I don't want to talk to you on your Masonry, but when you speak of Odd-fellowship I will inform you that we have a deposit of upwards of two thousand dollars which we can draw on for any purpose we choose. We are strong enough to control the city election and if such a man as you lived here you could never obtain an office; we are strong enough for that."

He said in reply to a question that "the Masonic lodge here may have had information from Belleville, but I do not propose to say as to that. All the Masonry you have in those books is old Morgan Masonry. You never were a Mason. You never belonged to a lodge."

I replied, "Try me. I can work both sides of a degree better than any W. M. you have in town. I know all about it."

"Well," he replied, "We'll know inside of a month."

This informant also said that all the presidents of McKendree College, located here, down to the present one who is no exception to his predecessors, have been Royal Arch Masons. Most of the faculty "meet on the level and part on the square." What wonder then, if the Worshipful Master rules the town? For Masonry controls Odd-fellowship and the whole brood of secret orders, and the W. M. rules Masonry, Masonry rules the faculty, the faculty rule the college, and the college rules the entire church and town, for the town would cease to exist without the college.

I have attended a number of meetings, one at Sister Thatcher's in which two souls were converted; one of them was from a house which I had visited that day. I became acquainted with Luther Brown, Esq., a pronounced Anti-mason, and a member of the M. E. church. I also made the acquaintance of two brothers, Benjamin and John Wesley Hypes, both members of the M. E. church and good men, neither of whom are in anywise connected with secret societies.

A man entered a room where I was sitting talking to a gentleman and said, "Oddfellowship is just as good a religion as I want. It is good enough for me." The gentleman with whom I was talking said, "I know a man out east of town who used to be a Christian and lead a class which I joined. When Masonry revived he joined; soon he became a backslider. Now, he is one of the biggest infidels in town." This incident carries its own moral.

Learning there was objection to my preaching in the M. E. church, I had published by the leader of one prayermeeting and by brother Brown in another that there would be preaching on the public square at half past two o'clock on Sabbath afternoon if the weather was fine.

The people gathered and I preached. Windows were opened, heads were peeping out here and there all around the scene. Some gentlemen were kind enough to place a large dry goods box under one of the trees and promptly at the time appointed I began. Briefly reviewing the manner in which my visit affected some of the churches and ministers here, I gave the audience to plainly understand that now in the fullest sense of the term, I appeared before them as a Wesleyan evangelist. I gave them about one hour's discussion on penal secrecy. Then I was interrupted by a big burly German, who informed me that I did not know what I was talking about. But as an intelligent student afterwards remarked, "You must have hit him, or he would not have made such a fuss about it." The incensed man by this time was swinging his fists—"advancing up on the step under" full steam. Mr. Smith, the hotel-keeper, stepped down and said as he passed toward our noisy hero, "You'd better quit now." At once I drowned the Masonic champion's noise by singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," while the landlord held him in check or stood across his path. I was soon seated in the hotel office, and the noisy crowd began to enter headed by our valiant Mason "who in further token of his friendship and brotherly love proceeded to invest me with the grip—of a Master Mason." Had I placed a hot coal in his hand he could not have manifested more agony, as he jumped back with clenched fist, exclaiming, "You don't know anything about it. You're a liar and a fraud. You never was a Mason. It is a money-making scheme. He has some books and he is selling them and is making money out of it. What lodge do you belong to? tell me." "I won't do it," I replied.

"I'll see about it. I'll make you tell before you leave town." The landlord had again to interpose and tell his crowd and himself to get out, as he would not allow any such racket.

The only other evidence of an outburst was the report which reached me that there was some talk of tarring and feathering me for daring to scatter tracts. But I protest to the people of this place that I have simply exercised my rights as a minister of the Gospel and citizen of this government, and if the ministry or people object to the truth being set forth in the pulpits of the land, we thank God that he has a good supply of boxes in every town and they make excellent pulpits. And I appeal to that audience if any one should say that I failed in ministerial courtesy on that occasion? For I extended to every minister in that audience an invitation to a seat in my pulpit. Was it an indication of the future of a bright little boy that he alone accepted it and climbed on the box near me?

I have made the acquaintance of a number of Christian workers, one of whom, Mrs. M. F. Scott of the W. C. T. U., has traveled through a number of States as an advocate in behalf of prohibition. I was in Leavenworth, Kansas, attending a district conference a number of years ago during which time she was hustled roughly out of a saloon which she entered to request permission to lead in her devoted band and engage in prayer. I also met Rev. Peter Bassinger, a retired Presbyterian minister, who gave me a hearty God-speed. In conversation with a zealous Odd-fellow he said, "You may do your best, all of you, and you cannot help yourselves." This he said in reply to my describing how completely men who were outside of Oddfe-llowship were at the mercy of this institution, which determines in its secret councils who shall, or who shall not hold office in this city. He continued, "You cannot hurt Odd-fellowship, for as fast as you publish it in those books, just so often it changes; for we have Odd-fellowship down that fine now that we can beat you every time. Here I related my interview with the man who said that if I lived here I could never hold office. To which he quickly responded, "Well that is the way all over the nation, and you cannot remove them [lodges] any more than you can remove ticks from a dog." My answer was, "If that be true it is tough on the dog."

Geo. T. Dissette.

HOPEFUL NOTES FROM MANHATTAN, KAN.

Manhattan, Kan., March 28.

Editor Cynosure:—A short time ago the Young Men's Union of the Baptist church of this place gave me a very cordial invitation to give them a lecture on Freemasonry. I consented to do so, and the pastor announced from the pulpit that it would be given the following Friday evening in that church. A small congregation gathered, among them three of the pastors of the place, two having had personal experience in the lodge.

I made the following points: 1. Heathen gods had secret societies. 2. It was for joining in heathen idolatry that the kingdom of Israel was destroyed and Judah taken captive. 3. Freemasonry has adopted that heathen secret religion. 4. Freemasonry is a religion, but false and idolatrous. 5. It is a despotism of itself. 6. It is a teacher of falsehoods. On the last I had time to say but little.

The lecture was listened to with earnest attention by ministers and all and many warm expressions of satisfaction were given at the close and since. I am told there are fifteen secret societies in town. I think when I came here five years since there had never been a paper taken or lecture given in the vicinity in opposition to secretism. I commenced immediately soliciting subscribers for papers and distributing tracts. I have talked freely with doctors and lawyers, merchants and ministers, working men and women, and have been kindly treated by all but one or two men. I have found quite a number that have quietly dropped out of the Masonic, and Odd-fellow orders, and others wished they were out, and would come out if not for persecution or loss of insurance. Five ministers of the different churches since I have been here had been connected with the Masons but are not now. Public opinion is turning and when it sets the other way, secret society heads will drop like leaves in an autumn wind.

The Holy Ghost wind is blowing, the lodge is trembling and the church is beginning to say, half honestly, Shall I obey God or man; ministers, like Erasmus in the days of Luther, say: "I am afraid to speak, and I am afraid to keep silent." We sent the names of six ministers (all I could see) from here on the request to Joseph Cook to discuss Masonry.

God hasten the time when months will be open, and honest conviction take shape in appropriate action.

H. S. Limbocker.

The Home.

HEAVENLY RECOGNITION.

He lives! In all the past,
He lives! Nor to the last
Of seeing him do I despair;
In dreams I see him now,
And on his angel brow
I see it written, "Thou shalt see me there."

—Pierpoint.

I count the hope no day-dream of the mind,
No vision fair of transitory hue;
The souls of those whom once on earth we knew
And loved, and walked with in communion kind,
Departed hence again in heaven to find,
Such hope to nature's sympathies is true,
And such we deem the holy Word to view
Unfolds; an antidote for grief designed,
A drop from comfort's well.

—Bishop Mant.

"God, who did give to love's sweet star
Below, its joyous luster,
Can bid its glories shine afar
Where best affections cluster.

"And I'll believe the bliss whose birth
He spake, so fair and vernal,
Undimmed, unfaded, here on earth,
Like him, will be eternal."

—W. B. Tappan.

Will not thy own meek heart demand me there,
That heart whose fondest throbs to me were given?
My name on earth was ever in thy prayer,
Shall it be banished from thy tongue in heaven?

—Bryant.

Yet shall we meet again in peace
To sing the song of festal joy,
Where none shall bid our gladness cease,
And none our fellowship destroy.

There, hand in hand, firm-linked at last,
And heart to heart enfolded all,
We'll smile upon the troubled past,
And wonder why we wept at all.

—Bonar.

THE CHARACTER OF CHRIST.

1. The picture of the character of Christ exists in the New Testament. Once the picture was not in the world. Now it is in the world, and it has revolutionized the world.

Cicero tells us that in his time there was no agreement as to what the ideal of man at his climax may be. Could this be said now? Could this have been said at any time since the New Testament came into the possession of humanity?

Cato, who roused Rome to destroy Carthage, and that other Cato, who died at Utica by suicide, were regarded by their contemporaries as nearly perfect men. But what were their virtues? Of the stern, Roman sort; courage, temperance, official honesty, but of the harsh, domineering type. There was little in either of these men to suggest the beatitudes. The ideal of perfection possessed by Rome in her most brilliant age was not only a low one, but a vacilliating one. Epictetus, when asked, Is it possible to be faultless? said: "No, it is impossible. The only thing possible is to be ever striving to be faultless." You remember that in the "Oration on the Crown," Demosthenes said that the quality of doing all that is right is attributed to the gods alone. Plato describes a righteous man in these words: "Without having done any unrighteousness, he still wears the appearance of being unrighteous, in order that he may be thoroughly proved to be righteous, inasmuch as he is not shaken in his integrity by the slander and other ills that thence arise, but remains steadfast and constant unto death. He will be bound, scourged, tortured, blinded, and after he has endured all possible evils, he will at last be put to death." One cannot but be struck with the parallelism of this ideal to the One Supreme Character; but Plato tells that it is an ideal only, and can never be a reality!

2. Such a picture as the New Testament contains of sinless perfection exists nowhere else in the whole range of the records of man.

It is said that comparative religion will ultimately prove that the moral and religious ideas of Christianity are to be found in full or in germ in other religions. It is affirmed that Christianity is the development of one of the minor religions of Asia, and that Asia accounts for the whole of it. There was a day when this style of attack on Christianity somewhat annoyed me. It does not annoy me at all since I have seen Asia. After giving five or eight years to the study of this theme in its various branches, I must say that Christianity appears to me to be the most non-Asiatic and the most anti-Asiatic thing with which I am acquainted.

3. The picture has continued through all ages subsequent to its origin to be considered as substantially that of spiritual perfection.

We have had many stages of culture. Greek and Roman ideals have been thrust upon civilization. We have had the standards of Stoics and Epicureans and the Platonists and Mystics, ancient and modern, set up in rivalry to those of Christianity. Everywhere the picture of the character of Christ, once seen in its fulness has been pronounced superior to every other, and not only superior, but essentially perfect. Infidelity has granted this.—Joseph Cook, Monday Lecture, March 2d.

THE CHOPPED BIBLE.

A few years ago a Bible distributor, while passing through a village in Western Massachusetts, was told of a family in whose home there was not even the cheapest copy of the Scriptures, so intense was the hostility of the husband to Christianity. The distributor started at once to visit the family, and found the wife hanging out her week's washing. In the course of a pleasant conversation he offered her a neatly-bound Bible. With a smile which said, "Thank you," she held out her hand but instantly withdrew it. She hesitated to accept the gift, knowing that her husband would be displeased if she took it.

A few pleasant words followed, in which the man spoke of the need of the mind of divine direction, and of the divine adaptation of the Bible to that need; and the woman resolved to take the gift. Just then her husband came from behind the house with an axe on his shoulder.

Seeing the Bible in his wife's hands, he looked threateningly at her, and then said to the distributor, "What do you want, sir, of my wife?"

The frank words of the Christian man, spoken in a manly way, so softened his irritation that he replied to him with civility. But stepping up to his wife he took the Bible from her hand, saying:

"We've always had everything in common, and we'll have this, too."

Placing the Bible on the chopping-block, he chopped it in two parts with one blow of the axe. Giving one part to his wife, and putting the other in his pocket, he walked away.

Several days after this division of the Bible, he was in the forest chopping wood. At noon he seated himself on a log and began eating his dinner. The dissevered Bible suggested itself. He took it from his pocket and his eyes fell on the last page. He began reading, and soon was deeply interested in the story of the Prodiga. Son. But his part ended with the son's exclamation—

"I will arise and go to my father."

At night he said to his wife with affected carelessness:

"Let me have your part of that Bible. I've been reading about a boy who ran away from home, and after having a hard time decided to go back. There my part of the book ends. and I want to know if he ever got back, and how the old man received him."

The wife's heart beat violently, but she mastered her joy, and quietly handed the husband her part without a word.

He read the story through, and then reread it. He read on far into the night. But not a word did he say to his wife.

During the leisure moments of the next day his wife saw him reading the now joined parts, and at night he said, abruptly:

"Wife I think that is the best book I ever read."

Day after day he read it. His wife noticed his few words, which indicated that he was becoming attached to it. One day he said:

"Wife, I'm going to try and live by that book. I guess it's the best sort of a guide for a man."—Selected.

You know what the general said when one of his officers rode up and cried: "Sir, we have taken a standard." "Take another," cried he. Another officer salutes him, and exclaims, "Sir, we have taken two guns." "Take two more," was the sole reply. This way lies the reward of holy service; you have done much; you shall do more.—Spurgeon.

"Sad Living.—A series of lives of eminent men and women who have been leaders amongst those who reject the distinguishing, vital truths of revelation and who have endeavored to put the principles of modern unbelieving philosophy and of a biology based upon the conclusions of the materialistic section of modern scientists in the place of Christianity, has been published within a few years. These biographies have been largely autobiographical, have consisted of letters and extracts from journals. We have had the correspondence of Humbolt, the autobiography of John Stuart Mill, the record of the personal and domestic life of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Carlyle, and finally the life of Marian Evans (George Eliot) made up largely from her correspondence. The almost universal verdict is that these anti-Christian leaders, living in Christian countries, lived lives of sadness. They were not only without God and without hope in the world, but they were estranged from the sympathies of the great mass of their fellow men—from the majority of the most intelligent, humane and righteous of their fellows—and were without a good hope on any firm basis respecting the future in this life or the next of themselves or other men and women. The eminent men and women of the church have not lived such lives. They have possessed a sustaining and cheering hope. Comparison is properly to be made between the leaders of anti-Christian thought and the leaders of the church. The latter appear in many most important points incomparably superior. They have been the benefactors of humanity over an immense territory, and have possessed the peace and joy of the Gospel."

LITTLE FEET.

In castle halls, or cottage homes,
Wherever guileless childhood roams,
O, there is nothing half so sweet
As busy tread of little feet.

The sighing breeze, the ocean's roar,
The purling rill, the organ's power,
All stir the soul, but none so deep
As tiny tread of little feet.

When forth we go at early morn,
To meet the world and brave its scorn,
Adown the garden walk so neat,
We see the prints of little feet.

At eve, when homeward we repair,
With aching limbs and brow of care,
The voices ring out clear and sweet—
Then comes the rush of little feet.

The knives are lost, the dishes stray,
The tools are spirited away,
And when we go the lost to seek,
We take the trail of little feet.

But when the angel death hath come
And called our darlings from their home,
Oppressive silence reigns complete;
We miss the sound of little feet.

Then tools are safe, no dishes stray,
No doors go slamming all the day;
But O, 'twould give us pleasure sweet,
To hear again those noisy feet.

Soft night hath come; all are asleep.
Yes, all but me; I vigil keep.
Hush! hush! my heart, and cease to beat,
Was that the step of little feet?

Yes, mother, 'tis the softened tread
Of him you miss and mourn as dead,
And often when your sleep is sweet,
You'll dream of hearing little feet.

And when this pilgrimage is o'er,
And you approach that blissful shore.
The first to run your soul to greet,
Will be your darling's little feet.

—Charles H. Doty.

HOW RUTH SPENT EASTER.

Ruth Preston was a city girl, the child of rich, fashionable parents, who lived in a wealthy part of a large city. As far back as she could remember, she had invariably spent Easter at home, but one spring she was sent into the country to visit her cousin. It was a great change from the noisy city to the quiet, peaceful country, and, on the way home from the station she was disposed to feel lonesome, but when she reached the large, roomy farm-house, and began to play "hide-and-seek" in the old attic, she soon grew cheerful, and her merry laugh mingled with that of her little cousin Mattie.

It was on Monday that she arrived and the happy hours flew so fast, that she scarcely believed it, when one morning her playmate told her it was Sabbath.

"Is it? Let's see—this is Easter Sunday."

"What is Easter?" asked her cousin Mattie, "I have been so curious to know."

"Why don't you know what Easter is?" asked Ruth in surprise. "It is the celebration of the resurrection."

"Yes, but why do they give it that name—Easetr?"

"O, I don't know. I suppose there is some reason for it but I don't know what."

"Come, children, it is time for church," called a voice from the foot of the stairs, so the girls went down, and were soon on the road to the church. It was a small, plain building, very much unlike the one to which Ruth had been accustomed, but every one was so friendly that she didn't feel in the least out of place. When the time came for Sabbath-school, she was shown to a class consisting of a half dozen or so of other girls–a very small class, she thought. Mattie's question, "Why is this day called Easter?" had left her mind for some time, she had so many new things to see and think of. But not so with the questioner. She had kept thinking, "Why do we call this day Easter?" She had asked her parents, but they, having never been accustomed to seeing any more made of that Sabbath than of any other, had never thought much about it, and, consequently, could not tell. And so the question still remained unanswered. But presently she became so interested in the lessou before her that she forgot everything else.

After Sabbath-school the minister, a man of good figure, but plain face, ascended the pulpit stairs. There was nothing extraordinary about him, Ruth thought at first, but soon noticed an expression of great earnestness on his face. It was evident, also, in the tone of his voice, and in the manner of his delivery. Another thing which attracted her attentiou was his simple, straight-forward speech, and she summed him up by saying to herself that he was a plain, thorough-going man. Soon after he began speaking the two girls heard him mention the word Easter, so that their attention was again called to that subject And this is something of what they heard:

"You all know that this is a time when people are wont to make special celebration of the resurrection of our Saviour. Let us ask, 'What is the origin of this custom? How did it enter the Christian church? We may also ask, 'What authority have we in the Scriptures for this festival? Is there a word in the whole Bible commanding us to observe such a day?'"

Careful students of the Bible will notice that it attaches very little importance to times and places. While travelers in the East will find what is called the Holy Sepulcher, and will be told that such and such a place is the exact spot where Christ prayed on that awful night in the garden of Gethsemane, we have not a hint in the Bible that there is any more merit in worshipping at such a place than in our own homes. So it is about this celebration of the resurrection. We are to celebrate it every Sabbath, not once a year. And what is our Sabbath but the weekly commemoration of the resurrection? There is a plea made, that we are too apt to forget the fact that Chrlst is indeed risen, that we do not think of it as often as we should, and this human ordinance of Easter will bring it to our especial notice. But instead, it has rather the opposite effect. Knowiug that the time is coming, when it will be brought to our special notice, we are likely to neglect it at other times.

And now, what is the origin of this festival? Reliable historians tell us that we get the custom from the Saxons who worshipped the goddess Ostara or Eastre, as the personification of the morning or East, and also of the opening of the spring. The early church finding that it would be difficult to abolish this institution, adopted it, and made it the celebration of the resurrection of our Lord, in other words baptized a heathenism. Other historians trace the custom back still further, and tell us that the word Easter is derived from Ashtaroth, the name of a heathen goddess who was worshipped in the time of Israel, and to whom the Israelites themselves went astray. Even Solomon followed after this strange deity.

The Easter egg is a prominent feature of the celebration of the present day. Where did we get the custom? It is said that the ancient heathen had a set time for the special worship of this goddess. At this time they indulged in a great many grievous sins. One of these was gluttony, of which one form was the eating of an inordinate quantity of eggs. From this old heathen iniquity do we get our so-called sacred custom of making the symbol of the Easter egg a part of the celebration or the resurrection of Jesus of Nazareth.

Again let me ask, "Where do we find the word Easter in the Bible?" In only one place, that is, Acts 12: 4, where we read that when Herod had taken Peter, he delivered him to the soldiers, intending after Easter to bring him before the people. The word Passover should have been used instead of Easter, and the only reason why it was not, is that King James wanted to have it Easter and Easter it was."

"Now, let us all remember," said the minister in conclusion, "that this subject of Christ's resurrection, is one to be considered often and not only once a year. Let us remember, also, that it is too sacred a subject to be confounded with the old forms of heathen worship."

All this time Ruth had listened eagerly and attentively to the words of the minister, so that when the time came for her to go home, she remembered a great deal that she had heard that quiet Sabbath in the country, and told it to her parents. But when she asked them if all this was true her father said that it was not likely, and that his business required so much attention that he had not time to study the matter, and her mother said that country preachers were an ignorant set, as a rule, and that her own minister, who was so well educated, was not apt to be wrong. But Ruth was not satisfied. She used every opportunity to investigate the matter, and at last believed that the earnest country preacher was right. And who can say that Ruth's Easter was not profitably spent?—Rev. A. Strang, in the Midland.

EARTHQUAKES.

It is very difficult to explain the causes which produce earthquakes. It has been clearly shown by scientific men that the globe we call the earth is not a solid mass. Its interior is supposed to be in a heated, fluid condition, and that the slow cooling process which is constantly going on causes the outer crust of the earth to contract suddenly at times, forming great fissures and underground caverns. It seems natural that such gigantic movements miles below the surface should produce subterranean noises and tremblings which can be felt by the inhabitants of the earth who live above the depths where these movements take place. And if the convulsion is accompanied by the explosion of vast volumes of gases, as is supposed sometimes to be the case, it is not strange that the surface of the earth gets violently shaken.

Think how far away you can hear the noise and feel the jar of an explosion above ground, or even of the firing of a large cannon, and then consider how insignificant are these small manifestations of human power as compared with the mighty workings of nature, and you will not wonder at the terrible convulsions which at times have shaken portions of the earth's surface, overthrowing cities and even mountains in a moment.

The most wonderful destruction of a mountain was that which took place on the 26th of August, 1883, when the island and volcano of Krakatoa, in the Strait of Sunda, vanished beneath the sea. In the afternoon of that day there came suddenly a tremendous burst of subterranean thunder, and immediately the volcano of Krakatoa threw forth an ink-black cloud which overspread the sky. In a few moments a large fertile section of the island of Java was turned into a barren waste by a violent earthquake, and many persons were killed. Terrible explosions took place in the mountain. Its great sloping sides were blown out into the waters and the volcano, together with the island upon which it had stood for unknown ages, crumbled away and disappeared. When the morning sun arose the ocean flowed over the spot where the mountain had stood, and the surface of the sea for three hundred miles around was covered with floating ashes and pumice-stone, while a choking smell of sulphur pervaded the air.

There is no portion of the earth's surface where shocks of earthquakes are not occasionally felt, but, except in volcanic countries, the ground trembles so slightly that no damage is done.

The inhabitants of those lands where great earthquakes occur never know at what moment their homes may become a heap of ruins. The shock comes suddenly, and it often happens after hearing the rumbling noise the people have no time to rush into the street before they are caught and crushed by falling walls.—Harper's Young People.

THE ANECDOTE OF DANIEL WEBSTER.

The best men have deepest feelings. In his manly days, no one was held in higher esteem by the people of this country than Daniel Webster.

An incident in his early life forcibly illustrates the composition of his nature and shows us how deep his sensibilities were. His father was poor, and yet he resolved to send him to college, a dream he had hardly dared to cherish. He says:

"I remember the very hill we were ascending through the deep snow, in a New England sleigh, when my father made known this purpose to me. I could not speak. How could he, I thought, with so large a family, and in such narrow circumstances, incur so great an expense for me? A warm glow ran all over me, and I laid my head on my father's shoulder and wept."—Selected.

TEMPERANCE.

RADICAL PROHIBITION IN KANSAS.

Atchison, Kan., March 15.—The double-ribbed, ironclad, copper-plated prohibition law, passed at the last session of the Legislature, went into effect yesterday. Despatches from various points indicate that the saloon-men are divided as to what stand they will take. Some are defiant, but others are gone out of business. In Atchison the county attorney, who, under the new law, is a whole grand jury all by himself, gave notice that all saloons or wholesalers of liquor doing business on and after Monday, March 23d, would be prosecuted under the law. It is believed that this action will settle the saloon business, so far as the city is concerned. The managers of the different railroad and transportation companies have issued circular letters calling the attention of their agents to that section of the new law which provides that any officer, agent, or employee of any railroad, express company, or common carrier who knowingly delivers any intoxicating liquor to any person in the State, shall be fined from $100 to $500, and imprisoned from thirty to sixty days. This has resulted in the stoppage of liquor shipments. People along the Missouri line will not suffer much, but those in the interior have been employing the week just passed in laying in large stocks of ardent liquids in anticipation of thirsty days to come.

Topeka, Kan., March 11.—In the report of the county superintendent, just submitted, it is stated that $11,500 has been paid into the school fund of this (Shawnee) county from the fines collected from saloon-keepers under the prohibitory liquor law. There are now seventeen saloon men in the county prison serving out terms, and there is not an open saloon in the city. The amendatory law passed last week by the Legislature makes the enforcement of the law, so the report says, still more certain. It provides that any city, county, or State officer shall be fined not over $500, and suffer forfeiture of office, for failure to prosecute violators of the law.

THE KANSAS LAW.

Topeka, Kan., March 16.—The new prohibitory law passed by the Legislature just adjourned, and which has now gone into effect, contains the following provisions:

A druggist's permit may be obtained from a probate judge on presentation of a petition signed by twelve free-holders, certifying that the applicant has good moral character and is a bona fide druggist; physicians may give prescriptions, stating name of purchaser and for what purpose the liquor is prescribed, in cases of manifest need, but if such prescription is given to evade the law the physician is subject to both fine and imprisonment; at the end of each month the druggist shall file in the office of the probate judge, to be preserved for two years, all prescriptions for liquor he has filled, together with druggist's affidavit that no prescription has been omitted. The druggist shall also keep a record of prescriptions constantly open to public inspection.

The failure of any officer to notify the county attorney of any violation is punishable by fine or imprisonment and forfeiture of office. The county attorney is given the power to subpœna and take the testimony of witnesses and punish them for contempt, and he can issue attachments; in case of failure to prosecute by the county attorney, his duties shall be assumed by the attorney general.

Any person who shall take orders for intoxicating liquor from any person in the State except authorized druggists shall be punishable by both fine and imprisonment; places other than authorized drug stores are declared common nuisances, and are to be treated as such. No person shall be excused from testifying on account of his testimony tending to criminate himself. Whenever a relative of any person shall forbid a druggist from selling liquor to him, the druggist shall not let such person have the liquor, even though he has a prescription.

Any officer, agent, or employee of any express or carrying company transporting or delivering liquor to be sold, in violation of the act, is subject to both fine and imprisonment.

The penalty for violation of any provision is a fine of not more than $500 and imprisonment for not more than ninety days.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again." True, but it is neither gentlemanly nor decent to crush Truth to the earth in order to give her occasion to rise again. Truth cannot be crushed to the earth in any but immature or ignorant or depraved minds, and there she is not always, nor often, able to rise again and lift them with her.—Interior.

The Churches.

—Mr. Moody visited Chicago Saturday and Sabbath on his way from western meetings. He spoke briefly on the resurrection to a large audience in Farwell Hall Saturday noon, and on the Sabbath spoke twice in his own church (Chicago Avenue) and in the evening in Farwell Hall to men only. He was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Towner, who have sung with him in his western meetings. They with Charles Herald and Prof. Excell made a rare gathering of notable Gospel singers.

—Bro. C. W. Hiatt, of the Oberlin Theological Seminary, has been preaching this year at Norwalk, while pursuing his studies. He has lately received a call from the High St. Church, Columbus, and is seriously considering its acceptance.

—Rev. W. P. McNary, of the Midland, St. Louis, has received a call from the Jordans Grove, Ill., congregation to become their pastor, and a New York letter in the Instructor says that his colleague on the paper, Rev. A. H. Harshaw, is likely to be called to the pastorate of the Jane St. congregation in New York.

—The evangelist McCord visited Elmwood, Ill., late in the winter, and conducted a revival effort. As a result thirty-nine persons have lately joined the Congregational church.

—During the past few weeks a very powerful revival in Streator, Ill., has been a matter of great and joyful concern to the Christians of that city. The meetings were conducted by Mr. D. W. Potter, a lay worker from Chicago. In the partial union of churches, the Independent church and its new pastor, Rev. Albert Ethridge, took a prominent part, and has been greatly blessed. Bro. Ethridge conducted a series of meetings in an adjoining village and some 60 converts professed Jesus Christ.

—A revival work is progressing in the Free Methodist church at Kewanee, Ill. The church is crowded, and there were some forty conversions up to the middle of March. Drunkards, gamblers, and attempted suicides are among the saved.

—Three hundred converts are reported as the result of the revivals in the two Congregational churches of Fitchburgh, Mass.

—The International Sunday-School Lesson Committee is to meet in Cincinnati, April 15th. Earnest discussions are in progress as to what lesson plans they should adopt.

—President Cleveland has selected Dr. Sunderland's church, in Washington, as his place of attendance for himself and family on the Sabbath.

—Pastor Theodore Harms, of the celebrated missionary institution at Hermansburg, Germany, died February 22.

—The total contribution to foreign Missions by British Christians through their various societies from 1871 to 1883, both included, amounted to £13,746,522, or $68,732,610.

—Five new churches were organized by the mission of the Reformed (Dutch) church in Japan last year, making thirty-five in all, with 2,948 members, an increase of 499 during the year.

—Dr. Geo. F. Pentecost has published a series of very timely and useful tracts in very neat form, under the general title of "Timely Words." They are meant for church members, and are designed to rouse the indifferent, sting the drones, and encourage the faithful.

—The Christian Advocate regards it as "a reasonable estimate" that more than 40,000 have professed conversion during the last three months and joined, or intend to join, the Methodist church.

—The Methodists of Baltimore have raised $200,000 needed for a female university, in accordance with the recommendation of the Centennial Convention. One gentleman gave $60,000 and another $50,000.

—Four hundred and sixty-six new members have been added to the membership of the First Baptist church of Chicago during the past three years under Rev. C. S. Henson.

—The ministers of Philadelphia have, in view of the possible visit of the cholera next summer, been requested to preach a sermon or two on the duty of cleanliness and the general observance of sanitary regulations.

—Bishop McQuaid, Roman Catholic, of Rochester, N. Y., has ordered that hereafter, in his diocese, none but Roman Catholics and actual communicants shall sing in the choirs. He says, "How revolting it is for the congregation to hear the voice of one who does not believe in what he or she is singing! It is mockery instead of worship."

—The debate on the revised German Bible is waxing warm. Professors Luthardt and Kliefoth, two of the most influential among the conservative leaders in Germany, have raised their voices in protest against its adoption.

—Mrs. Spurgeon has, for some years, energetically and successfully conducted a Book Fund for the distribution of literature to ministers of restricted means. The ninth annual report says that during the past year, there have been sent out 9,149 volumns, besides 21,221 single sermons, the contributions during the year being £1,461.

—In Mr. Spurgeon's congregation one evening, recently, forty-three prayer meetings were held at the same hour. The meeting-places were very widely distributed, in order to give every one an opportunity of attending one or the other of them. Notice was given by handbills distributed in the Tabernacle on the previous Sunday.

—The Presbyterian says that the Salvation Army is rapidly vanishing from London. The disorder created on Sunday morning by General Booth's young men, who blow their emotions into brass trumpets, no longer takes place in the leading thoroughfares. The circulation of Salvation newspapers has diminished; but what is a surer sign of decadence, the subscriptions from outside have almost ceased to flow.

—The estimated population of London is 4,019,361. There are church accommodations for a fraction over one-third of the people.

—A wonderful work of grace is going on among the students of the Edinburgh University, beginning with the visit of the two young athletes, Messrs. Studd and Smith, now on their way to China.

—A correspondent of the Evangelist, writing of the church accommodation in New York city, says that, assuming that the Protestant population does not exceed 600,000, and that not more than one-half of them can attend church at any one time, sittings for 300,000 would be a fair supply. The facts show that there are 275,000 sittings, equal to 92 per cent.

—King Mtesa, of Unganda, the most powerful of of the Central African potentates, is dead. He belonged to a dynasty which counts, so far, thirty-five kings. His son, Mwanga, a lad, succeeds him, Mwanga has been under the influence of English missionaries, and probably will not oppose them in their work in any way. The princess, who has been raised to the dignity of king's "sister," is a professing Christian.

—The Russian Government steadily persecutes all religious communions other than the Orthodox Greek church. At present the authorities are doing their best to rob the Lutheran churches in German provinces on the Baltic of their individuality. These belong to the most cultured and best citizens of the land. Numerically, these Lutherans report 525 pastors, 1,922,777 parishoners, 1,140 church edifices, 2,100 parochial schools, 3,051 teachers, 110,059. scholars.

—The Waldensians at present number 17 congregations, with 12,800 members; 195 day schools, with 5,500 scholars and 200 teachers; 70 Sunday-schools, with 3,600 pupils. The principal stations of these people are Turin, Florence, Rome, Naples. The Waldensians are increasing but slowly, and the schools are growing smaller, because the Roman Catholics are everywhere planting schools near theirs, and thus drawing off many of the children.

—The Wesleyan Methodist announces that Elder Rathbun will attend several conferences in New York and Vermont, and probably return briefly to the Iowa early in the summer. His labor will be given to the East and will consist, says the Wesleyan, of "revival, missionary, reformatory, and such other work as may tend to advance these especial interests. It is earnestly hoped and prayed that in this especial work of promoting revivals, raising funds for missions, securing new subscriptions to the Wesleyan Methodist, advocating and promoting reformatory sentiments, especially as against the secret lodge, his work will prove, under God, a wonderful success."

—The decision of the Rev. George F. Pentecost to remain in the pastorate of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational church is hailed with great satisfaction by all classes of church going people on the Hill. Dr. Pentecost is needed in Brooklyn, and in no district of the city could his practical methods, administrative capability, and zealous piety find larger scope for their exercise than in the vicinity of his present charge, so rapidly increasing in population, and destined, soon after the completion of the elevated railroad, to become a compact center, partaking of whatever is best in the social life of the city.—Brooklyn Union.

HOME HINTS.

DRY HOUSES VS. DAMP HOUSES.

The importance of selecting a dry location for a residence is very aptly illustrated in the following extract from an address by Prof. R. C. Kedzie before the Michigan Tile Makers' Convention:

Two brothers in Vermont, of strong and vigorous stock, and giving equal promise of a long and active life, married wives corresponding in promise of future activity. They had both chosen the healthiest of all callings—farming. One of the brothers built his house in an open and sunny spot where the soil and sub-soil were dry; shade trees and embowering plants had a hard time of it, but the cellar was dry enough for a powder-magazine. The house in all its parts was free from every trace of dampness and mould; there was a crisp and elastic feel in the air of the dwelling; the farmer and all his family had that vigorous elasticity that reminds one of the spring and strength of steel. Health and sprightly vigor were the rule and sickness the rare exception. The farmer and his wife, though past threescore, have yet the look and vigor of middle life.

The other brother built his house in a beautiful shady nook, where the trees seemed to stretch their protecting arms in benediction over the modest home. Springs fed by the neighboring hills burst forth near his house, and others by his barns; his door-yard was always green, even in the driest time, for the life-blood of the hills seemed to burst out all about him in springs and tiny rivulets. But the ground was always wet, the cellar never dry; the walls of the rooms often had a clammy feel; the clothes mildewed in the closets and the bread moulded in the pantry. For a time their vigor enabled them to bear up against these depressing influnces; children were born of apparent vigor and promise, but these one by one passed away under the touch of diphtheria, croup and pneumonia; the mother went into a decline and died of consumption before her fifticth birthday; the father still lives but is tortured and crippled by rheumatism.

THE WORKINGMAN'S HOME.

There is every inducement in the world for the workingman to so fit himself financially that he may remove his family from the one or two rooms in the "barracks" or tenement house to a little home of his own. Let us take one single, simple view of it. and that a pleasant place to spend his evenings. There is not in the tenement house that retiracy which the weary workingman enjoys. He is apt to have noisy neighbors, and those, perhaps, with whom members of his family are not on good terms. The common use of halls, stairways, and other parts of the premises is likely to result in quarrels. There is about the place a sort of "public building" air which the workingman does not like. He is tempted to go into the streets, to hang about the corners, to seek his friends in meeting-places where it is easy to spend more money than he can spare. In his own home the case is different. If he has any pride at all, it there finds an abiding place. He is monarch there—Lord of all he surveys. He hears no rumors of tearing down the roof that is over his head, or of a raise of the rent. He takes pleasure in the evenings in putting up little fixtures by way of permanent improvements, that are to stand and be his as long as he and they last. In short, he has a home—home in its true sense, such as is the dream of the working people of Europe, but seldom a realization. It lightens his daily task to think that when evening comes he has a home to go to—one that is all his own, the product of his industry and economy.—Beehive.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the Tract Fund for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

No.		No. Pages.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	3
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

Prince Albert Victor, grandson of Queen Victoria, is to be created a knight of St. Patrick, and will be installed at a chapter of the order, which will be held during the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales at Dublin.

Thomas P. Phelan, whose attempted assassination by the secret gang of revolutionists in New York was a late sensation, was asked after he was stabbed if he wanted a minister or priest. "No," he replied, "I don't want anybody. I don't believe in any religion. I am a follower of Bob Ingersoll."

The trade unions seem to be a secret society for promoting "strikes" among its members, and the striking of all outside laboring men who seem to be in any way inimical to the interests of the sworn clan. One of the secrets of these unions seems to be the most successful means of living without work and drawing on the benevolence of friends to support them in idleness. A Syracuse daily says: "Last evening, February 19, a large meeting of the Stonecutters' Union was held. As the Union are now in possession of ample funds, the soliciting committee was discharged from further work. The Glass Blower's and Moulders' Union have subscribed freely, and the Socialists also sent a letter endorsing the Stonecutters. One hundred dollars was received from the the Buffalo Cutters."—Wesleyan.

NEW YORK DONATIONS.

WRIGHT'S CORNERS, March 27, 1885.

The following is a report of the money and pledges received by me on account of the New York State Association. The first column represents the amounts remaining pledged and the second shows the cash received:

Mary. A. Waterman	$3 00
Geo. W. Holmes	3 00	$1 00
Geo. Winstan		5 00
J. W. Cole	3 00	1 00
Leland Smith		1 00
Samuel Witmer	6 00	2 00
T. S. Couch		5 00
Total pledged	15 00
Cash received		15 00

P. D. MILLER, Treas.

OHIO DONATIONS.

Report from the Ohio Christian Association for the month of March:

Whole amount pledged for State work up to April 1, $238.50.

Received cash during March from the following persons:

W. G. Waddle	$5 00
John Watson	1 00
J. P. Ferguson	50
T. W. Stewart	1 00
J. Walters	5 00
Rev. J. P. Robb	2 00
Wm. Boyd	5 00
Robert Speer	2 00
Rev. J. M. Faris	3 00
Rev. D. Yant	5 00
W. H. Garrett	5 00

Our treasurer, J. M. Scott, asks me to report $30 received by him from Caleb Lyon. S. A. GEORGE, Secretary.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

Is a charming illustrated magazine, published by J. F. Avery, Halifax, Nova Scotia, containing forty pages monthly of anecdote and argument for the Christian home. Every number is profusely and finely illustrated. We shall be happy to introduce this magazine to hundreds of American homes and have secured a special arrangement from the proprietor. Buds and Blossoms is 75 cents per year. With the Cynosure the two will be $2 25, or any subscriber who has already paid for this paper can get the magazine at the same rate.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

LUCILE VERNON.

cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

IT belongs to the class known as the religious novel. It is a love story written in the Pansy style, and so constructed as to teach sound moral and religious principles, in connection with quite an interesting narrative. Indeed, when the writer sat down to examine it, he commenced as a critic on the sharp lookout for blunders, but soon he became absorbed in the story, and forgot altogether his critical duties. He also noticed that when the members of his family commenced to read it, they had but little time for anything else until it was completed. Tried as a work of art by the practical test, it must be regarded as a success. Its influence will doubtless be good in correcting false views, and in helping the reader to sounder principles and to a better spirit. * * * Some may think some of the scenes depicted are not true to nature, but the critic would be likely to find, on inquiry, that the very incidents which he would select as unnatural are actual facts. "We often find that truth is stranger than fiction."—D. A. W. in the Christian Instructor.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

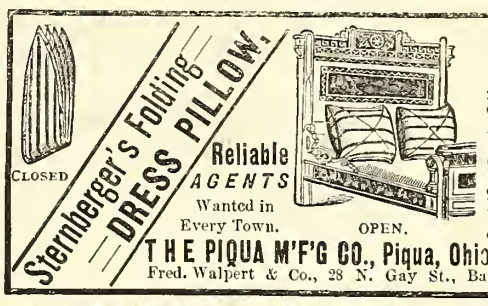
Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees, in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER IS THE "WAUKESHA GLENN!"



HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS, NATURAL OR ARTIFICIAL.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

STERNBERGER'S Folding Dress Pillow.

folds into one-twentieth of its size when closed and weighs but two pounds.

Perfection, Durability, Simplicity.

The Folding Dress Pillow is simply perfect. Can be folded in a second and put anywhere. We guarantee one pillow to outwear a dozen old style stuffed sham pillows. Housekeepers buy them on sight.

$2.00 PER PAIR.

delivered on receipt of price.

Or Frank A. Hall, 200 Canal St., New York. John P. Fowler, 306 State St., Chicago, Ill. Fred. Walpert & Co., 28 N. Gay St., Baltimore, and Furniture Dealers Generally.

THE PIQUA M'F'G CO., Piqua, Ohio.

Pirates, AUTHORS, and CHEAP BOOKS.

The following extract from a letter from the well-known Author and Artist PHILIP GILBERT HAMERTON appeared in a recent number of the New York Publishers' Weekly:

"I saw by the advertisements in American periodicals that a New York pirate had got hold of 'An Intellectual Life.' We sadly need a copyright law. It would be a benefit to all honest men, including American authors, who would be spared part of the rivalry produced by flooding the States with cheap pirated reprints. Yours very truly, P. G. HAMERTON."

To which I beg leave to reply as follows:

DEAR SIR,—The above note evidently refers to me, as I am the one publisher who has reprinted the work referred to at a low price. Of course it warms the blood, a little, of an honest man, to have another honest man call him a knave. When discussion gets to that point, argument is cut off. I will, however, make a few points on my side of the case.

First.—I am, and long have been, heartily in favor of giving authors the control of their productions upon their own terms, within the limits of the bounds of common sense—it would hardly be practicable for us to pay copyright to Homer, and it may be an open question as to when Macaulay's heirs should cease to receive their tax; there is, of course, some limit; honest "doctors disagree" as to points of equity, expediency, and the best methods of bringing a happy future out of the evil present.

Second.—The laws of this country (and I believe the same is true of all countries) are not as you and other authors desire they should be. Evidently, too, it is quite as useless for authors to expect to get what they want without a CHANGE in the laws, as to hope to reach the result by calling publishers bad names. Where is the common sense of characterizing me as a "pirate" because I multiply (within the bounds of law and of custom since the time of Cadmus) copies of your book from the copy I bought and paid for, more than in applying the same term to one who reads the book aloud to a dozen friends, who consequently do not buy it—or more than applying it to YOU for appropriating the language and thoughts of the patriarch JOB in one of your books without giving him any payment—you give "credit," doubtless, to the authors whom you quote, but you give them no pay.—I give YOU credit, but no "pay" beyond the copy I buy, till we are able to secure a change in the present unsatisfactory laws.

Third.—General Grant once said, "The best way to get rid of a bad law is to enforce it;" that is my theory, and I shall continue to practice upon it; I expect to aid in securing to you by "enforcement" of the legitimate consequences of the present laws, what authors would never get by whining or growling. Some people give to my methods the credit of being, possibly, the largest single influence which is working in this country to bring about the much desired change in the laws.

Fourth.—While authors certainly have their "rights," readers have some rights also. When I was a boy under fourteen years of age the good literature accessible to me was limited, nearly, to Murray's English Reader, and Josephus' Works. I do not pretend to be the reader's especial champion, but I DO look at the question of the "intellectual life" for them from their standpoint as well as from that of the author—and it is amazing to me that an author of your high character, intellectual, humane and Christian (whose inspiring words "The humblest subscriber to a mechanics' institute has easier access to sound learning than had either Solomon or Aristotle." I have placed before millions of readers)—that you should seem to take no pleasure in the fact that the best literature of the world has by my efforts been placed within the reach of millions to whom it was before unattainable: that I give to YOU an appreciative audience (far more appreciative than you find among your wealthy patrons) among tens of thousands, who without my efforts would never have known you. I say readers have rights as well as authors; what they are I will not discuss; I say, simply, let the laws be changed as authors demand; while Homer, Shakespeare, Milton, and Lamb are free to readers, any "monopoly" which living authors can secure upon their own writings will not seriously hurt readers—and, furthermore, folly in law-making, if foolish changes should be made, would be likely soon to work its own cure, in this age of the printing press.

Finally.—Hamerton's "Intellectual Life" ought to sell by the hundred thousand—ought to sell a hundred where it has sold one by the methods of your approved publishers; when the "good time coming" is here, and authors can make their own terms with publishers and the public, perhaps you will give me a little credit and thanks for the LARGER audience you will then have because of my present "piracy." Respectfully, JOHN B. ALDEN.

SOME "Pirate" PRIZES,

In which the book-loving public are joyfully sharing.—100-page descriptive Catalogue sent free to any applicant.

HAMERTON'S "THE INTELLECTUAL LIFE." Price reduced from $2.00 to 50 cents in cloth binding, $1.00 in Russia, gilt edges.

GUIZOT'S HISTORY of FRANCE. 8 vols., 426 illustrations. Reduced from $36.00 to $8.00—cheaper edition, $5.00.

RAWLINSON'S SEVEN GREAT MONARCHIES. Reduced from $18 to $3.00 in 3 vols., over 700 illustrations.

IRVING'S WORKS. In six large volumes, price $4.00—better edition than sold three years ago for $25.

PRESCOTT'S GREAT WORK, Ferdinand and Isabella, reduced from $4.50 to $2.00—in our fine illustrated edition in 2 vols.; cheap edition, 1 vol., $1.25.

GEORGE ELIOT'S WORKS, complete in 5 vols., elegant cloth binding, price only $3.75.

SCOTT'S WAVERLEY NOVELS, complete in 12 vols., illustrated, only $7.00—printed from same plates as edition sold three years ago for $30 00.

Books by Mail require 20 per cent. extra to prepay. Mention this paper.

JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher,

P. O. Box 1227. 393 Pearl Street, New York.

FARM NOTES.

ONION RAISING.

For the last ten years I have raised a patch of onions of about half an acre, and when I sowed my seed (as early as I could work my ground) I mixed in an ounce of early cabbage seed, and they made better plants and nearly as early as hot-bed plants, as they were thin and grew stocky, but after a few years the little black bug found and destroyed them, and summer before last I hardly saved one hundred. Last year they covered them as soon as they were up, and I got a barrel of superphosphate and mixed it with two barrels of ashes, and sprinkled some on the rows and it drove them all off, and I had about 8,000 plants, while my nearest neighbor had his all destroyed. I put it on the hills of potatoes after they were up, and they were not eaten by worms half as much as formerly. A man put it in the hills when he planted potatoes and it stopped their eating them on a patch where they were formerly all destroyed. O. P. F.

Liberty, N. Y.

GOOD DRAINAGE.

There is hardly any plant that likes stagnant water. Some things, like the cranberry, for instance, like water. but it must not be stagnant; there must be a fall to allow for drainage. For field crops, fruit trees and such things, there must be drainage. How quickly a grain field tells the tale of good or poor drainage. The yellow patches tell where the water lies longer than it should. It pays always to provide proper outlets for water. Potatoes will thrive in a moist season, but the water must drain off quickly. A heavy rain will do little damage to a wheat field if provision is made for the prompt removal of the surplus water, while a moderate rainfall upon undrained land, which is already too wet, will cause the destruction of many of the plants, and largely reduce the possible yield of the crop. While thorough drainage is much better than any make-shift which can be invented. it is much better to adopt a very imperfect plan than it is to make no provision for the protection of the crop from excessive moisture in the soil. It is better to set fruit trees on mounds where the ground is low rather than run the risk of not underdraining.

Too Much Mixed.—A very common mistake of farmers is in permitting all kinds of stock to run together in one yard or enclosure. Horses, colts (which are frisky creatures), bulls, cows, sheep, pigs, and fowls all run in one yard or field. The horses worry the colts, the colts chase the cows and sheep, the cows hook the colts, the bulls gore the horses, the pigs worry the cows and sheep and destroy new-born calves and lambs, the fowls are trampled on, and there is a sad time all around.

A correspondent asks if it is beneficial to put fertilizers on seed wheat, and if so what kind is best. From personal observation and practice we would recommend the drilling in of a ton of the Atlanta fertilizer with the seed to each ten acres, using six pecks of seed per acre in drills twelve to fifteen inches apart.—Cincinnati Com.-Gaz.

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

IN ADVERTISEMENTS AGGREGATING

100 lines	15	per cent discount
200 "	20	" "
300 "	25	" "
500 "	35	" "
1000 "	40	" "
2500 "	50	" "

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $ 25	10	per cent
" " " 50	15	" "
" " " 100	20	" "
" " " 250	25	" "
" " " 500	30	" "
" " " 1000	35	" "
" " " 1500	40	" "
" " " 2500	50	" "

Business notices double the price ofdisplay agate measure.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

Cures all Lung, Nervous and Chronic Diseases. Office and "Home Treatment," by
A. H. HIATT, M. D., Central Music Hall, CHICAGO.
Price Reduced. Write for Pamphlet, Information, &c.

NELSON'S
Sunday School Books and Cards.
Approved by all Evangelical Denominations.
Send for Catalogue.
T. NELSON & SONS, 42 Bleecker St., N.Y.

Sunday-School Papers.
MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,
To Sunday-Schools, r quarter. .... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... ... . 10cts.

SUNSHINE,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.
IT CONTAINS:
1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.
Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address
T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.
Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contraditions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.
In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."
The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.
National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,
Or the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;
Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.
This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

FREEMASONRY
AT A GLANCE
BY
E. RONAYNE,
Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100, $3.60. Address,
National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND BOOK
OF Freemasonry,
BY
E. Ronayne,
Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639 Chicago.

Gives the correct or "Standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustriated and explained. In short, it is
A Complete and Accurate Lodge Manual.
The high standing of Mr. Ronayne in the fraternity, his popularity and success as a teacher and lecturer in the Lodge, together with the testimony of high Masonic authority, leaves no doubt of the accuracy of this work. It is rapidly becoming a standard work in the hands of ACTING LODGE OFFICIALS, and those who desire to post themselves on the workings of the order. The price is so low that it is within the reach of all. Sent postpaid securely wrapped on receipt of price. 184 pages, Paper covers, 35 cents. Elegant cloth with beveled edge and gilt stamp, $1.00. Address
National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

IN THE COILS;
—OR—
The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

Five Dollar
LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.
National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW
Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.
Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—
Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.
SING THEM!
HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!
Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.
Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. ILL.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world
Thurlow Weed's Great Letter
On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.
SEE WHY.
It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.
READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.
A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. ILL.

IN BRIEF.

The Shields brothers, seven in number, natives of Hunt county, Texas, range in height from 6½ to 7½ feet and their combined height is about 48 feet. The whole seven appeared on the streets of a Texas town the other day and attracted as much attention as a circus procession.

A Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, miller cut three sheaves of wheat last harvest, thrashed and cleaned the grain, which was at once ground into flour, then baked into cakes and eaten by the harvest hands within ten minutes from the time the grain was standing in the field.

The Himalaya mountain range, lying between India and Thibet, is the greatest in the world. It has not only the highest mountain peak, but a greater number of peaks exceeding 20,000 feet than all other ranges together. More than 1,100 exceeding that height have been measured and it is computed that at least 2,000 exceed it.

A lady advocating woman suffrage recently brought down the house with the following argument: "I have no vote but my groom has. I have a great respect for that man in the stables; but I am sure were I to go to him and say, "John, will you exercise the franchise?" he would reply, "Please, mum, which horse be that?"

"Hitch your wagon to a star," said Emerson, and Holmes thinks the words ought to be printed in letters of gold. Why not to a pair of stars, either abreast or tandem? Why not to a four-in-hand of stars? since there are plenty of them running wild in the azure field. The idea is a good one, but not quite so good as that of the ardent lover who proposed to pluck up a Norway pine, dip it in the crater of Vesuvius, and write upon the vault of heaven in letters of fire, "Amelia, I love thee!"—Interior.

For all kinds of measurements arbitrary units have been provided by law or custom; as, for instance, the foot, pound, minute, meter, gramme, second, etc., etc. Electricians, in convention, have decided to call the unit of electrical resistance an "Ohm," after the celebrated investigator in physics. This unit was arrived at from mathematical deductions too complex to be here considered. Electrical resistance being that resistance which materials offer against the transferrence of electricity, some stated material which could be readily procured and brought into suitable shape (length and diameter) at any time, has been selected. A column of mercury 1.06 meters long and 1 sq. millimeter in section, at a temperature of 0 deg. C., has been decided by the Paris congress of electricians to be the suitable standard for the reproduction of that unit of measurement called an ohm. Familiarity with the term makes it as appreciable as is a foot, a degree of temperature, or a note of music.

A New York firm applied to Abraham Lincoln some years before he became President as to the financial standing of one of his neighbors. Mr. Lincoln replied as follows: "Yours of 10th rec'd. I am well acquainted with Mr. ——, and know his circumstances. First of all he has a wife and baby; together they ought to be worth $50,000 to any man. Secondly, he has an office in which there is a table worth $1.50, and three chairs worth say $1. Last of all there is in one corner a rat-hole which will bear looking into. Respectfully yours.—A Lincoln."

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

In Debility from Overwork.

Dr. G. W. Collins, Tipton, Ind., says: "I used it in nervous debility brought on by overwork in warm weather, with good results."

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flago, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50 Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 2? cents each: per dozen $2.00

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill. Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3 25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Docsburg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1 00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1.25

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen. $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebheus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Broekman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev A. W Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Lonisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative 20 cents each per dozen, $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies by Elder M S Newcomer and Elder G W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each: per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each, per dozen, $1 25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association 25c. each, per doz $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan, "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 304 pages; cloth $1

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

Among the nominations sent to the Senate last week by President Cleveland were the following: Thos. J. Jarvis, of North Carolina, Uuited States Minister to Brazil; Alexander R. Lawton of Georgia, Minister to Russia; Anthony M. Kelley, of Virginia, Minister to Italy; Edmund Juessen, of Chicago, Consul General to Vienna, and Rasmus R. Anderson, of Wisconsin, Consul General to Denmark; Wm. R. Roberts of New York, Minister to Chili; Charles W. Buck of Kentucky, Minister to Peru; Chas. T. Russell, of Connecticut, U. S. Consul at Liverpool; Norman J. Coleman, of Missouri, Commissioner of Agriculture; Richard B. Hubbard, of Texas, Minister to Japan; Alexander McCune, of New York, Solicitor of the Treasury; General Joseph E. Johnston, of Virginia, for Commissioner of Railroads; and Wm. M. Lang, of Texas, for Consul at Hamburg. The Senate adjourned sine die Thursday afternoon. Nearly all the recent nominations were confirmed, including Pearson, re-appointed postmaster at New York.

Thea Panam troubles have created quite a stir in the Navy Department. Secretary Whitney thinks that foreign nations must not be permitted to insult us. The Tennessee, with Admiral Jouett, will leave New Orleans with an extra complement of marines, for Aspinwall, and with extra provisions. This will place four ships and 400 to 500 available men for land service at that point.

The Utah Commission had a very satisfactory interview with the President on Thursday. They made a verbal report to him of the condition of affairs in the Territory and outlined their plans for future work. The President promised that the administration would do what it could toward strengthening their hands and sustaining them and the judiciary of Utah in the effort to root out the practice of polygamy. The Attorney-General and Secretary of the Interior gave also assurances of support.

COUNTRY.

The Governor and Council of Maine considered the petition of Bishop Healey and others to reprieve for a short time two Italian murderers so that their execution might not take place on Good Friday.

In the Wisconsin State Senate Wednesday the compromise retail liquor license bill passed, and now only awaits the Governor's signature to become a law.

The bill prohibiting games of base-ball on Sunday has been stolen from the files of the Indiana Legislature, and a new bill will have to be introduced.

It is estimated that half the wheat crop of Kansas will prove a total loss. Farmers are reported to be plowing their wheat fields and sowing other grain.

Teams are still crossing on the ice at Mackinaw City and the indications are that the Straits will not be open before May. The ice is thirty to forty inches thick and covered with three feet of snow.

Judge Brewer at St. Louis refused to commute the sentences of sixty day's imprisonment of two men at Hannibal, Mo., arrested for interfering with trains during the strike. The petition for release was signed by railway officials and set forth that the families of the prisoners were suffering, but the judge insisted that the offense was too grave to be condoned.

The Bell Telephone Company held its anuual meeting Tuesday at Boston. The year's net earnings were $1,710,000 while the previous year they were $1,475,000. The number of miles of wire Dec. 31st was 101,000 and the subscribers numbered 134,601.

Joseph Palmer, the accomplice of Berners, whose light sentence caused the Cincinnati riot of a year ago, was Thursday for the second time found guilty of murder in the first degree.

A cyclone at Waverly, Mo., Thursday evening, destroyed six residences and wrecked the Christian church, causing damage of $50,000. No person was seriously hurt.

In a fit of rage Mrs. D. S. Spring of Alexander, N. Y., saturated bedding with oil, set it on fire and burned herself and two children to death.

The Nickle-plate road on Thursday went into the hands of D. W. Caldwell, its Vice President, as receiver, on the appointment of Judge Shephard, of New York.

The entire train service of the Pennsylvania railway between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis is rearranged, old trains quickened, new ones added, and the time of all through trains reduced to the lowest possible limit. The New York and Chicago limited leaves New York at 10 o'clock, Washington 10:50, and Baltimore 11:50 a. m., arriving at Chicago at 10 o'clock next morning. Considering the distance covered this is the fastest train in the world. Its time from New York to Cincinnati is 21 hours and to St. Louis 28 hours.

FOREIGN.

In the French Chamber of Deputies last Monday amid the greatest excitement of the populace, Prime Minister Ferry presented the government's request for a credit of $40,000,000 on account of military operations in China, and at once moved that the matter be given priority. The motion was rejected by a vote of 308 to 161, when Ferry announced the resignation of the entire ministry. President Grevy asked Brisson to form a new cabinet but he immediately declined. De Freycinet was then asked, but after an unsuccessful attempt gave up the task. The Chamber afterwards voted the first installment of $10,000,000 asked by Minister Ferry, reserving action on the remaining $30,000,000 until the formation of a new cabinet.

A dispatch dated Hanoi, April 1, states that the situation of the French army there is critical. A large Chinese force under European leaders is endeavoring to cut off the French retreat.

The Pall Mall Gazette states that Russia's answer to England's proposals on the Afghan question amounts to a cordial acceptance, and that Russia consents to accept as debatable territory the zone laid out as such by England. A dispatch next day says the reply of Russia regarding the outposts of the Russo-Afghan frontier has been handed to Earl Granville and amounts to a virtual acceptance of the more important proposals of England.

A dispatch from Panama says of the battle of Colon (Aspinwall) and the burning of the city, that the attack upon the rebel chief Prestan by the Colombian troops was led by Col. Ulloa. Prestan's forces were utterly routed after a severe engagement. As soon as Prestan became convinced that it would be impossible for him to maintain his position he set fire to the city and deserted it.

The following dispatch from Commander Kane of the U. S. war steamer Galena has been received by Secretary of the Navy Whitney: "Aspinwall is in ashes. It was burned by the insurgents to escape capture by the government troops. The Pacific Mail dock, the railroad property on the north end of the island, and the canal property at Crispol, are the only buildings saved. The shipping is safe. I have all my force on shore protecting property. My ship is crowded with refugees. Thousands are destitute and without shelter."

William Howie, of High Bluff, Manitoba, who returned to that place Friday from the vicinity of the rebels, says: "Two weeks ago Wednesday, Riel with a gang of about four hundred declared war and started on a marauding expedetion. The day before Riel started he addressed a large meeting of half-breeds in the Catholic church near Batouche's Crossing. He advised all to arm themselves and prepare to fight, as it was evident justice could be secured by no other method. The object of the rebels seemed to be to strike at the Dominion Government, and they imprisoned all government officials and clerks they could lay hands on."

Home is woman's domain and she is entitled to everything that can add to its comfort and spare her annoyance. "The Sternberger Folding Dress Pillow" is one of the many conveniences which materially lighten the labor and burdens of the housewife. An advertisement in another column gives full details in regard to this favorite article, which is meeting with such remarkable sale wherever it is introduced.

BUSINESS.

LETTERS

Containing cash for Cynosure received during the week, ending Friday, April 3:

Jas C Heslet, Wm C Bissell, S P Luscomb, Wm Berry, W T Warner, J W Snively, W R Morley, E Sutton, E T Dickson, Sam'l Guengerick, T S Walter, T N Hasselquist, A Wright, Dan'l Hyde, Henry Higgins, R J Williams, L Clark, Mrs. M. D. Rogers, W. A. Limbocker, M W Holt, Philo Carpenter, Jno Thompson, Rob't Jones, J. Howell, John P. Dopps, A Megrew, Mrs. C. E. Eno, C. H. Kouantz, Wm. D. Lowrey, J. M Clark, Sam'l S Horine, Lewis, Baldwin, Jas Wilkinson, Sub News Co, John Lamb, E W Bruce, A D Carter, R G Wood, J H Eaton, Miss C Wiggins, C E Douglas, David White, H W Smith, Abel L Blowers, J S Rice, Rev Thomas Brown.

A Wonderful Woman,

A Wonderful Life,

AND

A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

LADIES CAN SECURE Light Pleasant and Profitable EMPLOYMENT at their Homes, in the city or country. Instructions free by calling, or we will mail you printed instructions and full particulars for 15 cts. Address TOILET MFG CO., 52 E. Madison St., Chicago. Manufacturers and dealers in Toilet Articles, Rugs, Yarns, Patterns, etc.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		@78⅝
No. 3		@69
Winter No 2	80	@81½
Corn—No. 2		41
Oats—No. 2		53
Rye—No. 2		60
Bran per ton		13 75
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@12 00
Mess pork per bbl		11 65
Butter, medium to best		@25
Cheese		@10½
Beans		@1 45
Eggs		13
Potatoes per bus		48
Seeds—Timothy		@1 40
Flax		1 39
Broom corn		@ 05
Hides—Green to dry flint	½	@14¼
Lumber—Common		@18 00
Wool		@29
Cattle—Choice to extra		@5 60
Common to good		@5 00
Hogs		@4 60
Sheep	2 00	@4 50

NEW YORK.

Flour	2 90	@5 25
Wheat—Winter	82	@ 93
Spring		91
Corn	46	@50
Oats	37	@41
Mess Pork		13 00
Eggs		15
Butter	8	28
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	3 00	@5 40
Hogs	4 20	@4 45
Sheep	1 50	@3 25

LOOK AT THE
YELLOW TAG
AND SEE IF YOUR SUBSCRIPTION EXPIRES THIS MONTH. IF IT DOES, PLEASE LET US HEAR FROM YOU AT ONCE.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

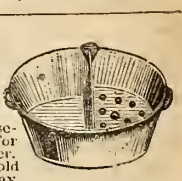
They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND-PAINTED SILKS for Patchwork, Tidies, Screens, etc. Send $1 for package, or 50 cts. for beautiful samples. WESTERN ART CO., Salem, O.

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to Rev. Chiniqay, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

AGENTS WANTED! Rider's Improved Pillow-Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars and see what it is any way. E. W. RIDER & CO.
Mention the Christian Cynosure. Racine, Wis.

THE NOVELTY RUG MACHINE.



[PAT. DEC. 27, 1881.]

Makes Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mitteus, etc., with ease and rapidity. Price only one dollar. Single machine, with full directions, sent by mail on receipt of price. Agents wanted. Apply for circulars to E. ROSS & CO., Patentees and Sole Manufacturers, Toledo, Ohio, Lock Box 184; also Manufacturers of Rug Patterns.

$1 WORTH OF TESTED Seeds Free

To any person sending us 50 cents for one year's subscription to the Rural Home, and seven cents to help pay postage, packing, etc., we will send the Ten Packets of choice Vegetable seeds named below free. We make this offer to induce you to become a regular subscriber to the Rural Home, and to test the value of our seeds (specially grown for our use). Following are the seeds we offer: Early Oxheart Cabbage, Imported Blood Turnip Beet, Livingston's Perfection Tomato, New Italian Onion, Early White Turnip, Early Montana Sugar Corn, New Perpetual Lettuce, Premium Green Pea, Valparaiso Squash, New, Imported, Large Sugar Parsnip. We want every farmer and gardner in the United States to give these seeds an honest and fair trial. They are warranted to be of the very best quality, true to name, fresh and pure, and of the growth of 1884. Full directions for cultivating on every package. Address THE RURAL HOME, Philadelphia, Pa.

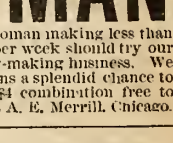
$1 Sample, Free.



Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $40 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill, Chicago.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts., sent post-paid. Address,
BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y.

TREES!

By the million at the

ELGIN NURSERIES.

(Established 1854. Thirty-first year.)

The Leading Nurseries of the West. Our

Annual Catalogue and Price-List,

containing valuable hints on the planting and management of trees,

FREE TO ALL.

Farmers and planters, do not fail to send for it.
Address, E. H. RICKER & CO.,
Please mention this paper. Borden Block, Elgin, Ill.

Cook E A 13 Wabash Ave

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 30 | CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1885. | WHOLE No. 781.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Pres. J. Blanchard..... 8
An Advance Backward... 8
John Quincy Adams..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Dynamite Fiend (Poetry) 1
Freemasonry at the Communion Table..... 2
Progression and Regression 2
Sumptuary Laws, 1736 to 1884 3
SELECTED:
Masonic Autocracy..... 3
John Q. Adams in Congress..... 3
The Power of the Lodge.. 4
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chaps. XV. and XVI... 4
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
Kansas Donations..... 13
CORRESPONDENCE:
Illinois News via Greece; Churches and Sects; Masonry and Fat Cattle; Christ's Coming to his Temple; The Society of St. George.....5,6
REFORM NEWS:
Michigan Meeting; Minnesota Reformers..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CLUBBING LIST 7
THE CHURCHES..... 12
SECRET EMPIRE 12
FARM NOTES..... 14
IN BRIEF..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS 16
MARKETS 16

The fine portrait of one who will ever stand among the foremost of Christian statesmen in the history of nations has been secured for this number of the Cynosure to accompany a remarkable record against the lodge. The more extended and brilliant record of John Quincy Adams in the anti-slavery struggle has dimmed the lustre of his labors for Anti-masonry. With much labor the story of his contributions to this reform has been gathered out of various biographies and pamphlets, and will form a permanent and, we hope, valuable addition to the history of Anti masonry. The Cynosure has in preparation articles on Gerrit Smith, Samuel Plumb and Lebbeus Armstrong, with portraits, which may be expected by our readers within a few weeks.

—Brethren Clark and Foote of Detroit expect to be in the vanguard at the Michigan State meeting at Brighton, on the 21st. They believe that old men are for counsel and war also. They expect to be in the place on the Sabbath before to hold special meetings for temperance and for the children.

—The Swedish Lutheran church on Portland avenue in this city, pastor Bowman, was visited by brethren Stoddard and Phillips last Thursday evening, and the former addressed a good audience on the lodge issue. Bro. Stoddard next day went to Wisconsin on business for the N. C. A., expecting to return early this week.

—Friends in Minnesota, please read and heed the request of Bro. Richards, of whose engagement as lecturer in your State you have been notified two or three weeks ago. By an unfortunate mistake Bro. Richards' letter was laid aside. It should have been printed weeks ago. Let there be redoubled activity now that so much time has passed. Let every possible and proper aid be given.

—The assassination of Lovejoy, which precipitated in large measure the fierceness of the final attack upon slavery, is recalled by the death of Rev. Thaddeus B. Hurlbut, in Texas, on March 31, aged eighty-four years. Mr. Hurlbut was one of the party who defended Lovejoy in 1837 at Alton, Illinois, against the pro-slavery mobs of that day. His death leaves Henry Tanner, of Buffalo, the sole survivor of the brave little company who were with Lovejoy.

—May there be many more such young men raised up to save our country from the spiritual wreck of formalism and false worship. Rev. David Strang, of Lincoln, Tenn., informs us of an amusing mistake made in crediting the Easter story in last number to Rev. A. Strang. It was written as a literary exercise some time ago by his son, aged sixteen, and copied and sent without his knowledge to the Midland. A pen begun so early and so ably to confront the popular religious fallacies of our day may yet do a grand work for Christ and his kingdom.

—The Religious Telescope quotes with approval the Nashville Christian Advocate that: "Secret political societies in a really free republic are both absurd and dangerous. They are calculated to generate the very ills they profess to combat in despotic nations." The Telescope adds that this is "equally true of social and other secret societies. They are alike dangerous in society or in business or in government. Christian men should stand free from them." Most true! Wherefore then should not the wicked attempt of Bishop Weaver and others to get the social secret societies into the church be condemned and withstood—by Bro. Hott as well as every other Christian. Is it pleasant to contemplate the probability of lodge-men filling the editorial chair of the Telescope, and the seats of the bishops? Yet such will be the case in a few years if Weaver, Warner, Garst, Shuey, and others prevail.

—The last active participant in the Morgan abduction and murder has probably passed to his account before a just judge whose eye pierces all the arcana of lodgery which vain men try to conceal with blasphemy and terror. Edward A. Sawyer died at Grand Blanc, Michigan, on the 2nd of February, at the advanced age of 97 years. He was one of the company who went with Lawson to the jail in Canandaigua to sieze Morgan and is believed to be the one who gave the signal for the approach of the carriage. He was a harness-maker and lived in the place. He was arrested and imprisoned for participating in the abduction and left the State at the earliest opportunity, settling in the Michigan wilderness. He first joined the lodge in 1809, and continued in active or honorary connection till his death, and the Masons buried him. Concerning the Morgan murder he always observed an impenetrable silence and would not allow a word said in his presence respecting it. His appearance indicated the working of a remorseful conscience; and he is now where a more faithful than human judges will examine his case and decide with unswerving justice.

—The election in Chicago last week, and succeeding events are bitterly remembered by the better classes of the city. The gamblers and saloons worked in their mayor by a majority of 300 or 400, and Harrison will soon enter upon his fourth term. The press reports of the election show that the Ku-klux spirit, which was supposed to thrive only in the South, is pretty well developed among the saloons and vile dens of Chicago. At some of the polling places it was almost at the risk of life that an opposer of Harrison could get in his vote. Beatings were numerous, while the police looked on benignly. In the precinct where Harrison had the most opposition and least proportional vote, the ballot-box was stolen, and in several others such frauds are believed to have been perpetrated that a fund of $100,000 is to be raised to prosecute. Of Judge Smith the republican candidate, we regret to learn that he has also befriended the gamblers on the bench and rents his buildings to saloons and worse. This is the report widely believed. If true the nomination of a third ticket of true and pure men was demanded, and of such character we hope were the nominees of the prohibitionists.

THE DYNAMITE FIEND.

BY JOEL SWARTZ, D. D.

Let humanity blush for the Dynamite Fiend,
While meeting his malice with scorn;
Let it crimson to own, with horror and shame,
That of it such monsters are horn.

How near to the pit our nature may go
Its passion for blood to appease;
How strong is its hate, how dark and how low,
We never could know but for these.

And that which may deepen our horror and shame
Is the purpose, long harbored and fell;
'Tis not the swift leap of a transient flame,
But the slow consuming of hell.

What recks the foul fiend that mother and child
And maiden in terror expire,
If so he may see, in ecstacy wild,
His work of destruction and fire?

Have devils come back, once driven to hell,
To 'habit the bodies of men?
Do they weave round their victims the demon's dark spell,
And steep them in murder again?

Has the Serpent escaped his prison profound
And slipt from his adamant chain?
Are dynamite fiends his subjects unhound,
Come back with their leader to reign?

They seem not of earth, but yet they are men,
And shame the high semblance they wear;
Their demon-like deeds bespeak their dark den,
Though they breathe the heaven's free air.

Aye, they boast of their rights, of hardship complain,
Whilst lighting the dynamite fuse;
And eying the wreck, the innocent slain,
Their wrongs by their rights they excuse.

O blush for the deeds of the Dynamite Fiend,
While meeting his malice with scorn;
Let our kinship proclaim our horror and shame,
That of us such monsters are born.

O King of the angels, of devils and men,
Whose sceptre extends over all,
In our horror and pain, in our struggles so vain,
On thee for protection we call!

The temples of Law and Justice are shaken,
The powers of Darkness are strong;
The bolts of Thy wrath the wicked have taken,
And smite for disorder and wrong.

The nations are quaking with horror astounded,
And are full of misgiving and pain;
The strong and the weak alike are confounded,
And the wake of the watchman is vain.

O vain is the help of armies of men,
For coarse is the cordon they draw;
The counsels of kings and warriors are vain,
And weak are the arms of the law.

O who can unweave the dynamite spell,
Which maddens the murderer's brain!
O who can drive back the legions of hell
And bar their dark prison again!

No sophist, enchanter, reformer, or sage,
Declaiming of culture and schools,
The dynamite spirit can ever assuage,
Which maddens and blinds where it rules.

Ah no, he only whom all things obey,
As sovereign, avenger and Lord,
Can drive the foul demon of murder away,
By the might of his Spirit and Word.

At his bidding the bosom of passion grows calm,
The temper forgiving and sweet;
The lion of hate grows meek as the lamb,
And lies at the good Shepherd's feet.

Ah yes, when he comes to visit the heart,
Then vanish the blade and the brand;
E'en Tyranny takes the down-trodden's part,
And Strength gives Weakness the hand.

O shame on you, tyrants, whose burdens provoke
The oppressed to madness and hate!
Let your safety command you to lighten the yoke,
And mercy your greed to abate.

Draw out your proud souls to pity the poor,
Let the homeless and friendless be fed;

Close not with writs the low cabin door,
But enter with prayer and with bread.

So shall your temples of Justice be strong,
And violence your islands shall flee;
And the ramparts of Right shall beat back the Wrong,
As the rocks on your coasts do the sea.

Gettysburg, Pa., Feb. 1885.

FREEMASONRY AT THE COMMUNION TABLE.

Editor Cynosure:—As the reply to my question in the Cynosure of March 12 is not as satisfactory as desired, I send for publication the following conversation between A. and B.

A. Good morniug, brother B., how long have you been a member of the church?

B. It thiuk it must be about forty years.

A. I think, then, you must have been present at the Lord's Supper a good many times.

B. Yes; more times than I can count; in fact, I have never been absent without a good excuse.

A. Has this ordinance been of any speeial help in your religious experience?

B. Yes, indeed, a great spiritual help in more ways than I can tell. But why do you ask such questions?

A. Well, I will tell you. It has been a matter of wonder to me, and others, that you have lately absented yourself from this ordinance without any apparent cause.

B. That is true; and I am glad to state briefly my reasons for such an unusual course—so contrary to my former habit. Permit me, then, to say, I regard the Lord's Supper as the most solemn and impressive memorial of that most wonderful and important of all events, the sacrifice and death of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross. How clean, then, should be the hands and how pure the life and character of him who stands as the representative of the Divine Master and administers the emblems of this sacred memorial to his disciples!

A. I think you and I will not differ as to this. But is it true, as reported, that you cannot take the elements of the Lord's Supper from the hands of a Mason?

B. Yes.

A. Do you mean to say that a Mason, or Odd-fellow, or member of any similar institution, is unfit to administer this ordinance?

B. Yes, that is just what I mean to say. Such a one dishonors Christ in so doing, as long as he adheres to or favors such institutions.

A That is a very serious charge; and I am eurious to know why you think so.

B. Yes, I am aware of that, and I assure you I have not come to this conclusion without a painful struggle with my early training and convictions, and only by a thorough investigation of the claims, objects, and influence of these societies; by reading their standard writings; by observation and experience, and especially by aid of the Holy Spirit who has promised to "lead into all truth." Masonry, and all similar societies, claim to be religious, and teach that "all who live in strict obedience to their precepts and obligations are thereby made free from sin"—and will have eternal happiness at last in the Grand Lodge above. It follows, therefore, that the minister who belougs to the lodge aud approves of such a system by precept and example, who preaches Christ in the pulpit and practically denies him in the lodge—such a minister, I say, is not fit to minister in holy things.

A. I am surprised at such statements, as I have been taught to believe there is nothing wrong in these organizations. I cannot think our Masonic ministers are as bad as you represent.

B. Very likely. I once thought as you do.

A. Do you mean to say that such men as ——— and our Presiding Elder (as well as a large number of other miuisters) are guilty of falsehood, when they say "there is nothing wrong in these societies?"

B. As to that I can only say, there are many other ministers of equal veracity and reputation in our church and other churches who once belonged to the lodge, who, after taking several degrees, seceded and published to the world that these societies are "foul, deceptive systems"—and as these witnesses agree with my own personal experience and observation, I cannot but feel that I am right in my present views.

A. But are you sure that the unfitness of the administrators (as you seem to regard it) is a sufficient excuse for you to refuse this ordinance and thus deprive yourself of its spiritual benefits?

B. The guilt or responsibility of depriving me of this privilege must rest on him who has thus usurped the place of the Master. But that you may more clearly see my position, and that I am not alone, and act without precedent or authority, hear what the "great commentator," Dr. Adam Clark, says: "Is the ungodliness of the minister any prejudice to the ordinance itself or to the devout communicant? I answer, first: None who is ungodly should ever be permitted to minister in holy things on any pretense whatever—and in this ordinance in particular no unhallowed hands should ever be seen—those who are of a different character bring the ordinance into contempt." Prof. Feruholm, of Sweden, says: "We do not find it at all consistent with the stauding of a disciple of Christ that he should be a member of a secret lodge." This is certainly very strong language; but, as I think, in perfect accord with the word of God.

J. Q. Adams

Now, if it be a fact, as I assume, that such ministers do practically deny Christ in their connection with the lodge; do not "honor the Son even as they honor the Father," as they are commanded to do, especially members of the Masonic fraternity which claims to save men by a plan of its own, which utterly rejects Christ as the only Saviour, which forbids its members to even pray in his name in the lodge, which exeludes or omits his name from all passages of the Bible quoted or used in its ritual, then nothing is clearer, it seems to me, than that such men are, in the language of Dr. Clark, "uugodly" and wholly unfit for sueh service.

The extreme abhorrence of God for all impurity is strikingly visible in his directions for the various washings, purifications, and sprinkliug of blood in qualifying and sanctifying the Levite for the holy office of priesthood under the "old dispensation;" and if God, who "is a consuming fire," took summary vengeance on those who "offered strange fire," how shall sueh ungodly ministers as I refer to eseape the wrath of God? His eommand is, "Be ye clean who bear the vessels of the Lord." Paul forbids the Corinthians to keep company with or even to eat with men called brothers, who are fornicators, covetous, idolaters, drunkards, etc.; and of such a one not to "bid him God speed" or "receive him into your house," "who brings not the doctrine of Christ." Judge for yourself, then, whether such characters are more offensive in God's sight than those ministers who have "trodden under foot the Son of God," by their connection with such a system as Masonry. Now if I herein do "exercise myself to have always a conscience void of offence toward God and man," I must "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." "What concord hath Christ with Belial, or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?" "What fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness?" etc.

I have thus briefly given you a few reasons why I take this course, but have not by any means exhausted the subject; and, hoping and praying the Divine Spirit will "lead you into all truth," I bid you good bye. J. S. Bibbins.

Newark, Ill.

PROGRESSION AND REGRESSION.

It is interesting, in the science of geology, to note the progress of the earth's development in the different periods of remote and more recent time. Moses, in his cosmogony, if the subject was original with him, assigns six periods, which he calls yomim, to this great progressive work of the Creator. Perhaps there is no reason for presuming that he was the first person who entertained this idea of consecutive creative agency, or that he really supposed those yomim were ordinary days twenty-four hours in length. In one place he terms the period of the entire work a yom.

There was progress in vegetable and animal development according as the earth itself progressed. Great convulsions occurred. The crust was in places elevated or depressed, broken up, sometimes above water, then under; climates hot or cold, according to elevation or depression; animals and vegetation subsisting in various latitudes which only for the passing period were adapted to their natures. From the mollusk to the trilobite, reptilion, and mammal, the progress was slow but sure in the end. During each period there were developments which seemed to be a type of higher ones yet to come. Some would appear to retrogade or degenerate, and millions, billions, trillions and quadrillions died and returned, as does man, to primitive elements, or were fossilized to exhibit to future intelligences the wonders of creative power and skill. Great and small shared the like fate.

Old mother earth continued to progress, and the mammal age at length arrived, and then after a time, there was a portion sufficiently great for an Eden for the accomodation of man, the noblest work of all. Nothiug could hurt or destroy him there, while innocent, and he was enjoined to obey only a siugle law,—taste not that tempting fruit. What progress might he not have made in the garden in the arts and sciences? Would his posterity have gone forth in innocence to occupy other territories immense, yet advancing geologically to perfection? Was that Eden and the garden equal in bliss to the spiritual one still ahead? Howbeit, stone and coal, silver and gold, and a thousand good things had been provided in every Eden of the world, and it seemed necessary that countless human intelligences should enjoy them and multiply and progress in science and art.

The progress of our species appeared not great in the antediluvian age. Retrograding in morals they were destroyed by a convulsion, excepting those who were admitted into the ark. There was no new creation. They had been created a little lower than the angels. They were again to know progression or regression from the days of Noah until the final great convulsion when the elements would melt with fervent heat, and a new heaven and earth appear. Progress was slow as in the yomim of old, but man is restless and will progress or otherwise regress. Science and art progressed in the old or former dispensation. Egypt, Idumea, Greece, Rome, Persia, etc., made great strides of progress in stone work and other arts.

But in religion and morals, what regression into Baalism and all forms of idolatry! The church needed progression. The old law, though like a pedagogue leading to Christ was imperfect. The times not being prepared for great advancement. David, the good king, was a man of blood and might not build the house of Elohim. Solomon the wise, who so astouished the queen of Sheba that she swooned, had wives and concubines greatly in excess of the present day Mormons. Moses himself killed a man and hid his dead body in the sand. Wars prevailed. The temple of Janus being rarely closed. Yet there were persons who seemed, spiritually to be types of a higher development. Abraham saw his day and was glad. A prophet said, "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God?" Among the heathen, Socrates, Zoraster, Buddha, and many, very many others progressed. Still further progression was designed when Shiloh should come and promulgate new doctrine. The lex talionis was abrogated, and men enjoined to be truthful without an oath. Mankind were enjoined to worship the Father in Spirit and in truth, and the Jerusalem worship and Gerizim lost their authority. John, the forerunner, seemed to look for another phaze of progress when he said to Christ, "I have need to be baptized of thee."

But while there has been progression, there has been regression often. Romanism is a great example of regressiou in religion in the middle ages, and the churches called evangelical, have so far regressed in numerous instances that they are now with great show of truth calling each other fool and knave.

Wherefore such regression? They contemplate Jesus and his words in Scripture, but are little acquainted with the eternal word in the soul. No outward water can wash away sin when the Spirit's cleansing is shunned.

But some there are and have been who are the types of the next era after the present. It is said the meek shall inherit the earth. We see it not so now, but the ambitious, the haughty, the aristocrat. A period will come, be it far or or near at hand, when it may be said, and more appreciated than it has been: "Blessed are the meek," the peacemakers, the pure in heart. The mammal age has long been advancing. Man is a creature of this age. The huge animals of former periods have ceased upon earth. The fossil remains or skeletons of many are found which attest their hugeness. Institutions among men incorporating bad principles will only have their little yom. The secret oath-bound cliques of corrupt men though they may grow larger, are only icthiosauri and mastodons which will receive their death blow as light advances.

Quaker Boy.

SUMPTUARY LAWS, 1736 TO 1884.

It is said that history reproduces itself and most events are repetitions of the past. The intemperance of the nineteenth century is a reflection of that of the eighteenth, and similar laws are employed for its suppression. The arguments and language of the Democrats were borrowed from the latter period.

During the first half of the eighteenth century, London contained 20,000 saloons, about the same proportion to inhabitants, perhaps, as exist in some of our own cities, and Knight records in chapter xxiv., vol. v. of his history of England, that many sudden deaths from spiritous liquors occurred, and thousands were slowly killed, incapacitated for work, or driven into vice and crime.

In 1736 the British parliament was petitioned to suppress the evil. This was attempted by a duty of five dollars per gallon on gin and denounced by a member in opposition, who said that he had known of sumptuary laws for restraint ou the dress of the poor before, but never on their food and drink. It was regarded by the people as a prohibitory measure and every effort was made to evade it. "Riots occurred and informers were rolled in the mud, pumped upou or ducked in the river. Hawkers sold a colored mixture in the street and pretended chemists opened shops for the sale of cholic water. Customers gathered around their old haunts to drink 'Tom Row,' 'Make Shift,' and 'Ladies' Delight.'" The impossibility of preventing the sale of gin by prohibitory duties soon became apparent, and in 1743, when the gin act was repealed, the consumption had actually increased.

As in Great Britain in the eighteeuth century, so efforts are now being made in this country to limit by imposts and high license the consumption of ardent spirits; and with similar results. But the substance, and not the name, is falsified, and government and consumer are alike defrauded by the most villainous compounds of tobacco, strychnine and other poisons. Powerful rings are formed for bribing officials and controlling elections; and, overawed, the one political party seeks to propitiate corruption by denunciations of reform, and the other to deprecate hostility by protestations of neutrality. There is, as before, a want of public opinion to support the laws.

It is only in prohibitory States that deceptive names have been devised and "Good Luck," a temperance drink coutaining six per cent of alcohol, introduced. And to them are riots confined, for in them is effectual restraint imposed. *

MASONIC AUTOCRACY.

A DOUBLE HEADED MONSTER THREATENS THE DESTRUCTION OF OUR REPUBLICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

[From the Masonic World, Boston, March, 1885.]

A portion of the degrees of Egyptian Masonry were arranged by lying Jews into the so-called Scottish Rite of 33 degrees, at Charleston, S. C., in 1801, without the least shadow of regularity, legality or Masonic usage. Since 1801 several so-called Supreme Councils (six of which now exist in the U. S. A.) have sprung into existence by the ipse dixit of some individual, not even a Priest or King, and who possessed absolutely no authority whatever to establish any Masonic body. Of course we have no fault to find with the degrees, or the new name (Scottish Rite) given to them by their dishonest founders, in 1801, and while we recognize the right of every Mason to confer upon others, in the absence of a Grand or Supreme Body or Council, all the degrees taken by himself, and admit that Masons thus made have an undisputed right to form themselves into lodges for the purpose of working degrees, yet we deny the right of any Mason, or any one body of Masons, to form himself or itself into a Grand or Supreme Lodge or Council, with power to govern any other body of Masons, or to prevent or control the working of any degrees in any State or country. Therefore, we object most decidedly to the so-called organizatlon of the so-called Supreme Councils of the Scottish Rite, and most emphatically declare that none of them have the least shadow of regularity or authority as Supreme bodies. If intolerance, fraud, deception, irregularity, or absence of authority were their only faults, we might remain silent, but when all Masonic law and usage and even the law of the land are set at defiance, when not only Masonic, but political liberty is denied to the Craft, when the Christian warrior (K. T.) is compelled to strike down his companion in arms in support of an unholy autocracy, when, so far as possible, all Masonic, as well as municipal, State and national elections are controlled in the interest of this autocracy, we realize that at no distant date, if not checked, this double-headed monster will, by absolutely controlling the actions of all men in authority throughout the nation, annihilate our republican form of government.

We tremble for the safety of our nation, and our love of liberty and country bids us speak.

All so-called Supreme Councils of the A. & A. or Scottish Rite are similar in composition, government and management, although slight modifications are to be found in some of them, possibly because of their weakness. The so-called Supreme Council of the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the U. S. A. will at present receive our special attention. The history of this body may be briefly stated: In 1848, J. J. J. Gourgas, claiming to be a 33d degree member, (which was disputed by Bro. Pike) but possessing no other authority, declared himself chief (M.·. P.·. S.·. G.·. C.·.) of a Supreme Council of the A. & A. S. Rite, claiming to have advanced others to the 33d degree, appointed officers, and thus to have organized a Supreme Council. In 1863 this Council united with a so-called Supreme Council established at New York, in 1807 (by no better authority thau that possessed by Gourgas). At a subsequent meeting of the Council, in 1866, this union was declared dissolved, and the Gourgas Supreme Council continued instead, under the name of the Supreme Council of the Northern Masonic Jurisdictiou of the U. S. A., since which its numerous atrocious acts have given it a reputation among those familiar with its history quite as unenviable as is the reputation of Captaiu Kidd.

Regular Grand bodies of the Blue Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, as well as the Royal Masonic Rite, were all formed first, by making Masons; second, by the uniou of Masons to form lodges, etc., and third, by union of representatives of a majority of the lodges (not less than three) in a State or country, in a regular convention, for the purpose of forming a Sovereign Grand body. These Grand bodies are all composed of and perpetuated by representatives from the various subordinate bodies in their jurisdiction, and the highest degrees and positions of greatest honor are conferred by the suffrage of the entire membership of these Orders. The composition, organization, perpetuation, and government of this Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite in question, is diametrically opposed, not only to this and all other Masonic law and usage, but also to the Republic or democratic form of government of the United States of America.

The original composition of this so-called Supreme Council was nothing; its organization was by nobody; its perpetuation is by the votes of its own members, instead of the suffrage of the membership at large; its government is not a government of the governed, but of the governors (sovereigns); not of the people nor for the people, but above, beyond and against the people or members of its dependence. It enforces taxation without representation, makes arbitrary laws and rules and denies to its subordinate bodies and members the right of appeal or even respectful petition for a change of its unwise and unjust laws. Its 33d degree members are and ever have been selected solely because of their natural or acquired qualifications, which are, first, power to influence Masons to vote in all Masonic bodies for whatsoever the Supreme Council or its members may desire; second, power to influence men to vote at all political elections for such men and measures as the Supreme Council or its members may chance to favor; third, power to appoint or cause to be appointed men and Masons to such positions, municipal, State, National and Masonic, as may best serve the purposes of the Supreme Council or its members, and fourth, an entire willingness to be used as tools in putting into execution the "hellish designs" of the Supreme Council. All selections for the 33d degree are made after due examination, and from or as near as possible to, the heads of departments, from the President of the United States down. Past Grand Masters, Past Grand High Priests, Past Most Ill.·. Grand Masters, and Past Grand Commanders are selected with much care as to their ability to intimidate, control or influence Masons of lower degree.

It is claimed by some that even now it would be impossible in some States of the Union to obtain justice, even in the supreme courts, against one of the active 33d degree members of the Northern Jurisdiction because the judges themselves are 33d degree members, and hence under obligations to favor their peers. What the members of this so-called Supreme Council would do, had they the power, may be judged by what they have done, where they have had the power. In Wisconsin, some years ago, having obtained a controlling influence in some of the regular Masonic Grand bodies, they enacted laws or passed resolutions which were not only unmasonic, but also in opposition to the wishes and interests of the entire membership of the Order outside of the 33d degree members themselves. In the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, in 1882, they committed a still greater outrage, and now in the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire, a similar amendment is pending, offered by Frank A. McKean, 33d degree, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire, and Deputy for the Supreme Council of the Northern Jurisdiction. In Ohio, E. T. Carson, 33° "past most everything," Deputy for this same Supreme Council, has succeeded in bulldozing through an amendment to the Constitutiou of the Grand Commandery of Ohio, under the provision of which fourteen of the best men and Sir Knights in Ohio have been expelled for no crime save that of differing with Carson and exercising the privileges granted to every Mason, not only by all respectable Masonic bodies, but also by the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. All these outrages have been committed by threats, intimidations, and bribes, solely in the interest of the 33d degree members of this so-called Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite. The great majority of the 32d degree members of the Rite condemn all these acts but are powerless.

When such an autocracy succeedes to complete power, who is safe?

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS IN CONGRESS.

[From life of John Quincy Adams by John T. Morse, Jr., American Statesmen Series.]

When he entered Congress he had been for much more than a third of a century zealously gathering knowledge in public affairs, and during his career in that body every year swelled the already vast accumulation. Moreover, listeners were always sure to get a bold and an honest utterance and often pretty keen words from him, and he never spoke to an inattentive audience or to a thin house. Whether pleased or incensed by what he said, the representatives at least always listened to it. He was by nature a hard fighter, and by the circumstances of his course in Congress this quality was stimulated to such a degree that Parliamentary history does not show his equal as a gladiator. His power of invective was extraordinary, and he was untiring and merciless in his use of it. Theoretically he disapproved of sarcasm, but practically he could not refrain from it. Men winced and cowered before his milder attacks, became sometimes dumb, sometimes furious with mad rage before his fiercer assaults. Such struggles evidently gave him pleasure and there was scarce a back in Congress that did not at one time or another feel the score of his cutting lash; though it was the Southerners and the Northern allies of Southerners whom chiefly he singled out for torture. He was irritable and quick to wrath; he himself constantly speaks of the infirmity of his temper, and in his many conflicts his principal concern was to keep it in control. His enemies often referred to it and twitted him with it. Of alliances he was careless, and friendships he had almost none. But in the creation of enmities he was terribly successful. Not so much at first, but increasingly as years went on, a state of ceaseless, vigilant hostility became his normal condition. From the time when he fairly entered upon the long struggle against slavery, he enjoyed few peaceful days in the House. But he seemed to thrive upon the warfare, and to be never so well pleased as when he was bandying hot words with slave-holders and the Northern supporters of slave-holders. When the air of the House was thick with crimination and abuse he seemed to suck in fresh vigor and spirit from the hate-laden atmosphere. When invective fell around him in showers, he screamed back his retaliation with untiring rapidity and marvellous dexterity of aim. No odds could appal him. With his back set firm against a solid moral principle, it was his joy to strike out at a multitude of foes. They lost their heads as well as their tempers, but in the extremest moments of excitement and anger Mr. Adam's brain seemed to work with machine-like coolness and accuracy. With flushed face, streaming eyes, animated gesticulation, and cracking voice, he always retained perfect mastery of all his intellectual faculties. He thus became a terrible antagonist, whom all feared, yet fearing could not refrain from attacking, so bitterly and incessantly did he choose to exert his wonderful power of exasperation. Few men could throw an opponent into wild, blind fury with such speed and certainty as he could; and he does not conceal the malicious gratification which such feats brought to him. A leader of such fighting capacity, so courageous, with such a magazine of experience and information, and with a character so irreproachable, could have won brilliant victories in public life at the head of even a small band of devoted followers. But Mr. Adams never had and apparently never wanted followers. Other prominent public men were brought not only into collision but into comparison with their contemporaries. But Mr. Adams's individuality was so strong that he can be compared with no one. It was not an individuality of genius nor to any remarkable extent of mental qualities; but rather an individuality of character. To this fact is probably to be attributed his peculiar solitariness. Men touch each other for purposes of attachment through their characters much more than through their minds. But few men, even in agreeing with Mr. Adams, felt themselves in sympathy with him. Occasionally conscience, or invincible logic, or even policy and self-interest, might compel one or another politician to stand beside him in debate or in voting; but no current of fellow-feeling ever passed between such temporary comrades and him. It was the cold connection of duty or of business. The first instinct of nearly every one was opposition toward him; coalition might be forced by circumstances but never came by volition. For the purpose of winning immediate successes this was of course a most unfortunate condition of relationships. Yet it had some compensations: it left such influence as Mr. Adams could exert by steadfastness and argument entirely unweakened by suspicion of hidden motives or personal ends. He had the weight and enjoyed the respect which a sincerity beyond distrust must always command in the long run. Of this we shall see some striking instances.

One important limitation, however, belongs to this statement of solitariness. It was confined to his position in Congress. Outside of the city of Washington great numbers of the people, especially in New England, lent him a hearty support and regarded him with friendship and admiration. These men had strong convictions and deep feelings, and their adherence counted for much. Moreover, their numbers steadily increased, and Mr. Adams saw that he was the leader in a cause which engaged the sound sense and the best feeling of the intelligent people of the country, and which was steadily gaining ground. Without such encouragement it is doubtful whether even his persistence would have held out through so long and extreme a trial. The sense of human fellowship was needful to him; he could go without it in Congress, but he could not have gone without it altogether.

—The mission station of the C. M. S., at Frere Town, East Africa, has just received another lot of liberated slaves (240), captured by British cruisers.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XV.—Concluded.

Good Elder Wood had no idea that the rough, hardened-looking man who took his station close to the platform and listened with such edifying attention was really playing the part of a protecting angel; still less of the strange leadings through which God was about to glorify his name by one of those signal triumphs of redeeming grace which in the biographies of a Bunyan or a Newton seem to show us as by a lightning flash the unsearchable depths in that love which passeth knowledge.

Neither was any such thought in the mind of Peter Snyder when he went to hear this anti-rum, anti-tobacco, anti-lodge apostle. His anger against the Masons had burned with a steady flame ever since they refused him admission into their "ancient and honorable fraternity." He understood the reasons for this refusal perfectly well. It was not because he sold rum. It was not because he was a profane, hardened sinner. He knew that the lodge took in others as profane and hardened as himself; that being a brewer, distiller, or dealer in alcoholic liquors was never in itself a bar to membership. But a low, illiterate, and altogether disreputable rumseller could be no honor to the craft; and so the lodge simply acted with a keen eye to its own credit in thus turning upon him, as we have seen, the cold shoulder, and treating him in the same manner, in short, in which it treats women, fools, cripples, negroes, minors, and old men in their dotage.

He waited with a satisfied smile on his face to hear the elder begin on the subject of Masonry. The most scathing exposure of lodge hypocrisy and fraud would have been as nectar to Peter Snyder's soul. But suddenly, with the power of a two-edged sword dividing the joints and marrow, God's truth struck him, transfixed him in an agony. He forgot what he came to the meeting for. He forgot everything but one terrible fact—that he was a sinner. It seemed as if he heard the very hissing of the unquenchable flames, and felt their breath in his face. He shivered, his features worked convulsively, and then with one despairing groan he fell forward in front of the preacher's stand and lay as one from whom the life had departed.

The early history of Methodism, both in England and America, abounds with instances of strong conviction inducing a kind of cataleptic state, especially in rough, uneducated natures, as if the body lay for the time a bound and helpless captive to the spirit over which it has so long held brutal domination. They belong for the most part to a religious era that has passed away, but now and then a similar combination of causes will produce a similar effect. And whether struck down by a supernatural power directly exerted, or as modern materialism would explain it, by intense excitement causing temporary paralysis of the great nerve centers, the result in Peter Snyder's case could not have been seriously altered by either conclusion. He always averred that while lying in that strange trance he saw the Lord, and those who knew him before his conversion never felt inclined to doubt the statement.

He came to himself no longer a swearing rough, but meek and gentle as a little child, and the first thing he did to attest the depth and genuineness of his conversion was to roll out every cask of liquor in his shanty and empty their contents into the creek which ran back of his dwelling.

He happened to be engaged in this employment when Dennis O'Sullivan, a regular habitue of his establishment, came to get his black demijohn filled. He gazed on the frightful waste too spellbound with horror to utter even an exclamation, till he saw him knock out the head of the last cask. Then he could contain himself no longer. He rushed forward in the vain hope of saving it from the general destruction, but already half its contents had mingled with the waters of the creek, and gone to poison the fishes. He made a maddened grab to catch some of the precious liquid, cursing himself meanwhile for bringing a demijohn instead of a dipper. But he was too late, and with a howl of rage and disappointment he turned and fled, as he honestly believed, from the presence of a lunatic, astonishing Mrs. O'Sullivan by the unheard-of phenomenon of his return home at an early hour with his demijohn unfilled, and perfectly sober.

The news of Peter Snyder's conversion spread far and wide through the region. He was as strong an Anti-mason as before, though from very different motives. His opinion of the lodge from the new standpoint he now occupied, he one day expressed to Deacon Weatherby, who rejoiced over this brand plucked from the burning, as only saints and angels can rejoice.

"A long time ago," said he, "I wanted to jine the Masons, and I felt dreadfully cut up because they blackballed me. Now I've he'erd some folks say that the lodge was as good as the church, but jist see the difference. Has Masonry got a word of kindness for the poor wretch that everybody despises? When he's sinking in the miry clay of his sin will it go to him and try to help lift him out? Will it show him the Lord Jesus as I see him a hangin' on the cross with the nails in his hands and feet, and say, 'There, poor sinner; you've hated the only One that kin save you, but there he is a dyin' that you may live.' When Masonry will do that it may call itself as good as the church, but till it does it is a swindle, a cheat, and a devil's lie."

But as Peter Snyder is to reappear again in our story, we will leave him for the present and go back to Jacksonville.

CHAPTER XVI.

DRIVEN FORTH.

"You must leave Jacksonville," said Martin Treworthy, decidedly, as he paced up and down the hermitage. "If you stay here your life won't be worth insuring."

"But Tom—what will he do without me?"

"Oh, that's settled easily enough. I can take charge of him for awhile. Tom and I are good friends."

"But it will be too much trouble for you," said Nelson, doubtfully.

"I never expected to live without trouble," answered Martin, dryly; "and anybody that does will be amazingly disappointed."

Nelson was silent a moment, doing meanwhile a good deal of painful thinking. It was to him a bitter cup to be thus driven forth to a new field of combat, and all because he had sought too faithfully the welfare of his class, and fought too bravely against the anti-Christian forces that were seeking to drag them all to one common, brutish level of the beasts that perish. And if he had voiced his own thought at that instant it would have been to utter the wail of the old Hebrew prophet, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."

"Yes," he said, "I will go. And after all it is for Tom's sake."

Martha and her aunt lived in the immediate neighborhood of the riot. They had passed a troubled and anxious night, and when in the early morning there came a tap at the door, Martha hastened to open it with a premonition of coming ill. It was Nelson who stood there, his face blackened and bruised where the rioters' missiles had struck him, and haggard with want of rest. She suppressed a slight scream, and in a few brief words he explained the situation.

"Yes, you must go," she said firmly, but with pallid lips, "for Tom's sake—and mine."

"I know I can find work of some kind somewhere else," responded Nelson, thinking how just like Martha it was to put herself last. "Tom, poor fellow, has taken it into his head that I am going off to find the farm I have talked to him so much about, and I let him keep the idea. I didn't know but it might make him happier and more contented. He will miss me sadly."

"Well," answered Martha, her bright, brave woman's nature asserting itself, "let us take a lesson in child-like trust from Tom. Between the stores on Mr. Treworthy's medicine shelf, and the dainty dishes I shall compound up to tempt his appetite, we will work wonders. But you must not stay," she added with a slight shiver. "You must go. God bless and keep you, Nelson."

And so Nelson turned his back on Jacksonville, and went forth not knowing whither he went.

(To be continued.)

THE POWER OF THE LODGE.

November 22nd, 1831, John Quincy Adams, then in Washington attending to his duties as a member of the House, wrote in his journal the following able opinion of the lodge, which has probably never been printed except in his voluminous diary:

"This institution of Freemasonry is one of the phenomena in the history of mankind. That it is a most pernicious institution I am profoundly convinced; and how it has arisen and grown and spread over the world, and drawn into its vortex so many wise and good and great men, is scarcely credible.

There is, however a charm in secret and in exclusive association. In principle it is unjust, but in power it is great. Here is secrecy; here is the enjoyment of exclusive privilege; then come mystery, terrifying circumstances, horrid oaths and penalties sprung upon the initiated by surprise, all mingled up with benevolence and charity, with pretensions to antiquity coeval with the creation; continual prayers and lessons from the Bible, mingled up with impostures about Solomon, Hiram king of Tyre, Hiram Abiff, John the Baptist and John the Evangelist, as absurd and senseless as they are false. Religion, charity, pure benevolence and morals mingled up with superstitious rites and ferocious cruelty, form in their combination institutions the most powerful and the most pernicious that have ever afflicted mankind."

CORRESPONDENCE.

ILLINOIS NEWS VIA GREECE.

Andros, Greece, via Syra, Mar. 13, '85.

Dear Brother:—I take the liberty to say something in regard to my wife's relations in Marshall Co., Ill.

An old Scotch gentleman lives there by the name of Adam Crawford. He came with his family from Scotland about thirty years ago. He has a large family of six sons and two daughters. One of the sons is a missionary to Mexico and all the other children are very active church members. Another son, John Crawford, married a sister of Mrs. Zaraphouithes. Brother Stoddard visited him and saw all of the family last year. They enjoyed his visit very much. They are strict temperance people. Mr. Adam Crawford and his sons, who live there, were the only ones in that church who were bold enough to come out and vote for St. John, that is the temperance ticket. When their pastor heard of it, he preached several sermons from the pulpit against those who left their own party, the Republican, and voted for prohibition. He called them narrow minded, bigoted, etc. And he is a minister of the Gospel! It seems that this gentlemau, their pastor, felt badly that they voted against the devil, the rum shop. Their pastor finds fault because they left their party. The words of a Greek philosopher are a good illustration. A scholastic went to swim, and because he did not know how to swim, he came near being drowned. He then swore that he never would go into the water again until he learned to swim, and he will never learn to swim except he goes into the water. And thus the temperance people of America will never elect a temperance and a Christian man except they leave their old party.

It is not in my line to discuss politics; but I believe that people who are strong and bold enough to come out and take such a stand against so much opposition, ought to be taken notice of. A. D. Z.

CHURCHES AND SECTS.

Wheaton, Ill.

Editor Cynosure:—An aged brother in the East, and friend of the Cynosure, in a very modest, kind and witty letter, refers to my article on sectism, and requests a more particular statement of some parts of it. He says, in alluding to the supposition of substituting one large coop or pen for the many small ones, that I am only proposing a large sect in place of the many little ones—"So it seems to me you suppose a case in which one shall desert and ignore one sect iu order to embrace and affiliate with another, for which the aim and hope is that it shall become an Aaron's rod, swallowing all the others. Such is the hope of the Episcopalian sect and of all the legion of sects individually. Such, if secured, I can see, might and would be 'church union' or rather sect union, but to my vision, it would not be Christian union." So says the letter. And it is perhaps the thought of other intelligent readers who did not quite get my meaning in a paper not intended for the discussion of details but rather as a preliminary note in response to a call.

The second reading of an article, will sometimes correct the mistakes left in the first reading. In this case, I think one part will explain the other, if any care to read it again (correcting three obvious errors of the type).

We have been so long accustomed to hear the sects meutioned as "the churches" that when anyone returns to the primitive use of the word he is misunderstood. The Church, with a capital, is the aggregate of truc Christians in the world, and ineluding, in the fuller sense, those in heaven. This use of the word we are not now engaged with. We are considering "companies" of Christians, dwelling in the same commuuity, knowing each other and meeting by appointment in public worship and conference In this sense, a sect, having the error of a sect, may be, in its local boundary, a church. But beyond that boundary, there is no propriety in calling any kind of people a "church," whether sectarian or not. Under our subject, there is no "universal church." No Christian can "belong to a church" unless he associates with other Christians. A reunion of the fragmentary churches in any particular village, is not the creation of a larger sect, unless the terms of that reunion are such as to preclude other Christians who may afterwards come there.

We make no secret of disagreeing with those who would have no "pen" at all for the sheep and lambs. But such a pen or fold as the apostles erected in every several town and city, was uot a division of the church there. It was a separation of the Christians from the company of the heathen. To repeat myself, "They were a sect as related to the world, but not a sect as between Christians."

Our friend says that to ask the churches to cure the evil of sectism by uniting is to ask sect to cure sect. Not quite true. We ask the Christians, who are suffering from a certain manifest error, to put away the evil, and as so many Christians, without regard to traditional names, to join hands in the communion and service of Christ in that particular place. Such a joining of churches is not a joining of sects; because they cease to be sects in the very act of joining. The union does not originate in sectism, but in the repentance that abandons sectism.

Confine the phrase—"church union" to some one locality and the whole subject becomes clear. It is simply the permanent conveution of the Christians of that place in bodies not too large for single congregations, with courteous and prudent modes of recognizing one another and attending to their own business, in an orderly way. There is a wild idea of "freedom in Christ" that does not form any part of the church-union idea, and ought not to. It is what might be called church dissolution. It would leave no provision for doing anything with regularity, order, or decency. It would have no place, times, offices or rules for preserving property or holding vantages or engaging services. It would, if allowed in common society, let the whole structure collapse and the elements drift to barbarism—the barbarism of extreme iudividuality. Individualism has to recognize the community will in the church as well as in any other social relation. The majority preferenee becomes law to the Christian when it does not conflict with the laws of Christ. A company of Christians find that they can accomplish more for themselves, their families and their neighbors by adopting certain agreements simple and necessary. Some of these become law by virtue of their necessity; others are explicitly commanded in the Scriptures. All of the latter class may be covered by a single form of consent which receives the Bible as final authority in matters of faith and morals.

It is not necessary to accumulate the history of all the phases of moral growth through which society passes and append it as creed and the condition of fellowship. The Bible will keep up with aud sanction all reforms. It needs no appendix. Its principles furnish the basis of all legitimate or useful discipline, and any invented exegesis of the Bible that prescribes an over-particular form of stating or confessing secondary truths is the beginning of a new and criminal cleavage between the members in the "body of Christ."

We have preferred to say church-uniou rather than Christian-union because the latter phrase has beeu stripped of its best meaning by a kind of courtesy between Christians that passes for harmony and virtual union. Once a year, the churches of a place meet for evangelistic meetings and make such meetings an occassion for a sort of religious fair—an exhibtion of good nature between the sects. They say to the critical, common-sense world—"You see how beautifully we Christiaus are agreed on all essentials and that the charge of division and selfishuess you make against us is not true. How beautiful we do look! And all this for a whole month at a time. Then we return to do our various work in our peculiar way. And as we have peculiar notions, like the varieties in nature, we had better be in different families where all are agreed on the peculiars, than to be mixed with those who have different views. Christ requires us to be one and we like to prove occassioually that we are. We hope the appreciative public will take notice and remember this demonstration in answer to all complaints that our apparent divisions may call forth during the remaining eleven months of the year. Then begins again the struggle for existence and the survival of the fittest. Then is resumed the waste and war of polite rivalry—little congregations, little prayer meetings, little salaries, and little benevoleuces. "Only great in that strange spell—a name." It is the abominable sham, and the pious fraud that lurks half ignorant under all this, that has made it necessary to use a phraseology more specific than the words—Christian union. Without the union of these fragmentary churches—of two or three meetings, houses, pastors, Sunday schools, and contributions into one and that permanently, there is no Christian union worth the name. Christian union must be demonstrated in CHURCH UNION, or the claim to the fact must be abandoned.

Our friend reminds me of this statement in my former paper—"The only ground on which one society can preclude or withdraw fellowship from another is that the other party are not Christians." He holds to the right of withdrawing from a society of Christians if they are tainted with the sect error, even while he admits that they are or may be, Christians. Thus he outruns me on some lines and opposes me on others. But I see no reason for mending the proposition to which he alludes, for the purpose seen in the connection. Enlarged, it would be this. Those churches which extend to one another the forms of Christian courtesy, on certain occasions, are condemned either in the very fact of being several churches, or in the fact of mutual public endorsement. If they are not too many, they have no right to be separate unless one party has forfeited the right of private recognition. And if that be the case, then they have no right to endorse one another in public. The Scriptures provide a social penalty for cases of immorality and the creation of schism in the church. The offender is then to be denied common social endorsement, and we are not "so much as to eat with him." But it has now come to pass that we separate on mere honest opinions within the privileges of the Christiau faith, and pay almost no regard to the command—"Keep no company with such." In short, we have reversed the whole commaud of discipline and make crimes of innocent things while we hob-nob with everybody, all over town.

I see no need, in good conscience, of "withdrawing fellowship" from a church because they do not see the duty of union just as I do. If I admit that they are Christians I caunot, at the same time, charge them with practicing a knowu sin. (Unless it is "known," it is not sin to them.) And if they are acknowledged sinners, then I leave them because they are not Christians. Church unionism does not require me to cast a moral reflection on an entire body of Christians. I am simply to urge my influence till they are generally convinced that a simpler idea of fellowship would be more like the spirit of the primitive churches.

To decline to vote or commune or have a name with any particular church, just because they do not keep up with me on all lines of reformation, is not a sensible act of conscience. I can oppose church divisions all my life, and yet be so circumstanced that there is no call for me to separate myself from the meeting or congregation of any particular church, eveu though it be a sect. If there should be a general move, in any village, ou the part of Christians there, to reduce the number of churches to the wants of the people, and there should be a fair prospect of its being a reduction and not an addition of another church, I should leave "my church" and help the movement by uniting with the new church. But such a ease was not supposed in the sentence referred to. A. J. Chittenden.

MASONRY AND FAT CATTLE.

Galt, Ont.

A cattle dealer in the beginning of March buys a large lot of cattle for the export trade, from a farmer in Canada, on condition that he feed them for him for three mouths. At the beginning of June he returns to claim the cattle and pay for the same the stipulated price. The dealer says the cattle are not of the weight that they should have been had they beeu properly fed, and too light for the market; so he refuses to receive them, as the farmer starved them. The farmer brings suit against the buyer for damages caused by breech of contract and uureasonable demands. He produces numerous witnesses to prove that the cattle were well cared for in every way, and that such an increase of weight in three months was impossible under the most favorable circumstanees.

The buyer was a Freemason, so was the judge aud the legal counsel on both sides, also the foreman of the jury. Of course as the prosecutor was not a Mason the judgment went against him, and he had to lose all and pay all costs. Is there no remedy for such a sad case of evideut conspiracy to defraud? Justice in such cases is always an impossibility. What is the best and only remedy for such wrong?

Has the N. C. Association ever provided a legal bureau of Anti-masonic lawyers to give legal advice and manage cases for the members of the National Christian Association of the United States? I have often felt the need of such an International Association. It is of frequent occurrence that a confidence swindler escapes from Canada with vast sums of money. He stays in the States for five years speculating on such ill-gotten heard. Then returns with vast profits and claims the benefit of the statute of limitation. Can nothing be done to punish such offenders on both sides?

We shall hope to have this matter ventilated in the Cynosure. J. D.

CHRIST'S COMING TO HIS TEMPLE.

La Salle, Ill.

Editor Cynosure:—You may see from the throes that "the holy people" have been in for the last forty years that the Holy Spirit is pressing some important event upon their attention. Miller, Cummings, Moody, Goodwin and others have been looking for his appearing and kingdom promised in the Word, and they do well, but after so many failures to realize this expectation should they not begin to examine in the spirit and not in the letter, which letter the Word says kills. Life is what is needed: and now "He that hath an ear to hear let him hear." "Behold I lay in Zion a stumbling stone, a rock of offense: he that falls upon this stone shall be broken; but upon whom it shall fall it will grind him to powder."

There are two lines of thought running through the whole Scriptures: Jesus is a stone of stumbling to those who are in the flesh. They cannot please God. Jesus said he had taken his own out of the world for they were not of it. Paul realized this so that he could say, "I know Christ no longer after the flesh;" and Jesus said, "I in the flesh know not the things that are in the Father's kingdom." I say not and do not those things of myself, "But the Father, he doeth them" and saith them, "he is greater than I." Now, if we fail to see that there is but one God, the Holy Spirit, manifesting himself in a body of flesh, a fit temple become holy, free from sin, then we shall worship the creature which will work ruin to our spiritual being just to the extent that we fail to discern the Lord's body, or Jesus the man who suffered for our redemption. This faith comes just in proportion to the fitness of the temple for the indwelling of the Spirit.

To-day the church, on account of its conformity to the world, cannot discern the things of the Spirit. 2 Thess. 2: 4. This creature-worship, you see, has been permitted of God until the fulness of times should come. Jesus, a stone of stumbling, but a worship well-pleasing to the Father, because of the conflict in it between the flesh and the Spirit that works righteousness. There is nothing valuable in the sight of the Father that does not bring a victory that makes character a law in the members warring against the law of the mind. Paul said he counted it all joy because he experienced the power of (the Holy Spirit—the anointing) Christ resting upon him; and this is the source of all genuine faith. No man calleth Jesus the (anointed) Christ but by (this anointing) the Holy Spirit in a sensible, realized, felt, manner. This is its power. Thus you see the fulfillment of Rev. 12: 5. This is the rejection of Christ, and accepting the papacy from which the church recovered only in a measure in the reformation; for war, using slavery, divorce, sectism, and secretism has existed in it to this day. All of which is opposed to Christ or the Spirit's fruits. They are the fruits of the flesh.

Now when the church shall look for the spiritual coming of Christ in the power of the Holy Ghost, the sanctifier, rending the heavens, coming down through the cloud (unbelief) that now rests over it, he will come with all his holy ministerings attending him to his temple, which we are. Casting out that "wicked," the result of the worship of the creature, destroying it with the truth and consuming it with his glory in taking possession, King of Kings and Lord of Lords, to reign in the earth.

When the Word says the temple of God, it, is the heart of the sanctified, even if in a very small measure. He knows no other temple but that of his holy people. He does not dwell in temples made with hands; and when he speaks of miracles in Rev. 13: 14, it is no pretended miracles such as the papacy claim to do; but a genuine work, even the conversion of men (that Jesus called greater works than he had done) the fire from heaven being the descent of the Spirit, convincing converts of sin, righteousness and judgment, through which works bestowed of God in the sect church they have been able to make some M. E., Baptist, Congregationalist, etc., etc., deceiving them in this delusion which is of the heart, i. e., the natural man, which the heart is intended to signify. The heavens of the Scripture intended to represent the heart of the "holy people," which, under the Son, has only been partially sanctified. Isaiah 53: 12.

Now, this time the anointing will be with fan in hand to cleanse the floor, doing away with the work that is in part (the old leaven) and the "perfect" give a new leaven wherein dwelleth righteousness. The whole man, body (earth), soul and spirit made every whit pure and white. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth, for their works do follow them." Hosea 9: 7. "The days of visitation are come, the days of recompense are come. Israel shall know it: the prophet is a fool; the spiritual man is mad."

1. Cor. 4: 5: Therefore judge nothing before the time until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts, and they shall every man have praise of God." Daniel 8: 17: "At the time of the end shall be the vision."

Ira Todd.

THE SOCIETY OF ST. GEORGE.

Schuyler's, or Canadaraga lake (the former the patent, the latter the Indian name) is a small sheet of water which extends from Richfield Springs, N. Y., a modest rival of Saratoga with a population of 1,000 to 3,500, on its northern extremity, the greater part of the six miles to Schuyler's Lake, a village near the southern end.

Several years since the border of this lake was visited from Utica, twenty miles north, by a party of excursionists, styling themselves the Society of St. George, for the purpose of holding a picnic.

I saw it recently stated that this "powerful" society was making preparations to oppose dynamiters on American soil; but would not resort to assassination and dynamite as it was composed of gentlemen. To show the class to which they belong, I will relate that on the above-mentioned occasion, for social and economical reasons, they brought with them several kegs of beer and under its stimulus, before night, grew riotous and came to blows among themselves. They disdained restraint and resented with violence the interference of the police. On the return the train was delayed in gathering up its disorderly load, but despite every precaution stragglers were unavoidably left. The uproar continued upon the cars, and the village was only relieved of the discord by their departure.

Boasts of respertability by secret societies usually terminate in similar conduct, and their claims are thus defeated. They are all fit adversaries of dynamiters and may dispense with apologies for embarking in crime. X.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON IV.—April 26, 1885.—Paul at Rome. Acts 28: 16-31.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The salvation of God is sent unto the Gentiles. Acts 28: 28.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. God's ways are not our ways. v. 16. Paul was now in the Eternal City—that entrenched citadel of heathenism which had been for so many years the goal of his hopes and ambition. To preach Christ in the Roman metropolis would be to make Christianity no longer provincial, but national, no longer a despised sect, but a world-wide religion, thus lifting it into importance as a new and recognized factor both in government and society. Paul in this matter reasoned like a philosopher and a statesman. In two years from this time Christianity had become a power formidable enough and sufficiently dreaded to invite the first great persecution. But earthly wisdom would never have chosen such an ignominious beginning of his Roman ministry, and Paul himself, had his own human will and judgment been consulted, would have probably preferred to make his first appearance in some other guise than as a bound and guarded prisoner. But afterwards we find him writing to the Phillipians in words of joyful praise for what God had accomplished through his bonds. Even in Cæsar's palace they had wakened sympathy, curiosity—a desire to hear this wonderful man who had suffered so much for a despised belief. This spectacle of Paul "preaching and teaching boldly, no man forbidding him," was in itself inspiring to faith. We cannot wonder that it wakened in the church a new zeal and power, a new courage "to speak the word without fear." His chained hand was an object lesson. It proved that God could not only use the wrath of man to work out his divine purposes, but he could make even the haughty, cruel, tyrannical Roman government the protectress of his servant. Seeming misfortunes and mischances are often the channels through which he pours his richest blessings, the chosen instruments of the Gospel's greatest triumph. It was through the cross he redeemed the world, and no religion that men are not willing to die for will ever hold humanity; no reform that has not first been baptized in the blood and tears of its martyrs will ever become a deeply rooted principle in the heart of people or rulers.

2. The bonds of persecution and trials are to God's saints but the visible sign of their hope. vs. 17–37. Every man or woman who suffers for the cause of truth can say with Paul, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain." Every triumph of the secret lodge means to an earnest Anti-mason so much loss of faith to the church, so much more infidelity in the world, so much more room for anti-Christian forces to work; and so whatever he suffers or endures is borne as truly for humanity's great hope as Paul bore his chain. So to the true prohibitionist, the triumph of liquor means not only the triumph of every other evil, but national destruction. And the men who labor in that cause, as in all righteous reforms, labor for the hope of our American Israel. There would be less fainting and discouragement in the ranks of reformers if we would fix our eyes not so much on the chain as the hope it stands for, and remember that every link is riveted by Christ's own hand, and meant to bind us to him.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How did Paul view his bonds? Phil. 1: 12–18; Col. 1: 24; Eph. 3: 1. Is there a sense in which every Christian is the "prisoner of Jesus?" 2 Cor. 5: 14; 1 Cor. 7: 23.

PRACTICAL QUESTIONS.

Ver. 16. When the answer to prayer seems long delayed, what should we do? Ps. 37: 7. Is it the privilege of the Christian to be happy anywhere? Phil. 4: 4. Need one whose ways please God ever fear foes? Prov. 16: 7.

17. To whom is our first duty? Need we wait for favorable circumstances?

18. If our lives are pure will men be compelled at length to acknowledge it?

19. Is it mean to shine by depreciating others? Should we always speak kindly of those who have most deeply injured us?

20. What was the hope of Israel? What better things have we?

21, 22. Will the devoted Christian fear ridicule? Reconcile the fact of Christianity everywhere spoken against with the idea that men must acknowledge when one lives a pure life. Ps. 35: 19; Luke 23: 4; Matt. 27: 18.

23. How may we imitate the diligence of Paul in saving souls? 2 Tim. 4: 2.

24. Is there any excuse for those who do not believe in Christ? John 7: 17.

25–27. Are men responsible for hard hearts? How may we keep our hearts tender?

28. Should we be discouraged because all those whom we endeavor to lead to Christ will not listen to us? What should we do?

29, 30, 31. Who were among Paul's companions at Rome? What epistles did he there write? Give a brief account of the tradition concerning his death. What do you most admire in his life, and most desire to imitate?—The Illustrator.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

Paul following Christ leaves us this rule in his example. Go to work early, wisely, frankly, affectionately, courageously, and very earnestly, seeking to bring sinners to repentance.

Nothing in the way of means is necessary or useful for this but the truth of God plainly declared, clearly proved and consistently acted on.

The afflictions and infirmities under which we labor in doing this are the best testimony of the reality of our faith and sincerity, and so our best testimony to the truth of that which we believe.

How important it is to know what the Scriptures mean and how easy to miss it! The Jews out of professed reverence for Moses, many of them out of real reverence, trampled on his law in rejecting Christ. It is not what we think, but what God means, that is to be our guide. We need to pray while we study the Word.

Right doctrine is essential to right practice. Our teachings should both testify and persuade, secure understanding and belief of the truth, and compliance with it.

Yield to the truth you know, or God will punish you by leaving you to become incapable of knowing it.

When a church apostatizes it is in order that its Gospel privileges may go to some other people.

The heathen are more hopeful than the apostatized people of God.

Our hardest experiences may be most for our real enjoyment, and, what is still better, most for our usefulness.

Bible study should be prompted by the desire to know what God would communicate to us, not by curiosity to know what he has pleased not to communicate. There are minds that will be more exercised about what became of Paul after the "two years" than about all that the Spirit has told us of his life and work, or has written in his epistles. They need to be restrained and directed to profitable study.—U. P. Bible Teacher.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

State Agents.

Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Iowa, D. P. Rathbun, Wayne.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

Degree Workers.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun. Wayne, Iowa.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans.
D A. Richards Clarkville, Mich.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

The Cynosure and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. Phillips,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially by his wife. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. Price, fifteen cents. Ten for a dollar.

The American Party.

First Nomination for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

Platform Adopted at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

Name Adopted at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Capwell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowudes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Calcdonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

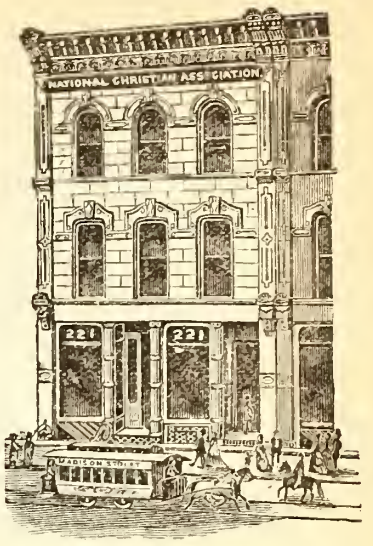
adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
Eli Tapley, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. Galloway, Okahumka Florida.
Wm. Hazenburg, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. Zaraphonithes, Andros, Greece.
C. B. Ward, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. Please designate to which one such funds shall be sent.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

President.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

Vice-Pres.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

Rec. Sec.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.

Cor. Sec. and Gen. Agent.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Treasurer.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Directors.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

Form of Bequest.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

President.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D

Secretaries.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

Alabama.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

California.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

Illinois.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

Indiana.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

Iowa.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

Kansas.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

Massachusetts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

Michigan.—Pres., C. C. Foote, Detroit; Rec. Sec'y, W. H. Ross, Williamstown; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

Minnesota.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

Missouri.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler, Albany.

Nebraska.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. pooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

New Hampshire.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

New York.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

Ohio.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

Pennsylvania.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

Vermont.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

Wisconsin.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

West Virginia.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

Editors.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1885

Pres. J. Blanchard.—To answer the inquiries of numerous friends who have expressed a deep and earnest interest in the condition and health of the senior editor of the Cynosure and to correct some misapprehensions of his illness, we give this statement of his case: After a winter of unusual vigor and robust health, on Saturday, March 21, he suffered a severe chill, induced apparently by a slight wound in the lower part of the left leg and severe exposure in the cold wind at the funeral of his loved grandson the day previous. Soon a violent and painful attack of erysipelas set in around and also radiating from the wound in the leg, which gave to the friends and attending physicians the most serious apprehensions for his life, which seemed for days to tremble in the balance. God's blessing on the skill of physicians and the unwearied assiduity of friends, aided by a naturally fine constitution brought about a favorable change and he is now so rapidly improving that we hope his pen and voice will be again active and terrible to expose and overthrow the great conspiracy of Satan against Christ and the church.

AN ADVANCE BACKWARD.

The Advance must feel complimented. Two or three weeks ago the editor, who was formerly a member of a United Brethren church, commented upon the trials of the faithful brethren of that denomination in these words: "No church or denomination which insists on an extra-scriptural test of membership can expect to prosper, nor should it, while attempting to bind burdens on the consciences of disciples which Christ never authorized. We refer now especially to the churches which exclude from their communions any one who belongs to a secret society. A striking illustration of this folly is furnished by that honored and efficient denomination, the United Brethren in Christ." His notice closes with a pronunciamento evidently intended for the College Church at Wheaton: "Individual churches which insist on such rules need not feel themselves aggrieved nor be surprised if local associations should refuse to fellowship them, since they refuse to fellowship the children of the Lord Jesus." A lodge editor reprints the article with glee under the title, "Church and lodge in no sense antagonistic," and assures the Advance that it will receive "the hearty commendation" of the various lodges!

The organ of the Congregational churches must have a strong gorge to swallow this compliment. A week or two before in objecting to the Masonic rites at the Washington monument, it charged Freemasonry with being a religion, which, if it means anything, means that it is a false religion. This is the view taken by thousands of the best and ablest men of the Congregational and other denominations for the past fifty years. Would the Advance approve if the Chicago churches should receive members who went regularly to mass and confession? By no means; yet it condemns churches which shut out a more evidently obnoxious system.

The claim that churches free from the lodge run down by holding fellowship only with Christians, is a slander and untrue, as there are proofs enough. The United Brethren church, during the years when it kept its pure and original faith, increased almost beyond precedent. It is only since the door began to open to the lodge that trouble and failure set in. And this will increase so long as that people follow the precept of the Advance.

Vermont law has long been quoted as prohibiting the Masonic and similar lodges, though for many years disregarded and violated, so that the State has for years been represented in the Senate by a Freemason, Mr. Edmunds. The lodge organs now inform us that through the agency of H. L. Stillson, Masonic Grand Secretary and Odd-fellow Grand Master, the State legislature has passed a law giving permission to secret lodges, so that they may hereafter have a legal existence. The lodge organs complain that during this time they have existed by mere toleration, and not always has this been granted with good grace. This legislation was secured so quietly that the world has hardly heard of it until the Masonic press deigns to make it public.

Faith draws the poison from every grief, takes the sting from every loss, and quenches the fire of every pain; and only faith can do it.—Dr. Holland.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

It was the boast of the ancient republics and representatives of popular government that their great men, having served in the highest stations, could retire to private life and give to their fellow citizens an honorable example in the peaceful labors of a humble station. It was left for America to give to the world the example of one who had filled the highest places in foreign diplomacy, who had served in the Senate, in the first seat in the Cabinet, and in the Presidential chair itself, with equal honor to himself and to his country, yet who gained a greater and more imperishable renown than has been attained, perhaps, by any of his countrymen, in the humbler service of a member of the House of Representatives.

John Quincy Adams was born in the present town of Quincy, Massachusetts, July 11, 1767. His father, John Adams, had early become one of the most intrepid, zealous, and indefatigable opponents of British oppression, and was called by Jefferson, "The great pillar of support to the Declaration of Independence and its ablest advocate and champion on the floor of the House." When Washington retired after his second term as President it was to John Adams that the nation turned to find his successor. His mother was a New England pastor's daughter, a woman of great beauty and high intellectual endowments. To them this son was born when the resistance to the Stamp act had procured its appeal and the spirit of insubordination had arisen to its highest pitch in resistance to the taxes on tea and other commodities.

The boy was but seven years old when he climbed with his mother one of the hills near his home to listen to the sounds of the conflict on Bunker Hill and witness the burning of Charleston. Later when barely nine years old and the British had evacuated Boston he became "post rider" for his mother between the city and the farm, a distance of eleven miles, to bring her the latest news of the struggle for liberty.

Napoleon was born while his mother was accompanying her husband on horseback in his campaigns and flight. From the childhood training of John Quincy Adams the world gained one of the noblest defenders of civil liberty.

We cannot follow him to Paris at the age of 11, accompanying his father on a difficult and dangerous foreign mission; nor in his own public career as diplomatist which began when barely 14 as secretary to Francis Dana, the U. S. minister to Russia, and was continued when on his twenty-seventh birthday he received his commission from Washington as minister to Holland. From there he was transferred to Prussia and on his return home he was elected to the Senate of Massachusetts and then of the United States, where he, with great ability and singular independence of party affiliations, urged that we should maintain strict neutrality amid the supreme conflicts which Napoleon had precipitated in Europe. His position drew upon him the bitterest opposition from his own State, but has been fully vindicated: for three-quarters of a century the principle which he maintained against the Federalist party has guided the foreign relations of our country.

From the Senate he crossed to Europe again as minister to Russia, and in 1814 was the leading mind in the commission which at Ghent settled on the terms with England; as his son Charles Francis, was in our late settlement at Geneva of the Alabama claims.

His ability in this perplexing and important service completely vindicated the judgment of Washington in 1797: "I give it as my decided opinion that Mr. Adams is the most valuable public character we have abroad; and that there remains no doubt in my mind, that he will prove himself to be the ablest of all our diplomatic corps." "The Marquis of Wellesley declared in the British House of Lord's that in this treaty, in his opinion, the American commissioners had shown the most astonishing superiority over the British during the whole of the correspondence."

But it is important in this issue to present that portion of Mr. Adams's remarkable career which is neglected by the biographers. His deep religious convictions; his remarkable self-culture; his cultivated literary taste; his popular professorship at Harvard; his political career in the Senate; as the Chief Executive, and as the "Old Man Eloquent" of the House at a time when Webster, Clay, Calhoun, Benton and Choate were speaking on the same floor,—of these we must write hereafter and for the present turn to Mr. Adams's

ANTI-MASONIC RECORD.

It is a fact which cannot be dwelt upon with pleasure, but with questioning surprise, that all the biographers of John Quincy Adams pass over his determined and powerful opposition to the Masonic lodge with hardly a notice. Morse who wrote last and since the voluminous diary was published makes a few references to Anti-masonry, but not one that does the views of Mr. Adams justice. Josiah Quincy dismisses the subject with a paragraph: while William H. Seward says not a word of it in his eloquent eulogium before the New York legislature or in his justly popular biography, written within a year after Mr. Adams' death. A noble revenge was paid to this slight and injustice in the great eulogy pronounced before the same legislature by Charles Francis Adams on the death of Mr. Seward. The moral courage of the great son of New York was therein vindicated in his manful testimony against the lodge in Congress, as well as his action with the Anti-masonic party from the beginning of his public career.

From the silence of his biographers we turn with satisfaction to Mr. Adams' own writings. The volume of his letters, compiled soon after his death with a noble preface by his son, and his immense diary, issued only about ten years ago, show that this question was measured justly by Mr. Adams.

He was in the Presidential chair when the Morgan tragedy shook western New York with such a convulsion that the whole land trembled and the people of the North rose in power against the lodge. In 1827 Mr. Adams begins to note the effect of the discussion, and the subject does not disappear from his journal for ten years. But he did not immediately take an active part with his fellow citizens who were eager to banish the curse from the land by the ballot. After his failure of re-election in 1828 and his return to Washington as member of the House, in May, 1831, he writes in his diary:

"I have for nearly five years abstained from taking part in the Masonic controversy as much as possible, but upon such questions there is a time when it becomes the duty of a good citizen to take his side. In the conflict between Freemasonry and its adversaries, I apprehend the time is approaching when my duty to my country will require a free and open avowal of my opinions; and whatever may be the consequences, I will not flinch from it. The danger is not imaginary, nor I hope underrated by me. Consideration is a guardian angel."

He had already met and answered the lodge slanders against himself. In October, 1827, when his name was proposed for a second Presidential term, with Jackson for the opposition candidate, it was currently reported in the centers of Anti-masonic excitement that Adams was a Mason and Jackson was not. Mr. Adams denied the charge privately, referring at the same time to the powerful agency of the lodge and expressing his belief in the murder of Morgan and the finding of his body. It was claimed by the lodge that the record of his initiation could be shown. To the request of his friends that a public denial be made he replied it was useless, as the Masons would not so be checked in their falsehoods. Mr. Adams was not re-elected; Jackson, a Freemason, came into the Presidency. Henry Gassett, Esq., of Boston, a member of the Suffolk committee, says that one man who spoke to the President on this subject (probably Garnsey, a Mason, mentioned in the diary) reported to Ohio Masons the unfriendly relation of Mr. Adams to Freemasonry. The electors of that State to the surprise of everybody went for Jackson.

During 1830 and '31 Anti-masonry was continually reckoned in every political movement. Judge Jabez D. Hammond, afterward historian of New York State, was in favor of encouraging Anti-masons to nominate a candidate for President in 1832, and Mr. Adams was approached upon the subject. About the same time Edward Everett was solicited to write an Anti-masonic article in the North American Review in reply to a violent Masonic defense in Walsh's Review; but he declined.

On the 20th of May, 1831, having returned home from Congress, Mr. Adams attended a State convention in Faneuil Hall, Boston, driving over from Quincy with his son Charles. A few days later he makes the entry in his diary quoted above. June 2nd he had a long conversation with a half-repenting Mason, to whose defense of the order he warmly objected. On the 6th Dr. Abner Phelps called to get a promise of an Anti-masonic address in Faneuil Hall on July 4th. Mr. Adams refused, saying, however, that Freemasonry ought to be abolished.

On the 11th of July he attended an address in Faneuil Hall against Masonry by Timothy Fuller. He was met at the door of the hall by Charles P. Sumner, a seceder, and sheriff of the county. He notes that though there was a fair audience, there was no enthusiasm, and workmen not far off were engaged upon a magnificent Masonic hall. Roused by this popular indifference, he writes:

"The application of a blister upon the bosom of the public is wanting. A melodrama, a transparency, a popular ballad well composed, would run like wildfire; but there is no dramatist, painter or ballad-monger to produce it."

As the election of 1832 approached, the candidacy of Henry Clay being mentioned to him, and Clay's seeking for Masonic support, Mr. Adams urged that Anti-masons in different States communicate with each other, and act in harmony; else they would ruin their cause. He suggested the nomination of Richard Rush. "The dissolution of the Masonic institution in the United States," he said, "I believe to be really more important to us and our posterity than the question whether Mr. Clay or General Jackson shall be the President chosen at the next election." Mr. Rush refused to be a candidate and Mr. Adams, August 27th, was asked if he would accept a nomination, and gave a conditional but favorable response. Had this nomination been made at Philadelphia instead of Wirt's, the result for our nation and the world might have been of the profoundest interest.

It was on September 14th that William H. Seward called at Quincy and reported correspondence with John C. Calhoun and Judge John McLean, in which both declared themselves averse to Masonry. Calhoun did not wish to be a candidate of the Anti-masonic party, but McLean was willing. A few days later the first national nominating convention was held by the Anti-masons in Baltimore, and William Wirt was nominated. Wirt had been Mr. Adams' Attorney General, Rush his Secretary of the Treasury, and Clay Secretary of State. Mr. Adams seems to have taken less interest in the Presidential struggle of 1832; but when the electoral votes were counted in Congress, Feb. 13, 1833, and Andrew Jackson declared re-elected, Mr. Adams calls the vote for Clay the Masonic National Republican vote, and on the 4th of March, succeeding he enters in his journal the opinion: "Had Mr. Clay been unshackled with Freemasonry, or manfully renounced it," his party "would in all probability have carried the election." Clay had, during the campaign, caused it to be published that he demitted from the lodge Nov. 18, 1824, expecting thus to win votes from Wirt; but an extract from a letter in which he spoke fawningly of the lodge made his effort nugatory.

The series of letters on the Masonic system by which Mr. Adams became known as one of its ablest opponents began while the Presidential nomination was yet undecided. In August, 1831, a Freemason, named Sheppard, published that John Adams was a Freemason and referred to the action of the son, John Quincy, in an abusive manner as if he was an apostate. This drew from Mr. Adams the first of his letters, in which he shows how false and slanderous was this attack upon the good name of his father. A series of letters addressed to Edward Ingersoll, Esq., of Philadelphia and letters to Mr. Seward and Richard Rush followed soon after the Baltimore convention in which Mr. Adams gives his views of the political canvass just opening. A number of letters to Wm. L. Stone, editor of the New York Commercial Advertiser, a high Mason, whose confidence in the lodge had become shaken, followed during the year 1832. They were in reply to a volume of letters by Col. Stone, and addressed to Mr. Adams. The letters to Edward Livingston, "General Grand High Priest," etc., followed in 1833. These with several other communications make up a volume replete with history and argument unanswerable by the lodge. They are to-day among the ablest documents in print upon this subject, and they more than any other writing show the deep and earnest feeling of this learned, accomplished, and wise man against the lodge.

In November, 1831, Mr. Adams began reading Bernard's Light on Masonry and became deeply impressed with the enormity of the system therein exposed. On the 16th he wrote in his diary:

"It is a matter of curious speculation how such degrading forms, such execrable oaths, and such cannibal penalties should have been submitted to by wise, spirited and virtuous men. It is humiliating to the human character. Is it interest? fear? pride? the danger or the mortification of retreating? or is there something in the wild, incoherent mixture of pure morals and high religious devotion with secret and mystical rites and atrocious cruelty that has an irresistible influence over human action? . . . I cannot think of it but with melancholy feelings."

Mr. Adams did not escape the persecutions and assaults of the lodge in revenge for his vindication of the principles of Christianity from its insidious attacks.

During the month of August, 1831, a pamphlet assailing him personally was issued in Boston, in which Henshaw, the collector, and Green, the postmaster of the city were interested. The Masons ordered large numbers for circulation. Mr. Adams being asked to suppress the document replied that he would not "give one dollar to suppress anything that any human being can publish of me, true or false." On the 24th of December following, while in Washington, Mr. Adams was informed by Mr. William Babcock, a member of the House from western New York, and a seceded Mason, that while he was yet an adherent and defender of the order he was told by a high Mason as a Masonic secret that Morgan had been murderd. Mr. Adams was also warned by his visitor that there was a formal design of Masonic origin to get him into difficulty in the House, and the agent was Mr. Root, a high Mason.

It could not be expected that a man who had filled with the greatest ability so many and so varied public offices should not receive the vote of those who believed with him in the utter badness of the lodge. In October, 1831, he was visited by Richard Brinley and Amasa Walker, (father of General Francis A. Walker of the census of 1880), who informed him of his nomination for governor of Massachusetts by the Anti-masonic State convention. This was unsolicited, and evidently unexpected by Mr. Adams. Gov. Levi Lincoln, a conservative man but opposed to the lodge, had been re-nominated, and believing another nomination unwise as a needless division of the reform voters, Mr. Adams declined the nomination. In 1833, when a similar nomination was tendered by Edward Everett he again expressed his preference to remain in Congress. He was several times besought to consent that his name should be used, but maintained his purpose to give no countenance to the plan. Nevertheless, the convention, met in Boston, Sept. 11th, 1833, unanimously nominated him, and after due consideration and many misgivings he accepted. "The Masonic faction in Boston are in complete combustion" at the nomination, Mr. Adams writes a few days later. Mr. Webster having expressed his astonishment at the unaccountable power of Masonry, Mr. Adams explained that two publishers, one in Boston and one in Worcester were the leaders. They made Freemasons of all their employees and "the Masonic oaths and mysteries give a ten-fold power to the knot of association, and by the secrecy vital to the institution, it becomes a conspiracy of exclusive privilege to the members at the expense of all the rest of the community."

Before the election Mr. Adams experienced the bitterness of the alienation of ex-Governor Levi Lincoln which was caused by the Anti-masonic letters he had published. The decline of the political spirit of Anti-masonry in several States is also noted with regret about this time in his journal.

In November of this year at Washington, Mr. Adams marked with unfeigned sorrow the defection of Richard Rush upon the bank issue, which "will be the ruin," says the faithful diary, "of the Anti-masonic cause in Pennsylvania, and it will go far to demolish it throughout the Union."

December 22d, after having written from Washington to withdraw his name from the canvass of candidate for governor in the Massachusetts Legislature, Mr. Adams notes in his journal: "Men of excellent moral principle and of powerful intellect utterly disapprove of political Anti-masonry. I have staked my reputation, character, and fortune upon it. The wisdom of my course must be determined by the event. It is yet upon trial." On the 7th of January following Mr. Adams had a long conversation with Daniel Webster on the political situation in Massachusetts, in which the latter agreed with him in his dislike of Freemasonry and advocated making extra-judicial oaths a penal offense. Mr. Davis, who was elected governor of Massachusetts about the same time, was willing that such a law should be enacted. The exciting cause of political Anti-masonry was at this time dying out. The lodges of New York were almost extinct. In Vermont they were under ban of law. Grand lodges were everywhere suspending in the North and the few Masons who were brazen and conscienceless enough to yet uphold the system skulked into unknown corners. As Mr. Granger remarked to Mr. Adams in Washington during this winter, the lodge was dead in New York and Anti-masonry declined in consequence, as its work seemed to be accomplished. We find but one or two entries after this time in the great diary. The fierce battles on the floor of the House for the right of petition, and against the extension of the slave power occupied the attention of Mr. Adams and of the nation. In October, 1836, he mentions that the Anti-masons wished still to support him for governor of his native State; and in September, 1837, he attended an Anti-masonic meeting called by Pennsylvanians in Brown's Hotel, Washington. About fifty were present, and the discussion of the re-nomination of Gov. Ritner and bringing forward an Anti-masonic Presidential candidate was desultory. The meeting accomplished nothing, and henceforth Mr. Adams devoted himself to those terrible assaults on the slave power with which his name is inseparably connected.

—The Presbyterian church in Victoria protests strongly against the proposed annexation of the New Hebrides Islands by France, that have been Christianized after thirty-six years of missionary enterprise and the sacrifice of many valuable lives.

Reform News.

MICHIGAN STATE MEETING.

The second annual meeting of the Michigan State Christian Association opposed to secret societies (incorporated) will be held, D. V., at the Wesleyan Methodist church in the village of Brighton, Livingstone Co., commencing Tuesday evening, April 21st, 1885, and continuing Wednesday and Thursday. Every member who has taken stock in the Association should certainly be present if possible.

The old association will also meet at the same time and place and we hope for a large attendance.

Now, brethren, if the effort to enlighten the people on this question is allowed to fail, where will the responsibility rest? Will it not be with those who have seen their brethren struggling under heavy burdens and refuse to lift them with one of their fingers?

Those intending to be present should send a card to Rev. D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich., who will provide them with free entertainment. Let there be a general rally in the name of Christ.

Will all papers friendly, please copy?

W. H. Ross, President.
C. L. Preston, Secretary.

MINNESOTA REFORMERS!

The officers of the Minnesota Christian Association have invited me to take up your work of Christian reform in your State, and I have consented, and I invite you to furnish me all the work I am able to do. To this end, I ask you to correspond with me, directing to Pres. E. G. Paine of Wasioja, Minn., who will notify me of places where lecture work is wanted.

I need not urge the importance of each friend, brother and sister, taking hold and co-operating with me in the work. I am your fellow servant, and in the overthrow of the darkness of secrecy and the work of the devil, we have a common interest.

Places contiguous to each other would do well to consult together, and when ready for my services inform me and arrangements may be made for work.

May I hope that every friend of light will devote as much time as possible to the cause during my stay at each place—not counting your time as you are not often called on to do such work? Be willing to spend a day, or two or three, during the year, and if the Master spare us to review the work of the year, let us all so labor, that he whom we love may, by his grace, say, "well done." Be ready with the means God has placed in your hands to advance the work in your State. Let us work while the day lasts, for the time hastens when our work will be done.

Some of our choice men have fallen. Brethren Plumb, Pettingill, Gen. Phelps and others; let us close up the ranks and do valiantly for the success of our cause.

I am a stranger to most of you in the flesh, but I trust not in spirit. I am an American in every sense of the word, as you are; and am in favor of American principles. Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship are not American, and I hate them with a perperfect hatred, as I believe you do. I ask your prayers in my behalf, for the success of the work.

J. P. Richards.

—More than two hundred converts have been baptized in Esthonia by a Baptist missionary, and great interest in the Gospel is manifested by the people generally. Count Ungern-Sternberg, on the island of Dagoe, has given the Baptists there a lot for a chapel. On the other hand the Holy Synod, of the Russian church, has issued a proclamation against all dissenters from the orthodox faith, declaraing them guilty of heresy and blasphemy. This is a crime against Russian law, and renders all dissenters liable to transportation to Siberia. If the recommedations of the proclamation are strictly carried out much persecution awaits the dissenting churches in Russia.

—A Buddhist priest has deen baptized at Thonazai, Burmah. He had been in the priesthood for ten years, and one who took part in the service had been in the priesthood twenty years but was baptized some years ago, and has since been a faithful and useful preacher of the Gospel. There are eight or ten other priests in this district who seem interested in Christianity, but they have not the courage to meet the opposition a profession of Christianity would arouse. Many of the priestly customs seem to be breaking down, and some priests now talk and eat with missionary women, and buy Christian books, a thing which was never heard of a few years ago.

The Home.

IN APRIL.

What did the sparrow do yesterday?
Nobody knew but the sparrows;
He were too bold who should try to say
They have forgotten it all to-day.
Why does it haunt my thoughts this way,
With a joy that piques and harrows,
As the birds fly past,
And the chimes ring fast,
And the long spring shadows sweet shadow cast?

There's a maple-bud redder to-day;
It will almost flower to-morrow;
I could swear 'twas only yesterday,
In a sheath of snow and ice it lay,
With fierce winds blowing it every way:
Whose surety had it to borrow,
Till birds should fly past,
And chimes ring fast,
And the long spring shadows sweet shadow cast!

"Was there ever a day like to-day,
So clear, so shining, so tender?"
The old cry out; and the children say,
With a laugh, aside: "That's always the way,
With the old, in spring; as long as they stay,
They find in it greater splendor,
When the birds fly past,
And the chimes ring fast,
And the long spring shadows sweet shadow cast!"

Then that may be why my thoughts all day—
I see I am old, by the token—
Are so haunted by sounds, now so sad, now gay,
Of the words I hear the sparrows say,
And the maple-bud's mysterious way
By which from its sheath it has broken,
While the birds fly past
And the chimes ring fast,
And the long spring shadows sweet shadow cast!

—Helen Jackson, (H. H.) in the Century.

TOM MARSHALL AND THE SHORTER CATECHISM.

Under this head, "F. T. B." relates in the Observer, (N. Y.) the following anecdote of the distinguished Kentucky jurist:

In the fall of 1850 I was going up the Ohio on a steamboat, and not being able to reach Louisville before Sabbath I left the boat Saturday afternoon at Henderson, Ky. Sabbath morning I attended the Presbyterian church and made myself known to the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Graves, who very kindly pressed his hospitality upon me till I could take another boat on Monday. One of the many topics of conversation between us was the Shorter Catechism—its value as an epitome of inspired truth, and its power to put iron in the blood as a moral educator. By way of illustration, Mr. Graves told me two anecdotes, both within his own knowledge and connected with Kentuckians. Both of them I have often told, and one of them I published several years ago in the Presbyterian. Possibly this is what an inquirer asks for in the Observer of Oct. 23, under the caption of "The Shorter Catechism and the Juryman." Mr. Graves told me he had the story from "Tom Marshall" himself. As nearly as I can recall it, it was as follows:

Mr. Marshall, talking with Mr. Graves, made the abrupt remark—

"Mr. Graves, I will never try a case of importance of which I stand in doubt before a jury in which there is a single Presbyterian."

"You, surprise me, Mr. Marshall. What is your reason, may I ask, for this extraordinary declaration?"

"I will tell you sir. Crittenden and I had an important case to try, but had grave doubts as to the rightfulness of our side of it. Our opponents were——and——(well known lawyers, but whose names I have forgotten). When the pleadings began I took a steady look at the jury, all of whom were known to me, and was startled at its singular composition. Three were Presbyterians, three were Baptists, three were Methodists and three were of no faith. Instantly I made up my mind what I would do. I would win them in detail beginning with the three of no faith. Then my turn came to address the jury I gave my exclusive attention to the three of no faith, and after a time I saw I had them. Then I turned to the three Methodists, and after a time I saw I had them. When I turned to the three Baptists, and after a time I saw I had them. And then I turned to the three Presbyterians, but I could make no impresssion upon them. They were intelligent men, and listened attentively to what I said, and appreciated it, but in their faces I could see written plainly, 'Good, good, Mr. Marshall, but to the Law and to the Testimony.' I redoubled my effort, and if ever I was eloquent, I was in addressing those three men, but I could make no impression upon them. 'To the Law and to the Testimony', was written all over their faces. —— followed with an able speech, but he did not get the nine; the three Presbyterians, however, were with him. Crittenden followed, and gave the jury one of his strongest arguments and most eloquent appeals. The nine were with him heart and soul. But there sat those three Presbyterians unmoved and unmoveable; appreciating all he said, but saying in their faces as plainly as if by their lips, 'Eloquent, able, magnificent, Mr. Crittenden, but to the Law and to the Testimony.' When the jury retired I turned to Crittenden and said, 'We have lost our case.' 'Why, what makes you think so?' Well, nine of the jury are for us, but three against us, and the three (I know them) will win over the nine.' When the verdict was rendered it was against us. And upon inquiry I found it had been just as I told Crittenden it would be. The three had won over the nine to the Law and to the Testimony.' And then and there I determined I would never try another case of which I stood in doubt before a jury in which there was a single Presbyterian."

"How do you account, Mr. Marshall, for this Law and Testimony stubbornness?"

"It is all because of the way you confounded Presbyterians train your children in the Shorter Catechism."

HOW THURLOW WEED TRAINED HIS MEMORY.

A correspondent asked Thurlow Weed how he accounted for his wonderful memory, and if he had ever done anything to strengthen it. He replied, "I had to adopt a regular method, and I hit on one that was very effective. I will tell you about it for the benefit of other young men. I got married in 1818, when I was working in Albany as a journeyman printer. In a few months I went into business, establishing a newspaper for myself, and some of my friends thought I was 'cut out for a politician'—that is, I probably impressed my views strongly on those about me. But I saw at once a fatal weakness. My memory was a sieve. I could remember nothing. Dates, names, appointments, faces—everything escaped me. I said to my wife, 'Catherine, I shall never make a successful politician, for I cannot remember, and that is a prime necessity for politicians. A politician who sees a man once should remember him forever.' My wife told me I must train my memory. So when I came home that night I sat down alone and spent fifteen minutes trying silently to recall the events of the day.

"I could remember a little at first; now I remember that I could not then remember what I had for breakfast. Finally I found I could recall more. Events came back to me more minutely and more accurately. After a fortnight or so of this, Catherine said, 'Why don't you tell it to me? It would be interesting and my interest in it would stimulate you.' Then I began the habit of oral confession as it were, which followed for almost fifty years. Every night, the last thing before retiring, I told my wife everything that I could recall that had happened to me or about me during the day. I generally recalled the very dishes I had had for breakfast, dinner, and tea; the people I had seen and what they had said; the editorials I had written and an abstract of them; the letters I had sent and received, and the very language used as near as possible; when I had walked or ridden—everything, in short, that had come within my knowledge. I found I could say my lessons better and better every year, and instead of growing irksome, it got to be a pleasure to run the events of the day in review. I am indebted to this discipline for a memory of somewhat unusual tenacity, and I recommend the practice to all who expect to have much to do with influencing men."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

LINCOLN IN THE HOSPITAL.

In a recent conversation with a Union soldier, a correspondent heard a fresh story about the late President Lincoln. As near as possible our friend tells it in the soldier's words. He says:

I had been in the Finley Hospital several months, said the soldier. One day, in May 1863, President Lincoln and Secretary Chase walked into the ward where I was lying. You don't know how much good it did us to see them; one gets so tired looking at the nurse and at all the long row of cots. It is hard to lie on a cot day after day, and hear the boys moan, as their life ebbs away.

Some morning you wake up and see an empty cot near you. "No. 6 is gone?" you say to the nurse.

"Yes, he went at three this morning, poor fellow! but it's better for him," she answers in a sympathizing voice.

We boys, therefore, took solid comfort in looking at Lincoln's face that afternoon, and in hearing him talk. He didn't say much to me that day, but it was good to hear him say anything, his words were so gentle and so kind. And then he was as thoughtful as a mother; he knew just what to say.

I had been very sick. Yes, that sleeve's empty. I left the arm at Chattanooga. As I was saying, he only spoke a few words to me, and passed on to No. 26.

A Vermont boy, a mere lad, not over sixteen, was on it. He had been wounded mortally and was near his end. Mr. Lincoln stopped at the cot, and taking the thin, white hand, said, in a tone that was as tender as a mother's.—

"My poor boy, what can I do for you?"

With a beseeching look, the little fellow turned his eyes up at the homely, kindly face, and asked, "Won't you write to my mother for me?"

"That I will," answered the President, and calling for a pen, ink and paper, he seated himself by the side of the cot. It was a long letter that he wrote, at least three pages of commercial note, and when it was finished the President rose, saying—

"I will mail this as soon as I get back to my office. Now, is there anything else I can do for you?"

In some way the boy had come to know that it was the President. And so looking at him in the most appealing sort of a way, he asked—

"Won't you stay with me till it's all over? It won't be long, and I do want to hold on to your hand!"

That was too much for the great-hearted President to resist. The tears came to his eyes and he sat down by him and took hold of his hand. The little fellow did not move nor speak a word. This was some time before four o'clock, and it was long after six that the end came.

But the President sat there as if he had been the boy's father. When the end came, he bent over and folded the thin hands over the breast, and then looked so sorrowfully at the pale, thin face. The tears streamed down his cheeks unheeded. We all cried, too.

Do you wonder that "the boys in blue" loved Abe Lincoln?—Ex.

The great Italian sculptor, Michæl Angelo, was once visited by an acquaintance, who remarked, on entering his studio, "Why you have done nothing to that figure since I was here last." "Yes," was the reply; "I have softened this expression, touched off that projection, and made other improvements." "Oh!" said the visitor, "those are mere trifles." "True," answered Michæl Angelo, "but remember that trifles make perfection; and perfection is no trifle." In like manner, the highest forms of devotion to Christ consist in fidelity to apparent trifles.

BIBLE READINGS FOR THE YOUNG.

THE LOST SHEEP. Read Luke 15: 1-10.

I have gone astray like a lost sheep; seek thy servant; for I do not forget thy commandments. Ps. 119: 176.

1. What becomes of a lost sheep if the shepherd does not seek it? Ezek. 34: 5; John 10: 12.
2. Of whom is a lost sheep a picture? Isa. 53: 6.
3. What means does the Good Shepherd employ to bring back lost sheep? 2 Cor. 5: 20; Hos. 5: 15.
4. Who rejoice when a lost sheep is brought to the fold? Luke 15: 7–10; Zeph. 3: 17.
5. How does the rescued sheep show his love for the Shepherd? John 10: 4, 5; Ps. 100: 3, 4.

—Notes for Bible Study.

LIVES OF CELEBRATED MEN.

GEORGE STEPHENSON THE ENGINE-MAKER.

George Stephenson was a poor boy—poor as the poorest. His father worked in a coal mine, being fireman of the pumping engine that kept the mine dry. He was a steady and industrious man, and by hard labor, managed to support his family after a manner, though he was not able to send his children to school.

George was a smart, driving little fellow, with al most as much steam in him as there was in his father's engine. He was a good boy, too; ready to lend a helping hand to the large family when he was the merest lad. Five brothers and sisters sat with him around the family board, and he was the oldest but one. Just food and clothing enough to keep soul and body together was the most that his father could provide; no books, no schooling, no luxuries.

"Not a very bright prospect for Georgie," my reader will say. And yet there was a bright side for that poor family. There was real worth under Father Stephenson's old coat, of more value than wealth to the household. If his actuul value had been in his clothes, as is the case with dandies, the family would have been poor indeed. But since "worth makes the man," the family was rich in everything but money.

When George was nine years old he went to live with a farmer. He was not old enough to chop, shovel, or build wall, but he could watch the cows while they grazed, and that was his business. He received two pence a day for his labor, less than some boys of his age pay for candy now-a-days. It was quite a sum to George, however, who had never owned five coppers in his life, and he entered upon his new business with a zeal that would quite eclipse some of the prim looking clerks who strut in great warehouses now.

As he grew older, he was promoted to other farm-work, such as milking the cows, driving the horses, hoeing corn, and digging potatoes, in all of which he did the best he could. He never thought that milking the cows or digging potatoes was small business; he would have thought as soon it was small business to be a baby or a boy, when he must be both before he could be a man.

George had a taste for wind-mills and water-wheels, and he began to make them before he went to live with the farmer, nor did he cease to show his skill in that line after he went to the farm. He made little engines, too, as near like that which his father tended in the coal mine as he could. Indeed, he had quite a passion for minature engines, and he grew ambitious to tend a real, working engine, like his father's. He meant to have one of his own by-and-by.

When George was fourteen years old, his father removed to another township, to work in another coal-mine, and George was taken thither to act as assistant fireman. He was glad to quit the farm, because he wanted to be an engineer; and he took hold of his new business as one who was determined to do well in it. By the time he was eighteen years of age, he was well acquainted with every part of an engine. He could take one to pieces, and put it together again as readily as the most accomplished engineer. And still, he could not read nor write; indeed, he did not know a single letter of the alphabet. He had a strong desire, however, to gain knowledge.

A night-school for the colliers' children was opened about this time, and he attended it. Every day his thirst for knowledge grew stronger and stronger. His leisure moments he employed in studying, and in two years he could read, write and cipher very well The more knowledge he acquired the more he wanted to acquire. The more he knew, the more he wanted to know. He was determined to make a man in the true sense of the word. Among his fellow-laborers he became "a jack at all trades." He mended their clocks and shoes, and cut out clothes for them, and did almost anything that he was asked to do, so that he was regarded as a "genius."

Thus he went on, step by step, until he made a locomotive engine, in 1814, which was run on the Killingworth railway. About the same time, also, he invented a safety-lamp to be used in the coal-mines. He knew that he could make a much better engine than the one he had already completed, and he did. He kept at work, until, in 1829, he received a prize for an engine that could run twenty-nine miles per hour, its average rate being fourteen miles. He named it "the Rocket," because it shot over the ground at such speed. It was the wonder of those times, and Stephenson became renowned at once throughout Europe and the world, as the author of the great English railway system. Within forty years from the time he went to watch the farmer's cows, at two pence per day, he became one of the most useful and renowned men of Europe, and the reader can see how it was done.

A high aim, doing things well, patience, perseverance, and all those other good qualities that are found with them, made them successful. Money did not help him, for he had none. A distinguished father did not lift him into favor, for his father was obscure—only a collier. It was not luck that achieved his fortune, for luck never brings success to any one. He made himself, just as other poor boys now can rise, by dint of perseverance.

Martin Luther was the son of a poor miner; Zwinglius was the son of an obscure shepherd; John Bunyan's father was a traveling tinker; Colnmbus was the son of a weaver, and Henry Kirke White, of a butcher; Bloomfield, Gibbon, Dr. Carey and Roger Sherman began life as shoemakers; Jeremy Taylor was the son of a barber, Scott of a glazier, and John Hunter of a carpenter; Cowley's father was a grocer, and Collins' was a hatter. Thus all useful and honorable pursuits open the way to success and true fame.—Alden's Juvenile Gem.

BOY INVENTORS.

Some of the most importent inventions have been the work of boys. The invention of the valve-motion to the steam engine was made by a mere boy.

Newcomen's engine was in a very incomplete condition, from the fact that there was no way to open or close the valves, except by means of levers operated by hand.

He set up a large engine at one of the mines, and a boy (Humphrey Potter) was hired to work these valve levers. Although this is not hard work, yet it required his constant attention.

As he was working the levers he saw that parts of the engine moved in the right direction, and at the same time he had to open and close the valves.

He procured a strong cord, and made one end fast to the proper part of the engine, and the other end to the valve-lever; and the boy had the satisfaction of seeing the engine move with perfect regularity of motion.

A short time after the foreman came around, and saw the boy playing marbles at the door. Looking at the engine he saw the ingenuity of the boy, and also the advantage of so great an invention. The idea suggested by the boy's inventive genius was put in a practical form and made the steam-engine an automatic working machine.

The power-loom is the invention of a farmer's boy who had never seen or heard of such a thing.

He whittled one out with his jack knife, and after he had got it all done, he with great enthusiasm showed it to his father, who at once kicked it to pieces, saying he would have no boy about him that would spend his time on such foolish things.

The boy was sent to a blacksmith to learn a trade, and his master took a lively interest in him. He made a loom of what was left of the one his father had broken up, and showed it to his master.

The blacksmith saw he had no common boy as an apprentice, and that the invention was a valuable one. He had a loom constructed under the supervision of the boy. It worked to their perfect satisfaction, and the blacksmith furnished the means to manufacture the looms, and the boy received half the profits.

In about a year the blacksmith wrote to the boy's father that he should bring home with him a wealthy gentleman who was the inventor of the celebrated power-loom.

You may be able to judge of the astonishment at the old home when his son was presented to him as the inventor, who told him that the loom was the same as the model that he had kicked to pieces but a year ago.

Our patent office shows many ingenious and useful inventions made by minors and women, and the above list of important inventions made by boys might be largely increased, did space permit.—Boston Budget.

TEMPERANCE.

WYOMING COUNTY, N. Y., PROHIBITIONISTS.

PREPARING FOR AGGRESSIVE WORK—PUSHING THE XVI AMENDMENT.

A meeting of the Wyoming county executive committee of the Prohibition party was held in Perry, N. Y., on Wednesday; F. W. Capwell, president of the county association presided. The meeting was opened with prayer. All friends of prohibition were invited to participate.

F. W. Capwell, of Dale, was appointed to fill the vacancy in the State committee. Propositions having been received from the following prohibition journals, Living Issue, Steuben Signal, The Voice, and The XVI Amendment, for the subscription and circulation in Wyoming county through the means of the county committee, a committee was appointed consisting of Rev. J. D. Tucker, N. B. Jackson, H. D. Tinkham, M. S. Mayhew, and A. H. Sleeper, to select one of the said journals. The committee reported, advising the acceptance of the proposition from The XVI Amendment Publishing Co., Buffalo, N. Y. The report was adopted.

On motion, a committee on resolutions, Rev. J. D. Tucker, Rev. E. W. White, and W. T. Evans were appointed by the chair. The report of the committee was adopted as follows:

Resolved, That while we, with gratitude to God, recognize the importance of prohibition principles, and the firm adherence of its supporters to the true elements of reform in Wyoming county and elsewhere, we also acknowledge the need of prayerful dependence upon Divine aid in this great conflict.

Resolved, That we are in sympathy with all efforts having for their ultimate object State and National constitutional prohibition.

Resolved, That we recommend the permanent organization of prohibitory party clubs in every town.

Resolved, That we recommend for our prohibition organ in Wyoming county The XVI Amendment, of Buffalo, a resolute and able paper, and bespeak for it an extensive circulation.

Resolved, That we most kindly recognize the great work of the W. C. T. U. in furthering the interests of prohibition and desire co-operation in future efforts to abolish forever the curse of strong drink.

Resolved, That we would favor the nomination of our noble standard-bearer, A. A. Hopkins, as our next candidate for governor of New York.

Resolved, That we hereby express our hearty thanks to the members of the Free Methodist church, of Perry, for the use of their house of worship.

On motion, the secretary of the executive committee was instructed to write at once to the members of the county committee, not present at the meeting, and request them to organize without delay Prohibition party clubs in their respective towns for effective work; also provide for the obtaining of subscriptions to The XVI Amendment. A letter from Fred F. Wheeler, chairman of the State committee, containing suggestions for prohibition work in every town, also asking subscriptions in note form to the Prohibition State campaign fund, was read and duly considered.

F. W. Capwell, Pres.
A. H. Sleeper, Sec'y.

ALCOHOL IN THE TREATMENT OF DISEASE.

BY ALFRED CARPENTER, M. D., M. R. C. P., LONDON.

[From the British Medical Journal.]

I need not apologize for bringing this subject to your notice. It is one of the burning questions of the day, and likely to stand in the first rank, both politically and therapeutically. As citizens of a free country, we must not refuse to look at its political aspect, and to form our opinions according to the evidence which may be forthcoming. A fearful responsibility rests upon our profession in this matter, and it must be faced.

Our duty is threefold: First, as members of a great commonwealth, we must not do evil that good may come, in spite of any teaching. The second duty is to our patient. He engages us, first, to cure him of his disease; second, to prevent its recurrence. If a workman be sent for to mend a leak in a water pipe, and plugs it with some material that merely stays the leak, but is sure to be dissolved by the water, he fails in duty. So in disease: if a physician gives advice which may be beneficial for to-day, but which is certain to be pernicious if persevered in, he has done only half his duty, and that half badly. The third and last duty of a physician is to himself, as regards pecuniary reward. He must place this in the last rank. The man who follows these rules will assist to guide our country through one of the greatest dangers that can possibly beset a nation in its battle with the drink evil.

It is now nearly seven years since I had the privilege of delivering the address to the Medical Society of London. I was, after it, written by one of the greatest authorities of the time, who said that he "agreed with every word I had spoken except two lines," in which I had stated that I should not advise an old man accustomed to wine daily, to give it up. I refer to Sir A. Clark.

The symptoms of alcoholic poisoning vary somewhat, according to the habit of the person affected. They are immediate and decided in the total abstainer, while little visible in a habitual drinker, except after a time of abstinence, when a small quantity sets up symptoms that may end in delirium tremens and death. In Dr. V. Mangan's work, (entirely without reference to this important question,) its developments as an irritant and narcotic poison are described by a master-hand.

Dr. de Chaumont says that fall in the temperature of the body has been proved conclusively by several physiologistis, whom he names in Parks Hygiene. The action of alcohol is next to diminish or arrest the oxygen-carrying power of the blood-corpuscles.

Dr. W. B. Carpenter fully supports these views. Let me give, in a few words its well-kuown effects. It reddens mucous membrane, producing chronic catarrhal condition. It causes enlargement of the liver, by albuminoid or fatty deposit, also produces a chronic inflamation, followed by cirrhosis. It gives rise to chronic bronchitis and emphysema. It first quickens the action of the heart, by altering the balance of power, then, after a time, there is defective muscular power, while the work to be performed is really increased. It interferes with nerve-currents, and produces distressing restlessness, and skin diseases. It affects the kidneys precisely as the liver, and appears in the several forms of Bright's disease.

If this be called nonsense by some of the supporters of the so-called temperate use of intoxicants, yet it is in accord with the views of the leading physiologists of the day; and the great principles upon which the statements are based canno. be put out of sight by abuse.

The Churches.

THE GOSPEL IN KENTUCKY.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—We can speak through our own paper, the Berea Evangelist, but, as yet, not to many persons in the North.

As you will remember, in 1847 we separated from all slave-holding bodies. For efficiency we needed the union of all the true Christians of the locality, as the one church of that locality—undenominational, simply church of Christ at——. This was, and is, apostolic, primitive, best.

The American Missionary Association has become the organ of a party, a denomination; and as you noticed in your paper not long since, resolved at its last annual meeting not to aid a church that would not connect itself with some Congregational association. We understand the resolution as you do, and in addition to their act of declinature, feel that we ought not to bid God speed to a division and denominational policy by receiving their aid.

To whom then shall we look for help in our missionary efforts here to extend the Gospel, free from sectism and secretism? All the missionary boards are the organs of sects, and are generally in complicity with secret orders, or are silent in reference to them. Bros. Hinman, Brown, and I have been a board receiving small sums, which we have expended upon two brethren in the mountain region of Kentucky during the past nine months. We have reported the sums received and disbursed through the Berea Evangelist.

There is a colored brother here in this place who ought to be so situated that he could give his whole time to labor among the colored people, who are not only divided and weakened by sectism, but sadly deluded and plundered in time and money by secret orders, making great pretensions of benevolence. How shall we save this people from these ravages, and build them up in the simplicity and purity of the Gospel, except as they shall hear: and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall he preach except he be sent? Who will send him, or help send him? All aid sent to the Cynosure office will be received and forwarded to us, and we will report through the Berea Evangelist.

Some friends in the North have suggested a call for a national convention, to devise ways and means for the union of Christians, and the spread of the Gospel freed from denominationalism and secret orders. A call for such has been published in the Berea Evangelist. For unity and purity we need cooperation.

I am here for a week or two, then, God willing, back to Berea. John G. Fee.

Camp Nelson, Ky., Apr. 3, '85.

CAMP NELSON INTEREST.

Thompson, Pa.

Shall this enterprise be pushed forward, or die for want of a little more material support? No language that I can summon can express the depth of my interest in this historic place, and in the noble spirits who have toiled with so much self-denial to bring this interest to its present state of advancement. Ever since we stood on these consecrated grounds, made historic by the presence of some four thousands of our soldier dead, and by the fact that thousands of the long abused and almost crushed fugitives here "fled for refuge to lay hold on the hope set before them" in the glad tidings of the emancipation decree, and in the Gospel of the Son of God eventually, we have been thrilled by the scenes that there met us. Language affords no outlet to the emotions we feel.

Hitherto the education of the colored people, literary and religious, has been conducted in one of the old government buildings, put up for the emergency during the rebellion, and it would do any soul good to see the progress made in the scientific and religious elevation of the dear colored people in Camp Nelson. By almost superhuman efforts Bro. Fee has erected a dormitory of commodious proportions, which is still unfinished, and needs over $1,000 to complete this monument of philanthrophy and self-denial. Bro. Howe has pledged $500 of this much needed sum on conditions that the rest can be raised. Others have also made liberal pledges on the same condition.

John G. Fee, the life-long hero of emancipation for body and soul, of the colored race, the victim of eight organized mobs from which he merged as the Hebrews of old from the fiery furnace and the lion's den, is yet in the field, a live man though nearly worn out with age and hard toil. Retired for a season to Camp Nelson, after his recent severe illness, to recuperate. He is now struggling earnestly and hard to raise the needed funds to complete the dormitory before he shall go hence. With such facts before us, can we withold the means which God has given us to just remove this burden from our brother, and prolong his days, perchance, and let him live to see the monument of his toil in Camp Nelson completed?

I can think of nothing more cruel than to protract, for a single day, this load of anxiety, suspense and financial labor, on that dear brother's heart. Where are the men of ample means who will at once come up and just let go—yes that is all of it, to let go of a few hundred dollars? Two or three hundreds, with what is already available will do this work. Was there ever a better chance to do good with your (God's) money? If I had it I could let go of it with the joy of an angel, ministering to the "heirs of salvation." Will not the readers of the Cynosure hear us and respond to this plea for Camp Nelson? Hear us, O my brother, and send your pledge to John G. Fee, Berea, Madison Co., Ky.

Yours for the needy, Nathan Callender.

A Bible Institute will be held in Chicago in May and June, for Christian workers. Rev. W. G, Moorehead, D. D., Xenia, O.; Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., of Chicago; and Maj. D. W. Whittle are among the instructors. Inquiries should be addressed to Miss. E. Dryer, Bible Institute, 150 Madison St., Chicago.

—The late United Presbyterian convention in Xenia, Ohio, appointed an executive committee to issue an address, etc. The same committee has prepared also a tract on Freemasonry which is about ready for distribution.

—Bro. E. T. Waring writes of a work of the Holy Spirit in Walla Walla, Washington Territory, moving upon the people, some of whom are led to consecrate themselves fully to the Lord. It is blessed to learn that in every case where one belonged to the lodge he has abandoned that infamy.

—On Sabbath, April 5th, the French Protestant mission received an accession of thirteen persons, reclaimed from Romanism. They were baptized in the Jefferson Park Presbyterian church. Pastor Seguin is yet compelled to hold meetings in his rented rooms at 44 Blue Island Avenue. An effort is being made to secure a building for the mission which is endorsed by most of the pastors of Chicago.

—The Missionary Enterprise, the new monthly issued by Rev. Joel Martin at Pittsford, Mich., has appeared. It is unpretentious in size and appearance, but is likely to become a valuable auxiliary to the Wesleyan churches in Michigan.

—Revival services were held every evening last week, except Saturday, at Plymouth Congregational church, in this city. They were conducted by Major D. W. Whittle. At a late Sunday morning's service a collection was taken for the Sunday school of the church, amounting to $3,500.

—Rev Dixon C. Williams, of Tennessee, has been holding a revival meeting in connection with the Cumberland Presbyterian church, of Princeton, Ind., and reports 400 conversions.

—Rev. Dr. Somerville, of Glasgow, has been holding a series of meetings in Constantinople. His sermons are translated into Turkish and are attentively listened to sometimes by audiences of 400 at a time.

—The committee nominated to make preparations for the holding of a National Holiness Assembly, says the Free Methodist, have so far reported as to fix the time and place of meeting, viz.: Park Avenue M. E. church in this city, commencing with an evening service, Wednesday, May 20th, the services continuing until the evening of Tuesday, May 26th. The committee, composed of the following brethren: John P. Brooks, of Illinois; George Hughes, of New York; Geo. D. Watson, of Florida; Thos. K. Doty, of Ohio; W. B. M. Colt, of Missouri; S. B. Shaw, of Michigan; B. A. Washburn, of California, recommend the observance of a general fast among holiness people, with prayer for the special blessing of the Lord upon the sessions of the assembly, and Friday, May 15th, is named as a suitable day for such observance.

—The Congregational church in Peoria, Rev. E. F. Howe, pastor, received eighty-eight members, seventy-five on confession, a few days ago. Forty were received in February, so that the results of the meetings thus far are shown in 128 additions, of whom 108 were on confession. This makes 265 accessions in the two years and a half since Mr. Howe began his pastorate.

—Rev. G. F. Pentecost and Mr. Sankey and Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins have been holding nightly services in Dr. Cuyler's Lafayette Avenue church, Brooklyn, and there is much religious interest.

—There is a revival in the First Presbyterian church, Staunton, Va. On a recent Sunday 113 persons were received, of whom 100 came on confession. Their ages ranged from ten to eighty-six years.

—The union revival meetings, conducted by Rev. J. D. Potter in Alpena, have been blessed to the conversion of a large number. The services drew overflowing houses; business houses were closed and pupils in the grammar and high schools dismissed.

—Dr. Talmage received 195 persons to membership March 1st. This makes the present membership 2,395.

—It cost our government $1,848,000 to support 2,200 Dakota Indians during seven years of their savage life; after they were Christianized, it cost $120,000 for the same length of time.

—During the past year three hundred conversions were reported among the Cherokee Indians, who now have over 2,000 Baptists among them. In the whole Indian Territory there are about 6,000 Baptists.

—A church at Imabari, Japan, was formed four years ago, and has now three hundred and seventy-six members. It has received additions at every communion until on a recent occasion. This exception was thought so strange and inconsistent with proper church growth that a season of humiliation and prayer was appointed, to pray for a renewal of God's blessing.

—The current number of the Faith Missionary of Oberlin, has a wonderful letter from Henry Wholler of North Topeka, Kansas, in which he tells of accidentally taking strychnine for medicine. Two physicians were called and declared he must die, and the final convulsion was believed to be upon him. Mrs. Wholler and others betook themselves to prayer and their cry was heard. He arose from his bed and in a few days had recovered usual health.

—A dispatch from Jarvis, Ohio, tells of a remarkable faith cure which occurred near that place last week. Miss Effie Irons has for three years been confined to her bed by a disease that rendered her helpless from her waist down. Last Thursday she began praying and continued in prayer about fourteen hours. At the end of that time she suddenly arose from her bed and walked about the house. Friday night she attended a revival meeting at Salem snd spoke with such power that a score of persons came forward. As one result, the most remarkable revival ever known there is in progress. Miss Irons appears to be perfectly well.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

We supposed that a storm was "brewing" on the "Washington Bible" question, but we did not expect it would burst upon us so suddenly. Already several claimants have come to the front, all insisting that they are in possession of the veritable Bible on which Washington was made a Mason. The Keystone publishes a letter from a person in London, containing an account of a Bible now in possession the "Second Batallion, Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry," on which, it is claimed, Washington was obligated as an E. A., Nov. 4, 1752. This Bible certainly has an interesting history as a souvenir and family relic, but why or how it can be plausibly asserted that it has any connection with Washington's Masonic history is more than we can comprehend, There is not the slightest reason to believe that the Bible was within three thousand miles of America when Washington was made a Mason, or that it was ever within a hundred miles of the place where he was initiated. In Fredericksburg Lodge, Virginia, Washington received his Masonic obligations, and that lodge has contiued in existence from that time till now, and has retained possession of the Bible on which he was obligated. To claim in the face of historic facts that Washinton was initiated in an English Military Lodge is rather too absurd for serious consideration.—Freemason's Journal.

—The principal Freemasons who participated in the famous "Revival" of Masonry in England in the year 1717, were: Brothers Anthony Sayre, gentleman (Grand Master in 1717); Rev. James Anderson, A. M., (a Scotch Presbyterian minister in London, J. G. Warden in 1722, and author of Anderson's "Constitutions of the Freemasons," in 1723 and 1738); George Payne, Esq., (a learned antiquary, who first compiled, in 1720, while he was Grand Master a second time, the "General Regulations" of the craft; Grand Master in 1718 and 1720); John Theophilus Desaguliers, LL. D., F. R S. (Grand Master in 1719); Thomas Morrice, stone-cutter (J. G. Warden in 1718); Jacob Lamball, carpenter (S. G Warden in 1717); Richard Ware, mathematician (J. G. Warden in 1720); John Cordwell, city carpenter (S. G. Warden in 1718); Thomas Hobby, stone-cutter (S. J. Warden in 1720); Captain Joseph Elliot (J. G. Warden in 1717).—The Keystone, N. Y.

—There is but one Odd-fellow lodge reported in Sweden. It was established last July in the city of Malmo.

—A glover's apprentice at Prague recently hanged himself. He stated in a letter to his parents that he had been selected by a secret society to kill a police officer named Steipkat, but would not, and so killed himself because he would have been killed by his colleagues!

—There is one roof in this city which shelters a strange conglomeration of Knights of Pythias, Odd-fellows, Chosen Friends, Royal Arcanum, Foresters, the American Legion of Honor, Free Sons of Israel, Sons of Benjamin and other societies.

—The American Legion of Honor was organized in Boston Dec 18, 1879, with fifteen charter members. It has 1,050 councils, 19 grand councils, and 57,005 members, and has paid to the widows and orphans of deceased companions $4,556,-676 21. The highest amount paid by this order on the death of a member is $5,000 which is paid on the death of every sixth degree member; $4,000 on the death of every fifth degree member, $3,000 on the death of every fourth degree member, $2,000 on the death of every third degree member, $1,000 on the death of every second degree member, and $500 on the death of every first degree member.

KANSAS DONATIONS.

Cash received for the work of the National Christian Association for the State of Kansas up to April 1, 1885:

Jane Legget, $1; and Joseph Garside, $1, Girard.

E. P. Ingersoll, Rosevale, $1.

Mrs. Perry, Fort Scott, $1.

Rev. R. J. Thompson, Sterling, $5.

By Samuel Galbraith, Olathe, a collection of the S. S. of R. P. church, $15.

A. W. Dill, Eskridge, $3.25.

In addition the following pledges have been made:

M. R. Beckstill, Macksville, per quarter, $1.50.

J. Kiplinger, Jewell City, for a lecture in the place, $5.

T. S. Walter, Mankato, for two lectures and sermon, $10.

R. B. Landon, Kennebec, $5.

Jane Legget, Girard, per quarter, 25cts.

N. D. Rose, Uniontown, for lecture, $5.

S ALEXANDER, Treas.

Let me say to the friends of this reform in Kansas, bring on your freewill offerings, either in money or plepges, and let the work be prosecuted with vigor.

S. A.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A.	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men,	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire,"	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons he admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

The WORLD'S EXPOSITION ILLINOIS DAY, Saturday, April 25th.

Grand preparations are in progress to make the day a memorable one.

Let every Illinoisan that can, visit the GREATEST, GRANDEST WORLD'S INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION that ever existed, and the last one of this century and age.

79 ACRES OF SPACE filled with rich and rare exhibits.

Railroad rates less than a cent a mile. Accommodations low and abundant.

E. A. BURKE,
Director General,
New Orleans.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $ 25.....10 per cent
" " " 50.....15 " "
" " " 100.....20 " "
" " " 250.....25 " "
" " " 500.....30 " "
" " " 1000.....35 " "
" " " 1500.....40 " "
" " " 2500.....50 " "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen. $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees, in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD--FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

LUCILE VERNON.

cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER IS THE "WAUKESHA GLENN!"

HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS, NATURAL OR ARTIFICIAL.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

Pirate SONG of VICTORY

The literary "pirate" question which we have recently been called upon to discuss recalls to mind the "Parnassus Dream" which a "Literary Revolution" friend sent us some time ago. It bears repeating, and has an appropriate ring to its melody in these days of new and glorious victories.

Cheap Choice Books

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, ONE HUNDRED PAGES, sent free on request. Books sent for examination before payment on evidence of good faith. Following are representative works:

GUIZOT'S HISTORY of FRANCE. 8 vols., 426 illustrations. Reduced from $36.00 to $8.00—cheaper edition, $5.00.

RAWLINSON'S SEVEN GREAT MONARCHIES. Reduced from $18.00 to $3.00—in 3 volumes, over 700 illustrations and maps.

HAMERTON'S "THE INTELLECTUAL LIFE." Price reduced from $2.00 to 50 cents in cloth binding, $1.00 in full Russia, gilt edges.

PRESCOTT'S GREAT WORK, Ferdinand and Isabella, reduced from $4.50 to $2.00—in our fine illustrated edition in 2 vols.; cheap edition, 1 vol., $1.25.

KENRICK'S ANCIENT EGYPT. Reduced from $15.00 to $1.00.

GROTE'S GREECE. Complete in 4 volumes. Reduced from $18.00 to $2.70.

MILMAN'S GIBBON'S ROME. Reduced from $9.00 to $2.25.

DORE'S MILTON'S PARADISE LOST. Superbly Illustrated. $2.00.

ESSAYS of RALPH WALDO EMERSON. Price, 40 cents.

BACON'S ESSAYS, complete. Paper, 15 cents; cloth, 25 cents.

COOPER'S LEATHER STOCKING TALES and The Spy. 6 vols. bound in 3; fine cloth, price, $2.50.

PROSE TALES of EDGAR A. POE. 1 volume, fine cloth, price, $1.00.

WORKS of BULWER-LYTTON, complete in 13 volumes, fine cloth, library style, gilt tops, price, $9.00.

LONGFELLOW'S PROSE WORKS. 1 volume, fine cloth, price, 65 cents.

RUSKIN'S CHOICE WORKS. 3 vols. in one, half Russia, price, 50 cents.

GRACE GREENWOOD'S NEW BOOK, Stories for Home Folks, Young and Old. Price, 50 cents.

CHINESE GORDON, by Archibald Forbes. Cloth, price, 50 cents.

ANCIENT CLASSICS for English Readers. 27 volumes bound in 9, half Russia, price, $5.00.

Books by Mail require 20 per cent. extra to prepay. Mention this paper.

JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher,

P. O. Box 1227. 393 Pearl Street, New York.

I slept where the moon, serenely bright,
Shone full in my face through a summer night;
I dreamt I was in a Land of Light,
With Fielding and Moore and Shelley and White, [sight!—
And Shakespeare and Milton—a goodly
With Addison, Dryden, and others, quite
Too numerous to mention;
And there the worthies, one and all,
Whom we the "classical authors" call,
Beneath the shade of Parnassus tall,
On Pegasus Place, in Helicon Hall,
Were holding a big convention.

Virgil was sitting beside Voltaire,
Boccaccio chatting with Dumas, pere,
And Pope curled up in the corner there,
While old Sam Johnson was in the chair,
Wall-eyed and grim, with carroty hair,
And he said, "Of course you're all aware
Of the latest earthly advices:
The publishers seem to be going to smash
Beneath the great 'economy' lash,
For John B. Alden is cutting a dash
Exceedingly reckless and awfully rash,
In selling for almost nothing for cash,
And ruining regular prices!

"I hold in my hand a letter from four
American publishers who feel sore,
And they speak for a score, or possibly more,
Who live by traffic in printed lore.
I read: 'We pray from this earthly shore—
Ye authors of old attend us!
O, give us a lift in this hour of need,
For the publishing business is going to seed;
That man Alden is making with speed
As many hooks as the folks can read,
And selling disgracefully low, indeed;
It cheapens your fame—for you we plead!—
Ye talented ghosts, defend us!'

"What word shall we send to this earthly band?"
Then Scott, with an "Elzevir" in hand,
Arose (amid cries of "Take the Stand!")
And said, "This scheme will possess the land;
No good is the Harper or Scribner brand
While Alden shows that he can command
The brains of sage and scholar;
A shilling for Pope—good binding on;
The same for the poems of Tennyson;
Ten cents for your Pilgrim's Progress, John;
For the Iliad, thirty cents; and Don Quixote for half a dollar!"

Then Chaucer said, "I am rather old,
But I am mighty glad this day to be told
How cheap my Canterbury Tales are sold, [Anne fold,
And the poets and wits of the Queen
Steele the bright and De Foe the bold,
Berkeley the sober and Swift the scold,
From the time of Sir Walter Raleigh;
Shakespeare's works, and Smollett's and Sterne's,
Bacon, Bolingbroke, Byron and Burns;
And Babington Lord Macaulay."

Charles Dickens said, "'Twould be foolish to let
Good luck of mortals cause regret;
For the price of a theatre-ticket they get
Milman's Gibbon—the perfect set—
Dante and Virgil, two shillings net,
For a dollar Adam Smith on Debt,
And Mill on the Laws of Nations;
And I see by this wondrous circular
Sent up by J. B. A. that for [War,
Three cents you get the Seven Years'
For a dime King Henry of Navarre,
And for thrice the price of a good cigar
Will Shakespeare's inspirations."

Then Goldsmith rose and expressed it thus:
"It is simply a case of de gustibus,
But I see no reason for all this fuss,
For publishers never did much for us,
While needy, summer and winter;
Therefore, confreres, I hold this view:
The high-price houses are doubtless blue,
But unto the man our thanks are due
Who sends our thoughts each palace through,
And into the humblest cottage too,
For the Many are always more than the Few,
And the people are more than the Printer!"

A slight shade rose—'twas Edgar Poe—
Who said, "I've been talking here with De Foe;
We agree, & the ancients have told us so,
That who makes two printed leaves to show
Where only one did formerly grow
Is as good a man as we want to know;
And this letter here, from the realms below,
Reveals its earthly animus;
I move it be not received!" About
A thousand voices removed all doubt,
Ben Johnson and Halleck and Hood spoke out,
Kit North and Irving and Father Prout,
'Mid a storm of cheers & a mighty shout,
And the motion pass'd—unanimous!

FARM NOTES.

THE HORSE.

The horse has the smallest stomach of any animal in proportion to his size, even smaller than man. He is made for made for quick and rapid circulation and with large internal viscera, like the lungs and heart, but the stomach is very small. The largest stomach ever measured in a horse was that of the great race-horse Eclipse. He had enormous girth, but his stomach held only sixteen quarts. Take our smaller horses and their capacity is only ten or twelve quarts. When you take this fact in connection with others which have come under the observation of every one accustomed to the feeding of a horse you will see that this gives him his greatest efficiency. If you remember seeing a horse in pasture, you know that you have got to get up in the night to find him when he is not eating. He is eating away into the night. He doesn't get so much at a time as some other animals, but he keeps at it more persistently. He keeps his stomach well filled, and the rapid process of digestion takes it out, so he can keep feeding all the time. A horse will do better to be fed four times a day than three times a day and should not be fed less than three times.

The amount fed to horses should have a given rate to their weight; because the weight usually is a guage of their stomach capacity. A horse that weighs 1,200 pounds will require 24 pounds of proven der of some sort in a day, and a horse that weighs 900 pounds requires eighteen pounds. Two per cent of the horse's weight is as much as he ought to eat in one day. He ought to have eight pounds a day of hay and the remainder in oats or its equivalent. That is a good rule to follow in training horses, and what is a good rule for training is a good rule for all the time. As I said before, a horse's stomach is very small, and when you have fed him you have filled his stomach as full as it will hold. The salivary glands of a horse are exceedingly active, and how much he produces when fed we do not know, but it is a considerable proportion of what goes into his stomach, and after he is fed his stomach is full.

You must also remember the fact that much of what he has taken is dry food, and when he drinks it is often about as men do at dinner when they take two or three tumblers or ice-water. If he drinks a pail of water, he puts into his stomach from five to eight quarts, and that is almost its full capacity. What must happen? The material in the stomach already will be forced out, and into the larger intestines undigested and with a loss of value in the food from not being properly digested, so that there can be no such assimilation as if it were digested in the stomach. There was an experiment tried in France when I was present at Alfort, where horses were going to be fed and then killed for dissection. They were horses that were not valuable. They were first fed and then given water, and afterwards killed and examined. Some of the grain was found undigested in the intestines twenty feet beyond the stomach. That shows that horses ought not to be watered immediately after eating. A portion of the material that is carried along undigested is likely to have an inflammatory effect upon the mucous membrane, and when you drive out the horse he is scouring, much to his own discomfort and yours, too.

Well, you say, should water be given just before eating? There is another difficulty. It is a fact that the digestive action of the stomach can only take place at a certain temperature. And when you give a pail or half a pail of water just before feeding, you reduce the temperature so that the whole digestive process must be delayed until the temperature is again raised by the natural heat of the body. So that horses ought not to be watered just before or just after eating. They should not be watered for a half or three-quarters of an hour before eating or two hours afterwards.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

Beware of Imitations.

Imitations and counterfeits have again appeared. Be sure that the word "Horsford's" is on the wrapper. None are genuine without it.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

Cures all Lung, Nervous and Chronic Diseases. Office and "Home Treatment," by
A. H. HIATT, M. D., Central Music Hall, CHICAGO.
Price Reduced. Write for Pamphlet, Information, &c.

NELSON'S

Sunday School Books and Cards.
Approved by all Evangelical Denominations.
Send for Catalogue.
T. NELSON & SONS, 42 Bleecker St., N. Y.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,
To Sunday-Schools, r quarter. .... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... ... . 10cts.

SUNSHINE,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address
T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PEOCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL AEGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contraditions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the Cynosure who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the mouument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

Or the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan wss murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100, $3.60. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND BOOK OF Freemasonry,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge. No. 639, Chicago.

Gives the correct or "Standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustriated and explained. In short, it is

A Complete and Accurate Lodge Manual.

The high standing of Mr. Ronayne in the fraternity, his popularity and success as a teacher and lecturer in the Lodge, together with the testimony of eight Masonic authority, leaves no doubt of the accuracy of this work. It is rapidly becoming a standard work in the hands of ACTING LODGE OFFICIALS, and those who desire to post themselves on the workings of the order. The price is so low that it is within the reach of all. Sent postpaid securely wrapped on receipt of price. 184 pages, Paper covers, 35 cents. Elegant cloth with beveled edges and gilt stamp, $1.00. Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifully bound. 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—
Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. ILL.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

IN BRIEF.

A young man in Abbeville, S. C., suffering from pneumonia, called in a physician who left him a small vial of veratrum to be taken internally, and a liniment of hartshorn, turpentine and chloroform for external application. The patient by mistake reversed the order, swallowing the liniment and rubbing on the veratrum, and next day was well.

Sheep-raising in Australia has become the chief industry of that great and remarkable continent. The amount of wool exported last year was 7,693,748 pounds, valued at £1,262,823 sterling. English manufacturers speak in the highest terms of the quality of Australian wool, and Sir Archibald Tompkins testifies that he wore a pair of breeches manufactured of this wool for eleven months without observing any impairment of the "napp" of the goods. It is estimated that the number of sheep in Australia is 21,000,000.

The approval with which the abolition of slavery in Egypt has met ought to encourage those who are urging upon the sublime porte the abolition of slavery in Turkey. A very large share of the slave traffic is conducted in the Georgian mountains, whither the traders repair to select and purchase their human chattels. What a lamentable difference between civilization in the orient, where woman is born into bondage, and civilization in the occident, where woman is honored, and may, if she pleases, aspire to the highest place in the gift of her fellow creatures!

The Crescent steel works at Pittsburg can turn out in an emergency an ingot of steel weighing 13,200 pounds at one heat.

There are twenty American girls studying at the University of Zurich. They are admitted upon equal terms with the male students.

New York sells annually about 100,000,000 pounds of butter, of which the commissioner of agriculture claims over one-half is bogus.

A bronze statue of John Howard will be unveiled and placed in position with appropriate ceremony in front of Memorial Hall, Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 28.

From July 1 to October 1, last season, the National Park Hotel, in Yellowstone Park, entertained 2,171 visitors, against 1,465 the previous season.

In seven years Americans have paid $9,130,000 for French paintings. The purchases have steadily increased from $701,000 in 1877.

The most remarkable telephoning yet attempted was accomplished by the engineers of the Inter-national Bell Telephone company in an experiment by which they were able to hold conversation between St. Petersburg and Bologæ, a distance of 2,465 miles. Blake transmitting and Bell receiving instruments were used, and a conversation was kept up notwithstanding a rather high induction. The experiments were carried on during the night when the telegraph lines were not at work. The Russian engineers of this company are so confident of further success that they hope shortly to be able to converse with ease at a distance of 4,665 miles; but to accomplish this they must combine all the conditions favorable for the transmission of telephonic sounds. If it is found possible to hold audible conversation at such extraordinary distances, it is possible that this fact will be speedily improved upon and we shall be enabled to converse freely between London and New York, and by and by between London and the antipodes.—Chambers' Journal.

CATARRH CURED!

A clergyman, after suffering a number of years from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, after trying every known remedy without success, at last found a prescription which completely cured and saved him from death. Any sufferer from this dreadful disease sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Dr. J. A. Lawrence, 199 Dean St., Brooklyn, New York, will receive the recipe free of charge.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents, per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers. 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each: per dozen, $2 00

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3 25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich, and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1 00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Danghter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lectnrer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbens Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Broekman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each: per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated, A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each, per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 304 pages: cloth $1

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

Enraged because the Legislature failed to reimburse him for time and money expended, D. S. Grimes on Wednesday totally destroyed the Colorado exhibit at the New Orleans exposition. This was accounted to be one of the finest displays of the great show. Grimes was arrested on the charge of malicious mischief.

The Governor of Wisconsin has vetoed the bill for the punishment of vagrants by dieting them with bread and water, claiming that it is unconstitutional.

Richard Grant White, the Shakespearean scholar and literary and art critic, died in New York Wednesday, aged 63.

Gov. Oglesby of Illinois, pardoned E. F. Goodspeed, the murderer of a man named Tontz at Bloomington in 1879. He had been sentenced to twenty seven years imprisonment.

A leading Mormon advocates the purchase of Statehood by Utah, in preference to enduring the alleged persecution of the National Government. A Mormon bishop and an elder, upon pleading guilty to unlawful cohabitation, at Phœnix, Wyo., Tuesday, were sentenced each to ninety days in the penitentiary.

During March the losses by fire reached $9,000,000, and for the first three months of the year $27,500,000. The average fire waste for March in the last ten years has been less than $7,000,000.

The "Red Men" lodge perpetrated another outrage on Frank Archer near Ravenswood, W. Va., Saturday night a bullet wounding him severely in the hip. The people in the vicinity vowed vengeance and lynchings may be expectad.

Striking quarrymen at Joliet, Ill., succeeded Thursday in overcoming a posse which the sheriff deputized to protect the force of men put to work at the reduced price. The officers refused to open fire, and were put to rout, along with the men at work.

A cave in of the Cuyler colliery at Raven Run, Pa, Monday entombed ten miners in a section 700 feet below the surface. The mine is completely wrecked, and the men who are all married and have families cannot be rescued alive.

A commission will proceed to England to examine witnesses regarding the sanity of Mrs. Dudley who shot O'Donovan Rossa.

A mad dog Thursday killed and partly devoured the infant child of Mrs. Carrol, in Washington county, Maryland. The father of the child died a week before of hydrophobia, having been bitten by the same animal.

General Benjamin F. Butler has been sued for $15,000 at Boston by the National Soldiers' Home, the sum remaining unaccounted for since he was treasurer of the home.

A circular from Miss Frances E. Willard was read to the Alton Presbytery, in session at Hillsboro, Ill., Wednesday, asking that Woman suffrage be made a feature of church work. The document provoked an animated debate.

The Washington monument was struck by lightning three times Wednesday afternoon but not the slightest damage was done to the structure.

General Grant, after on the whole a quiet week, passed a restless night Saturday, sleep being induced by the administration of morphine. His condition is reported to be more serious than the doctor's bulletins indicate, as for hours he sits never speaking to persons about him. His only talk is to himself, and then he seems to be semi delirious, making now and then references to his participation in battles. He had a bad day Sunday, and seems to be gradually wasting away.

The Cincinnati police commissioners gave an order Friday for the closing of gambling houses, and the driving out of bunko-sicerers, confidence men and all known criminals. Street-walkers are to be taken up for vagrancy, and the well-dressed loafers that infest Vine street are to be arrested for loitering.

FOREIGN.

The cholera has made its appearance again in Spain. There were forty new cases of supposed cholera at Jativa and twenty deaths in one week. April 6th there were thirty new cases and seven deaths.

The Russians, while making a pretext of changing their outposts on the Afghan frontier, attacked Penjdeh, March 30, and drove the Afghans out of their position, after a stubborn resistance. The weather was wet and rendered the muzzle-loading guns of the Afghans useless. Two companies held one position against the Russians until their leaders were killed. The Afghans retreated to Marauchak in perfect order, with a loss of 200. The Russians made no pursuit. Their losses are said to be great. The news of the engagement caused the greatest excitement in London, The people are incensed at what they regard as duplicity on the part of Russia, saying that she pretended to be anxious for peace while her object was to gain more time. The British government, before the news of the battle arrived, was continuing preparations for arming fast ocean steamers. Work on the Anchor Line steamer America and the Cunard steamer Oregon has begun. These steamers will receive an armament of ten guns each, and each will have capacity for the transportation of 1,500 men. Every movement of Russian vessels in all parts of the world is being closely watched and if war should be declared a vast tonnage of cargoes afloat would be liable to capture.

The Russian government is making active preparations to put a great naval and military station at Cronstadt in a state of perfect defense. The harbor has already been protected by the sinking of hundreds of torpedoes in the ship channel.

Latest foreign dispatches show that England and Russia are negotiating for a settlement of the Afghan troubles, yet they also indicate that there is still probability of war. Earl Granville, the British foreign minister, advised Baron de Staal, the Russian embassador to London, that the British government had decided that whatever the nature of the Russian explanation of Gen. Komaroff's action might be, Great Britain would not allow any further discussion concerning the Afghan boundary to go on until the Russian troops had been withdrawn to their original positions. Both sides continue active preparations for open hostilities. All the Russian torpedo boats have been ordered to the Black and Baltic seas to guard against attacks on these waters. The feeling in Russia was manifested at an ovation to the Czar while attending the theatre. A significant remark was made by the Russian minister of war to the effect that the Russian troops might advance but they would never retire.

Prime Minister Brisson has enunciated the programme of the new French cabinet, which contemplates the revision of the constitution of 1881, the abolition of the senate, liberty of the press, secularization of religious property, separation of church and state, reform of the judiciary, compulsory education, taxation for revenue, and a reduction of tax upon articles of food and drink.

In the Chamber of Deputies the new Premier said that France would insist upon China recognizing a French protectorate over Tonquin and Annam, according to the provisions of the treaty of Tien-Tsin, peaceably if possible, otherwise the war would be renewed with increased vigor. In conclusion he demanded a vote of credit for 150,000,000 francs to enable the government to carry out its policy in relation to China.

Secretary Whitney received a dispatch at Washington from Commander Mahan, of the Wachusett, dated Libertad, San Salvador, which says: "President Barrios of Guatemala is certainly dead. The Nicaraguan troops entered Honduras, routing the enemy, who retreated in disorder toward Guatemala. A telegram from Zaldivar to the authorities here says that Mexico will make a formal alliance with Zaldivar. I expect this will end the trouble without another shot. Probably both armies will march on Guatemala City."

The latest advices from the Manitoba rebellion are to the effect that nine whites, including two priests, were killed by Riel or his followers at Frog Lake, and a woman was taken prisoner by the Indians. Fort Pitt, forty miles from Frog Lake, is reported to have fallen into the hands of the insurgents.

General Wolseley has arrived at Cairo from Dongola in order to place himself, it is said, in direct communication with the British Government in the event of war with Russia. At the same time it is reported that the evacuation of the Soudan has been determined upon, Turkish troops to take the place of British.

BUSINESS.

LETTERS

Containing cash for Cynosure received during the week, ending Friday, April 10:

Mrs M A Blanchard, Josiah Shaw, Geo Avery, J M Scott, H Ware, Jas Anten. Geo T Markey, J P Taylor, Nathan Callender, J W Pierson, Wm H Showalter, Benj J Borton, F K Ford, John Dawson, Dan'l Riggs, Jas Garn, R W Lyman, Mrs T A Prest, Edward Dolph, G W Schooley, Erastus Day, Maria Neubaner, H A Day, L B Lathrop, Charles Granger, G Bolander, Levi Kelly, C Steck, W E Carrington, Enander & Bohman, Jas Garside, J W. Moore, F A Armstrong, Jas H Millspaugh, Samuel E Clark, G H Hemingway, J P Winslow, W A Shaw.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

Is a charming illustrated magazine, published by J. F. Avery, Halifax, Nova Scotia, containing forty pages monthly of anecdote and argument for the Christian home. Every number is profusely and finely illustrated. We shall be happy to introduce this magazine to hundreds of American homes and have secured a special arrangement from the proprietor. Buds and Blossoms is 75 cents per year. With the Cynosure the two will be $2 25, or any subscriber who has already paid for this paper can get the magazine at the same rate.

BEST Paying thing for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. Agents wanted. Terms extra liberal. Address C. P. CORY & CO., 62 S. Canal Street, Chicago.

AGENTS WANTED! Rider's Improved Pillow-Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars and see what it is any way. E. W. RIDER & CO. Racine, Wis.
Mention the Christian Cynosure.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

☞ Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		@86¾
No. 3	82	@84
Winter No 2		@87
Corn—No. 2		45
Oats—No. 2	34	37
Rye—No. 2		65
Bran per ton		13 50
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@12 00
Mess pork per bbl		12 30
Butter, [illegible]dium to best	12	@25
Cheese [illegible]	05	@10½
Beans [illegible]	55	@1 45
Eggs [illegible]		13
Potat[illegible]bus	55	65
Seed [illegible]othy	1 40	@1 50
[illegible]	1 30	1 45
Bro[illegible]n	01	@ 05
Hi[illegible]een to dry flint	06½	@14½
L[illegible]-Common	11 00	@18 00
[illegible]	12	@29
[illegible]-Choice to extra	5 80	@6 00
[illegible]-Common to good	4 40	@5 40
Hogs	3 75	@4 80
Sheep	2 00	@5 25

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 40	@6 15
Wheat—Winter	82	@1 04
Spring		95
Corn	50	@52
Oats	39	@43
Mess Pork		13 00
Eggs		15
Butter	8	28
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	3 00	@5 55
Hogs	4 20	@4 55
Sheep	1 50	@3 25

Cook E A 13 Wabash Ave 750

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND-PAINTED SILKS for Patchwork, Tidies, Screens, etc. Send $1 for package, or 50 cts. for beautiful samples. WESTERN ART CO., Salem, O.

A PRESENT. Our readers sending 12c in postage, to pay for mailing and wrapping, and names of two book agents, will receive FREE steel finished engravings of all OUR PRESIDENTS including Cleveland, worth $4. Address ELDER PUB. CO., Chicago.

How to Build a House.

A book containing plans for twenty-five houses of all sizes from two rooms up; also several barns; sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents, by GEO. W. OGILVIE, 234 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to REV. CHINIQUY, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

Lesson Quarterly

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

THE NOVELTY
RUG MACHINE.

[PAT. DEC. 27, 1881.]

Makes Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc., with ease and rapidity. Price only one dollar. Single machine, with full directions, sent by mail on receipt of price. Agents wanted. Apply for circulars to E. ROSS & CO., Patentees and Sole Manufacturers, Toledo, Ohio, Lock Box 184; also Manufacturers of Rug Patterns.

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $40 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill. Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts., sent post-paid. Address,
BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.
DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S
ORIENTAL CREAM, or MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER.

PURIFIES as well as BEAUTIFIES the Skin. No other Cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth-Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of thirty years and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr L. A. Sayre, said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin. MME. M. B. T. GOURAUD, Sole Proprietor, 48 Bond St., New York. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the United States, Canadas, and Europe. ☞ Beware of base imitations. $1,000 Reward for arrest and proof of any one selling the same.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 31. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 23, 1885. WHOLE No. 782.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Northern Lights..... 8
Western Colleges..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Another Letter from Sweden..... 1
The Fine Gold Dim..... 1
Secret Temperance Orders 2
Adopting Hannibal's Tactics..... 2
SELECTED:
Big Titles..... 2
Backbone (Poetry)..... 3
A Serious Word with Christians. 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chaps. XVI. and XVII. 4
REFORM NEWS:
Light in the East; From the Illinois Lecturer; From the Wisconsin Agent..... 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
Religion in Connecticut; Evangelizing Rome; From Texas; Prohibition in Iowa; The Lodge Shuts the Doors; Reform Lessons.....5,6
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
Request..... 8
College Matters..... 8
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE CHURCHES..... 12
OBITUARY..... 12
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CLUBBING LIST 7
FARM NOTES..... 14
IN BRIEF..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

Neal Dow, whose friendship for Mr. Blaine confused for a time the keenness of his political vision, has lately written taking strong grounds for prohibition throughout,—national, State, local. Many earnest and honest men who were influenced by him last fall will in time come to see eye to eye on this question. Just now in West Virginia great interest has just been aroused by an editorial in a leading Republican paper, the Mountain Echo, which declares that a crisis is upon that State. It must endorse prohibition or die. It calls for a State convention to put the question on issue. If a few more States shall come to this Rubicon and cross it, the next Republican National Convention will find itself manned by Prohibitionists in spite of itself.

The Illinois legislature needs a Cromwell to send it home disgraced. It has been in session nearly a hundred days to attend to a few items of business that are important to the rest of the people in the State, as the election of a Senator, the passage of appropriation bills, etc. It has done practically nothing, but has spent the the time in petty party quarrels at a cost of nearly $2,000 a day to the taxpayers. A Freemason, who is also a clown and a demagogue, was elected speaker, and the other day after prolonged fighting, sixty-nine needless pages, janitors and others employed by him, were dischaged. The two parties are so equally balaneed that they fear to cast a full vote; and both hold as fast to their candidates, Logan and Morrison, as if they were sworn to them by the terrors of the lodge,—as doubtless a majority of them are. But the matter is becoming an outrage and should be stopped.

Last week Arnold, a prominent Mormon, plead guilty in the United States court, to polygamy, which he promised to abandon, though intending to support the second family as well as the first. Judge Zane imposed a fine of only $300. The Mormons denounce the confession of Arnold and their church organ said next day: "Latter-day Saints eannot afford to renounee any principle of their religion or any of its obligations, no matter what may be the degree of pressure brought to bear to compel them to be recreant to their duty. If they repudiate that which God established, the Lord will throw them out, and all lovers of consistency, and those who admire men who maintain the courage of their convictions, will despise them." After this confession of their faith the sheet prints a long attack on Christianity, declaring it to be a failure, though it seems just now to have a pretty strong grip on the throat of Mormonism, and if the exeeutors of law do not fail, will throttle the infamous invention of priestcraft and lust.

The strike of 1,600 men at the McCormick Harvester works in this city, begun by a few labor lodge moulders, after threatening serious trouble suddenly ended last week by the proprietors yielding to the demand of the men. The score or two men who had taken the strikers' plaees were threatened; a force from Pinkerton's detective agency was engaged to proteet them. Between the latter and the strikers a fight occurred in which one man was dangerously wounded by a volley from Pinkerton's men. The failure of police protection and unfavorable criticisms from the press led Mrs. McCormick and her son to order the return of the men. Suceeeding to the control of the large business interests of C. H. McCormick, it is hoped that this severe experience will not embitter but render them more liberal toward their army of workmen, many of whom are attaehed to the firm by strong ties of a long service of fifteen or twenty years. It is reported that a delegation from an aid society lately protested to Mrs. McCormick that from insufficient wages some of the families of the workmen were actually suffering. This condition should not remain, as this lady and her son have just added $100,000 to the fund contributed by her husband to the Presbyterian Theological Seminary making it a full half million, and she is liberal in gifts to other worthy objects.

During all the past week the eondition of General Grant has been improving almost daily. The reports from his room are of increasing strength, better rest, and relief from suffering; but no hopes are held out of more than a temporary gain which the physicians say must be followed by a relapse which may prove fatal. In connection with this marked and unexpected improvement it is a eurious, almost amusing, fact that at the urgent solicitation of friends and members of the family the doctors allowed their patient to begin taking red clover extract put up by D. Needham's Sons of this city. They poohed at the "old woman's remedy," but finally concluded it could do no harm, and at least they confessed their art could not save. This eombination of circumstances is almost amusing and if the clover should beat the doctors no one will weep for them. This is not an advertisement, though the Cynosure has much faith in the clover and advertises it.

While General Grant is, for the present at least, getting the better of disease, Mr. Frelinghuysen, the late head of Mr. Arthur's cabinet, has been for weeks prostrated and for a fortnight his recovery has not been regarded possible. But unlike the great chieftain, who is not known to have a personal trust in the Saviour of men, the other has long been a humble confessor of the Christian faith and member of the reformed chureh, whose organ, the Intelligencer, speaks thus of him "The very serious illness of the Hon. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, ex-Secretary of State, is regarded with great anxiety and sorrow throughout the church. This is not only on account of his eminent ability as a jurist and statesman, but ehiefly because of his high and steadfast Christian character. Mr. Frelinghuysen has been many years in public life and in no eircumstances has forgotten that he was a follower of Christ; in fact he could not forget it, for he is a sincere Christian and his life has been a proof of the power of Divine grace. If his sickness shall prove incurable our own chureh will be sorely bereaved, for he has been a useful and valuable member. Mr. Frelinghuysen is no longer Secretary of State for the United States, but he is President of the American Bible Society."

ANOTHER LETTER FROM SWEDEN.

KRISTINEHAMN, Mar. 31, 1885.

President Blanchard:

Dear Brother in the Lord:—Owing to the urgency of routine business I have been unable to send a reply to your kind favor. I would like to say, that the Christian people of Sweden have nothing to do with Freemasonry nor any other similar societies. We consider Christianity as the religion of supernatural revelation and not of darkness. And as our Lord Jesus Christ always moved in the light of truth and performed all the duties appertaining to his holy mission in the public presenee of both friends and foes, so ought we as his true followers to do likewise. We are the children of light—the Lord be praised!

I am well aware that a large number of unbelievers are Freemasons, but I have very little knowledge of Freemasonry in our eountry and do not feel inclined to investigate this subject. My researches are in a quite different direction. This is my honest confession. May the Lord imbue us more and more with that spirit which loves true light of revelation and may he graciously enable us to do his will on earth as his obedient servants. The Lord be our recompense! Yours in the Lord, E. J. EKMAN.

THE FINE GOLD DIM.

BY PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

The following letter has come into my possession and, with a reservation of names of persons and places, is given exactly as written. This is a sad exhibit of the internal state of what is called "a powerful church," and the most lamentable fact eonnected with the case is that it is typical, not solitary. There will be no change for the better until there is a radical change in the ministry, and there will be no change in the ministry until there is a ehange in our Theological Seminaries. There should be less teaching respecting the heresies of the first eenturies, and more eoncerning the infidelities of the nineteenth.

If no less attention should be bestowed on Hebrew and Greek exegesis, more attention should be paid to a faithful applieation of the American Bible to Ameriean life. During many years, so far as my knowledge extends, only one professor of theology in this vicinity has made a vigorous fight against a popular sin. I refer to Dr. Herrick Johnson and his plain words about the theatre. I asked a Christian worker why the ministers, professors and business men did not endorse that effort to save the young people of the eity from the play-house. He replied, "Well, they did have a meeting and talk it over, but Dr. —— (naming a Masonie minister) thought Dr. Johnson a little too severe and so they did nothing." Whatever may have been the reason that protest stood and still stands, almost alone; while Sunday theatres and week-day theatres continue their work with no public opposition from the seminaries or churches of the city. Of course intemperance, secretism, and other popular amusements and general worldliness fare as well. And equally of course, no matter how learned or devoted such religious instructors may be, they will never raise a generation of preachers to oppose evils and establish truths now questioned until there is a complete change in their system, until the present practical obstacles to Christianity have at least a small portion of the three or four years spent in seminary study. But to the letter:

April 4, 1885.

DEAR ——:—I am in a great quandary as to what I should do. The —— field has been practically laid before me for a decision and —— expects me to go on with its work.

To be candid my sympathies are all with ——. When I returned from —— it seemed as if I had reached home. —— with all its undesirable features is inviting as compared with ——. To be specific, —— is a lumping together of a great many nominal Christians and a very few believers. This hetrogenous mass is utterly spoiled. It still worships a great orator who abode with it for a time and then abandoned it suddenly, leaving it burdened with a large debt.

* * * * * * *

Again the whole society is bound to secret organizations. The two most spiritual men in the church are the two most active lodge frequenters. A beautiful example is set them by the clergy of the city who are almost to a unit secretists.

The desire of the people so far as I can ascertain is for congregations rather than conversions.

Now shall I go into this "pit of heathenism?" If so, who will "hold the rope?" Prof. —— is very anxious for me to go, but he knows and I do, that to do so is to shut my mouth on Freemasonry and worldliness in general until—I was about to say the crack of doom. To open one's mouth on these subjects is to shut the church doors with yourself on the outside.

What do you think? Ought I to undertake the work? There are some advatages: librarles, people, salary, * * *

Yours in love. ——

Now, it is not pleasant to read these words, but it requires only a slight acquaintance with churches of the present day to enable one to believe all and more. There are in most of our churches, doubtless there are in this, some devout souls crying out: "How long, O Lord;" but they are hidden by fifties in caves while ungodly men furnish the money and run the church.

Protestantism is growing as formal as Rome ever was, and as far as formalism is concerned Catholic ceremonies are superior to those of dissenting churches. The fact is there is need of sufficient courage in the ministry to discern between those who fear God and those who do not fear him. In one of the prominent churches of this State a lady was talking with a clergymau about getting a new minister. She was saying something kind about the one who had left when suddenly she remarked: "But I tell you the next time we get a minister we must have a pious man." Pious men will make pious churches, heterogenous churches are built by those who daub with untempered mortar. We are now in a critical place, harvest fields white and laborers few. May God send out workers into his harvest.

Wheaton College.

SECRET TEMPERANCE ORDERS.

TEMPLE OF HONOR AND TEMPERANCE.

BY R. H. HINMAN.

There lies before me: First, "The Blue Book for the use of the subordinate lodges of the order of the Temple of Honor and Temperance," "published by the National Division of North America;" second, the "degrees of Love, Equality and Fidelity of the Social Temple of the Templars of Honor and Temperance, published by the Supreme Couucil;" and third, the "degrees of Tried, Approved and Select Templars, prepared and published by a committee appointed by the Supreme Council."

After examination I desire to remark:

1. That they are each and all imitations of Freemasonry. The language of the rituals, including both ceremonies, covenants and lectures was manifestly borrowed from that order by those who were familiar with its details, especially the first seven degrees of the York Rite.

2. That this approximation of Freemasonry is the more complete as we advance in what are called the higher degrees. In the order of the Sons of Temperance, the most objectionable things in Masonry, such as its pompous titles, its profane oaths, and the foolish trickery are avoided. These begin to be made apparent in the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, and are markedly exhibited in the degrees, the Tried, Approved and Select Templar.

3. They are each (but in varying degrees) a travesty on the Christiau religion. While they by no means require the candidate to be a Christian, yet some of their covenants are such that none but a Christian could keep them, and others are quite repugnant to the spirit of Christianity. Meeting together, believers with unbelievers in one worship, it eliminates from the last three degrees everything distinctively Christian.

In nothing, save in the burial service, is there any reference to a Divine Redeemer. This is true, not only in the form of prayer, but in the hymns and Scripture quotations.

4. Like Freemasonry, they treat (especially the six degrees of the Supreme council) that conformity to the covenants of the order will fit the candidate for heaven. This is taught in many parts of the ritual. I will note two instances which will illustrate. In the degree of Fidelity the sister Degree Templar says, "This is our Inner Temple. Our Inner Temple rises in grand and magnificent proportions on its solid basis. Soon its capstone will be laid in its place with shoutings of 'Grace, grace unto it.' Let us therefore fight the good fight; be faithful unto death, (the members here respond) and we shall receive a crown of life."

In the Approved Templar degree the candidate is told: "Be faithful, my brother, and thou shalt have thy reward. Hear what is written. Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I will also keep thee from the hour of temptation that shall come upon all the earth. Hold fast that thou hast, that no man take thy crown. Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God."

The following covenant of the degree of fidelity will be seen to have no direct reference to temperance, but to be copied largely from the oath of a Master Mason:

In the presence of Almighty God and these Templars of Fidelity, pledging your faith in this holy book, and your determination to be governed by its principles, you do hereby and hereon renew all your former obligations taken in this Order, and solemnly promise to remain faithful unto them all the days of your life; and in addition thereto, you do solemnly covenant, that you will not, in any way, make known any of the secrets of this Degree to any one who has not received all the preceding Degrees, and not then unless it is done in accordance with the Rules and Regulations of the Order. Do you thus promise?

Furthermore, that you will not assist nor be present at the conferring of this Degree upon any one who denies the existence of God, the immortality of the soul, or who is mentally or morally incapacitated for rightly understanding the nature and extent of this obligation? Do you thus promise?

Furthermore, that you will not speak of the business, or other private matters of this Degree, nor reveal the name of a rejected applicant, to any except Templars of Fidelity. Do you thus promise?

Furthermore, that you will not wrong a member of this Degree in fortune, or in reputation, or in character, and that you will not permit it to be done if in your power to prevent it. Do you thus promise?

Furthermore, that you will not give the Distress Sign or Word of this Degree, unless you are in actual distress, or in the open Degree, or some private place for the instruction of a member. Do you thus promise?

Furthermore, that you will obey all the rules and regulations of this Social Temple and the Grand Temple of this State, or of any other Social or Grand Temple under whose jurisdiction you may be, and of the Supreme Council, so far as they may come to your knowledge. Do you thus promise?

Furthermore, that you will employ and patronize, all other things being equal, Templars of Fidelity in preference to all other persons; that you will, whenever called upon, assist in conferring this Degree, provided it is done legally; that you will keep inviolate the secrets of a member of this Degree when communicated to you as such; that you will aid and assist all worthy distressed members of this Degree and their families, to the extent of their need or your own ability, and that you will never turn a needy sister or brother empty away. Do you thus promise?

Furthermore, that should you see a member in peril of any nature, from any cause, you will warn him, if possible, by Sign or Word, and should you ever be warned by a brother or sister, you will pause before acting further. Do you thus promise?

Furthermore, that you will always acknowledge the Sign or Word of Distress, and assist the one giving it at the risk of your life, provided there is the least possibility more of saving that one's life than losing your own. Do you thus promise?

* * * * * *

You will each repeat after me: And I do hereby acknowledge myself bound in an especial covenant with all Templars of Fidelity, to fulfill all I have hereby promised, and this covenant, with the help of Almighty God, I will keep and maintain, in all its parts, inviolable, truly and faithfully, unto the end of life.

* * * * * *

The Brother Degree Chaplain says:

That vow demands Fidelity to our Order and its principles till death.

The Sister Degree Chaplain says:

Your vow is registered in heaven; God and angels have heard it. It must not be broken.

It will be noticed:

1. That this is to all inteuts and purposes an oath. It is a solemn appeal to God and a prayer for help to carry out the things promised, hence it is an extrajudicial oath, forbiddeu alike by the laws of God (Matt. 5: 34–37; Jas. 5: 12), and of man; for no civil law has authorized either their administration or reception.

2. The promise to obey all the rules of the Social and Grand Temple and of the Supreme Council, as far as they come to the candidate's knowledge is a promise made in ignorance of what is involved, and hence forbidden (Luke 5: 4, 5) and void.

3. The promise, "to keep inviolate the secrets of a member of this degree when communicated to you as such," is copied from the Master Mason's degree and liable to the same objections. It is capable of a construction requiring the concealment of crime. That it is often so construed and becomes an insurmountable barrier to the investigation of alleged offenses against both church and state is abundantly evident. There is great reason to believe that this aud similar covenants in other orders are the greatest obstacle to the due execution of the laws, and the occasion of those terrible scenes of mob violence which are the reaction of outraged justice against the ineffieieney of our courts.

4. So, too, the clause about the sign of distress copied from the Masonic degrees and requiring the member to aid another at the risk of his life, is one of very questionable morality inasmuch as the inferenee is that he is not bound to aid a fellow Christian who is not a member and because it is liable to be used to aid men in evil, as well as in what is right.

5. The special promise "not to wrong a brother of this degree in fortune, reputation, or character and that you will not permit it to be done if you have power to prevent it," is an intimation that the member might wrong any other person in "fortune, reputation, or character" without violating his covenant to the order. Why not ask him to promise to be just to all men?

Religion in the Constitution of the Sandwich Islands.—The first article in the constitution of the Sandwich Islands, promulgated by the King and chiefs in 1840, declared that "no law shall be enacted which is at variance with the law of the Lord Jehovah or with the general Spirit of his Word;" and that "all the laws of the Islands shall be in consistency with God's law." The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, in announcing this fact to the world in their annual report, exclaimed: "What was this but a public, solemn, national profession of the Christian religion, on the high Puritan basis?" It is noteworthy that the Board were obliged to go back to the times of the Puritans for a parallel to this spontaneous action of a newly Christianized people in the South Seas. No such parallel is found in the Constitution of the United States, or of any of our States. No simpler or more effective illustration could be given of the meaning and value of proposed religious amendment to the Constitution of the United States, than this plain, direct, authoritative declaration in the Constitution of the Hawaian Islands.—Statesman.

ADOPTING HANNIBAL'S TACTICS.

Hannibal beiug confined in a valley by the Romans, who occupied the passes, sought an expedient to extricate himself, and attaching burning fagots to the horns of cattle sent them at night into the mountains. The enemy believing that their adversaries were retiring by the mountain sides left the passes to oppose them, and the wily general escaped unscathed. Secrecy seems to adopt the same tactics when hard pressed and often has it been protected by misleading issues and the folly of its opponents. It may raise the loudest cries for a reform to blind the public and then defeat it by covert acts.

A half century since, before Anti-masonry could be effectually organized in many of the States and prohibitory laws against secret associations enacted, slavery became an issue and was tolerated to distract attention from the former evil, which, growing and culminating with the latter's misfortunes, has attained unprecedented proportions. The relief was effectual, but dangerous, for when their tactics were at length employed through Know-nothingism to protect slavery and the interests of Masonic slave-holders the remedy had been too long delayed and failed. A Masonic rebellion at the South was the consequence.

Now as soon as the reform is again becoming a subject of discussion, prohibitory temperance is used by Freemasonry to divert attention and is then defeated by secret antagonism. Mormonism, which was formally commended in Congress for affording settlers to the barren regions of Utah, is a diverting device by another branch, which it has long protected by dilatory legislation and half measures.

Through such means supporters of the American party are turning to other reforms aud dissolution is imminent as interest is lost by suspension. Those are inefficient supporters who are the sport of publice opinion and vote their principles but once or twice in a life time.

The only way to effect the Anti-masonic reform is by steady persistent effort. No vote should be east for the nominee of another party unless they adopt the anti-seerecy plank, or the candidate publishes au unequivocal sanction of American principles. The two reforms may go hand in hand, but for success they must be relieved from eontrol, direct or indirect, of a mutual enemy. *

BIG TITLES.

It is astonishing to notice what bombastic titles the members of certain societies and associations arrogate to themselves. A while ago, a gentleman called at my office and left some circulars relating to a recently formed alliance or mutual benefit asso-eiation, which was designed for the benefit of Christian people. It was signed and endorsed by several D. D.'s, M. D.'s, reverends, etc., and was represented as worthy of the hearty patronage of ministers of the Gospel, etc. The gentleman shorty after came in and solieited an endorsement. We said:

"How many supreme beings are there in the universe?"

"Why, one of eourse," said he.

We replied: "In this list of officers we uotice nine supreme beings: a 'supreme judge,' a 'first associate supreme judge,' a 'second associate supreme judge,' a 'supreme advocate,' a 'supreme scribe,' a 'supreme treasurer,' a 'supreme chaplain,' a 'supreme surgeon in chief,' and a 'supreme guide.' So there are nine supreme beings in a single association, and to these might be added three more 'supreme trustees,' making a full dozen supreme beings beside the One to whom you refer."

The man burst into a roar of laughter and left without the endorsement he sought; and the next eireular we saw bearing on the subject had not a "supreme title" on it. The titles may remain, but those tall feathers were very judiciously brought in out of the rain. What an amount of lurking vanity there must be in the human heart, when men of intelligence, education, ability and piety, will condescend to pose before the world with such grandiloquent titles and pompous professions.

"I know not," says Job, "to give flattering titles; in so doing my Master would soon take me away."

Cannot Christians see the foolishness of such vain and empty words, and come down to that meekness and humility which befits the followers of One who was "despised and rejected of men," and who forbade his disciples to be called rabbi, or to seek honor one from another?—The Safeguard.

BACKBONE.

When you see a fellow mortal
Without fixed and fearless views,
Hanging on the skirts of others,
Walking in their cast-off shoes,
Bowing low to wealth or favor,
With abject, uncovered head,
Ready to retract or waver,
Willing to be driven or led;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing.
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow—
Just the things which his must lack.

When you see a theologian
Hugging close some ugly creed,
Fearing to reject or question
Dogmas which his priest may read,
Holding back all noble feeling,
Choking down each manly view,
Caring more for forms and symbols,
Than to know the good and true;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow—
Just the things which others lack.

When you see a politician
Crawling through contracted holes,
Begging for some fat position,
In the ring or at the polls,
With no sterling manhood in him,
Nothing stable, broad nor sound,
Destitute of pluck or ballast,
Double sided all around;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow—
Just the things which he must lack.

A stronger word
Was never heard
In sense and tone,
Than this—backbone.

A modest song and plainly told—
The text is worth a mine of gold;
For many men most sadly lack
A noble stiffness in the back.

—Bungay.

Prison Contracts.—The State of New York has its full share, doubtless, of people who are wise in their thinking and not wise in their doing. It would be well if they were awake to the necessity of making themselves known and felt in legislation. To meet the demands of various trade organizations the contract system was abolished and the prisons which had been self-supporting institutions will need an appropriation of over half a million dollars. This would be of slight importance if thereby the good of those incarcerated was promoted, but the lack of work makes punishment to many of them really more severe, while in all cases it breaks up habits of industry and promotes disorder. It is high time that demagogues within and without our houses of legislature discovered the power of intelligent patriotic and philanthropic citizens. It is too often inactive, but courageously and determinately manifest at the ballot box it would make the unworthy quail.—Baptist Weekly.

—In Toronto a Freemason lodge has expelled one of its members who was accused of being a secularist, agnostic and free thinker. Masonry claims to be a religious institution with a profession, which if carried into practical effect is sufficient to save all men. Hence one who does not believe in any religion or recognize any God is not reckoned to have the proper qualifications for membership in the order. But its members might deny the Christian religion and reject Christ and there would be no ground for such proceeding as has taken place in the lodge in Toronto. Freemasonary is a religion without Christ and therefore anti-Christian, and it is amazing that Christians and Christian ministers can subscribe it under all the terrible sanctions by which they bind themselves in becoming members of the order.—Christian Instructor.

A SERIOUS WORD WITH CHRISTIANS.

We have already shown wherein the principles of the lodge come in conflict with that Word, from which it is not difficult to see that if we would be faithful to our profession as Christians we must renounce and condemn the lodge as an enemy of Christ and his church.

It is our duty as Christians to inform ourselves upon the subject, that we may know the character of the enemy against whom we are to contend. Many remain in willful ignorance upon the subject. They don't want to hear anything, and they won't read anything that might give them the needed information. Such indifference respecting institutions so powerful as to control, with almost an iron sway, family, state and church, is certainly inexcusable. A wife knows her husband belongs to a secret order, sisters know that their brothers belong to it, sons and daughters know that their father has joined a combination of men about which they are to know nothing, and they are satisfied to remain in ignorance! Strange conduct!

It is the duty of every Christian to inform himself upon this subject as much as time, opportunity and ability will permit. The secrets need not be known. By their fruits ye shall know them. Study secret societies as you study any other institution. Watch their movements, their pretended charities, and other virtues of which they boast. See whether they are actually advancing the cause of humanity and, as some pretend, the cause of Christianity. Because they do not avoid the appearance of evil we have a right to look with suspicion upon them and upon their every movement. If you are not fully convinced respecting the character of these orders, let me urge you to look into the matter in all seriousness, until you may no longer be necessitated to plead ignorance. Remember that those enemies which pretend to be our friends are the most dangerous. A secret foe is a dangerous foe. An enemy known to be such can be met or avoided as we see proper. But a secret enemy comes upon us unawares and does us injury before we are aware of it. The serpent and the tiger are most dreaded because they secretly watch an opportunity to spring upon their victim. Now, we have shown that secret societies are at war, whether consciously or not, with the family, church and state. This warfare is carried on secretly, for which reason they are to be dreaded all the more. We repeat it, watch their movements. They are in the church to control the church, they are in a political party to control the elections, they hold offices to control the nation, and all in the interest of the order to which they belong, and that secretly. Dear brethren, learn to know your enemy before he has you entwined in his coils from which it is not easy to escape.

But after we have learned to know secret institutions as foes to the common interests of humanity, and especially to the eternal interests of the soul, we have other duties. As we grow wiser our duties multiply and our responsibility increases; for who has much, of him shall much be required.

You belong to a household. In your family there is one, perhaps there are several, who have joined the right hand of fellowship with a number of others behind closed doors. Perhaps it is a husband and a father; can you silently suffer the head of the family to be under such a wicked influence? The husband is gradually weaned away from his wife, his affection grows colder, the children are no longer cared for as before, and the secret of it all may be, and frequently is, that the husband and father belongs to another family, in which he takes a deeper interest than in the wife and children which are his by divine right.

Perhaps it is a brother who has sold his birthright for a mess of pottage. His time and his money is given largely to the lodge. A relation is brought about between him and other members of the human family more intimate than that of his home; for he can intrust secrets to his brethren in the lodge which he would not dare to intrust to a sister or brother in the family. Wives, mothers, sisters, you have a duty to perform in your own interest. Influence, whoever of your own household is in the lodge to withdraw, and pray to your heavenly Father to stay the hand of Satan by which he intends to disturb and if possible to destroy your home. In your opposition to secretism speak the truth in love; be kind but earnest.

You are a citizen of these United States, and you profess to be a Christian citizen. There is an enemy secretly undermining the government which God has placed over you; that enemy is placing under the very center of this institution explosives of a most terrible character and, unless prevented by the divine hand, will before many years apply the match, and you will cease to dwell in the land of the free. If you have any interest in your civil or religious liberty, use your influence against every institution that fears to come to the light.

You belong to a Christian congregation. You know that the influence of the Gospel on those in the church and those outside is to a large extent destroyed by the influence of the lodge. The Gospel is preached to the unbeliever and his attention called to the necessity of confessing Christ before men; he is told that outside of the Christian church, where there is no Gospel and no sacrament, no one can be saved. The lodge counteracts the influence this would have had by calling his attention to his virtues as a lodge member, and telling him that faithfulness to the lodge below will secure for him an entrance into the lodge above. If that person continues in the course prescribed by the lodge he will perish eternally; and what will become of you if you have by your silence on your connection with the lodge declared these things all right?

A member of the lodge belongs to the same congregation to which you belong; you see that he is gradually losing interest in the church, he is frequently absent from the services, seldom, if ever, attends the Lord's supper, neglects to have his children baptized and instructed; all this is before your eyes, and you can keep silent! A few words of advice or an earnest warning before the person becomes a thorough lodge-man might save him from eternal ruin; and you refuse to lift your voice and, rather than hurt his feelings, let him go on down, down, down into death. Do you call that charity? If so, then did our Saviour know nothing of charity. Nay, dear brethren, if we love the souls of those now entangled in the snare of secretism, we will do our utmost to rescue them.

You may hold a still more responsible position. You may be an officer in the congregation. You have opportunities of knowing who belongs to a secret order, when the pastor does not know. You may know also of persons being under the influence of the lodge, though not yet members. What are you doing to save them from so dangerous an influence? Are you doing what is in your power to counteract the wrong influence? What is your relation to your pastor upon this subject? Are you working in harmony with him in his opposition to every kingdom of darkness, or are you, perhaps, standing in his way and encouraging secretists in their downward course?

Do you, perhaps, think that the welfare of the congregation requires leniency upon this subject? If such are your thoughts allow me to tell you that those congregations which have boldly and loudly protested against secret orders have prospered best. Just as sure as secretism gets into the church there is trouble. It can't be otherwise. Christ cannot tolerate a rival for the throne in his church; and whenever such rival appears, as is the case when secret societies are represented in the church, Christ proclaims war. Christ is King supreme; he alone shall rule in his church. If then you desire peace to reign and the congregation to prosper, get rid of whatever opposes Christ, and keep every element contrary to the Gospel outside of the congregation.

The pastor, who is a watchman on Zion's walls, is pre-eminently to oppose these secret institutions and to counteract their dangerous influence. This he must do by means of the Gospel. In fact, every true Gospel sermon is against the darkness of secretism; for where light appears darkness vanishes.

But in his dealings with individuals, in recommending them for membership in the congregation, and in admitting them to confession and the Holy Supper, he must do as he expects to render account on the day of judgment. A person who holds fellowship with infidels, who is unequally yoked together with unbelievers, who worship with Jews and Buddhists, cannot be admitted into the church, much less to the Holy Supper, without virtually renouncing such ungodly fellowship and such idolatrous worship.—Rev. D. Simon, in Lutheran Standard.

Hon. David A. Wells, the well known political economist, is making a tour of Mexico. He has become convinced that his former position, holding that a reciprocal interchange of products would operate injuriously to American interests was based upon erroneous data. He declares himself strongly in favor of the reciprocal treaty; and that neither the sugar planters nor the tobacco growers of the United States need to be apprehensive regarding a ruinous competition from Mexico, as tobacco is scarce and sugar is higher priced than in the United States, and they will remain so for a long time to come.

—Roman Catholic Archbishop Gibbons affirms that his church is in favor of religious liberty to all and a voluntary support of religion instead of governmental support as practiced in Europe.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XVI.—Concluded.

And so Nelson turned his back on Jacksonville, and went forth not knowing whither he went.

He had laid Schumacher's information promptly before the mayor, but the latter had been disposed to receive it rather incredulously. Like too many aspirants to public service, he liked office but hated trouble, and so far the coveted mayorality had not brought him much of anything else. The temperance agitators would not let him alone, but kept reminding him by implication, if not in plainer terms, of his unfulfilled promises. The strike had added another element of uneasiness to his overflowing cup, and now here was a secret society of Anarchists to ferret out. It is a disagreeable necessity to have to fight one's own kith and kin. Let us pity Jacksonville's unfortunate mayor.

"This is an extraordinary statement—most extraordinary in fact," he said, as he nervously fingered his watch-chain, which was so heavily weighted with the various mystic insignia of the different secret orders to which he belonged as to be quite a marvel to the uninitiated. He was a little man, rather fussy and important, the sort who bustle about on days of processions and displays as if in their native element, but are mere nonentities, or worse, when any sudden crisis calls for energetic action. "Of course we shall look into this matter, but we can't arrest without knowing the place of meeting or the names of some of the members. I don't see as the law can do much till they actually commit some overt act and so furnish us with some kind of a clue."

Whether Schumacher would have made a fuller revelation had death delayed the stroke a moment longer was a question that Nelson never quite answered to his own satisfaction. To know that such an organization existed among the workmen, and that he himself was one of the predestined victims, filled him not so much with emotions of personal fear as with a kind of horror in which individual feelings had no share. No. 10 had gone before a tribunal where all secret oaths taken in darkness and ignorance are null and void, but it had not yet occurred to him to wonder who would take the place of No. 10. He had been irritated by the mayor's want of backbone on the liquor question, and as he started for the door could not forbear giving him this one sharp thrust.

"A simultaneous raid on all the unlicensed liquor dens of Jacksonville would, in my opinion, discover both the leaders and their place of meeting without waiting for some life to be sacrificed first. It is in these dens that this Socialist mischief is brewed. The screens that hide one iniquity are just as convenient to hide another. I have told all I know in regard to this matter, and now it remains for the authorities to act—and act promptly."

Jacksonville's chief functionary was unused to such a vigorous style of address from a common workman, and the reader will not probably wonder that he did not like it over much. It must be acknowledged that Nelson in his rough garb and his stern, rebuking speech might have passed with a very little stretch of fancy on the mayor's part for an incarnation of all those disturbing social questions which nowadays make official pathways so disagreeably thorny.

Matthew Densler read the note of warning which Nelson contrived to dispatch to him with a face as imperturbable as if it had been a report on the condition of the money market. The hard-handed and hard-headed millionaire was made of very unimpressionable material, and shared to some extent that Napoleonic belief in fate which is rather common in men who, without much faith in the guiding hand of a higher Power, have carved out their own destinies. If it was his fate to die by bullet or dynamite, why, he should, and nothing could avert it. It was disagreeable to contemplate, but so was death in any form. Meanwhile, to Matthew Densler's shrewd mind, trained to forecast chances in the financial world to a hair's breadth, and not without considerable keenness of sight at reading the signs of the times politically, this was a very threatening and dangerous state of affairs. Anarchy was in the air. This discontent, this spirit of rebellion and revolt everywhere meant something—something ominous, something dread. But he comforted himself as did Hezekiah of old, and Louis XIV. in more modern times, by reflecting that the social earthquake which these things portended would not be likely to come in his day. And then he took ink and paper and rapidly wrote two checks, each for a considerable amount, and the next day sent them to the families of the men who had been killed in the riot.

Martin Treworthy, when he heard of it, only shook his grizzly head with the characteristic remark, "He's rung truer than most of 'em would, but there's fire under all this smoke, and its justice, not almsgiving, that's going to put it out."

CHAPTER XVII.

KILLKENNY CATS.

As organized secrecy appeals to nearly every passion of the human heart, it is not strange that it should draw into its net fish of every kind. With Schumacher the governing idea had grown to be this: that the laboring classes were wronged, that they by no means had their rightful share in the distribution of that wealth which their hands created. And as the best wine makes the sharpest vinegar, so that constitutional hatred of oppression which might under other circumstances have made him a patriot, under the atheistic, anti-republican influence of the secret lodge system made him a conspirator. For Mr. Gerrish we cannot say as much. Born and bred in the Roman Catholic church, his rebound from its restraints had been accompanied by a fierce, unreasoning hate of all law, ecclesiastical or civil. He possessed naturally the qualities for a conspirator, the coolness, the adroitness, the mixture of boldness and craft; and under no circumstances would he have been anything else. The other members were chiefly foreigners, whose future labor millennium was a social revolution in which all property lines should be obliterated, all obstructionists destroyed, and everybody be as good as another.

Exactly how this state of affairs was to be brought about they did not know, but they had great faith in what their leaders told them, that it was going to be accomplished some way, and they were not of a class to be much troubled with any philosophic or moral doubts.

The tidings of Schumacher's revelation spread like wild fire. Jacksonville stood aghast at this discovery of a society of modern Thugs in her midst, and very reasonably; but is it possible that the good people who talked it over and exclaimed, "Awful! terrible! What is the world coming to!" were ignorant of the fact that a secret order comprising half a million members known as Free and Accepted Masons, scattered over the country and meeting nightly on their high places, were bound by oath to obey every summons of their leaders, and shield every brother right or wrong, under no less a penalty than throat-cutting, disemboweling, and a burial in the sea at high water-mark where the tide ebbs and flows once in twenty-four hours?—oaths of which that uncompromising old statesman, John Quincy Adams, once wrote that "a cannibal ought to be ashamed?" "But as we happen to know that some of these good people had taken those very oaths themselves, while others had accepted without examination the witness of friends and acquaintances that "Masonry is a good thing," the theory of ignorance is not exactly tenable, and we can only find a reason for their bitter denunciations of a handful of Socialist workmen who were only putting their own Masonic principles into practice, on that broad and general ground of human inconsistency which accounts for so many strange things.

The order of the Brothers of the Red Mark was thrown into consternation. They could not be sure how much or how little was known to the authorities. But one thing was certain, Nelson Newhall was with Schumacher in his last moments, and soon after he had suddenly and quietly left Jacksonville. The warning that he was "spotted" must have come from No. 10; but death had stepped between, and all the vengeance they could wreak on the traitor was to pass a resolution when they next met in secret conclave, consigning his memory to everlasting disgrace and infamy among all true and worthy brothers.

The meeting was a stormy and excited one—Pandemonium on a small scale. Some of the members had really shrank with horror from the plans of the organization as slowly unfolded before them, but fear of the consequences should they divulge anything, and also something of the same regard for their oath that Herod felt when he beheaded John the Baptist, had kept them quiet. But now they saw a way out. And so the brotherhood was broken up into two separate factions, one proposing to disband till a more favorable time for carrying out their peculiar scheme of social amelioration, the other denouncing all cessation of warfare as a cowardly compromise with robber capitalists and moneyed despots.

Some of these poor laborers had begun to realize in dim fashion that they had been robbed of time, wages, manhood, and self-respect; that the conspiracy against society into which they had been inveigled had only made public sentiment their enemy, and now threatened to turn against them the sword of law; and furthermore, that all this mattered very little to such leaders as Mr. Patrick Gerrish, whose chief concern at this critical juncture appeared to be concentrated on the one point of escaping himself out of the imbroglio with a whole skin. Reynolds, to do him justice, had been to a certain degree sincere in his advocacy of the laborer's rights. He had acted the part of a sycophant and a toady, but, as we have seen, not without some stormy interludes between him and his chief.

But we will give the reader for another, and we are happy to add the last time, a free ticket of admission into the beer saloon which was their chosen place of meeting.

"Brothers of the Red Mark," shouted No. 5, a fiery little German radical, the power of whose lungs seemed to be in inverse ratio to his size; "the tocsin of liberty shall one day resound through the length and breadth of the land, and the banners of the Social Revolution be planted on every church and public building. Let us bide our time, but keep to our motto: Down with tyrant capitalists, down with priestcraft; down with law, down with government—they are allies of both; but in secret let us agitate, organize, plan, till the time is ripe for open revolt. All who counsel submission are traitors, and ought to be treated as traitors."

This speech of No. 5, delivered with a foreign accent which we have not tried to reproduce, caused a most uproarious and tumultuous scene between the opposing factions, one side feeling themselves personally branded with this approbrious title, the other taunting them with its justice till fierce recriminations, dire threats and shaking of fists, added to too much liquor in their brains, culminated at last in a free fight.

The unpleasant passage between the two leaders mentioned in a former chapter had caused a breach which was not healed over. Reynolds feared Gerrish; Gerrish distrusted Reynolds. The latter had outwardly acquiesced in the plan of the former for ending the strike by arbitration, but reflection convinced even his rather obtuse mind of two facts. While he himself had not the smallest hope of being reinstated in his old place, and was therefore interested to have the strike continue as long as possible, the case with the other one was widely different. That gentleman was, as we have stated before, a labor agitator by profession. It was his usual policy to stay long enough in a place to stir up all the trouble he could between workmen and their employers, but never to prolong a strike beyond the point when it ceased to be for his personal advantage to do so.

On the whole Reynolds had some reason to feel dissatisfied with his reward for the cat's-paw part he had played, and in the contest he now took sides with the opposite faction and boldly accused his quondam leader with a cowardly desertion of their cause. Gerrish retorted with laconic sarcasm.

"Look out," answered Reynolds angrily, "I can tell a story that would send you to the gallows."

Perhaps there was more swagger than real truth in this statement, but to a man conscious that his past life had been full of ugly episodes, the threat could not fail to have a disagreeable sound.

"Liar!" hissed the one.

"Traitor!" thundered the other.

And in the confusion, nobody saw just when or how, Gerrish gave Reynolds a deadly stab. He managed to stagger out into the street with a cry of murder which brought the police to the spot. They made a few arrests, which did not, however, include the principal actor in the tragedy.

At this point, very much to our relief, and doubtless to our readers, Mr. Patrick Gerrish fades from our story. At present he figures as an Irish dynamiter, a line of business for which his talents peculiarly fit him.

And so the Brotherhood gave up the ghost in a drunken brawl and was heard of no more. And as the Grand Union refused to sustain the strike any longer, the deceived and betrayed workmen were only too glad to resume work at the former prices.

Stephen Howland sent a copy of the Jacksonville Patriot to the old couple who were thinking of him and praying for him in that far-off village among the New Hampshire hills, with a lengthy article in it bearing these headlines: STARTLING REVELATIONS! A secret society of Ku Klux among the laborers unearthed by a murder in a saloon. A manufacturer and a young workman on the marked list. The latter leaves the place to save his life.

"Jacksonville must be awfully wicked," observed Mr. Josiah Howland, after reading it over carefully to his wife who heard it in silence. "I kinder wish Stephen could have made up his mind to stay East.

Mrs. Phœbe, in her mother's yearning after her first born, had often been tempted to wish the same thing, but she always changed it to a prayer: "Deliver him, O Lord, from the temptation that is about him, and bring him safe into thy heavenly kingdom." So she only answered, quietly:

"Well, I don't know, father. If the Lord lead him there it must be for some good purpose. Let us wait and see."

Mrs. Phœbe's whole life was a blessed waiting time. She loved, and prayed, and worked; and when she reached the limit of the possible in human action, she let the threads go without a careful or anxious thought. She had done her part. Another would perfect the web.

"All this agitating, and shaking, and overturning, only seems to me like one of the signs of the end," she added. "Men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking for those things which shall come upon the earth."

For Mrs. Phœbe, to a New England matron's clearness of mind and keen grasp of all common, every-day subjects, added a mystical side—a delight in the mysterious, the sublime, the incomprehensible. And it was in keeping with this part of her nature that she should joy in the thought of the Second Advent, and see in all the portentous signs of the political and social heavens but the omens of His near approach who will judge the earth in righteousness, and whose coming will be with burning and fuel of fire.

(To be continued.)

—There is an epitaph on the tombstone of one of the Wesleys, in England, "God buries the worker, but carries on the work."

—E. J. Phelps, the newly appointed minister to England is opposed to divorce that permits parties to marry again. He says: "No divorce is allowed in South Carolina or in the Roman Catholic church. Men can get along without it."

—The Mayor of Philadelphia has prohibited sparring in theatres and directed the police to watch the roller skating rinks closely. The Mayor in his order relating to the rinks says: "Every parent in the community should aid the police department in an endeavor to rectify an abuse which threatens their own happiness and the welfare of their children."

—Gen. Neal Dow, of Maine, who lent powerful aid to Mr. Blaine, has come out in a severe letter affirming that the Republican party has deceived and betrayed its temperance supporters and that the party must die in order that temperance may live.

CORRESPONDENCE.

RELIGION IN CONNECTICUT.

Willimantic, Conn., Apr. 14, 1885.

A spiritual lethargy lies like a dreadful incubus on all New England. In morals, in spirituality and in doctrine, there is a manifest decline. Revivals are few and far between, and in many places not even desired. Spiritualism, liberalism, infidelity, and secretism in all its various forms, everywhere go hand in hand. If in any instance there is what seems to be a revival there are so many influences for evil that are connected with it as to lead me to wonder whether such converts have any real knowledge of Christ, or have been at all benfited by the religious exercises that they have experienced.

At Bristol, Conn., the M. E. pastor held a series of meetings during which it is claimed 125 persons professed conversion. At the close of the meetings he gave an address in praise of Freemasonry, in which he represented it as a most important adjunct of the Gospel. The result, it is said, is that several such converts have united with the order, and the moral tone of society is doubtless greatly impaired. A few brethren have made their protest, but it has been overborne and silenced by the tide of worldly and selfish influences.

That men should at the same time profess to be followers of Christ while they kneel at the altars of those who deny him; that in the pulpit they should say that there is "no other name given under heaven whereby men can be saved," and in the lodge that the "common gavel" will fit them as lively stones for "the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," is indeed strange; but it is stranger still that ministers of Christian churches should poison their spiritual children with the devil's lies, telling them that as true which they know to be false, and as false which they know to be true. "Woe unto them which call evil good, and good evil; that put light for darkness, and darkness for light."

There are a few names that have not defiled their garments. Among them is Rev. H. Davis, of Southington, who preached the union fast day sermon in the Congregational church of Plantsville, in which he dwelt on the reasons for fasting and prayer, among which he enumerated the prevalence and power of secret societies. His testimony, though pointed and explicit, was received by the people and it is hoped will do much good.

Last Sabbath I preached twice at Weatogue to full and attentive congregations. Some of them seemed hungry for the truth, and all received it kindly. There is evident progress in the temperance reform. Those towns that voted no-license at the election last October are enforcing the law with considerable strictness, and in Rockville, a village of 5,000 or 6,000 inhabitants, there has been a marked diminuation of crime. The Salvation Army seems to be doing a good work in some places. In Hartford there have been some hopeful conversions, and they have just come to Willimantic. We await the result with great interest, gladly welcoming any influence that will break the dead-lock of sectarianism and worldliness.

H. H. Hinman.

EVANGELIZING ROME.

St. Anne, Ill., April 14, 1885.

When, two years ago, I was lecturing in London, England, a French friend from Paris came to see me and ask why I left the church of Rome and became a Protestant.

The documents he presented to me showed that he was one of the most respected priests of France and in a high position. Before answering his questions, I invited him to kneel with me and pray. When we arose from the prayer, his face was bathed with his tears. He told me it was the first time he had ever heard a prayer from the heart. His emotions were uncontrolable.

We spent two days in searching the Scriptures and speaking of the great mystery of the love of God, who offers his only begotton Son Jesus as a gift, asking nothing from us in return, but to believe, repent, and live. At the end of the two days, I was the witness of a spectacle which no human words can tell. He had, for the first time, understood the gift! He had found it so great, so beautiful! The scales had fallen from his eyes. Opening the hands of his soul, he had received the gift. Happy and rich in its possession, he went back to France, gave up his position, and made the sacrifice of his dignities and revenues at the Good Master's feet. Now, poor, persecuted, cursed by his former friends and relations, he wants a place in the "Converted Priest's Home" which I have built here. In a few days, D. V., he will have crossed the ocean to prepare himself to preach the Gospel with me to the French emigrants. I ask your Christian readers to unite their fervent prayers to yours to the mercy seat that our heavenly Father may protect and guide this new Saul on his way to his Ananias, and that he may also give me the means to support him and the many other priests who want to break their fetters.

You and your readers may like to know that, by the great mercy of God, I have already helped twenty-six priests, monks and ecclesiastics of Rome, who have received the Gospel in that "Converted Priest's Home." You understand that the best way to fight and conquer Rome is by converting her priests. My experience is that the conversion of a priest is generally followed by the conversion of an average of 1,000 Romanists, whom sooner or later he brings to Christ by his example or his instruction. I could cite many facts to support this truth.

There are not yet twelve months since Rev M. Seguin, one of the priests converted in the "Converted Priest's Home," went to Chicago, and the Lord has so much blessed our united efforts there that there are not less than 100 families of Catholics who have accepted the Gospel of Christ. I do not want to beg to support that good and great work of helping the numerous priests who wish to give up their errors to preach the Gospel. But I beg to propose to the disciples of Christ an easy and honorable way of giving a fraternal and helping hand to those priests who want to exchange the heavy yoke of the Pope for the easy one of Christ.

Let every one who takes an interest in the conversion of the Roman Catholics send me $1.00 for a volume of "The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional," or $5.00 for my other book, "Fifty Years in the church of Rome," (832 pages) which is nearly finished. The very small benefit which will come from these books, will be employed to the last cent in feeding, clothing and protecting those priests and in preparing them to preach the Gospel to their former co-religionists.

Those two books, which have cost me eleven years of labor, are not a money speculation on my part. God knows it. My only intention, during the many and long hours of the days and nights consecrated to them, was to make myself able to support the providential evangelistic work entrusted to my too feeble hands by the Master, in the same time that I would give to every faithful minister, to every father of a family, and to every legislator and Christian patriot an arsenal of facts, arguments and weapons to fight Rome as they never have had. Truly yours in Christ,

C. Chiniquy.

FROM TEXAS.

Corsicana, Texas.

Editor Cynosure:—What do we think of the work of the Christian Association? We are glad to say we endorse the entire work. God speed the day when the entire church will see its duty in regard to the secret empire, the "works of darkness;" we know that Christ is shut out and that is enough. Why wait till they kill Morgan or throttle the arm of the law; if Jesus is not acknowledged, how can a professing Christian give it sanction? We left the M. E. church more on account of its connivance with secretism than anything else. However small our influence, what right have we to throw it in favor of Baal? May God open the eyes of thousands who to-day are helping to support a deistical instituion in which they have no faith. Let our faith, prayers and actions run in the one and same channel. Be consistent.

We have scattered all the tracts and papers we could get hold of. May the Lord send us help in Texas. We have been told of the great antiquity of Freemasonry. Do Freemasons really know where and when their organization came into existence? If they do, why don't they tell us the truth about it, agreeing among themselves? If they do not know let them be honest and say so. They generally declare that it originated with the building of the temple. Rebold, a high Mason of the Grand Orient of France, says it originated among the architects of the middle ages, while a prominent Mason in this country says it originated with Elias Ashmole, astrologer and antiquarian, who died in 1692; and others equally prominent date it from the Appletree Tavern, London, in 1717.

Our country is overrun with secret orders. Texas has her share of all kinds. We are often thrown into a State of perfect excitement by some vigilance committee or "Law-and-Order" party. Wilbarger county is just now ablaze with excitement. It seems a Law-and-Order party had been organized and had committed various outrages when W. P. Ney joined them, took the oath of allegiance, and exposed the whole business and they are now under arrest. The following is the oath:

"We the members of this committee bind ourselves to kill all bad men whose names may be given by any of our members, unless some cause can be given, and then it shall be left to the majority.

We further pledge ourselves to assist any of our brother members in all undertakings, and regardless of cause, even to the extent of our lives. Any of the members who give any of our transactions away, by sign or action, we bind ourselves to take their lives."

[Signed.]

People are beginning to see that such oaths are not binding. No man can morally bind himself to do a wrong. Let this be a warning to all secret clans. Jesus said, "Therefore, whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets (ante-rooms) shall be proclaimed upon the house-tops." Luke 12: 3. Again, "neither was anything kept secret but that it should come abroad." Mark 4: 22. Secret oaths are forbidden by law in Lev. 5: 4, 5; and we defy any man or set of men to show where either Jesus or his apostles abolished it.

(Prof.) H. C. Pierce.

PROHIBITION IN IOWA.

Clearfield, Iowa.

Editor Cynosure:—In conversation with a Freemason on the subject of secrecy, he claimed Masonry to be a secret which none but the Freemasons knew anything about, and that it was a good thing as it had benefited him. I wished to know in what particular. He told me he at one time was in a strange place with his family, where all were entire strangers. He went to a drug store to get some whisky for medicine—none of the family were sick but he feared they might be. The druggist told him it would contrary to law to let him have it without a prescription from a physician. So he "gave a sign" and the druggist let him have the whisky, and, said he, "it saved me running around in a strange place for a strange doctor."

I think I am not misrepresenting Masonry when I say the Masonic sign caused the druggist to violate the law of the State. I know the man well who got the whisky, and do not wish to insinuate that he drank it, but others might give the same sign, procure the medicine, and take enough of it to become intoxicated, as all Masons are not free from such a fault. In order to be as fair as can be we deal but little in assertions and give Masonic authority.

"The Freemason receives not the law, he gives it," says Rebold's History of Freemasonry, page 62. "In all this we must not forget that Masonry is a law unto itself. Its perpetuity is dependent upon the force of its own influences. It never demands affiliation with any other humanizing agencies"—Grand Lodge Report of 1880. "The system of Masonic law has little of the Republican or Denocratic spirit about it."—Rob Morris in Webb's Freemasons' Monitor, revised edition, page 195.

It is fair from Masonic authority to say the reason why "prohibition does not prohibit" is because of Freemasonry, an invisible empire, respecting no law but its own despotic law. Cyrus Smith.

THE LODGE SHUTS THE DOORS.

Seymour Lake, Mich., April, 1885.

Editor Cynosure:—As the Cynosure aims to eradicate and expose secret societies, I send you a specimen of Masonic deviltry, that shows what Masonic oaths will do for men who have sworn to stand by each other, right or wrong. The Free Methodist people have the past two years held their meeting in the Travis school-house; which it was voted should be open to all religious societies. There was no serious difficulty until I seceded from the lodge. Then the lodge was stirred from the very center. Thinking they might stop God's work they closed the house against a protracted meeting the Free Methodists were holding at that time, obeying the Masonic law and disobeying the law of the State. The Free Methodists continued to have preaching on the Sabbath and prayer meetings with glorious results until a short time ago, when Masonry again unmasked itself. They called a school meeting to close the house against the Free Methodists, no other sect being mentioned. Through the aid of the devil, who is the father of Masonry, they, by an illegal notice called this illegal school meeting and by an illegal vote closed the house against this one church. Thus we see that churches must bow to Masonic power or Masonry will array its power to put them down. When will the hoodwink be removed from the eyes of the American people? Not until the cable-towed churches are brought to see their lost and undone condition, and until our courts and State and National officers are purified from this terrible scourge. May God help the laborers in this reform.

D. Benjamin.

REFORM LESSONS.

Parkville, Mo.

Editor Cynosure: We have here, in and near Park College, quite a sprinkling of Prohibitionists, and a few Anti-masons. Of course we ought to look for prohibition votes from such a place, but not one solitary vote was cast here for the cause which so many profess to love! They had no Prohibition tickets on the ground—not one! How was that? Well, they forgot to send for them. Who forgot? Everybody—everybody's business is nobody's business, you know. I think the presiding officer of the W. C. T. U. should have seen to it. Possibly I am myself not free from blame. I should have sent to the Cynosure office for some St. John tickets, but I took it for granted that they had a State ticket in the field and would have a supply on hand for distribution on election day. Blaine and Cleveland got our prohibition votes!

Now, do you see why I tell all about this? Are there not thousands of voting precincts throughout the land where the same story, in substance, will apply? Is it not a logical conclusion that if all the voters who believe in the prohibition of the liquor traffic had voted for the prohibition candidate he would have had a half a million or more votes?

Then, too, we know it to be a fact that thousands of honest, sober farmers and mechanics did not vote for prohibition because they hadn't heard enough about it to know what it meant. A woman of my acquaintance has five brothers who vote the Republican ticket, but who would vote for prohibition with enthusiasm if they were posted. They are not educated men, do not read the papers regularly, are prairie farmers, having few or no opportunities to hear temperance lectures or political speeches.

Let this suggestion serve to show where and what our reform work is. What is true of temperance, is also true of our own proper work as Anti-masons. The Christian Cynosure is our most effective pioneer teacher, accomplishing the most for the least expense of money and time. But, like other (living) preachers and teachers, it must be sent where it is needed, and, though it does not eat and drink and wear clothes, it cannot go without money. It is safe to say that among the friends of the Cynosure there are many—say one-fifth of the whole number of paying subscribers—who could each pay for one or more copies extra without injury to their financial prosperity; these extra copies to be judiciously distributed in localities where a "N. C. A." nucleus ought to be, and could be, thus created and nurtured into active self-support.

Let those who love our despised but growing cause think of this—think of it seriously and prayerfully, and then make haste to invest a few dollars of their income in an enterprise which is sure to yield abundant increase and the most liberal reward; for God loveth him who giveth cheerfully—with a willing, loving heart.

We need not multiply words to prove that our interest in, and love for, any good cause, increase and grow to the extent that we do and give for it. This is a self-evident fact. Shall we not, therefore, remind ourselves and each other that the value of the Cynosure to each, individually, will be increased to the extent of the effort made by each to augment its influence and usefulness? J. D. Gehring.

Bible Lessons.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON V.—May 3, 1885.—Obedience. Eph. 6: 1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right. Eph. 6: 1

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Christianity abolishes no natural tie but makes more binding every duty involved in the family relation. vs. 1–4. Obedience to parents stands next in the decalogue to obedience to God. A child who does not honor his parents will be likely to grow up with small regard or reverence for any authority higher than his own will. When respect to parents ceases to be a national virtue, there will be little respect for constituted authority, and as a nation's life rests on the regard of the people for its laws we see at once the reason why this command alone of all the others should be distinguished by the promise of national perpetuity. The atmosphere of American life is too largely pervaded with flippancy and irreverence. We need more of the opposite qualities, and nothing would be so likely to induce it as the faithful teaching of this command. Parents also have a duty to perform. Children must obey, and parents nurture and admonish in the Lord. Thus Christianity clasps its golden links of reciprocal duty about both.

2. The Gospel teaches the true socialism. vs. 6–9. Napoleon used to call Christ le grand Democrat, or the great leveller. He was right. Paul taught the true democratic equality in an age when the faintest idea of such a thing had hardly dawned on the minds of men. Master and servant are both placed on the same level as alike subject and accountable to one Lord and Master. No duty is required of one class but that a reciprocal duty is required of the other. The spirit of these commands carried out in our own day would give to labor all the advantage that socialism claims—and far more. It is one of the most solemn and imperative duties of the Christian church to teach this divine communion in which the wealth and talents of the favored few are to be used for the benefit of the less privileged many, but to do this effectually reform must begin at the house of God. Those churches, unhappily too common, where the rich are courted and the poor ignored only widen the division. The liquor saloon and the secret socialistic lodge stand ready to give the laborers the welcome they withhold. When Christianity loses her power over the masses atheism takes the helm—with what results we are taught by the dreadful scenes of the French Revolution, and, at a later period, of the Paris Commune.

3. Life is a warfare. vs. 10–13. We are apt to think that excess of one virtue will make up for deficiency in another. But the Christian's armour should be whole. If lacking in one Christian grace, no matter how much he may abound in another, there is a vulnerable spot for the enemy. It is a mistake to think we can oppose only one evil at a time. We should present a solid front, anti-lodge, anti-rum, anti-tobacco, anti everything else that is contrary to sound doctrine. It is only thus that we can stand in the evil day against all the varied assaults of the world, the flesh, and the devil.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How is respect for age coupled with the fear of God? Lev. 19: 32. Does Christianity teach that employers should share profits with the employed? Col. 4: 1. What foes does the Christian have to fight? John 12: 31; Col. 1: 13; 2: 15.

EXPLANATORY.

"Children obey your parents." Both parents. The first duty of children, obedience. This is not to be slavish but cheerful; the obedience of unreserved confidence and grateful love. It is also the first form of all piety toward God and reverence for divine things.—Schaff.

"In the Lord." (1) In his strength; (2) because he commands it; (3) for his sake. The obedience should be religious, arising out of the conviction that such obedience is the will of the Lord. This makes it a higher service than if rendered from fear or from mere natural affection—Hodge.

"Honor thy father and mother." To honor is more than to obey. The child that honors his parents will yield a real deference to their judgment and wishes when there is no definite and authoritative command; will respect even their prejudices; will chivalrously conceal their infirmities and faults.—Dale.

"That it may be well with thee." The promise was a national promise. It was a declaration that the prosperity, the stability and the permanence of the nation depended upon the reverence of children for their parents. Bad children would make bad citizens. If there was a want of reverence for parental authority, there would be a want of reverence for public authority.—Dale.

"Provoke not your children to wrath." Parents are sometimes wanting in courtesy to children, speak to them roughly, violently, insultingly, and so inflict painful wounds on their self-respect. Parents sometimes recur with cruel iteration to the faults and follies of their children, faults and follies of which the children are already ashamed, and which it would be not only kind but just to forget. Parents are sometimes guilty of a brutal want of consideration; they allude in jest to personal defects to which the children are keenly sensitive, remind them mockingly of failures by which they have been deeply humiliated, speak cynically of pursuits in which their children have a passionate or romantic interest, and contemptuously and scornfully of companions and friends that their children enthusiastically admire and love. Parents are sometimes tyrannical, wilfully thwarting their children's plans, needlessly interfering with their pleasures, and imposing on them unreasonable and fruitless sacrifices.—Dale.

"In the nurture." This nurture must be (1) of the body, a training into right habits and ways of living; (2) the education of the mind; (3) the training of character; (4) religious training, in the outward worship and in the love and service of God.—Peloubet.

"Be obedient to them that are your masters according to the flesh." Chrysostom sees in these words, "according to the flesh," a consolatory hint that the lordship over them is temporary and of short duration (Calvin), that their real liberty is still their own.—Alford.

"As unto Christ." This would give it the character of a religious service because the motive is regard to divine authority, and its object is a divine person. It thus ceases to be servile, and becomes consistent with the highest mental elevation and spiritual freedom.—Hodge.

"Do the same things unto them." That is, treat them as flesh and blood like yourselves, having, as men, the same claims on you as you on them; "do unto them as ye would that they should do unto you."—Ellicott.

"Forbear threatening." Literally, "the threatening," your habitual threatening. St. Paul singles out the prevailing vice and most customary exhibition of bad feeling on the part of the master, and in forbidding this naturally includes every similar form of harshness, ill-temper and severity.—Schaff.

"But against principalities, against powers." Not only individuals of high rank, but embodied powers of the multitude controlled by individuasl. The word is used to express the united, controlling, mighty influences against which the Christian has to contend.—Ellicott. The customs and habits and fashions of evil, worldliness, selfishness, ungodliness, lust, hate, oppressions, every form of pervasive evil used by the princes of darkness.—Pel.

"The rulers of the darkness of this world." Properly, the world rulers of this darkness. This phrase is simply a poetical expression of the idea conveyed by the title "the prince of this world," applied to Satan in John 12: 31; 14: 30; 16: 11.—Ellicott. World-rulers are mighty demons of world-wide sway, whose power and methods are worldly in contrast with heavenly. This darkness is the overshadowing darkness of sin which now blights the world.—Peloubet."

"High places." It is plain that fallen spirits have a vast and mysterious agency in the world, and that in many ways inscrutable to men they lord it over ungodliness, shaping, deepening or prolonging the means and methods of spiritual subjugation. This dark spirit-world is anxious to possess and maintain supremacy, and therefore Christians must wage incessant warfare.—Eadie.

"Take unto you the whole armour." The full accoutrement, i. e., shield, helmet, breastplate, greaves, sword and lance.—Newland. The panoply, the entire equipment, offensive and defensive (comp. v. 17), of heavy armed infantry, the choice troops of those days. The several parts are spoken of in vs. 14–17. As Paul was bound by a chain to a soldier thus equipped (comp. v. 20), the figure was literally at hand.—Schaff.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

State Agents.

Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Iowa, D. P. Rathbun, Wayne.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

Degree Workers.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun. Wayne, Iowa.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimhall, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sahetha, Kans.
D. A. Richards Clarkville, Mich.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

The Cynosure and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magaziuc	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. Phillips,
Publisher.
221 W. Madisou St., Chicago.

A new pamphlet.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

by jennie l. hardie.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially by his wife. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. Price, fifteen cents. Ten for a dollar.

The American Party.

First Nomination for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

Platform Adopted at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

Name Adopted at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Capwell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Panll, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party hased upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and libertics, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that athelsm and priestcraft are twins and hoth alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none hut lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arhitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and hlood of our soldiers have hought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will he just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised hy the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this heautiful and patriotic motto will soon he not only echoed by their voices, hut sustained hy their votes.

Wc, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following. as containing a hrief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohiblion of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted hy our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited hy law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to henefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens hy Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the scttled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenuc and vested husiness interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republicau party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secrct lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitivc, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Luthcrans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Ahington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constahleville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Teho Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oherlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solshury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarkshurg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

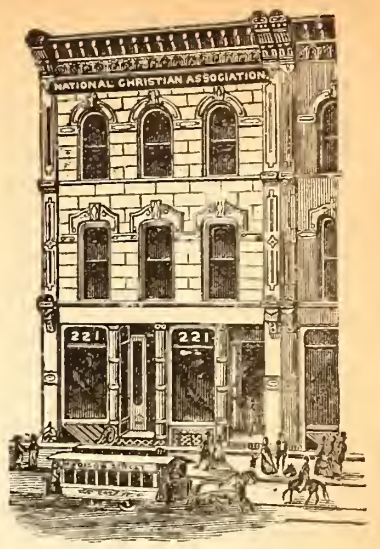
Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.

Eli Tapley, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. Galloway, Okahumka Florida.

Wm. Hazenburg, Cape Town, S. Africa.



A. D. Zaraphonithes, Andros, Greece.

C. B. Ward, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. Please designate to which one such funds shall be sent.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

President.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

Vice-Pres.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

Rec. Sec.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.

Cor. Sec. and Gen. Agent.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Treasurer.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Directors.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of tne reform.

Form of Bequest.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

President.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

Secretaries.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

Alabama.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

California.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

Illinois.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

Indiana.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno· Sec., S. L. Cook. Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

Iowa.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

Kansas.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

Massachus tts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

Michigan.—Pres., C. C. Foote, Detroit; Rec. Sec'y, W. H. Ross. Williamstown; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

Minnesota.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

Missouri.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler, Alhany.

Nebraska.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. pooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

New Hampshire.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

New York.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

Ohio.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

Pennsylvania.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesharre.

Vermont.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

Wisconsin.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Barahoo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

West Virginia.—Pres., D. B Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

Editors.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 23, 1885.

NORTHERN LIGHTS.

A noble letter from Rev. E. J. Ekman of Sweden, a leader among the independent churches of that country, appears on the first page, which confirms and strengthens the testimony of Prof. Fernholm a few weeks since. It has been kindly translated for the Cynosure by Rev. C. O. Lindell, connected with the Engberg-Holmnberg Publishing Co., (Scandianavian) of this city. A number of Swedish pastors of this city are much interested in these reports from fatherland and have suggested other prominent names in Sweden who will be willing to correspond with the Cynosure on this subject. Through the interest thus awakened we ought to rouse the excellent Swedish brethren in this country—Profs. Haselquist, Olson, Cervine, Edgren, Revs. Lindahl, Sjoblom, Bowman, Welo, Ransern, Wingren and others, though representing different denominations, are yet one in their love to the Lord Jesus Christ and in their condemnation of the dark lodge power which opposes the advancement of his kingdom. They can but mark with concern the destruction this siren secretism is making in American churches, and even the subtle poison of the lodge has affected some of the Scandinavian churches. Should there not be a standing shoulder to shoulder of all these churches in self-defense to ward off this foe? The old-country people may be safe, but their children growing up among the new and perplexing associations of our restless American communities need especial instruction. Is this being well and faithfully done? And, moreover, eannot these brethren from under the northern auroras aid us who are struggling in a death-grapple with this lodge curse, as their great countryman Gustavus Adolphus went to the aid of Protestantism in Europe when pressed by the same enemy of Christ and his church?

What say you, brethren? Can your synods and conferences do anything more than they have done in this matter?

The Cynosure invites a free expression of opinion from any of the brethren named or others who are interested.

WESTERN COLLEGES.

Rev. Charles F. Thwing of Cambridge, Mass., was lately invited to become president of Grinnell College, Iowa, but refused the offer after an examination of the college finances, with which, however, he found no fault except that the endowment was insufficient. This drew from him an article in the Independent urging that, as "college expenses are now four-fold what they were fifty years ago and double what they were twenty-five years ago," they must have greater endowments to assist poor young men or this class will be soon shut out from college walls altogether.

Leonard Woolsey Bacon, in the last Independent, takes up the discussion, disagreeing with the conclusions of Mr. Thwing, since the facts show that the more an institution is endowed the more expensive is its educational course, and the more improbable is it that a poor boy can get any advantage from the funds left to assist him. The table gathered by President Elliot of Harvard tells the story thus: at Harvard, Yale and Columbia, the wealthiest and most highly endowed institutions, the average annual expense for each student is $800. At other well endowed Eastern colleges the rate is $600, $500, $350, but always less as the college is poorer. Dr. Bacon shows that as wealth increases, although the endowments are given to help poor students, the man actually gets less help, and he concludes that "if you are very hard up, you can send" your son "a thousand miles West, to a college that sends its president East every year to beg money to keep its head above water, where he will get a first rate education at a cost not beyond the reach a poor man's pocket."

The endowments at Oxford and Cambridge, the great English Universities, were given for the benefit of the "pauper's scholarii," the poor youth who were unable to bear the expense of an education. The effect, says Dr. Bacon, "has been to make it impossible for a poor student to get within hearing distance of the university," so that an act of Parliament has been necessary to permit a poor man to attend examinations and lectures.

The benefits of this discussion are likely, before it is done, to be immense and far-reaching. The popular effect of great endowments and college foundations will be lost and rich men who are seeking thus to erect a monument to their names will be compelled to seek other investments. The rich who give conscientiously and from principle will stop piling hills upon mountains, if their gifts only make a bulwark where they wish to provide a level and broad highway. The army of treasurers, lawyers, and financial overseers needed to care for these great endowments will be released for more profitable work. Religion will get part of the wealth now lavished upon institutions already glutted and missionary agencies can be projected on a grander scale; and other colleges now toiling and grinding in poverty will feel the effect of an equalizing process. There is not too much given for education, but it is probably unwisely distributed.

The natural deduction from Pres. Elliott's figures, Mr. Thwing's facts and Mr. Bacon's inferences is expressed very neatly in the Golden Rule, which is worth reprinting for the encouragement of many Western professors, and the information of parents and young men who are more ambitious to get a sheepskin signed by a great name, than that such a name should be gained by the graduate himself in after life:

"This condition of things leads many parents to send their sons West for instruction; and there are some great advantages in so doing. The young man not only reduces his expenses, but is able, if he will, to earn at least half of the small sum there needed to educate him. He has a chance to see something of the country, and so broaden his outlook. He is far less exposed to temptation. He enters an atmosphere in which the dignity of labor is more truly recognized, and in which a thirst for knowledge is more general. His classmates are more mature, they feel the responsibilities of life more, and are far better equipped to meet emergencies. When his course is over, the opportunities for active service are wider, and he is better able to judge for what he is fitted. He will lack something in polish, but for fighting the battle of life in a manly and successful way he is no whit behind his Eastern brother."

—The N. C. A. General Agent left this city for Brighton, Mich., and the State Convention on Monday afternoon, expecting to return soon after the close of the meeting.

–Pres. C. A. Blanchard is expected to speak on Wednesday evening next, April 29th, in the Swedish Methodist church, corner of Oak and Market streets, in this city. He is this week attending the Michigan convention.

—Olney, Ill., local papers of last week announced a lecture by our Illinois State lecturer, Bro. Dissette, in the Moravian church in that place on Wednesday evening.

—Bro. H. A. Day responds to Bro. Grinnell in the Wesleyan Methodist on the position of the Wesleyan churches on the lodge. As we surmised, during his lecture work Bro. Day found cases of indifference on this subject that surprised and grieved him. The church discipline has, however, grown stronger and the Wesleyan is no less faithful than ever.

—The Grand Lodge of Illinois, reported at its last Meeting some $34,000 in its treasury. It is not long since some of the Masons, who were not beyond shame at their pretences of charity, determined to begin a fund for a Masonic orphan's Home. Meetings have been held, but instead of putting their Grand Lodge surplus to use. they started the business with an orthodox Masonic raffle.

—The Wisconsin Classis of the Reformed church met last week in the Holland church, pastor De Bey, corner of Harrison and May streets, Chicago, and spent two days in a profitable and interesting session. Rev. Mr. Zweemer of the Alto congregation, Waupun, Wis., presided, and brethren Moerdyk, of South Holland, Miller, of Peoria, and Vander Ploeg, of Fulton, Ill., were among the active members. This classis (synod) is perhaps the firmest in the denomination in its staunch resistance to the anti-Christian lodges. Every year its petition goes up to the General Synod asking that the whole church may take the position it has always held of Christian separation from this iniquity. A memorial was adopted this year which will be carried to the General Synod next month. The classis voted also, a committee to supervise the publication and distribution of tracts, which shall instruct and warn the young on the secret society question.

—The remarkable renunciation of Rev. Mr. Marsh, a Methodist minister of Canada, will be remembered as appearing in the Cynosure some two years since. The Iconoclast of Brantford, Canada, says: "Another minister of the Methodist church of Canada, well known from one end of the Dominion to the other writes us as follows: 'I am a personal friend of Bro. Marsh's,—lived in the same house with him before and after his conversion,—and know he is perfectly honest in his renunciation of Masonry, as I am of that and several other secret societies.'" The Iconoclast adds that some of the church dignitaries hint at chastising Bro. Marsh by church discipline.

—The discussion of the lodge exclusion from the United Brethren church fills an ample space in the Telescope of last week, ex-Pres. S. B. Allen of Westfield, and Prof. Davis of the Dayton Seminary, contributing able, logical and Christian articles. The former shows how untenable are the arguments of the friends of the lodge, since the discipline provides in an especial manner for the reclaiming of secret society offenders. The discussion has so far left no ground absolutely for those who are enemies to the best interests of the church (for such they really are) in their objection to the United Brethren position against the lodge. The General Conference meeting in Fostoria, Ohio, in two or three weeks, will undoubtedly be much divided on this question. Let prayer be made by all who love our Lord Jesus Christ, that all things may succeed in that meeting for the union of all its members for Christ against his enemy, the lodge.

The Highway of Holiness is right in its stricture upon the Religious Telescope, which gives too much encouragement to writers like Bishop Weaver, who would revolutionize the church by admitting the lodge to fellowship. Bro. Huber says: "The Religious Telescope as readily publishes articles against the special holiness work, as for it, on the flimsy excuse that it is a paper for the whole church. So it is on the secrecy question. Now if the U. B. church, as such, is on the side of holiness, its official organ should be exclusively and wholly on the side of holiness. If this church is an anti-secrecy church, its official organ has no right to devote so much as one inch of space to the advocacy of secrecy, or its admission into the church. Because we respect the brethren of the Presbyterian, Lutheran, Methodist and other churches, is no reason why we should surrender our space for the advocacy of their peculiar views. This would soon bring unrest into our Zion."

REQUEST.

Little has been said in the Cynosure or American about the request to Joseph Cook, but let no one suppose that the matter has been abandoned or that nothing is being done. Nearly six hundred names have been sent in and arrangements are well under way and in some cases completed for visiting conferences, general assemblies, etc., to obtain the signatures of such as are interested in learning Mr. Cook's views on the lodge system. Be patient, friends; this movement is well received, and is taking deep root and the top and fruits will appear in due time. Meanwhile let prayer unceasing be made by all who are looking for the destruction of anti-Christ and the coming of that kingdom which is "righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost," in which the lodge system has no place. J. P. Stoddard.

COLLEGE MATTERS.

The approaching anniversary at Wheaton, is the quarter-centennial. The first class was graduated in 1860, and among its members were our General Secretary, J. P. Stoddard, and Prof. L. N. Stratton, president of the Wheaton Theological Seminary. At the request of the Alumni Association the faculty has set aside a whole day, Wednesday, June 17th, for the special exercises to be provided by the Association. Among the speakers expected are Major J. W. Powell of Washington City; Rev. Warren F. Day of Ottawa, Ill.; Prof. O. Ring of Reno, Nevada; Judge Potter of Jeffersonville, Iowa; D. D. Fisher, Esq., of St. Louis, and others. The exercises of the day are expected to begin with an old-time "morning exercise" by Pres. J. Blanchard which will of itself be worth going far to attend. Ample preparations are being made to entertain hundreds of old students and visitors, and a time of rejoicing and of blessing is expected.

—The well-known college at Berea, Ky., which was founded by that fervent reformer, John G. Fee, and which is perhaps the only college in America where the colored and white students are about equally represented, will upon the date of its coming commencement, June 24, have special addresses from prominent literary and church people. Among the speakers to be present will be George W. Cable, Washington Gladden, Roswell Smith, President of the Century Company, and Rev. Robert West, of the Advance, of this city.

—Rev. S. W. Gilkey has accepted the professorship of Ancient languages in the College of Tarkio, Mo. The institution has now a fine building, and the people of the place have donated $20,000 on condition that $10,000 shall be raised from other sources. This is a promising beginning for this young United Presbyterian institution of the South West.

—Mr. Bostwick, of Detroit, has given $50,000 to Olivet College, a Congregational institution in Michigan. This institution has also received intelligence that Mr. Erwin, of New Brittan, Conn., has made it a bequest of $100,000.

—President White, of Cornell University, announces, with evident satisfaction, that the institution occupies a Christian attitude, since the departure of several anti-believers. A majority of the faculty are now evangelical in faith.

Reform News.

LIGHT IN THE EAST.

The following extracts from a letter dated, Boston, April 14, 1885, will be read with interest:

"In spite of the unfavorable weather, last evening twelve of the friends of the cause met and organized, 'The Anti-Lodge Inquiry Society.' We adopted a very simple constitution, pledging ourselves to do all in our power to advance the anti-secrecy work. We decided for the present to hold meetings on the first Monday evening in each month, and elected a president, vice president, and secretary. We have a very pleasant room and can accommodate twenty-five or thirty, and when this proves too small we can have a larger one on the same floor. The young men seemed hungry for something to read that will give them a clear idea of the work to be done." We can accommodate all who wish to join with us in this much needed work.

"I trust we may be able to keep up such a fire along the line as to prevent many from joining the ranks of the enemy."

This movement originated with a few consecrated Christian young men of Boston whose attention had been called to the evils of the lodge, and who feel called of God to warn others of the dangers threatened by this engine of Satan. A few suggestions as to ways and means and words of encouragement when in Boston last February give promise of permanent and good results. When Bro. McFall's attention was called to this move by the young men he most heartily approved and with the earnest cooperation of his church has offered every encouragement and assistance possible. The need of this young society is:

1. The prayers of God's people. They are in the very jaws of the beast, and where he is honored and worshiped on the throne of his great wealth and power.

2. A library for the better information of the members and others whom they may interest to read, and a good supply of tracts for judicious distribution and copies of the Christian Cynosure, American, Christian Statesman, Richmond Star, Free Methodist, Wesleyan Methodist, Christian Instructor, and other publications freely discussing the lodge question. Publishers who are willing to donate copies of their papers to be kept on file at the office of this young club will direct, until further notice is given, to W. E. Mace, No. 25, Union St., Boston, and any who may desire to aid in this enterprise in the purchase of books, etc., can direct as above or to the N. C. A. Treasurer, W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Next to the entrenchment of our reform in Washington, I look upon this beginning in Boston as the most important of all the outposts yet established, and trust that friends will not stay their prayers or withhold their sympathy and support.

Very respectfully, J. P. Stoddard.

FROM THE ILLINOIS LECTURER.

Carlyle, Clinton Co., Ill.

I could get no church in which to lecture or preach but the sheriff gave me the use of the campaign stand in the court house yard. Then I scattered tracts through the stores and houses until my stock was exhausted.

When the people gathered I found myself surrounded by a mixed audience, judges, lawyers, "Christian Knights" and ladies, preachers in the distance, all to hear what "this babbler saith." I then preached for about one hour and a half from Rom. 8: 31. When through I had turned the blue lodge inside out as I did at Lebanon, oaths, penalties and all; and when I closed they still stood as if rivetd to the spot, while I walked down through them all and went my way, they still standing there as an illustration of the truth that when a living issue on the subject of religion is fairly set forth a man will lack neither hearers nor will they be lacking in interest, however mad they may be because of its presentation. And they won't complain of the length of the sermon or become sleepy.

As I had to pass a saloon door a red-nosed creature standing in front of it with a crowd said as I passed, "Look at him, he's a villain, he looks like a villain." Then followed a lot of odious language uttered in louder tones, lest having passed I might not hear it.

Here a man came to me and said, "I was worth at one time in a town not three hundred miles away, not less than $3,000, and lost it all by fighting Masonry. For I am an Anti-mason and was actively fighting the lodges. Now I have in another city recovered my financial standing by close attention to business, but when I began I had not a dollar, for I had just three dollars left when the Masons were through with me. Now I'm as well fixed as before but I never mention the subject. If I thought that you'd mention this I never would have breathed it. I firmly believe that you can never get justice in our civil courts, when the interests of secretists are involved in the case. But don't you mention my name, or I am once more a ruined man.

What testimony! Yet this is the testimony which comes voluntarily from so many citizens of this government. "America is ruled by secretists and we cannot help ourselves." Then take the fact that the great institution of Odd-fellowship dictates as to who shall or shall not occupy offices of honor or trust under this government!

Since leaving home but one friendly roof has sheltered me for a night, and that was Rev. Mr. Thompson's in Lebanon—while but few extend the hospitality of even a drink of water! I never passed through a country in all my travels where people would come to hear a man preach and yet shut the doors of their churches against him. I never before addressed audiences so deeply interested in the matter presented who did not manifest some interest in the welfare of the preacher. On one Scripture they are seemingly well agreed, that is, being convinced that our cause is just. "The just shall live by faith."

Salem.

Entering the Disciple church which was holding prayer-meeting the preacher informed me that there would undoubtedly be work for me in some of the churches here. Next morning I called on Rev. T. H. Padgett who seemed glad to see me. He has taken many degrees in Masonry, but is out and has been out a good many years. Learning my evangelistic character as well as my relation to the Christian Association, he asked me if I was at liberty to engage in revival effort and let the lodge question rest for the present? I replied that he was better acquainted with the situation here and that if he thought my opening that subject out in this place would prove disastrous to the success of the proposed meeting I would wait until the meeting closed, and if that was satisfactory to him I was ready to engage in a series of meetings.

That night I preached for that church and the pastor announced the beginning of a series of meetings under my ministry. On Sabbath morning I could see indications of Masonic uneasiness in the congregation, but preached with considerable liberty. At the close of the evening service I was warmly gripped as a Master Mason by two or three of the leading members of that church. I did not respond, but "took due notice" and felt that the craft would soon hedge up the meeting. On Monday a leading member of the church informed the pastor that he could not be at the meeting that night because he had "to attend the Masonic lodge"(!) and the pastor learned to his dismay that there was a general complaint against him because he had "taken up a stranger." Though nothing specific was alleged; I knew what was the trouble: the craft was in danger of being reviewed in open day and expected me to open fire at any moment.

The pastor informed me of the situation, stating his surprise that these objections should be so prevalent. His wife was greatly mystified likewise, and neither could understand this state of affairs. I told him that I could account for this complaining in just one word—Masonry!

"Oh!" said he, "I had not thought of that. Well, we'll not ring the bell for prayer meeting this afternoon," and after reflecting, thought best not to attempt a service at night.

"Now," said I, "Do you think I can get your church to preach one sermon on the subject of Penal Secrecy?"

"Well," he replied, "you know how a good majority of them—the officers—are." Here his wife importuned me not to mention the subject in the city at all, for she feared that the craft would blame her husband. But he looked at it in the right way, saying, "No, no, let us not lay an embargo on any man's conscience."

I reminded him of his carefulness in presenting me to his elders and obtaining their consent to my preaching for them, and that they by that act became responsible to a greater degree than he was. But I added that when he entered into that arrangement with me I knew he had undertaken more than he bargained for. In short, that the craft from the time I left the Maquon lodge in Knox county of this State, had obstructed almost all my revival efforts and that this was not likely to prove an exception.

So bidding these good people farewell, I went to find the sheriff and obtain the use of the court-room. He was absent in the country. I then endeavored to secure School Hall and saw the three men who control it, who promptly refused when I told them my subject.

It was election day in town and nearly night, and as the people prepared materials for a bonfire in honor of the victory of all the whisky candidates, I could see from the hotel the dark figures dancing and gesticulating before the bright fires and hear yells of delight equalled only at a Chippewa dog feast, which the whole scene resembled.

From this place I went to Flora.

Here I called to see the M. E. pastor, Rev. Ravenscroft, who stated that he never was a Mason, but that "he did not approve of making war upon them, for there are good men in all of them." Some more conversation followed ending in a direct refusal on his part to let me address the people in his church on this subject.

It is election day here too. I called on Rev J. A. Mavity, pastor of a Christian church, who advised me to see his official board who he thought would let me have his church to preach or lecture in. He informed me that he is a seceded Odd-fellow and is opposed to secret societies. In view of its being election day he thought that it would scarcely pay for me to attempt it until the next evening. I called on two of the officers, who were quite friendly and viewed the matter just as did their pastor. Added to the election was the interest which arose on the appearance of three strolling Frenchmen accompanied by two performing bears. Under these circumstances I did not feel justified in remaining longer. As it was when leaving Salem, a slight rain was falling or I might have resorted to street preaching in both these places.

So leaving our friend, Rev. J. A. Mavity, some reform tracts I boarded the train for Olney.

Geo. T. Dissette.

FROM THE WISCONSIN AGENT.

Sextonville, Wis., April 4, 1885.

I am once more in harness and at work. I preached last Sabbath at Orion in the morning, and at Pleasant Hill Congregational church in the evening. It was very bad going and I had rather a small congregation but good attention. I also delivered three lectures at Orion on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and one at Pleasant Hill on Thursday evening. I had a very good time and hope much good was done, had some opposition but none that did any harm. I think some saw the harmful nature of these secret societies as they had never before.

Wm. H. Dawson wrote me a good while ago that he wished me to come up here and give a few lectures, but I could not till now. He has done a great work here. He and brother P. Robb, an old friend of former years, stand by me, and their excellent wives provide for all my needs.

I arrived in Sextonville last evening; have now made arrangements to preach in Richland City tomorrow morning, and at Sextonville in the afternoon.

The going is still very bad, but my team is able to take me almost anywhere; coming up here I had almost to swim my horses. I passed through snow-banks in which they sunk up to their bodies, and some places where the snow had been shoveled out, and the snow on each side was as high as their heads, but I am safe, sound and well.

I. Bancroft.

The Home.

THE TEST.

"Lovest Thou Me?"

Thus saith the Master: "Lovest thou me?"
More than the leisure so pleasing to thee?
More than thy joyance in sight and in sound,
Than varied delights which are scattered around?
Then work in my vineyard, at home and abroad,
For the welfare of man and the glory of God.

Thus saith the Master: "Lovest thou me"
More than the kindred so precious to thee?
More than thy father and mother so dear?
Or brethren, or children, or wife the most near?
Couldst leave them for me, who withheld not my blood
For the welfare of man and the glory of God?

Thus saith the Master: "Lovest thou me,"
Resigning thyself as a sacrifice free?
Still patient in sickness, and steadfast in woe;
And serving by waiting, if God wills it so?
Thy springs all in me, when earth's fountains are dry,
Foretastes of fruition that waits in the sky?

Thus saith the Master: "Lovest thou me"
More than the wealth I have given to thee?
More than the mountains of silver and gold,
Than houses and lands, and the flocks of the fold?
Then reach out thy hand, and dispense far abroad
For the welfare of man and the glory of God.

A STRIKING CONVERSION.

In the year 1876, at the invitation of ministers in Washington, District of Columbia, I held a series of Gospel meetings which lasted twelve weeks. Washington is called "the city of magnificent distances," and churches as well as individuals are much isolated. It was but slowly that the people came together in the daily prayer meeting. In answer to many prayers, however, the Holy Spirit came down on the great evangelistic gatherings with mighty power, and many remarkable conversions resulted.

Amongst those converted was the well-known Major Hall. He was a popular man among his companions. He had frequently held offices of trust under the government of the city, and was a member of a fashionable club. He was confessedly addicted to the vices common among men of the world. One day, walking down Pennsylvania Avenue, he met his old friend, General Crittenden, who said to him: "Major, I have been converted; if you come to Dr. Rankin's church to-night you will hear me relate my experience." The Major at first thought his friend spoke in ridicule, but he soon discovered that General Crittenden was in dead earnest. After no small persuasion he consented to be present at the evening meeting.

General Crittenden related his spiritual experiences on that occasion in a manner which moved many hearts. He had been a leader in the Northern army during the Civil War, and was a man of much ability. At the time of his conversion he was practicing as a lawyer, and with his Christian wife attended Dr. Sunderland's church. He told how his son's conversions in the meetings had attracted him to them, and how, at last, his proud heart had yielded to Christ. As he spoke, not a few were moved to tears. Major Hall, however, instead of being softened, seemed to be greatly incensed. When the inquiry meeting was announced, and his wife urged him to stay, he said, "No! The General has made a fool of himself. I will have nothing to do with such meetings." He went from the church straight to a place of fashionable resort, where he gambled all night. Next morning, instead of going home he went to a hotel for breakfast, and afterwards slept there till late in the afternoon. Then he returned to his evil associates.

Meanwhile his wife had set apart that day for fasting and prayer for the conversion of her husband. In her agony of prayer she cried out, "O Lord, if need be, take from us by death our darling and only daughter, if so my husband may be led to Christ." No assurance of an answer seemed to be vouchsafed, and she continued to plead: "O Lord, take from us our first-born and only son, who, with his sister, has given his heart to Jesus in these meetings, if that is needed to lead my dear husband to thyself." Still no answer seemed to be given. Almost in an agony of despair, she cried out, "O God, lay my dead body across his pathway, if need be, to keep him from stumbling into hell. Thou didst give thy Son to die for him; if the sacrifice of my life is also needed, I freely give it." No sooner had these words fallen from her lips than she felt, like Daniel of old, that while she was yet speaking, God had heard and answered her prayer. She rose from her knees filled with joy, and ran across the street to the house of a Christian neighbor, to whom she said "My husband is going to be converted, and he will join Dr. Black's church on such a day." They said to her, "Why you are beside yourself; where is your husband?" "I don't know," she replied; "but I know he is going to be converted; God has answered my prayer."

That same night Major Hall was among his companions, and had gambled till daybreak, when suddenly he threw down his cards, and saying, "I have played my last card," he turned upon his heel, and went to his office, under terrible conviction for sin. He hunted up a Bible, but he knew more of Blackstone than about God's law and Gospel, and he could find no comfort in turning over the leaves of the sacred book. He remained in his office, however, till five o'clock in the afternoon, having been there from daybreak, trembling all the time at the foot of Mount Sinai. At last he went to a friend's house, and told him of his distress. He at once brought Dr. Black, the pastor, who pointed him to Christ, explaining to him the Saviour's finished work, and urging him to pray God for mercy and forgiveness. He did so. His prayer was heard and answered; peace and joy filled his soul.

Major Hall came to the meeting that night. Some one said to me, "There is Major Hall, do you know he has been converted?" "Indeed," I replied. I left the platform, and said, "Major, I hear you have become a Christian; is it true?" "Yes, it is." You are well known in Washington; if you would stand on that platform, and relate your experience to the great assemblage of people here to-night, it would do more good than any sermon I could preach." He said: "I am so weak, I can scarcely stand upon my feet. I have eaten nothing since yesterday at three o'clock, and I have been in terrible soul distress most of the time." "Well, if you will come up, and, after I have spoken, say a word or two, I am sure the Lord will help you, and it will do great good." I placed my arm in his and led him on to the platform. His utterances were broken, what he said was so indistinct that very few heard. But the tears fell from his eyes, and many in that great audience who knew him well as a man of pleasure, and could guess what a terrible soul-struggle he had passed through, were deeply moved by his testimony. His wife, scarcely realizing what she was doing, sprang to her feet, and in a clear voice that rang through the building, exclaimed: "I am the happiest woman in Washington to-night!"

One week from that date Major Hall stood at my side on the steps of the Capitol, where for many years the American Presidents had been inaugurated, and in a clear, stentorian voice, in the presence of 10,000 to 15,000 persons, related the story of his conversion. It had not been announced that he was to speak, but vast numbers were in the habit of gathering there Sabbath after Sabbath, to hear Gospel addresses.

These events occurred nine years ago, and Major Hall, from that day to this, has lived a consistent and earnest Christian life. Would that every Christian who reads this narrative might have his faith strengthened to pray for those who may seem to be far gone in sin. Would that every sinner might realize that Christ is indeed able to save to the uttermost all who come unto God by him, "Seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for us."—E. P. Hammond, in the London Christian.

BEARING ALL THINGS.

I sat down this morning, as usual, to read my Bible. I had a trouble, which, whether large or small, filled my mind for the time, and almost unfitted me to take up the matchless thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians. Still I read it over and over. I came again to the wonderful line: "Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." I stopped awhile at the word beareth. The commentary told me the original word meant, "Holding in like a water-tight vessel," and adds, "the charitable man contents himself from giving vent to what selfishness would prompt under personal hardship." Reaching out for the book that would help me ("God be thanked for good books," said Channing) I traced the word in the three other places where it is found in the New Testament. In Corinthians 9: 12, Paul says: "We suffer all things lest we should hinder the Gospel of Christ." I did not have to suffer as Paul did, yet it is strengthening to feel I am in his company and fellowship. In 1 Thess. 3: 1–5, he says: "When we could no longer forbear," could no longer cover up or restrain our longings. The "beareth all things" began to have a life-like appearance. I began to think I could hold in, cover up, keep in a while longer, or a little more. Another commentator, as if to meet my case exactly, puts a note to one of these places in these words: "We suffer without speaking or complaining." At times a "bearing man" feels, "I must let somebody know how much I have to bear, and how well I bear it." This may be a higher degree of patience, but not the highest. The bearing quietly, the holding in without complaining or railing, this is more like Paul's. I felt stronger as I closed the book and took up the work of life. May it be so, in some degree, with the reader of these lines.—Southern Christian Advocate.

NEW LIGHT ON THE BIBLE.

Mr. St. Chad Boscawen has just closed a series of afternoon lectures at the British Museum on "The Hebrew Prophets and Monuments." The London World, of Jan. 22d, gives this brief sketch.

Mr. Boscawen in his closing lecture claimed that the chronology of the Bible, owing to the discovery of Assyrian and Egyptian inscriptions, was now placed on a footing such as was little expected fifty years ago. From the date of the battle of Karkar, in which Ahab and the Assyrian allies were defeated, until the return from the Babylonian captivity, there was a series of valuable connecting links between the Bible and information derived from tablets unearthed at Babylon. One of the most important gains from the recent discovery of this mass of contemporaneous historical literature was the removal of the confusion and apparent discrepancies regarding the Assyrian invasions of Palestine during the reign of Hezekiah. The political significance of the embassay of Merodach-baladan (2 Kings 20: 12) was at once apparent when viewed in the light of the monumental inscriptions, and the atmosphere of intrigue, rebellion and stern vengance was very clearly apparent in the writings of the Hebrew and Assyrian scribes. It was this embassy, in B. C. 712, which brought about the invasion of Judea and the siege of Jerusalem in B. C. 711 by Sargon, and the prophecies of Isaiah (chaps. 10, 11.), so long unsolved mysteries, were now found to be clear and detailed records of this lost incident in oriental history. After quoting several examples of detailed accuracy of the writings of Isaiah the lecturer proceeded to treat of the evidence derived from the inscriptions as to the Jewish captivity and the fall of Babylon. The detailed account of the march of Cyrus, and of his capture of Babylon, preserved in a tablet, fixed the date of the fall of Babylon and death of Belshazzar as B. C. 539. The evidence leading us to identify Gobryas with "Darius the Mede" of Daniel, was also very strong.

THOUGHT AND LABOR.

Ruskin says: It is no less fatal an error to despise labor, when regulated by intellect, than to value it for its own sake. We are always in these days trying to separate the two; we want one man to be always thinking and another to be always working, and we call one a gentleman and the other an operative; whereas the workman ought often to be thinking and the thinker often to be working, and both should be gentlemen in the best sense. As it is, we make both ungentle, the one envying, the other despising his brother, and the mass of society is made up of morbid thinkers and miserable workers. Now, it is only by labor that thought can be made happy; and the professions should be made liberal, and there should be less pride felt in peculiarity of employment and more in excellence of achievment.

BISHOP RYLE AND THE BLIND CHILD.

Bishop Ryle, of England, says the happiest child he ever saw was a little girl eight years old, who was quite blind.

She had never seen the sun nor moon nor stars, grass nor trees nor birds, nor any of those pleasant things which have gladdened your eyes all your life.

More trying still, she had never seen her own father or mother, yet she was the happiest child of all the thousands the bishop had seen.

She was journeying on the railway this day I speak of. No one she knew was with her, not a friend nor a relation to take care of her; yet, though totally blind, she was quite happy and content.

"Tell me," she said to some one near by, "how many people there are in this car. I am quite blind and can see nothing." And she was told.

"Are you not afraid to travel alone?" asked a gentleman.

"No," she replied, "I am not frightened; I have travelled before, and I trust in God, and people are always very good to me."

"But tell me," said the bishop, "why you are so happy?"

"I love Jesus, and he loves me; I sought Jesus and I found him," was the reply.

The bishop then began to talk to her about the Bible, and found she knew a great deal about it.

"And how did you learn so much of the Bible?" he asked.

"My teacher used to read it to me, and I remembered all I could," she said.

"And what part of the Bible do you like best?" asked the bishop.

"I like the story of Christ's life in the Gospels," she said; "but what I like best of all is the last three chapters of Revelation."

Having a Bible with him the bishop read to her, as the train dashed along, Rev. 20th, 21st and 22d chapters.—Ex.

THE STORY.

Have you listened to the story
Sweet and old,
Have you listened to the story,
Filling life with light and glory,
Men have told?
How there came a heavenly stranger,
Cradled low in Bethlehem's manger,
Strong to shield from death and danger
God's dear fold.

It is full of human sweetness,
Rich in love's divine completeness,
Ever new.
Grief, her lonely vigil keeping,
Care, her crust with sorrow steeping,
Lift their eyes and hear it, weeping,
'Tis for you!

He was wronged above all others;
Mocked, denied,
He was wronged above all others;
Bruised and broken, O my brothers,
Crucified;
In a purple robe they bound him,
With the cruel thorns they crowned him,
Pitiless, they gathered round him
Till he died.

When I heard the wondrous story,
So divine,
When I heard the wondrous story,
Coming down through annals hoary,
Christ was mine:
O that love beyond comparing,
Burdened heart, thy sorrow sharing,
For thy sake the thorn-crown wearing,
Is he thine?

—Rev. W. Haughton.

A PRISON MISSIONARY.

In solitary confinement in the Moyamensing prison, Philadelphia, there is a Dr. Goersen who is accused of killing his wife. He had been a drunkard before he committed his crime, but since going into prison he has been very religious. He now pretends to be interested in the future of his fellow-prisoners. He applied for permission to read the Bible to the inmates of the prison, but the request was refused. Goersen, however, was determined to impart to his fellow-prisoners his knowledge and professed belief in the Scripture writings. The prison is overrun with big English beetles. The insects are from an inch and a quarter to two inches or more in length. Goersen is a remarkable penman, and saw in the roaches a medium through which it was possible to attain his desired object. He captured a big beetle, and, parting the wings, salivated a tiny strip of tissue paper, and stuck it, by the aid of a paste made from scraps of bread, on the insect's back. On the paper, written in minute characters, were the words, "Though thy sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow." The insect was then released and scurried through a crack in the floor. The following day he captured fifteen or twenty of the largest roaches out of the insect battalion that entered his cell. He prepared a dozen slips similar to the first, and, inscribing on each a quotation from the Scriptures, attached them to the backs of the roaches.

The lid of a pan filled with scraps was placed on the floor as a bait. Three days later Goersen found nearly a score of roaches in the lid.

Carefully he picked them up, one by one, and examined them, on the back of one, and inscribed on the strip of paper, were the words: "Be not deceived; evil associations corrupt good morals." But this was not all. Written, across the paper, in scrawling and almost illegible hand, were the words. "I no yure rite. Sined, 62."

After several attempts he achieved the feat of writing in infinitesimal characters, on the back of a two-inch roach, a clear and distinct transcript of the Ten Commandments.

The other day while one of the officials of the prison was walking through the corridor his attention was attracted by a peculiar looking insect. It appeared to have a "spasm," and was evidently trying to relieve itself of the incubus of a strip of paper that trailed from its back.

The insect was captured without trouble, and the astonished official was amazed to find on the paper the following text, clearly and distinctly written: "Look not upon the wine when it is red, for at last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." It had been written by Goersen.—Philadelphia News.

WORMS AND THEIR HOMES.

The worm's body is formed of a hundred or even two hundred rings, that can be drawn close together, or that spread out and press against the ground and move forward one after another to help him on. He is covered with very small bristles which make it easier for him to pull himself along. And though he has a mouth he breathes through his skin. But eyes he has none. Still it has been proved that in some way he knows, at least after a little time, when a bright light is shining on him. Nor has he any ears. But he can smell his food if it be near; and he has some sense of taste, and relishes his dinner of cabbage or onion leaf. One sense remains, and that is very strong in these little creatures that can neither hear nor see. It is the senss of touch. You know how a worm curls up the instant it is touched; and perhaps you have seen how they put their heads out of the earth and turn them about, as if feeling for something. Their long bodies are so well able to bend and move either backwards or forward, and their sense of touch is so quick, that the worms, though without sight or hearing, do wonders in their own way. Their holes are often dug three or four feet deep, or in cold countries as much as seven or eight feet under the surface. These holes go straight down, or in a slightly slanting direction. At the bottom there is a small round room, with perhaps a few little stones in it, for the worm does not like to lie close against the cold earth. During hot, dry summer weather, or in cold frost of winter, the worms remain down at the bottom of their holes, curled up singly, or three or four may be rolled in a ball together. The whole length of the narrow hold has a lining of dark mould. Near the top, for a few inches, the lining is made of leaves flattened against the earth. In that softly lined part the worm likes to lie all day in damp or cool weather, with his head just concealed beneath the level of ground, or poking up from the surface. Through this habit of lying at the top of their little homes, with their heads stuck out at the door they are easily caught and pulled up by the bird.—Selected.

BIBLE READINGS FOR THE YOUNG.

THE GREAT WHITE THRONE. Read Matt. 25: 31–46.

And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was no place for them. Rev. 20: 11.

1. Who shall sit on this great white throne to judge the world? Dan. 7: 9, 13.

2. Who shall then behold the Son of Man? Rev. 1: 7; Acts 1: 11.

3. In what book will the names of all the Lord's people be found written? Rev. 20: 12, 15; 21: 27; Luke 10: 20.

4. By what book will all others be judged? Rev. 20: 13; Matt. 25: 41.

5. What joyful welcome will the Lord's people then receive? Matt. 25: 21, 34.

—Notes for Bible Study.

TEMPERANCE.

RUM COSTS MORE THAN RAILROADS.

The Argonaut, of San Francisco, takes up a new line of comparative statistics. It is not a temperance paper, but devoted to the social, educational, literary, and business world, and its conclusions will be the more attractive to persons who discount whatever appears in the organs of the temperance reform. The railroad and saloon earnings of two sections of the country, viz., the New England and the Pacific group of States, form the basis of the Argonaut's comparison. It finds the entire gross earnings of the railway corporations of the New England States to have been, in 1882, $156,188,499; in the Pacific group, the total earning of all the roads were $4,754,686. The total number of miles operated in the first is stated at 6,186 and in the second, 5,812.

The total number of licensed gin-mills operated in the New England group for the year ending June 30, 1883, according to the report of the commissioners of internal revenue, was 16,239. The number operated in the Pacific group was 15,188. The Argonaut then, proceeding on the dictum of the Brewer's Congress and various associations of liquor dealers, that place the average receipts of the saloons throughout the country at $5,000 each, estimates the "gross earnings" of the saloons in the New England group at $81,195,000; and in the Pacific group $75,940,000; and concludes that "In the New England States, therefore, the saloon keepers squeezed $25,000,000 more out of the people for poison than the railroads did for carrying freight and passengers, and in the Pacific States they succeeded in getting $34,000,000 more."

The number of inhabitants in the New England group of States—census 1880—is 4,010,438, and the cost per head, including women and children, for intoxicating liquor is $20. In the Pacific gronp, the number of people is 1,479,615, and the average cost of whisky to them is $51 per head.

The total gross receipts of all the railroads in the United States for the year 1882, $770,356,716. For the year ending June 30, 1883, the number of saloons licensed was 195,869, and their gross earnings, according to the best authority, $979,345,000; showing a difference in favor of the saloons, against the railroads, of $208,988,284.—Union Signal.

DRINKING IN SWITZERLAND.

The Times continues its interesting series of communications on the drink question in Switzerland, which should be carefully read by public and philanthropic men in all the countries of Europe. The present communication consists of an analysis of the report of an inquiry into the whole subject by the Federal Council, which seems to have been carried out with great ability, and is supplemented by a report from Dr. Schuler, Federal Factory Inspector. The consumption of spirits, and, still worse, that of absinthe, has "portentously" increased. The increase of spirits has been much faster than that of wines, though the importation of wines has quadrupled in little more than thirty years, the greatest rate of increase of both was in the period of prosperity including and following that of the Franco-German war. The Federal Council attributes this most disastrous increase in the consumption of alcohol to two causes: first and mainly, to the introduction of free trade in alcoholic beverages, and the withdrawals from the Cantons (by the Constitution of 1874) of the power to limit public houses; and secondly, and in great measure, to the commercial and agricultural prosperity which prevailed some ten years since. "Good times make drinking" in Switzerland as elsewhere. Spirits are very cheap; in the Canton of Berne two decilitres of schnapps (containing 6 or 8 oz.) may be bought for one penny—almost as cheaply as beer. The result in the production of pauperism, crime, insanity, physical incapacity, and death is told in the article. It is the disgrace of England to show more coarse drunkenness than most other countries, but in the amount of alcohol per head consumed she is exceeded. A table is given showing that this amount is greatest in the following countries in the order of their names—France, Belgium, Switzerland, Denmark, England, Germany. Assuming that spirits contain 50 per cent of alcohol, wine 12½ per cent, and beer 5 per cent, the Frenchman's consumption of alcohol is at the rate of 19.67 litres per year, that of the English 10.03, and that of the Swiss 13.45; the Dane, though he consumes 18,90 litres of spirits in the year, drinks so little wine and beer that the actual alcohol which he imbibes is represented by 12.22; the German is a long way in the rear with 8.30 litres. The Frenchman drinks almost as much wine as the Englishman does beer; it contains twice as much alcohol; besides, he takes brandy in his coffee. The ordinary Englishman does not diffuse his drinking as the ordinary Frenchman does; he drinks one or two days a week to his great disgrace, and, let us hope, repents during the remainder. There is this further difference in England; the existence of large classes who drink nothing or next to nothing, leaving the still enormous consumption of alcohol in England to fall on those pitiable fools who think it a harmless if not a healthy thing, and supply the statistics of our jails and workhouses.—London Lancet.

THE EYESIGHT AND TOBACCO.—It has long been known that among the evil results of the excessive use of tobacco is the tendency to what is known as amblyopia, which is an impairment of the usual sight. It is substantially an atrophy of the optic nerve. Tobacco injuriously effects every organ of the human body. It may soothe by deadening the nerves, and the stimulation it gives is pleasant while the influence lasts; but even with the strongest men it deranges the digestion, irritates the nerves, impairs the eyesight, as well as befouls the person who uses it.—Christian at Work.

The Churches.

—The United Presbyterian congregation of Newark, N. J., has extended a unanimous call to Rev. R. T. Wylie to become their pastor.

—J. D. Nutting of Oberlin Theological Seminary has received a call from Rock Creek Congregational church, Ohio.

—The United Presbyterian church of Syracuse, N. Y., Rev. J. P. Sankey, pastor, has lately received twenty-five additions.

—The Rev. J. W. Sibley and wife, who have labored six years as faith missionaries at Ellichpoor, Central India, expect by the blessing of God, to return to that field within two or three months. We trust our readers will remember this brother and sister at the throne of grace.—Faith Missionary.

—Bro. U. D. Lathrop formerly of of Viola, Mercer county. Ill., is visiting the spring conferences of the Wesleyan churches, as the agent of Wheaton Theological Seminary. His church at Viola has for their pastor, Bro. O. C. Bedford, a graduate of Wheaton College and Seminary.

—In the Wesleyan's report of the Syracuse Wesleyan Methodist conference, the name of Bro. Wardner, the editor, appears as supplying the church at La Fayette, N. Y.; Rev. E. Jones remains at Syracuse; E. Barnestown has no appointment, and D. P. Rathbun, having returned to New York, is connectional evangelist and missionary.

—The twenty-fifth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D., in the La Fayette Avenue Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, N. Y., was celebrated April 5, by an appropriate service. In his discourse Dr. Cuyler said: "I have preached 2,300 discourses to this congregation, have delivered 1,000 public addresses on temperance here and elsewhere, have officiated at 570 marriages and baptized 802 children. I have received into this church 3,610 members, of whom 1,566 were accepted upon profession of faith in Christ. Our total membership at present is 2,012."

—The third year of the preaching and praise service at Central Music Hall, of Chicago, will close on next Sunday evening. Every Sabbath evening of the year now closing Rev. Dr. Barrows, of the First Presbyterian church, has personally conducted the services. The expense of these services during this period, amounting to about $10,000, has been met by personal contributions of the members of the congregation of the First Presbyterian church; a generous offering on their part towards the evangelization of the unsaved multitudes of the city.

—Revivals are reported in many places in northeastern Iowa. At Nugent, a country charge where preaching is held in a school house for want of a church building, a powerful work of grace has been carried on by a union of Christian people, and fifty-two conversions are reported. At Bloomertown, a farming settlement, God has honored the faithful work of a few believers in the saving of twenty-five souls. Some twelve or fifteen have been converted at Lansing as the result of special services.

—The Moody and Sankey Christian Convention in Pittsburgh, April 9–12, was a great success. The Fifth Avenue Music Hall, holding over four thousand people was filled. The admissions were by ticket, and thus crowding was largely avoided, and many of the class most needing the Gospel were reached. On Thursday evening, at a meeting for men only, thirty rose for prayer, and at a similar service Friday evening, there were 104 inquirers. The interest permeates all classes of the community; and all denominations co-operate in the meetings. The remarkably fine acoustic properties of the hall, which was built for a market, enable the speakers to be heard by every one of the audience. A meeting for ministers was held Saturday afternoon, and meetings for Christian workers, non-church goers, women, and for young men on Sunday.

—Bro. C. B. Ward of the Telugu Faith Mission at Secunderabad, India, tells in the March number of his paper, the India Methodist Watchman, of the trying experiences and blessed deliverances of the mission. From June to November, 1884, the Lord tried the brother by reducing his income. He struggled through, selling old exchange papers, and making every shift of economy. But since November the cup of blessings has overflowed. There has been contributed to the mission 11,000 reals, and four new helpers have joined themselves to the mission. Bro. Ward has twenty children in his orphanage.

—The Presbyterian church in the United States at present has fifteen Indian missions among the following tribes: Senecas, Chippewas, Omahas, Creeks, Dakotas, Seminoles, and Nez Perces. These missions have an aggregate of 1,256 communicants. They also have ten schools, with an aggregate of 389 scholars.

—The foreign mission work in Germany has suffered a severe loss in the death of Theodore Harms, of Hermansburg, in Hanover, the leading spirit of the Hermansburg Missionary Society, that has labored with so great success in South Africa, East India, and China. His brother, Louis Harms, founded this society with no capital but fervent faith, and found this an excellent investment. Since his death, his now deceased brother Theodore has proved himself a worthy successor.

—Bethany Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, Rev. A. T. Pierson, D. D., pastor, will soon be straitened for room. Two Sabbaths since the pastor welcomed one hundred and thirty-nine new communicants.

—A Methodist revival in Phœnix, Ari., lately, was the first protracted revival meeting ever held in Arizona. The encouragement to the church was so great that a Sunday-school association has been formed to build up and organize auxiliary schools. All churches were represented.

—Says a correspondent from Scotland: "The Salvation army is dying out in Scotland, and for this chief reason, I believe, that the churches are being warmed at the heart, and are waking and reaching out the hands of brotherhood and Christ to those masses from whom for so long they had gathered up their skirts. They are becoming more missionary to the home-foreign heathen. And, of course, when the churches do their whole business in this respect, God's protest and expostulation through the Salvationists will cease, and drums and banners and fanaticism will be no more."

—A circular has been issued, signed by many of the leading ministers and journalists of Chicago, stating that they are acquainted with the Rev. P. A. Seguin, and heartily approving the enterprise in which he is interested, that of erecting in this city a French Protestant Evangelical tabernacle. Liberal subscriptions are asked for in order to promote the enterprise. The finance committee of the enterprise consists of the Rev. Thomas Parry, D. D., pastor of the Jefferson Park Presbyterian church, and J. A. Mack, superintendent of the Chicago Bible Society. The elders of the tabernacle are Paul Pouliot, E. N. Duquesne; trustees, N. P. Hynes, A. L. Le Beau, Alex L. Le Beau; pastor, Rev. P. A. Seguin, No. 44 Blue Island avenue.

—The first meeting of the American Congress of Churches will be held in Hartford, Conn., beginning May 11. The object of this congress is "to promote Christian union, and to advance the kingdom of God, by a free discussion of the great religious, moral, and social questions of the time." The international committee will meet next week to arrange Sunday-school lessons for another seven years. The general management of the congress is in the hands of a council of twenty-five, in which the various churches of America are unofficially represented by clergymen or laymen, or both. This council has no intention of establishing a society, or organizing a plan of union, or putting forth a creed; it simply aims, by holding public meetings from time to time, to make provisions for a full and frank discussion of the great questions in which the Christians of America are interested, including those ecclesiastical and theological questions upon which Christians differ. The council is a self-perpetuating body, not composed of delegates elected by ecclesiastical organizations, and therefore not officially responsible to any church or association. Its executive organ is a committee of seven, chosen from its own members, whose business it is to make arrangements for an annual public meeting and to conduct its various sessions in such a manner as to further the interests of common Christianity.

MISSIONARIES IN AFRICA.

A Washington dispatch of the 6th inst. says that the United States Consul at Sierre Leone, has informed the State Department of the arrival at that place of William Taylor, the American Bishop for Africa, together with Dr. Somers and Mr. Chatelaine, on or about the 2d of January, on their way to Liberia, where they will stop a short time before proceeding to St. Paul de Loando. There arrived also at Sierre Leone, on Feb. 19, another party of missionaries, forty in number, on their way to Loando. They intend to proceed toward the interior of Africa in hopes of meeting a party starting from the eastern coast. The Consul expresses much anxiety for the fate of these people, sixteen of whom are children, the two youngest being 15 and 23 months old. Should they arrive at Loando, they will have made a voyage of over 8,000 miles from New York, via Liverpool. They propose going 1,000 miles at least into the interior.

The Consul says he is constantly asked what these missionaries are going to do with the children, and people who know the coasts do not hesitate to say that it is absolutely wicked to bring them out here where they have many chances to die and only a few to live. "It would no doubt be well," the Consul continues, "for missionary societies at home to consider well before contracting the expense and responsibility of sending an expedition to the wilds of Africa." He hopes for the best, but says: "We are prepared to hear sad news within a year from this little band, who go out with light hearts, not knowing what is before them."

The kind-hearted Consul does not evidently consider the power of God to aid this feeble company in overcoming the dangers of their way. As for the danger of the climate, there would seem to be no good reason why white men cannot live in the Congo Valley with tolerable health and comfort. Mr. Stanley thinks they can do so by a proper observance of the laws of living in that climate, and this is the opinion of many others who have written on the subject. The temperature is very equable. In one year in which observations were taken, the highest reading of the thermometer was 97.16 degrees on Nov. 5th, and the lowest was 53 degrees on July 29th., giving a variation of only 43.56 for the year.

OBITUARY.

Sad Bereavements.—In January last, Mrs. Marx, daughter of S. E. Miller, with her husband, came from Great Bend, Pa., to minister to her sick brother, Charles Miller, in his last illness, bringing with her her two children, having already parted with her first born. Soon after her arrival at the precious old home, both of the lovely children sickened and died, leaving the dear parents childless. Judge of the ordeal, ye fathers and mothers, of returning to a home made empty and as it were homeless by the silence of the music of sweet voices and little feet.

But the sad record ends not here. Bro. Marx returns to the sad home alone and leaves "Sunie" to take charge of the sick brother "Charley" (pet names) to the end of life, fast ebbing away. Monday, February 9th, he closed his eyes to earth to open them on the glorious "things unseen which are eternal." The funeral, conducted by your humble correspondent, took place Feb. 12 at the Baptist church, Clifford, Pa.

Charley was a young man of rare qualities in his mental and social make-up, and had a very large circle of admiring friends. To human view his future for life and brilliant achievements was bright, but brighter still the future of the soul made "full indeed" by the Son of God. He fell asleep, to all appearance, leaning on the promise of the Son of God, "How much more will your Father in heaven give good gifts to them who ask him."

Let those who read the Cynosure pray for the afflicted parents of the departed dear ones. This obituary should have appeared weeks ago but for the illness of your correspondent. Nathan Callender.

Thompson, Pa.

Jeptha M. Feemster was born September 24, 1857, and was the fifth and youngest son of William D. Feemster, Sr. His mother died when he was but eighteen months old, and his father gave him into the charge of his cousin Isabel, the elder sister of Rev. Paul S. Feemster, of Kansas. When five years old he took the contagious camp fever from returning soldiers and for some time his death was expected. During this sickness his father fell a pray to the same disease and died, leaving his little son still sick. He was early and carefully trained in Scriptural knowledge and became a child of God by faith. When his cousin, Rev. S. C. Feemster, was publishing the Christian Republic at Columbus, some twelve years ago, Jeptha took great pleasure in assisting him in the work; and continued after the death of that lamented and godly man to assist largely in the office. He desired for some time to come to Wheaton and pursue an educational course as a preparation for usefulness among his people at the South. "This inspiration," writes Miss Feemster, "came to him one morning at early dawn by the impression upon his mind of some lines of Longfellow's Psalm of Life, of which he was very fond. Arise and go, seemed to come the word to him, for 'God's own arm hath need of thine.' His countenance seemed to be lighted up with heavenly joy as he told of his inspiring dream. He raised his crop and got all his other arrangements made; the difficulties in his way being removed, he went, bound in spirit, to Wheaton and Chicago, not knowing the things that awaited him."

In his new relations he gained many firm friends, whose esteem for his faithful, humble and consistent piety increased with time, and in his final illness was manifested in many acts of kind assistance.

The following tribute from a friend and relative was well merited:

Bro. Feemster was an earnest Christian, always choosing to associate with exemplary Christains, and was noted for his kindness to all God's creatures and a strict observance of his laws. The most prominent trait of his character was faithfulness in all that he considered his duty to God and man. Whatever he did was done well. A strong Anti-mason, he opposed secret orders from the best motives and the enemies of the reform respect him. To the young he was an example in meekness, often repeating, "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." It was the earnest prayer of his friends here that if it was God's will he might recover and come back and work in the South as was his wish, but God called him to a better place. To his relatives and friends here and brothers and kindred in distant States I would say, Let us "sorrow not as those who have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." In his last letter home which was dated February 26, he penned the following words:

"'I will never leave thee nor forsake thee.'

"'They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed but abideth forever."

"'As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people.'

"But where shall I stop? Blessed Bible! Book of God. I wish you knew how glad I am that from a child I have known the Holy Scriptures which are able to make me wisc unto salvation."

ELI TAPLEY.

Columbus, Miss.

BUTTERCUPS AND CLOVER.

POEM—BY ALICE M. BALL OF PITTSFIELD, MASS.

The many friends Miss Ball has gained through her writings, especially those who have known of her long years of physical suffering and subsequent healing through prayer, will be glad to know that she has just published a volume of her poems with a view to helping herself and her widowed mother with the proceeds. We earnestly desire that our readers shall aid her by purchasing copies of this pretty volume. Among other expressions of deep feeling the book contains the sweet poem which has appealed to the hearts of so many sufferers, "Lost, the Sound of Footsteps." This was composed during her helplessness, and she has added one written since her healing, "Regained, the Sound of Footsteps." The book is beautifully bound in cloth and gilt. Sent postpaid upon receipt of $1. Address Miss Carrie F. Judd, 260 Connecticut st., Buffalo, N. Y., or Miss A. M. Ball, Pittsfield, Mass.

FOR TEN YEARS.

We are informed that Dr. Peiro, the prominent specialist for throat and lung diseases, has leased a handsome suite of offices on the second floor in the new Chicago Opera House, now building on the corner of Washington and Clark streets, for the usual term of ten years, beginning first of May next. By this fact we infer that the Doctor is a fixture in Chicago. His residence among us of eleven years and his great skill in his specialty have served to secure for him an extended reputation and lucrative practice. His offices will be headquarters for his renowned OXYGEN treatment.

Home is woman's domain and she is entitled to everything that can add to its comfort and spare her annoyance. "The STERNBERGER FOLDING DRESS PILLOW" is one of the many conveniences which materially lighten the labor and burdens of the housewife. An advertisement in another column gives full details in regard to this favorite article, which is meeting with such remarkable sale wherever it is introduced.

—Tennessee has an unenviable reputation respecting the men she has sent to the Presidential chair. She has furnished three Presidents, all of whom were Masons. Gen. Jackson was Grand Master in 1822–23, James K. Polk was made a Mason in Columbia Lodge No. 31, September 4, 1820. Andrew Johnson was also made a Mason in Tennessee and received the order of Knighthood in Washington while he was Vice President.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

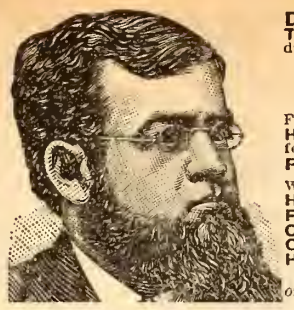
Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A.	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men,	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire,"	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.



Having elastic side sections, adapts itself to the various positions of the body in stooping, sitting & reclining. It affords great relief and comfort to the many who find ordinary Corsets oppressive. The "TRICORA" stays used for boning are unequaled for durability & comfortable support, & are absolutely unbreakable.

The most Durable, Comfortable, and Healthful Corset ever sold for its price.

Every pair warranted to give satisfaction or money returned.

J. G. FITZPATRICK & CO., Mfrs.,
71 Leonard Street, NEW YORK.
Please mention this paper in ordering.

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored. Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:

Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - - New York.

N. B.—Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER IS THE "WAUKESHA GLENN!"

HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS, NATURAL OR ARTIFICIAL.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

Have you a mind of your own?

If so, listen to us just a moment. You are not enjoying good health; you have tried internal medicine, and you are not well yet. Now, why will you not put prejudice aside, and try our treatment? We will send you, on trial, one of our ELECTRO-MEDICATED APPLIANCES to suit your case, provided you agree to pay for it, if it cures you in one month. If it does not cure you, it costs you nothing. Is not this a fair offer?

Different Appliances to cure DYSPEPSIA, RHEUMATISM, LIVER AND KIDNEY DISEASES, PILES, LUNG DISEASES, ASTHMA, CATARRH, LAME BACK, AGUE, DEBILITY, and many other Diseases. Remember, we do not ask you to buy them, blindly; but merely to try them, at our risk. 125,000 Cures made during 1884, in cases where all other treatments had failed. PRICE VERY LOW. Illustrated book, giving full particulars, and blank for statement of your case, sent free. Address, at once,

ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO.,
564 State Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.
AGENTS WANTED.

Library of Science.

The publication of our SCIENCE LIBRARY will be welcomed as an event of the highest importance to thousands. For the first time it brings within their reach the scholarly productions of the MASTERS in modern science. Each work is complete in itself, well printed from good or large type, on excellent paper, bound in neat paper covers. In cloth-bound books these same works have heretofore been published at prices ranging from $1.50 to $3.00 each.

	PRICE.
By JOHN TYNDALL, F. R. S.
The Forms of Water in Clouds and Rivers, Ice and Glaciers. 19 illus.	15c
Lessons in Electricity. 60 Illustrations	15c
Six Lectures on Light, with illustrations	15c
By HERBERT SPENCER.
Education: Intellectual, Moral and Physical	15c
The Data of Ethics	15c
Progress: Its Law and Cause, with other Disquisitions	15c
By THOMAS H. HUXLEY, F. R. S.
Man's Place in Nature; numerous illustrations	15c
Origin of Species	15c
Physical Basis of Life, with other Essays	15c
Lectures on Evolution; illustrated	15c
Animal Automatism and other Essays	15c
By BALFOUR STEWART, LL.D.
The Conservation of Energy; with numerous illustrations	15c
By CHARLES DARWIN.
The Origin of Species	60c
By RICHARD A. PROCTOR, F. R. A. S.
Light Science for Leisure Hours	15c
Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects	15c
Hereditary Traits, and other Essays	15c
By WALTER BAGEHOT.
Physics and Politics	15c
By CHARLES KINGSLEY.
Town Geology	15c
By ALEXANDER BAIN.
Mind and Body	15c
By CAMILLE FLAMMARION.
The Wonders of the Heavens	15c
By JOHN GARDNER, M.D.
Longevity: The Means of Prolonging Life	15c
By R. K. MILLER, M.A.
The Romance of Astronomy	15c
By GRANT ALLEN.
The Evolutionist at Large	15c
Vignettes from Nature	15c
By PROF. H. HELMHOLTZ.
Popular Scientific Lectures, illustrated	15c
By GEORGE RAWLINSON.
The Origin of Nations	15c
By ANDREW WILSON, Ph.D.
Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Numerous illustrations	15c
By RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH.
On the Study of Words	30c
By ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, F. R. S.
Geological Sketches	30c
By HUXLEY, AGASSIZ and Others.
Darwin and Humboldt	15c
By W. STANLEY JEVONS, F. R. S.
Money and the Mechanism of Exchange	30c

Any of the above sent postpaid on receipt of the price.

IN BOUND VOLUMES:—All of the above, with numerous other important works in Science, are published also in five large octavo volumes, aggregating 3,381 pages, neatly bound in cloth, for the net price of $5.50 per set; or strongly bound in half Russia, red edges, for the net price of $6.50. If by mail, 20 per cent. extra required for prepayment.

100-PAGE CATALOGUE sent free. The best literature of the world at the lowest prices ever known. Books sent for EXAMINATION BEFORE PAYMENT on reasonable evidence of good faith. Mention this paper. Address

JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher,
P. O. Box 1227. 393 Pearl Street, New York.

FARM AND GARDEN.

CELERY.

If you want some early celery for use in September and October, try the following plan: Select a rich piece of ground and as soon as the frost is out of the surface, mark out rows 15 to 21 inches apart. Drill in two rows of radish or lettuce or beets or cabbage or cauliflower or turnips or early red onions, or any crop which will be off the ground in June or July. Sow the third row to celery. Then sow two more rows with the crops that are to be transplanted or removed early; then sow the third row with celery, and so on till you have sown so much celery as you desire. Sow the celery seed thick—say a dozen or more seeds to each inch of row. It is not necessary to cover the seed. If you sow as early as is desirable we shall have rain and snow and frost sufficient to wash it into the ground and cover it. It will be three or four weeks before the plants come up. The moment they appear and when the ground is dry hoe on each side of the row and pull out any weeds you can see. In doing this if you pull out a few celery plants, no matter; you have plenty of them. Keep the ground well hoed, and as soon as the plants begin to crowd, dash the hoe through them as you do in hoeing turnips, leaving the bunches of celery plants six or eight inches apart in the row. Later, go over the piece and thin out the plants, leaving only one in a place six or eight inches apart. Nothing more is needed for several weeks, except to keep the ground well hoed or cultivated and entirely free from weeds. The sooner the other two rows of plants can be removed the better, and as soon as they are removed keep the whole ground between the rows of celery well hoed or cultivated and begin to work the soil up towards the plants. Handle and blanch the celery in the ordinary way,

The advantages of this plan are: 1st. It saves the labor of transplanting; 2nd. It saves the labor of starting the plants in a hot-bed; 3d. You will get earlier and larger plants and with less labor.—Harris' Moreton Farm Seed Catalogue.

PREPARE FOR THE HATCHING SEASON.

The time is at hand for the interested poultryman and thrifty farmer who thinks that fowls properly managed are good stock on the farm, to make preparations for the annual setting of eggs and hatching of chickens. Pullets coming out in April will begin to lay in October and with good care will continue to lay all winter, when eggs are scarce and high, and cockerels will bring more for broilers at three months old than when raised later and kept much longer. Use only those hens for setters that are quiet and not inclined to be nervous, for they will make surer hatchers and better mothers. A hen that is uneasy and off the nest frequently should not be depended upon. Provide hens with large, flattish nests, and place whole corn and fresh water each day near them. It is very necessary to keep their bodies and nests free from vermin. Filth causes weakness and disease, and the product of a slovenly kept flock of fowls will be weak and unprofitable.—Agriculturist.

CATARRH CURED!

A clergyman, after suffering a number of years from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, after trying every known remedy without success, at last found a prescription which completely cured and saved him from death. Any sufferer from this dreadful disease sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Dr. J. A. Lawrence, 199 Dean St., Brooklyn, New York, will receive the recipe free of charge.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

NELSON'S

Sunday School Books and Cards.

Approved by all Evangelical Denominations.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

T. NELSON & SONS, 42 Bleecker St., N.Y.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address

T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contraditions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finucy of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl. 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE,

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100, $3.60. Address.

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND BOOK OF Freemasonry,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge. No. 639, Chicago.

Gives the correct or "Standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustriated and explained. In short, it is

A Complete and Accurate Lodge Manual.

The high standing of Mr. Ronayne in the fraternity, his popularity and success as a teacher and lecturer in the Lodge, together with the testimony of high Masonic authority, leaves no doubt of the accuracy of this work. It is rapidly becoming a standard work in the hands of ACTING LODGE OFFICIALS, and those who desire to post themselves on the workings of the order. The price is so low that it is within the reach of all. Sent postpaid securely wrapped on receipt of price. 184 pages, Paper covers, 35 cents. Elegant cloth with beveled edges and gilt stamp, $1.00. Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—

Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminisences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO, ILL.

IN BRIEF.

One of the greatest vegetable curiosities in existence is on exhibition in Nevada. It is a potato vine filled with well-developed potatoes which grew in the open air like tomatoes, only differing from ordinary potatoes by having a slight green tinge.

As an example of their stoicism it is said that in an Indian fight with soldiers in the west a squaw concealed her little girl in a barrel, telling her to remain perfectly quiet, whatever happened. After the battle the child was found with her arm shattered by a minie ball but she had uttered not a sound.

At Wilkesbarre, Pa., there has recently been manufactured a wire rope one mile and 500 feet in length and 2½ inches in diameter. Its total weight is 32 tons and its tensile weight has been tested up to 92 tons. It is made of six strands of wire rope, each a little over ¾ of an inch thick, and composed of nineteen wires. These six strands are wound round a hemp rope, which though not supposed to add strength to the cable gives it flexibility. The best Swedish iron was used. Such a cable is estimated to be capable of hauling up the planes eight or nine million tons of coal before being worn out. It cost $4,000.

An old lady, aged sixty, was seated mending her son's stockings in his house in one of the suburbs, when a tramp entered and asked for something to eat. The old lady went to the pantry, and when she came back her gold-rimmed spectacles were gone. She said to the tramp, "You've got my specs." He denied it. Quietly laying down the plate, she went to a bureau, took a revolver therefrom, pointed it at the tramp, and told him that if he did not lay "those specs" on the table she would shoot him where he stood. The tramp took the spectacles from his pocket, and mildly laid them down. "Now," said she, "eat what I have brought for you and get out." He ate and departed. When her son appeared, the old lady, again taking the revolver from the bureau, said to him, "Augustus, how do you cock this weapon?"

Sun Storms.—How can we, who are bewildered and appalled by the fury of our planet's cyclones and volcanic eruptions, form a conception of the terrible energy of natural operations on the sun? Prof. Newcomb suggests that if we call the solar chromosphere an ocean of fire, we must remember that it is an ocean hotter than the fiercest furnace, and as deep as the Atlantic is broad. If we call its movements hurricanes, we must remember that our hurricanes blow only about a hundred miles an hour, while those of the chromosphere blow as far in a single second. They are such hurricanes as, coming down upon us from the north, would, in thirty seconds after they had crossed the St. Lawrence, be in the Gulf of Mexico, carrying with them the whole surface of the continent in a mass, not simply of ruin, but of glowing vapor, in which the vapors arising from the dissolution of the materials composing the cities of Boston, New York and Chicago would be mixed in a single indistinguishable cloud. When we speak of eruptions we call to mind Vesuvius burying the surrounding cities in lava; but the solar eruptions, thrown fifty thousand miles high, would engulf the whole earth, and dissolve every organized being on its surface in a moment.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

For Sick Headache.

Dr. N. S. Read, Chicago, says: "I think it is a remedy of the highest value in many forms of mental and nervous exhaustion, attended by sickheadache, dyspepsia and diminished vitality."

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the Firat Seven Degrees of Freemaaonry, Legally Atteated by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00: per dozen $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees, in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and hiased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to he searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers. 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 35 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 25c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, gripe, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keyatone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete hooks of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The Un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1.25.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen. $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as fonnd in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved 15 cents each. per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 304 pages; cloth, $1

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

President Cleveland Tuesday evening issued a proclamation declaring President Arthur's order opening the Winnebago reservation in Dakota to settlement inoperative and void, and notifying all persons on such lands to remove their effects within sixty days. Settlers failing to do so will be removed by force.

Capt. Couch, leader of the Oklahoma boomers, having been assured by Secretary Lamar that the government would not permit any intrusion upon those lands and that it was the determination to drive the cattle men out, asked if that was the final decision. Being told that it was, he left the Secretary's presence in sullen silence.

The silver men expect the whole power of the administration to be brought against them in the next Congress, and say that the fight has already begun over the organizatiou of the House; that Mr. Randall's friends are working for him for the speakership and are backed by the administration.

The President, Friday approved of the sentence of the court-martial in the case of Gen. Wm. B. Hazen, adjudged guilty of "indulging in unwarranted and captious criticism of his superior officer," the Secretary of War. After being thus reprimanded, the Chief Signal Officer was discharged from arrest and ordered to resume his duties.

COUNTRY.

The bill for the establishment of a public park around Niagara Falls, and appropriating money to pay for the lands, was passed by the New York Assembly Thursday with the Senate amendments.

The grand jury at Salt Lake City returned two indictments Thursday under the United States Statute, supposed to be for polygamy and include Bishop H. B. Clawson and Mr. Rossiter, of the theater.

The grand jury at Wheeling, Friday, reported 125 indictments—an ex-governor, a candidate for United States Senator, the head of one of the State departments, prominent merchants and manufacturers, society men, attorneys and others being indicted for gambling. An alderman and other city officials are on the list, and respected real estate owners and agents are also set down for renting houses for immoral purposes.

After a trial lasting over a month, Jas. D. Fish, ex-president of the Marine Bank, has been found guilty of misapplying its funds and making false entries on the books, with intent to defraud the bank and deceive the bank examiner. The indictment originally contained twenty-five counts and the jury found Fish guilty on twelve.

Orson P. Arnold, a leading Mormon, pleaded guilty to unlawful co-habitation Monday at Salt Lake City and stated to the court that he would abandon polygamy and obey the laws, upon which Judge Zane imposed a fine of but $300.

A ten-pound can of gunpowder was exploded Thursday night in the cellar-opening of a boarding house at Baltimore, where a number of non-union glass-blowers lived. The house was wrecked and the union men are charged with the crime as they had threatened to take the lives of the "scabs."

The Fall River manufacturers of print Monday afternoon in New York eight five-story tenements on W. Sixty-second street collapsed and fell to the ground, a mass of ruins, and burying many workmen. Nearly a score of carpenters, lathers, plumbers and others were extricated from the debris and taken to their homes or to the hospital. Threats of lynching were made against the contractors owing to the faulty construction, but they had decamped.

Capt. Phelan telegraphs from Kansas City that it will be impossible for him to go to New York at this term of court to prosecute Dick Short, who stabbed him in Rossa's office. Short remains in the Tombs.

FOREIGN.

In regard to the Afghan troubles very little seems to be known outside of diplomatic circles as to the actual situation, but it is believed that negotiations for an amicable settlement are progressing, although there is no abatement of preparations for war. Armed merchantmen have been ordered to the South African cape, Bombay, Sydney, and other important points. Negotiations for the purchase of the greater part of the Chilian navy have been concluded by the English government. Austria and Germany are reported to have warned the Porte that the Berlin treaty will be annulled if either British or English warships are allowed to pass through the Bosphorus. A Russian prince in Paris has received a personal telegram from the Czar, in which he expresses strong hope that peace will be preserved by mutual concessions.

The basis of peace has been accepted by San Salvador and Guatemala. Hostilities have ceased. A general amnesty has been proclaimed and awaits the approval of the allies. The plenipotentiaries will meet in Acajulta to arrange a definite treaty of peace.

Reports from Battleford, Manitoba, are that the beleagued people are starving. The Indians are burning and pillaging. Prince Albert is in bad condition and it is feared that Reil's forces have captured Fort Pitt and massacred the people. Gen. Middleton is pressing forward, but his ammunition and commissary department are said to be in a wretched state.

General Graham reports from the Soudan that the roads are now in condition to make work on the Suakim-Berber railway easy. Osman Digna is trying to collect followers for the purpose of compelling the desert tribes to furnish him supplies. The natives report that Osman Digna's forces have gradually dispersed as the British cut off their supplies of water and forage.

Orders to cease hostilities were sent from France to Admiral Courbet and Gen. De l'Isle on the 10th. French troops however are still embarking for Tonquiu. The terms of a preliminary treaty of of peace between Chiua and France are published.

BUSINESS.

If any have sent in clubs of five or more and have not been properly remunerated it is hoped that they will write at once to the publisher. Many prefer to donate their work for the good of the cause, but any who are entitled to anything for work done for the Cynosure will confer a favor if they will let it be known.

It is gratifying to have so many self-sacrificing co-workers for the Cynosure. But let us not forget during this busy season that less than one-half cent per working day will secure the Cynosure to your friend for a whole year! And eight numbers will be sent to one address for twenty-five cents.

Many kind words of commendation for the paper are received, which are appreciated by your agents and co-workers here. But attention now is especially called to the extracts from letters from ministers located in the South. They have received the paper as a donation from old friends of the Cynosure, who have thus started the reform leaven in new fields, not only widening and extending but also deepening the work of our agent, Rev. H. H. Hinman, in previous years.

Extracts from some of these letters will be continued from week to week for a short time that donors may learn something of the effect of their benevolence.

From Friendsville, Tenn.:

"The Cynosure is a paper that I do not know how I could do without. I think no one can read it without being benefited. Thanks to that friend for his or her kindness. After I read the paper I give or send it to a neighbor."

From Hempstead, Tex.:

"For two or three months some friend has kindly sent me the Cynosure. This paper is read with interest by me and then given to our young folks. I approve of most that appears in its columns and think if a check could be put upon the craze among the young colored people for the 'mysterious societies,' much money could be saved, time improved, health prolonged, and in many instances souls saved for eternity."

From Dallas, Tex.:

"I do heartily endorse the high Christian stand which you and your paper take for 'prohibition and Jesus Christ' against intemperance and secret societies. There are no two evils so hostile to the church of Jesus Christ as whiskey and lodgery. They are specially destructive to the colored people of this place. The colored churches are little better than dead from the evils above named. * * * Of the many Christian family papers that come to my home, the Cynosure stands second to none. If the person whose generosity sends me this paper knew how much good his gift has done myself and family and the church, he or she would be encouraged to continue in the distribution of such papers for Christ's sake."

LETTERS

Containing cash for Cynosure received during the week, ending Friday, April 17:

Lois B Smith, Wilson Milligan, C M Strickler, Jos Luce, John Bell, Jacob D Bell, Alvin Acker, Geo R Milton, A J Foord, David Wylie, Alexander Sutor, Wm Featherston, J L Buchwalter, S Daniels, Mrs S T Reed, Menno Bowman, Eliza Tuttle, P P Jayne, J O Risheill, E P Chambers, John W Trees, J S Howe, H L Kellogg, A Wright, Daniel Varney, J R Baxter, Sam'l A Pratt, James D Smith, Geo S Carlisle, J S Yaukey, E Aikins, M Beecher, Norman Jacobs, H. H. Shepard, Rev J C Telford, Richard Burton.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

Is a charming illustrated magazine, published by J. F. Avery, Halifax, Nova Scotia, containing forty pages monthly of anecdote and argument for the Christian home. Every number is profusely and finely illustrated. We shall be happy to introduce this magazine to hundreds of American homes and have secured a special arrangement from the proprietor. Buds and Blossoms is 75 cents per year. With the Cynosure the two will be $2.25, or any subscriber who has already paid for this paper can get the magazine at the same rate.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	85½	@86
No. 3	82	@84
Winter No 2	92½	@93
Corn—No. 2		47
Oats—No. 2	34	37
Rye—No. 2		66½
Bran per ton		14 25
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@12 00
Mess pork per bbl		11 85
Butter, medium to best	12	@25
Cheese	05	@10½
Beans	55	@1 45
Eggs		13
Potatoes per bus	55	65
Seeds—Timothy	1 40	@1 50
Flax	1 30	1 45
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 15	@5 52
Common to good	3 65	@5 00
Hogs	3 90	@4 75
Sheep	2 00	@5 35

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 40	@6 15
Wheat—Winter	82	@1 00
Spring		95
Corn	53	@54
Oats	39	@43
Mess Pork		3 00
Eggs		15
Butter		28
Wool		@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	80	@5 50
Hogs	00	@4 25
Sheep	1 50	@3 50

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND-PAINTED SILKS for Patchwork, Tidies, Screens, etc. Send $1 for package, or 50 cts. for beautiful samples. WESTERN ART CO., Salem, O.

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to Rev. Chiniqay, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED!

Rider's Improved Pillow-Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars and see what it is any way.

E. W. RIDER.
Racine, Wis.

Mention the Christian Cynosure.

HOW TO BUILD

A HOUSE.

A book containing plans for twenty-five houses of all sizes from two rooms up; also several barns; sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents, by

GEO. W. OGILVIE,
234 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE NOVELTY

RUG MACHINE.

[PAT. DEC. 27, 1881.]

Makes Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc., with ease and rapidity. Price only one dollar. Single machine, with full directions, sent by mail on receipt of price. Agents wanted. Apply for circulars to E. ROSS & CO., Patentees and Sole Manufacturers, Toledo, Ohio, Lock Box 184; also Manufacturers of Rug Patterns.

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $10 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill. Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.

PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts., sent post-paid. Address,

BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.

MENTION THIS PAPER

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

STERNBERGER'S
Folding Dress Pillow.

folds into one-twentieth of its size when closed and weighs but two pounds.

Perfection, Durability, Simplicity.

The Folding Dress Pillow is simply perfect. Can be folded in a second and put any where. We guarantee one pillow to outwear a dozen old style stuffed sham pillows. Housekeepers buy them on sight.

$2.00 PER PAIR,
delivered on receipt of price.

THE PIQUA M'F'G CO., Piqua, Ohio, Or Frank A. Hall, 200 Canal St., New York. John P. Fowler, 306 State St., Chicago, Ill. Fred. Walpert & Co., 28 N. Gay St., Baltimore, and Furniture Dealers Generally.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 32. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1885. WHOLE No. 783.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

UBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
F PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the ubscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian ynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be iven. No manuscript returned unless requested and ostage enclosed.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter]

CONTENTS.

DITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
The Situation..... 8
The United Brethren General Conference..... 8
A Bad Exchange..... 8
Lunacy..... 8
ONTRIBUTIONS:
A Mother and her Daughters..... 1
Secret Temperance Orders 2
Week-day Sermon..... 2
Religion and the Working Classes..... 2
ELECTED:
The Times Need Men (Poetry)..... 3
The International..... 3
EFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chaps. XVII and XVIII 4
EFORM NEWS:
Michigan State Meeting; Heroic Effort in Canada; From the Illinois Agent..... 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Outlook; Let us have Faith; Forester Charity a Fraud; Lodge Appropriations; Pith and Point.....5,6
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
EDUCATIONAL..... 9
National Reform Convention..... 9
Mission Work in New Hampshire..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE CHURCHES..... 12
LITERATURE..... 12
SECRET EMPIRE..... 13
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
FARM NOTES..... 14
HOME HINTS..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 13

"Here is something," says the Springfield, Mass., Republican, vauntingly, "to interest people who aguely suspect Freemasonry of atheistical tenences"—and quotes the case of the agnostic Harison at Toronto who was expelled the other day from he order. The Interior, too, sweetens its late frank nd true judgment of the lodge by a note on the same natter. On the other hand Mrs. Garfield, Mrs. Hayes nd some hundred other ladies are laboring to resue France "from the infidel," who is no other than he Freemason. From Voltaire down such have been he French Freemasons. Or, if an instance is needd nearer home, take the case of an infidel at Kipon, Ohio, whose family could not find any so-called Liberal" speaker to attend his funeral. They, herefore, had him buried by the lodges of Gibson nd Oberlin, to one of which he belonged, though n avowed materialist.

The delicate position of one who approaches a nan of General Grant's standing on the subject of is eternal salvation appears in a press paragraph vhich mentions the "annoyance" to which the sick nan is subjected by Dr. Newman, "encouraged by he women of the family." Senator Chaffee, growlngly said the other day, "He ought to be let alone on that subject. It's a shame to pester him." Such is the world's estimate of the value of eternal ife. How often and sadly it changes too late! It s a satisfaction to know that Gen. Grant is not indifferent to the claims of religion. Many are the prayers that have arisen for his mortal life, let them be no less earnest that, now a brief space is yet allowed him in time, he may not forget that there are realities also in eternity.

A series of discourses on the sanctity and authorty of the Christian Sabbath by Rev. W. F. Crafts ttracted much attention in this city last year. They vere delivered in the First Congregational church luring the pastor's vacation. Mr. Crafts has since ssued them in book form as "The Sabbath for Man." nd is devoting the proceeds of its sale to carrying on the war against Sabbath desecration. He has prepared and is now circulating a petition to Congress, asking that it will instruct the Postmaster Jeneral to make no contracts for Sunday mails; forbiding inter-State Sunday trains; and that all military drills, parades and musters of U. S. soldiers and mariners may be forbidden on that day. Such a petition deserves the signature of every American citizen.

The House of Lords discussed the Sabbath question not long since in considering a motion to open the Natural History Museum at South Kensington on that day. The motion was lost by a single vote. Last year the proposition to open all museums, libraries, picture galleries, etc., was lost by a considerable majority. During the debate it was stated that the workingmen had given their voice against such openings, since it was certain that they would be followed by demands for labor on the Sabbath. While 79,000 petitioned for it, 524,000 signed against it. Of 154 public museums provided in English cities but four opened their doors on Lord's day. Several cities tried the experiment of opening and abandoned it shortly. The current of English feeling is toward a closer observance of the day. Many can remember when the royal receptions were on the Sabbath, but that is now a thing of the past; so is the London postal delivery, a remarkable fact in such a metropolis—and so are they all remarkable facts which mark a growing respect for the religious observance of the day whose sacred influence must preserve all other days from decay.

The decision of the Supreme Court in Washington last week in the polygamy case of Rudger Clawson, a Mormon elder, has renewed the courage of all who labor for the extinction of the evil. Clawson's case has now been through all the courts and he must now pay his $800 fine and take his four years' imprisonment. The machinery of the law under the new impetus works rapidly. Three arrests were reported the day after the decision, one being of a nephew of Brigham Young, another of a bishop in Idaho. Saturday Bishop Hiram Clawson pleaded guilty at Salt Lake to the charge of polygamy. But all do not submit so easily. Angus M. Cannon, brother of the ex-Congressman, is said to be the only leading Mormon now visible to the public. He is president of the "stake" in which Salt Lake is situated. He was arrested last January, but escaped sentence. Of the Supreme Court decision he expresses surprise, for he knows the Edmunds law is unconstitutional. Yet he set his house in order to obey it, there being no sacrifice to him and his aged wives in the change. He reasserts vehemently his faith in Mormonism: "We believe in marrying only for the purpose of procreating and making an earthly tabernacle for the myriad of spirits waiting to fill them, but I would be torn to pieces before I would give up one jot of my religion. If I was called upon to marry a young woman to-morrow I would do so. I would not pledge myself to live within the Edmunds law for any power in this world. It is our religion. Mormon people will never give up polygamy. They cannot. They will abide the consequences, even imprisonment and death."

The doctrines of the Mormon church are fourfold more dangerous to our free institutions than those of Romanism. Every dangerous element known to the Jesuits, the Mormons possess, and many others. It has its confessional; it has its tithe; it demands and receives implicit and unquestioning submission. Devotion to the church and obedience to its leaders is enjoined above every other virtue. It has, moreover, many elements of a secret society. Its endowment houses, its mysterious doctrine of blood atonement, are powerful engines of wrong. In its inquisitorial grip upon every individual in its communion, it surpasses any system of surveillance ever devised. No freedom, either of act or thought, is allowed its devotees.

In such a hierarchy, with or without polygamous practices, every American trained in the schools of free thought and free action, can see only danger and menace to our country. In five of our great territories there are but a handful of Christians to oppose the march of this enemy. The enforcement of the Edmunds law is a great victory, but it by no means takes all the sting from the church of the Latter Day Saints.—Golden Rule.

THE MOTHER AND HER DAUGHTERS.

BY REV. D. SIMON.

Masonry can boast of being the oldest of modern secret societies. The principles of Masonry are as old as sin, and were first instilled into the hearts of the happy pair dwelling in Paradise. The "Most Worshipful Master" of the hosts of darkness, called by our Saviour the "Prince of this World," has the honor of originating the fundamental principles of secretism. He has shown himself a most powerful secretist, doing his work under the cover of secrecy, appearing unto men in deceptive forms for the purpose of hiding his true character and intentions, for which reason he is called that old Serpent. He understands his work thoroughly and does it like a master. He can succeed best by assuming a form which hides his character, and that form which avoids even suspicion serves his purpose best.

He assumes different forms according to his purpose. Masonry, at first a gathering together of hard working men, and intended to promote the interests of that particular trade, was stripped of its real and original character and made "speculative." In other words, Satan adopted Masonry, made it speculative, and now uses it to accomplish his own ends. Now, speculative Masonry is too "mystic," too difficult, for many classes of men. Some could not be reached by it at all. It became a necessity, in order to exert an influence over all classes of men and in order to control as much as possible, the whole world, to call into existence other societies agreeing substantially with Masonry, differing only in form. Masonry is thus virtually the mother of secret societies. From her, all the modern secret organizations have descended. The blood of the mother is in the veins of every one of her children. The Masonic spirit pervades the whole system of secretism.

We are, however, not willing to admit that every secret society was organized by Masons and is directly under the control of the Masonic lodge, or even of its representative men. That Masons would so desire it, and that this was their original intention may be admitted, but the daughters of Masonry having reached the age of maturity, are about to assert their independence. The daughters are about to leave the parental roof and parental control. They are going to take care of themselves. That which has brought about this state of affairs so rapidly during the last few years, is the introduction of communistic ideas into the so-called labor unions. According to these ideas no higher power, whether God or government, is to be recognized. Such principles fully developed must eventually also throw off the yoke of Masonry. These Masonic daughters are so manifold, that the mother is not able to manage them any longer, and to the terror of Masons and law-abiding citizens they will rise before long to crush whatever may even seem to have authority over them. Masonic grips and signs and pass-words will be of little consequence when the communistic rabble filled with rage on account of oppression, and controlled by atheistic principles, shall rise and assert their liberty.

The fact that the life of the Emperor of Germany is in constant jeopardy is sufficient evidence that Masonry is not controlling, and that because it cannot, the secret anarchist societies of our day. Suppose the Prince of Wales is a Mason and will be protected by Masons, suppose a Mason has organized the Clan-na-Gael and that on Masonic principles, is that sufficient to assure the Prince of Wales that those very men thus organized will not some day plot the overthrow of the English government?

Suppose that Masonry has called into existence societies, whose features indicate their parentage, does that say that they are going to keep control of matters and that the very dynamite intrusted to the rabble will not be used against Masonry?

We confidently believe that Masonry has digged a ditch and is about to fall into it. God in his providence is permitting one beast to devour another. There is trouble in the eamp, and if only no one else wonld need to suffer in consequenee of these tronbles, the secretists might fight it ont and destroy themselves. But as it is, the lives and homes and comforts of the million are involved and we ean only pray the Lord to deliver us from blood-thirsty men.

Prospect, O.

SECRET TEMPERANCE ORDERS.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

DEGREES OF APPROVED AND SELECT TEMPLAR, ORDER OF TEMPLARS OF HONOR AND TEMPERANCE.

The covenants in the three higher degrees are precisely similar to that given. In some instances they are an exact copy; in others they are taken from the chapter degrees of Masonry. Here is an extract from the Approved Templar degree, taken from the Mark Master's degree of the York Rite:

I, ——— ———, of my own free will and aceord, in the presenee of Almighty God, and these T. and A. T's, do most solemnly promise, as I have already promised in my former obligations; and in addition thereto, that I will not give the seerets of this degree to any one excepting to those to whom of right they may belong—that I will obey all lawful signs and notiees given or sent to me by a brother, or any department of the order to whieh I belong, if within my power so to do, and that I will assist, whenever ealled upon, in eonferring this degree on others; provided that such persons are duly qualified to receive it, and that it is conferred in accordanee with the Constitutions and regulations of the Order.

I furthermore promise that I will obey all the laws, rules, and reglations, which are, or may be established for the government of the Couneil Degrees, and that I will faithfully observe the laws and regulations of any Degree Temple to which I may now or hereafter belong.

I furthermore promise, that I will, at my earliest eonvenience, seleet a Signet, for my own private use, and give a eopy of it to the Reeorder of this Couneil, to be by him recorded; and when so selected, I will not alter it, unless some brother has previously seleeted the same Signet, or some brother bequeathed me his Signet, and then only by permission.

That I will never attempt to pledge my Signet, exeept in real distress of myself or family, and that I will not try to pledge it a second time, until redeemed from my former pledge.

That I will not attempt to pledge my Signet to obtain aid, except for myself and family, or the family of a deceased brother. Should a brother present me his Signet, asking peeuniary aid, I will grant his request, if in my power; if not, I will return him his Signet, with at least something of value.

Should a brother send me his Signet asking personal aid, I will go to his relief, if in my power, or I will, at least, endeavor to get a brother to supply my place.

All of which I do now sincerely adopt, and sacredly promise always to keep and perform, with the help of God, as I hope for mercy in my greatest extremity.

This leaves an open door for fraud. The member may go from one to another offering his signet and obtaining aid ad libitum. This is done among Mark Master Masons. What a miserable snbterfuge in the place of Christian charity!

The following from the oath of the Select Templars is copied from that of the Royal Arch degree:

That I will not diselose or cause to be diselosed, or give any clue to the seeret cypher which I shall hereafter be made acquainted with—that I will never make a key to it, or use it in any other manner than as I am instructed on the Symbol.

That I will not give the Grip and Word of a Selcet Templar at any time, either in the Council or out of it, in any other manner than that in which I shall reeeive it, namely, on the triangle of Truth, and never above my breath. That I will never give the Council sign of distress, nor the words accompanying it, exeepting in real distress, or in the business of the Couneil, or in some private place, for the instruction of a Companion. And should I ever see the sign or hear the word, I will go to the relief of the person giving them, if it be at the risk of my life, should there be the least probability of my assisting him.

To all which, I most solemnly promise, without any mental reservation, always to keep and perform, so help me God, as I hope for merey in my greatest extremity.

It will be remembered that the treasonable correspondence betwcen Aaron Burr and Blennerhassett was carried on in the Royal Arch cypher. Such things are well adapted to conspiracies, but wholly needless to honest-hearted men. It is high time they were abandoned. It seems strange that the men who manufactured and the people who work should not be above the practice of trickery and falsehood in the ceremonies of initiation, and yet in the Tried Templars degree there is practiced on the candidate a fraud borrowed from the same Mark Master's degree of the mother order.

The dazed candidate unheralded and unprepared is nshered into the place of meeting. He is immediately seized and denied all right to retreat. He cannot make the signs and no one can vonch for him. His friend who loudly raps at the door is unheeded. He is examined and found wholly unprepared. At last his friend is admitted who pleads for him and he is regularly initiated, and tanght to make the step of a Tried Templar, which is the same as that of an Entered Apprentice Mason, except that the feet are a little farther apart and the angle a little more acnte.

The concluding ceremonies of the Select Templar's degree are a sort of re-hash of the leetures in different Masonic degrees. As an explanation, the eandidate is told:

1. That he was divested of his outer garment. This is to teaeh him that it is not his outward appearance in which he must trust, etc.

2. He was clothed in a blaek robe. This was to teach him solemnity, etc.

3. He was led through darkness. This was typical of darkness of the soul.

4. He passed throngh the waters of affliction, whieh was necessary to eleanse his soul.

5. He was passed through a fiery furnace to show that he has been tried in the fire.

6. He is placed in the grave that his soul may receive the rewards of its labors.

The symbols of the order (all borrowed from Freemasonry) are as follows;

The Symbols of this Degree are the Circle, Serpent, Ark, Stream, Altar of Ineense, Rising Flame, Grave, Tomb, Evergreen, Index, Union or Clasped Hands, Blessing Hands, Praying or Joined Hands, Tongue, Heart, and Temple.

We are told that the circle represents the power of God; the Serpent, wisdom; the ark, safety; the stream of water, pnrity; Altar of Incense, a grateful heart; Flame, the soul or spirit; the Grave, tomb and evergreen reminds of death; the Index, onr jonrney; clasped hands, friendship; joined hands, that a blessing will follow onr honest endeavor; the tongue, that we must curb our speech; the heart, a token of affection; and the Temple points to the Temple above, "not made with hands eternal in the heavens."

How passing strange that people who have the Gospel of Christ should invent and practice snch folly! And how incomprehensible is the condnct of those who because of the snpposed good in the secret temperance orders tolerate all the grosser abominations of Freemasonry!

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Among the most encouraging signs of the times is one fact that I find noted in a secular paper of the day of not at all religious bias:—namely, that the fashionable heterodoxy now so prevalent in some of our pnlpits does not pay in the long run. Clergymen who advocate new and startling theories may draw for a while but the multitude soon tire of these broken cisterns that hold no water, while men like Moody and Spnrgeon sway the masses with perennial and ever increasing power. They preach nothing but the old truths that have been preached over and over to the generations dead and gone—doctrines that have been tanght by praying mothers, witnessed to by martyrs, and lived by hosts of nameless believers—bnt they set these trnths in the light of onr nineteenth centnry. Face to face with the thousand cares of to-day that were unknown yesterday, with the countless needs and necessities onr fathers never dreamed of, with the great moral questions pressing on the attention of every thonghtful soul with a force unfelt by the deepest thinkers of the past century, they set the solemn, eternal facts of revelation; and humanity is only true to its instinct in being drawn as by a resistless magnetism toward such preachers.

The world does not need new truths any more than it needs an addition to its primary elements. What it does need is the old truths tnrned over and held in different lights, as we wonld hold a diamond, till they toueh every angle of individual experience and reflect the sunshine on all sides.

Mrs. F. quoted to me the other day a very familiar text, but the way in which she qnoted it was an inspiration:—"Cast not away your confidence which hath great recompense of reward." It is not confidence in the Lord's power and will to save us sometime, but in his power and will to save us now that we are most frequently tempted to cast away. We lose half the comfort of these texts when we limit their meaning. Sunday-school teachers, ministers, Christian parents, you pray and labor on, and meanwhile not a cloud, though small as a man's hand, rises in the arid heavens. The temptation is great to cast away your confidence, bnt yield not to it. A great recompense of reward is attached to work like yours, and the promise is sure, snre as Jehovah's throne. And that army of noble men and women who are laboring to overthrow the strongholds of open and secret iniqnity, is it any wonder that they sit down under their jnniper trees sometimes and think the strife very uneqnal? A sense of onr own human weakness that does not at once drive us into the Eternal Fortress is as good a vantage gronnd as the enemy wants from which to shoot his poisoned arrows of discouragement into the soul. But cast not away your confidence. "You are not sufficient for these things." No; but in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength. "You are alone; not only the world bnt the church and the ministry side against yon in the strnggle." But what saith the Lord?—I have reserved unto me seven thousand men that have not bowed the knee unto Baal.

Workers for Christ wherever you are, however small the corner of the vineyard you till, there is a great recompense of reward for all your labor. Are you humbly conscious of an earnest desire to do your best? Then cast not away your confidence for any snggestion of the enemy that you might have done more or done better.

RELIGION AND THE WORKING CLASSES.

Editor Cynosure:—It is one of the most cheering signs of the times, amidst the frightful revelations which are constantly reaching us from the old land respecting the social condition of so large a portion of the popnlation, that the leaders of religious thought are beginning to realize the fact that the churches have a duty to perform, and a grave one too, in relation to all questions affecting the temporal condition and surroundings of the poorer classes. They are beginning to think it is the duty of the chnrch to stand between the poor and injustice between the weak and the strong, the wronged and the wrong of society. Professor Fairhaven, chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales, at the October meeting of the Union in Sheffield, having spoken of the estrangement of so many of the eultivated classes from Christianity, pointed out that there was nothing new in that, but a matter of even greater concern is the attitude of the laboring classes to religion. Our religion was born in poverty; the Master labored with his own hands. Its apostles were workmen. The ehange it worked in the world, was accomplished from below through the elevation of the masses, not by the action of kings. Bnt what marks the religion of our day is the loss of the masses. Their estrangement is more general, and I will add, more deplorable than of the enltivated, for the churches are more directly responsible for it; and in relation to the causes he says: "The working man strongly believes that religion which is not good for this life cannot be good for the next. What is not openly and strongly for justice and freedom and against oppression cannot be of God and the trnth. His battle for his rights and liberties has been mainly his own, while many of the men who have helped him have been loudly anti-Christian. Too few Christian men have dared to apply religion to his problems and conflicts. The tendency of mind thus begotten every thing has encouraged; the rapid growth of large eities has been fatal to simplicity of life and min the action of the immense factories has been to prevent or blight the culture of home, and foster amusement for the tavern. Houses have been so built as to make comfort, at times even decency, hardly possible; and for long education was too rare and too poor to leave the mind anything but an uncultivated blank, or at least a congenial home for weeds.

Rev. Mr. Hurndall at a subsequent stage of the meeting, said: "It is surprising that so many of the chnrches should eoncern themselves so little about what are misleadingly called the secular affairs of the people; surprising, because the head of the churches concerned himself so much. It would seem as though that wonderfnlly pathetic cry had failed to reach their ears, "Children, have ye any meat?"

"I do not wonder that many are outside our walls. If I had been the man who fell among thieves I wonld never have attended the ministry of a priest and Levite who passed by, bnt I wonld have taken a sitting and paid for it in the church of the Good Samaritan."

Concerning the cure these gentlemen propose to their large audiences and to the whole Christian world, Prof. Fairhaven says: "The Gospel is full of great economical principles, and these never need to be made so explicit as at this honr. There is the land qnestion, whether it be good to allow the aggregation of land in a few hands, to permit the rights of property to override the duties of humanity, and whether it be within a man's moral power to depopulate the district that he owns, or to sacrifice the people who live in it to his own ambitious schemes. On a question like that, the religion that loves man and lives by his love has the foremost right to be heard. Then, too, it ought to have something to say on the qnestion of capital and labor. Religion ought to feel that social and industrial questions are peculiarly its own, not to be wisely or justly determined without its help. The people are now the state; their will is the regnant power, and that will has this characteristic: it loves principles, it hates compromises, and the principles it loves must be regulative, fit to be applied to the work and guidance of life. And if religion is to control it, religion mnst beeome what Christ meant it to be, a real and applied law, opening its unworked mines of social, indnstrial and political wisdom and truth." "It would be a regeneration of our churches for practical life in relation to the masses, if in each church a course of political lectures was delivered in which there should be no laudation of parties, but the constant unfaltering laudation of the right and the true and the just and the honorable in the political world, teaching the people that the politics centering in men, in parties, in names, are naught, but that the politics of principle, of fairness, of justice, of righteousness, are alone worthy of our regard. Then men will believe in the Christianity of our political life, and not a little will be effected for the social amelioration of the people."

These are noble words and fitly spoken and happy the land where the churches set to work to apply these truths, which are earnestly discussed in the pamphlet on the "Bitter Cry of outcast London," and from what I have seen in San Francisco and other parts of this State, California needs at once to embrace these noble truths, unwelcome though they be, for "blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord," see Psalm 33: 12; but horrible is the end of an unrighteous generation.

Benjamin Judkins.

THE TIMES NEED MEN.

The Ship leaks fast! then who
Sounds out the warning brave and true?
The Oligarch stands up with lifted rod
And smites us as the foe of God!
Who sounds the tocsin of alarm?
Who tells the danger and the harm
To law and order, wealth and peace,
As lodge-lords ride with rich increase?

Who holds the franchise now?
Whose order rings from stern to bow?
Who holds the keys of power and gold?
A tyrant never known of old!
And servile statesmen bow in shame,
And plunge the land in deeper blame,
With scarce a soul to lift on high
A protest loud, or warning cry.

Oh, for a trumpet peal,
To fly abroad from lips of steel!
To dare the monster in his den,
With javelin of speech and pen!
To kindle beacon "fires of wrath"
Upon the heights of power;—who hath
Such courage, let him take the front
And bear the shock, and stand the brunt.

Oh, people, torn and rent
By this foul Oligarch's intent,
Where are your Statesmen: have ye none?
Souls on whom the light hath shone,
To see the peril of the times,
And with a hero's heart sublime,
Strike at the lodge power, ere we all
Go down as goes a broken wall.

Statesmen are wanted! when,
O PEOPLE, will ye give us MEN?
Not till ye vote them in, I ween;
Not till yourselves the cause have seen
And sworn the freeman's solemn vow
At Moloch's shrine no more to bow.
Oh, give us Statesmen strong to wage
The sturdy conflict of the age.

—Adapted from Rev. Dwight Williams.

THE INTERNATIONAL.

OMINOUS INDICATIONS.

Prof. Richard T. Ely, of the Johns Hopkins University, is not an alarmist. He has made a careful study of Socialistic tendencies in our own country, and this is what he says of their ominous look—we quote from his work on French and German Socialism (p. 1886) his words respecting "The International."

"It is possible that it points to growth and formations which in the future shall darken the heavens with black and heavy clouds. It is possible it foreshadows a tragedy of world-wide import, which shall make all the cruelty and terror of the French Revolution sink into utter insignificance. It is possible it portends the destruction of old, antiquated institutions, and the birth of a new civilization, in a night of darkness and horror, in which the roll of thunder shall shake the earth's foundations, and the vivid glare of lightning shall reveal a carnival of bloodshed and slaughter."

Professor Ely is careful to say that these are possibilities which he hopes are not probabilities. But who of us is prophet enough to peer into the future, and tell, surely, what possibilities are not probabilities, and which ones are? To be easily alarmed is foolish. Not to recognize cause for alarm is to be stupid. Not to be aware of coming danger is to meet it unprepared; perchance to perish ignobly. But, putting aside the thought of danger to ourselves, if it can be shown that a considerable number of our fellow-citizens are so discontented with their lot that they conceive no other remedy possible than a violent overthrow of the existing order of society, surely it behooves us to go beyond our own petty rounds of daily toil and care to inquire what justice there is in the complaints, and whether the evil is in the individuals who complain or in the system they complain of. Evidently if, as they say, the evil is in the system, we, who are parts of that system, should come to understand how we ourselves are likely to be affected by it. Who can say that his footing is sure? Do we not hear daily of men fallen from wealth to indigence? Fallen, too, at a time of life when the fading energies are not equal to the task of mounting anew. But why talk of falling from lofty heights? Do we not know how many are toiling without hope of reaching the haven? To all who realize the insecurity of their industrial future the wail of the discontented must have a meaning. The fact that cannot be gainsayed is that a conspiracy exists, and ramifies throughout the civilized world, having for its object the overthrow of the existing industrial system.

Since Professor Ely published his work, the conspirators have, from their headquarters in this country—San Francisco—sent out their manifesto. Those who care to read it in full should buy No. 461 of "Lovell's Library," entitled "Socialism." It tells briefly, yet completely, what it is that the "Internationals" propose. Their avowed purpose is to rehabiliate the proletariat. The aristocracy are to be put to work or killed. The bourgeoise are to be deprived of their ability to live upon rent, profit and interest. The "Co-operative Commonwealth" is to be established, in which the right to labor, and to receive the full value of that labor, will be secured to every individual. There is no concealment of the fact that the Internationals are conspirators, and that they do not expect to accomplish their mission without violence. When sufficiently organized and "prepared to make the change through force of numbers and intelligence, if opposed seriously by capital and those whom it could hire to do its fighting," they "adopt revolution, to the extent of the utter extermination of idlers, robbers and tyrants." Their trumpet sounds no uncertain note:

"Ho! Workingmen of all lands! Unite! You have nothing to lose but your chains. You have a world to win. Tremble, oppressors of the world! not far beyond your purblind sight there dawns the scarlet and the sable lights of the judgment day."

These conspirators declare the time has come for solidarity; that action ought to be both international and simultaneous. This rising is not to be the rising of unarmed peasants. "All the resources of civilization are to be enlisted in the battle to insure success."

The fact that a conspiracy exists is not the portentous thing. The fact of greater import is, that the conspirators say the "revolution is coming of itself;" they do but bide their time; they need now but to organize themselves, to prepare for the time when they will mount to ride the whirlwind and guide the storm. They perceive a general discontent; they perceive that it has its root in human nature, and in existing institutions which the world has outgrown. "We foresee," they say, "that within the life-time of the present generation the final climax will come, when millions of starving workers will raise in our streets the old, dread cry, for bread or blood. We foresee that these men will be desperate, ignorant and bloodthirsty, aiming at chaos instead of order. We who see this, the Socialists, would prevent it, not by preventing the revolution, for that is impossible, but by guiding and controlling it. We believe in the fact that the present system necessarily is prophetic of a future revolution. We affirm that, believing this, it is our duty to prepare for the impending conflict; to lead it when it shall break upon us."

A conspiracy confined to a few men, having its root in selfishness, in lust of power, or in greed of gain, might be looked upon with contempt, and the time calmly awaited when, having reared its head, the orderly forces of society would crush it out of sight, and forever. But a conspiracy which calmly awaits the rising of a tide, brought in by the forces that rule the world; which however frail its leaders and its organizers may be, nevertheless makes its demands in the name of justice and of solidarity, enforcing them with fanatical zeal; which, whatever may be the ignorance and passion of its rank and file is not wanting in intelligent leadership and guidance, is surely not unworthy of notice. And yet the real question is not whether the conspiracy exists in form, but whether that tide really is rising which they affirm will float them into power.

When the General of the Army in his latest report warns the people of the United States that the army cannot be depended on to settle the trou between capital and labor which he forsees in near future, and recommends that some peace adjustment of those difficulties on the basis of j ice be arrived at; when in every trade union and every assembly of organized labor in this cou the most active workers are revolutionists, who ne tire of saying that "it is not in the nature of ma abdicate," that "the tyrants never willingly fr their slaves," and when they are contradicted, ei by men in their ranks or by men without, or by tory; when according to Bradstreet's carefully c piled statistics, collected by trained reporters, 3 000 men are idle in factories alone, so that in all dustries there cannot be less than three-quarters million men idle, and yet the President appare does not know that distress exists, nor does gress trouble itself about the matter; when me the Belleville coal field of Illinois are brought so that they consider three dollars a week the reg wages, and the man who gets five is a lucky be when from the Hocking Valley the Secretary of Miner's Association can write, "Just think of l children and women going from store to store from door to door asking for rags to clothe th selves, and picking up old shoes in the alleys streets," and "we have had twenty-five weeks struggle which began after five months of s starvation, for no man had averaged more than fif dollars per month;" when Thomas Hughes is c pelled to describe the difficulties in which the c ized world finds itself to consist of "too much —too much sugar—too much cotton—too muc bor—too much, in short, of every species of wea and yet our merchants and manufacturers are b ruined, while two-thirds at least of our people under-fed, badly clothed, miserably housed," and on and adds, "To me it seems clearer than ever fore that the critical time, the parting of the w has come"—when such facts are patent and things are being said by such persons, and these are mere samples of what is being said e day, in every walk of life, it is not wonderful the Internationals say, as they do in their offi organ, Truth, "The workingman had better save his energies for the coming panic which statis show is now imminent. Within a year we shall h with us the time of strike, riot, and revolt; wi the year will the stern, hoarse cry for bread or bl be raised upon our streets; within the year will curtain rise upon the prologue to that terrible tra dy which the world, in this century, must see judge. Friends, before twelve months go by, s part, at least, of the social revolution will be p ing before our eyes."

That this prophecy is true we do not assert; it may be true. And whether it is true or not pends on the Christian fidelity to save and to su and the Christian sagacity to counsel and to gu bejore the storm, which every day grows blacke the horizen, bursts. What shall we do about Sleep?—Christian Union.

"A secret political party is an offense against spirit and genius of popular government. Th can be no more dangerous political organization t one which conducts its business in secret, and bound by oaths. Popular government is doo whenever secret political societies control our p ical system. It does not matter what objects s societies have in view, nor what principles they vocate, they are wholly and irredeemably obnoxi to the genius of American institutions, and dan ous to a government of the people by the peo Honest, self-respecting, intelligent American citiz who love the institutions of their country, and sire the perpetuity of popular government thro out the land, should avoid secret political socie as they would contagion. No good cause, no t principle, no just system, no honest purpose ne secret machinery and oath-bound, midnight org zations to maintain it. Righteous causes and cor principles grow best and prosper most in the glare of the sunlight of publicity. The Ameri citizen who does not know this to be true has a v weak and improper idea of American systems institutions. The fact that any cause seeks da ness and secrecy for organization is the best po ble evidence that it is a bad cause."—Gov. John Martin, of Kansas.

—Christ gives peace by healing the diseases the soul. Instead of the wretched device of tempting to satisfy restless and unholy cravings, expels them and brings in the new sources of j The world's false peace begins in delusion, goes in sin, and ends in perdition. Christ's peace gins in pardoning grace, goes on in quiet trust, a ends in glory.—T. L. Cuyler.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XVII.—Concluded.

"I can't see," said Mr. Josiah Howland, "why people are not more awake to the dangers of secret societies. Mason and Odd-fellow and Good Templar's lodges are fairly eating out the life of the churches. I've been seeing it this good while though I hain't said much, not perhaps as much as I ought to. We wonder there ain't no revivals, and we labor and pray, and have meetings, and try to get up an interest—only to have the lodge steal away our converts. 'If such things are done in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?' If ministers see no harm in secret societies, why should ignorant workingmen? I take it that the church must be purified first before the world will grow much better."

"'And if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be seasoned,'" softly repeated Mrs. Phœbe Howland.

CHAPTER XVIII.

NABOTH.

Despite Nelson's fears, Martin Treworthy did not find Tom a troublesome charge. He was as ready to be amused as a child, and gentle even in his rare fits of refractoriness. Sometimes he would take strange whims into his head, but they were usually of a harmless sort. Nelson had always managed him easily, and Martin, from being so much with him during his sickness, had gained an influence over him only second to his.

Martha, true to her promise, allowed scarcely a day to pass without looking in upon the two, and bringing some little delicacy to tempt the invalid's rather feeble and capricious appetite.

"Mr. Treworthy," she said on one of these occasions, as she placed on the table the bowl of sage broth she had brought, and looked up into his rough, kindly face, with her clear, earnest eyes, "I have always told Nelson I would help him keep the promise he made his mother to take care of Tom—that I never would think of him as a burden, or to be ashamed of in any way, but love him and do for him as if I was his very own sister. And I am glad I can begin now."

If Martin Treworthy had spoken his exact thought just then, it would have been to say that at last he had seen the woman whom he deemed fit to clasp hands as a peer and equal with her who was sleeping in her maiden beauty under the prairie roses. But he had been trained in a school of knighthood that was prolific in deeds by which to prove its chivalry and very sparing in words.

So he only said, as he emptied the broth into a tin kettle and set it on the stove—competent housekeeper as he was in his small domain—

"It ain't one woman in ten thousand that would come up to the mark like that, though I needn't tell you of it—you know it as well as I do. But now," he added, answering the mute inquiry in Martha's face, "we needn't expect to hear from Nelson yet awhile. He won't want to write till he finds a place and has something to write about. I don't think his going away was a mistake. Maybe there wouldn't be any danger now in his coming back, and maybe there would. To my mind there's no saying about that. Matters are quiet now, and it don't look as if there was going to be any more trouble. But we can't tell. He has roused a double enemy—a snake with two heads. The saloon men don't forget what he did last fall, and when they owe a grudge they know how to stir up the evil passions that are in human nature nearly as well as the lodge knows how to plot to carry them out. He's stayed long enough in Jacksonville—that's my opinion. The Lord didn't make man as he did the trees and vegetables to stay in one place all the time. It will do him good to get away for awhile and enlarge his ideas a trifle. They'll bear it. He don't know everything yet."

At the very moment when Martin Treworthy was pronouncing this dictum, Nelson, in a small river town about forty miles distant, was "enlarging his ideas" very considerably on one or two important subjects—a process that is sometimes a disagreeable and painful one like cutting teeth, especially when it involves some matter about which we have heretofore obstinately refused to be enlightened.

He had not left Jacksonville without a definite plan in his head—a plan he had thought of before, and which only the seeming impossibility of leaving Tom for a sufficient length of time had prevented him from carrying into execution. The spring was opening, the sap was beginning to stir in the trees and patches of green to show by the wayside. He would hire out on a farm for the summer, and make such arrangements as would permit him to have Tom with him. The country air and country living would be better than doctor's drugs, or even Martin Treworthy's treasury of roots and herbs. On the whole he might have rather enjoyed this unexpected opportunity to pursue a course he had so often had in mind if it had not seemed to his brave nature too much like a cowardly flight. But how could he keep the promise made to his dying mother unless he guarded the life so precious to Tom? He knew too well the bitter hatred felt by many of the workmen—a hatred which had its basis in ignorance, and as Martin Treworthy truly conjectured, had been fostered and fed in low liquor saloons whose proprietors kept the fact in remembrance that Nelson's prompt and successful proceedings against Snyder was the first shell fired into their camp, the initial step in the warfare that was now threatening their destruction.

The conversation which was having this satisfactory effect on Nelson's ideas, he was holding with a man dressed in blue jean trousers tucked into boots that were a marvel of the cordwainer's art. His hair, which was abundant though much streaked with gray, he wore long; his beard was likewise of patriarchal length, but bore marks of careful trimming. Indeed, there was about his whole dress and person a singular mixture of neatness and slovenliness, carelessness and refinement; and his speech was something on the same order, for while strongly seasoned with the rustic patois of the southwest, he was evidently a man who had at least the rudiments of education, and when he thought it worth the trouble could express himself in good grammatical English.

The surroundings were in keeping: the four walls of a rough cabin; a rifle, with powder, shot and gamebag stacked in one corner; a rude bed made of leaves; a table which was nothing but a board laid over a flour-barrel; a rusty stove, a teakettle, a skillet, and much unclassified rubbish, completed a picture to which Martin Treworthy's hermitage was the height of civilization.

"Come from fur away, did ye, stranger?"

"Not from outside the State," answered Nelson, indirectly.

"Wall, ye look honest enough," continued the man, eying him with a scrutinizing glance, "but for all I know ye may be the biggest rogue in these parts."

"And for all I know you may be the captain of some robber gang who make your cabin their headquarters," retorted Nelson, coolly. "I am not sure as it is safe for me to stand here talking with you."

The man burst into a horse laugh, evidently delighted with this prompt payment in his own coin. And then he sobered suddenly; a fierce, vindictive glitter came into his gray eyes, and a singular look overspread his whole face.

"I say, stranger, did ye ever read the story of Naboth?"

"Yes;" was Nelson's answer to this abrupt and rather startling question. "Why do you ask?"

"Because there's a right smart heap of Naboths in the world," was the laconic reply.

Nelson began to feel that he had got hold of an odd character.

"I am sorry if it is so," he said, eying his interlocutor rather curiously, "for that would seem to prove that there must be a good many Ahabs in the world, and I want to think better of human nature."

"Maybe you want to think better of it than the Lord does," responded the other, shortly. "You see I'm one of the Naboths."

"That's bad," said Nelson; "but it would be a great deal worse to be on the other side."

"I reckon you are about right, stranger," said the man, giving Nelson another of his scrutenizing looks. "Now if you'll excuse me for 'quirin', Be you a Mason?"

Nelson replied in the negative, and he went on, talking in a rapid, excited fashion.

"Then I'll tell you my story. My name is Jesse Dukes; I was born and raised in Tennessee. I come here and I bought a farm—two hundred acres of good bottom land, the best there was in the county. I paid down my money in good faith, hard cash, and then it turned out that there was something wrong about the papers. Ahab wanted my vineyard and he got it. My wife was sickly and the worry killed her. Our two boys we buried before we left Tennessee. I lost heart. I didn't care for anything. I don't now, only to come across the rascal that swindled me out of all I had in the world just once" —and he clenched his hard hand—"see if I wouldn't give him his deserts, law or no law, for he won't never get 'em any other way. I made a hard fight, and if it could only have been a fair fight—but he was a Mason, a high Mason, and the lawyers were Masons, and so was most of the jury and the very judge on the bench. And it was all a gone case from the start. Now you'll 'low, stranger, that must ha' come mighty hard on a man."

Nelson had heard Martin Treworthy relate such instances of Masonic justice in our courts of law, but it was another thing to stand face to face with one who had felt the iron enter into his soul, and hear him tell the tale.

"Indeed it was hard," he said. "And more than that—it was iniquitous."

Mr. Dukes went on.

"You was inquirin', stranger, if this was a no-license town. Wall, lawfully nobody kin sell a drop, but bless yer soul, what's law to a man that by jest raisin' his hands to his head and lettin' 'em drop down agin by his side so"—and Mr. Dukes went through a pantomimic representation of a Mason in distressed circumstances appealing to a lodge brother—"kin put every constable on the wrong scent. Now I was raised among the mountains where they manufactur'd a smart lot of moonshine whisky. Nigh every one among the farmers was in the business, or else knew consider'ble about it. They had their secret oaths and grips and false names to call each other by; and they jest defied all guv'nment could do to break 'em up. Our nighest neighbor, Colonel Barker, was head of the gang, and he was Deputy United States Marshal; and of his two right-hand men, one was Moses Kittle, a deacon in the church, and the other was Marion Hawkins, circuit judge. When there was any arrests made, there was the jury made up of Masons and members of the gang, and Hawkins himself on the bench, and in course they'd be discharged."

(To be continued.)

REFORM NEWS.

THE MICHIGAN STATE CONVENTION.

Brighton is historic ground and some of the veterans are there wearing their "crowns of glory in the way of righteousness." The body of believers that welcomed us and the Wesleyan house in which we met are fruits of a struggle on the issues which the convention was called to discuss. It was fitting that the old church from which this body came out should take part in the deliberations, by a very welcome and attentive representative who was present at nearly every session and spoke a few well-chosen words the last day that thrilled every one who heard them.

Rev. S. A. Dean, pastor of the M. E. church in Brighton, was indneed to become a Mason by the urgency and misrepresentations of some of the members of his church. He was to obtain a better knowledge of the Bible and reach a class of persons that were approachable from no other point. He was entered, passed, and raised in a Canada lodge and thoroughly disgusted with the whole performance. Referring to the second section of the third degree he said, "I lay dead fourteen days, as they said; but it took only about thirty minutes, for they do things very rapidly in the lodge." His Masonic brethren had treated him very kindly, but he found that there was no Christ in their religion, and many were trusting in the solemn mockeries of the lodge worship for their salvation. He considered the whole system a work of darkness with which Christians were to have no fellowship, and wished then and there publicly and forever to renounce his connection with, and declare his disapproval of all these secret orders. He spoke calmly, like one who had weighed the matter well, and referred to the probable effect of the step he had taken upon his future in a way clearly indicating that he had noted the work of the craft in the management of affairs in the M. E. church. He is a young man of pleasing address, excellent spirit, and fine abilities, and his words of greeting to the convention, coming as he did from the old M. E. church in Brighton, greatly strengthened the hearts of Bro. Richards and his flock and of the whole convention.

Returning from the convention at its close, Pres. C. A. Blanchard remarked, "I believe this has been the most satisfactory convention I have ever attended," an opinion in which I heartily concurred. Bro. Day will, as Secretary, report the meetings, but it is fitting for me to say that the efficient efforts of Bro. Richards and his household, who entertained right royally, and whose works and words were a benison and inspiration, added largely to the comfort of delegates and the strength of the meeting.

President Ross and Secretary Day are entitled to credit for their indefatigable labors at the convention and during the year. While Bros. Foote and Clark were not second in the contribution of thought and incentive to a score of others who had also "been with Jesus and learned of him."

Grand Rapids Depot:—I left Brighton at 7:38 this A. M. in company with kindred spirits who with strength renewed were returning to their respective fields of conflict and of victory. Pres. C. A. Blanchard was the first to drop out of the ranks to meet friends at Howell. Bro. J. H. Wilcox was on the platform and after a five years' separation I had the pleasure of shaking the hand of this veteran reformer once more. At Lansing Bros. Ross, Swanson and Buffham switched off for Jackson, and alone, "yet not alone," I passed on to Ionia. Without trouble I found the office of Myron Balcom, probate judge, and by a happy coincidence Mr. A. W. Dodge, also, who is attorney for Mrs. A. T. Foote, executrix of the will of the late Charles Foote, and adjusted the interests of the N. C. A. satisfactorially in time for a train leaving one hour from the time I arrived.

J. P. Stoddard.

HEROIC EFFORT IN CANADA.

[From the Iconoclast.]

I began giving Anti-masonic lectures on the 28th of January, and have given eighteen lectures. The subject is not popular, and does not pay; but no other person is in the lecture field on this unpopular subject. Have circulated much needed information. Many families have received me kindly and extended to me the greatest Christian courtesy and hospitality. God bless them.

At Roseville and Sheffield the U. B. church gave me the use of their places of worship; at New Dundee, the German Baptist; at Blair, the Mennonite; at Strabane, the Presbyterian; at two places I had to hire the hall. Most of the trustees of S. sections have readily granted the use of the school house; where a teacher is a Freemason this is generally refused, though not always. The meetings were mostly in school houses. The utterly unprecedented state of the cold and stormy weather, and the all but impassable roads have been very much against the meetings, yet I have survived all these difficulties.

Should any Anti-masonic friends wish to have this subject ventilated in their neighborhood my services are at their command. All my expenses have been met by a collection at the close of the lecture. Any minister of any denomination is at liberty to ask my aid in this good work. We may organize, agitate, and build up a grand Provincial Anti-masonic Association. My address is Galt, Waterloo county.

I am glad to see The Iconoclast is advertising a healthy Anti-masonic literature. We should have in every township and county an association for the purpose of giving light on the operations of this huge folly. The sooner the light shines on it, the sooner shall it, as a shame, be made to hide its head. Thus only can it be destroyed. So long as its self-laudation goes for truth among the ignorant and unthinking masses, so long will its strength stand. Only drag its deeds to the light and it shall be seen to be the weakest and vilest of Satan's frauds. "Great is the truth and it shall prevail."

At my last meeting some man had come from the county assizes. A Masonic cattle dealer had refused to pay for the cattle he had bought a year ago, because in three months they had not miraculously increased in size and weight to the demand. The plea of starvation, neglect, etc., was raised. The farmer not being a Mason, was non-suited, with costs. They had a practical illustration of events in the time of Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel, which led to Israel's and Judah's destruction. Like causes produce like effects. So shall it be in our day unless there is repentance. Yours truly,

James Donaldson.

Galt, Ont.

FROM THE ILLINOIS LECTURER.

SUMNER, LAWRENCE COUNTY.

Here Mr. W. T. Barrett informed me that Mr. Chas. Judy and himself controlled the New Light church and he would obtain his consent to my preaching in it, and went to confer with Mr. Judy who is a Master Mason. Shortly afterward, I followed, and on meeting the latter in his office, who is ticket agent here, he loudly said: "You cannot preach in our church nor any other man who says one word against secret societies." I tried in vain to get a place in which to preach in the town, but was repeatedly met with reproaches for being a "perjured man," and by ugly looks, and was told that the entire town is under lodge rule.

Here I discovered a new order,

"THE ORIENTAL ORDER OF HUMILITY."

It numbers from one thousand to fifteen hundred "huts" The object of the order is humility,

"That low sweet root,
From which all other virtues shoot."

The lodge here is Ivanhoe Hut, No. 1926. They call their lodges huts, and the above information was given me by a prominent member in the hearing of of a doctor who organized this hut and who endorsed the above.

OLNEY, RICHLAND COUNTY.

Here I met Rev. J. Phillips, who is a genuine old-time Wesleyan. In speaking of this reform he related an incident substantially as follows:

"I knew an Irishman who was always regarded as a quiet, reticent character, and who was asked by his son whether he should join the craft or not. Being a Mason himself he replied that if he was going to travel he might receive some benefit by becoming a Mason. That when he was on shipboard coming to this country many years before, the ship was boarded by Algerine pirates, who seized a number of men, he among them to recruit the pirate's crew. When in the boat while being rowed to the pirate vessel's side, he made the grand hailing sign of distress of a Master Mason and at once the pirate captain ordered his release and the boat to return to the passenger ship's side and restored him to his distracted family. But he kept all the others and they were forced from their families and carried into captivity, as they had no rights which he was bound to respect, "viewed from the point within the circle."

I scattered reform literature through town. Preaching was announced me for in the Moravian church. by the two leading papers in the city. As the weather was wet and there was an election jubilee in the city, there was not as large an audience as some anticipated. But those who were present listened attentively throughout.

The Moravian people received me kindly. Among them any evangelical anti-secretist will be welcome. Miss Lizzie Fahs subscribed for the Cynosure and contributed to the tract fund. Her father, Jacob Fahs, Esq., paid the sexton himself for his services.

George T. Dissette.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE OUTLOOK.

Bishop Weaver in his "Outlook," asks with a good deal of emphasis, "Are we saving men from the lodge?" I wish he had made the question a little more personal and said, "Am I saving men from the lodge?" If he is, we would like to have the statistics, for some of us are not enlightened on the subject as we should be, and it certainly is his duty to look the matter up, for if he is not, then according to his own reasoning, he is not doing his duty, or God does not require him to win men from the lodge. He tells us, that he believes God has called upon us to oppose this evil. "But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?" (James.) If he had turned back a few hundred pages of our church history, he might have learned that there was a time when we did save men from the lodge; but it was before the days of nullification conventions, or apologizing bishops. It was when it could be said of our leaders, as James said of Abraham, "Faith wrought with their works and by works was faith made perfect."

And now the question comes, "What shall we do?" If my child was sick, and I should call in a physician to treat the case, and under his treatment the disease grew steadily stronger, and the patient weaker, how long should I trust the child in his care? Would not every old woman say, "Stop now?" The U. B. church is sick; secrecy is the disease; the bishop's "Outlook," the soothing syrup. Which has it strengthened, the patient, or the disease? Shall we employ the doctor four years longer, or discharge him now? At the close of his "Outlook," he tells us: "I cannot afford to die with the least bitter feeling in my heart toward any living being on earth." And how he can afford to spend so much of his time pleading the cause of Christ's rival and bitterest enemy, we fail to see. J. G. Mattoon.

LET US HAVE FAITH IN GOD.

Mankato, Kans.

Editor Cynosure:—These are ominous times. There is no peace nor rest among the people. Everywhere there is a feeling of unrest. Monarch, emperors and rulers of foreign countries are alarmed lest sudden outbreaks of the restless people overthrow their empires and governments. We, as a people under free government, are but little better. We are afraid lest our institutions be overthrown. The same spirit prevails in church.

Why all this? is the inquiry of many, and many are the solutions given. Is it not because we cannot trust in the providences of God? Have we not forgotten that God reigns? Do we not set up our own notions and theories and then look for everything to be accomplished by these theories and notions? and inwardly feel an unrest lest our theories pass and the work not accomplished, not waiting for God's time. In our United Brethren church there seems to be the same spirit of unrest—of disquietude. We look back over our history and thank God for the victories so signally won. Surely God has been with us and he has prevailed. In the dark days of slavery while our church was so radically opposed to human bondage we were a small people, yet trusting in God we maintained our principles true to the end. Did we then save men from being slaves? We only opposed the extension and prayed God to break the yoke and let the oppressed go free. How gracious God was to hear and answer prayer and the trust reposed in him. We since have been led to Africa's dark coast and God has signally blest our mission work.

Now we can never merit salvation, but I believe we can and often do merit God's favor. And may it not be that because of our trust in God and faithful opposition to slavery, God is now rewarding our labor farther for the oppressed? May God still bless our missionaries and mission work. It was dark in the dark days of slavery and we as a church made no progress in the South, and many places in the North, because of our opposition. So now in our opposition to secrecy. "If we are right," says one, "in our present method of opposing secret organizations, then it must be that God does not require us to win men from it, but only to oppose it and keep it out of our church." Again, many of our ministers work hard and God owns their labors. Ought we not to thank God that our labors are owned and blessed? May it not be that God owns and blesses because of our opposition to secrecy? Other churches reap from our labors, because our secrecy law "meets them at the door and forbids their entrance." Does not our conversion law meet many at the door? Our discipline requires our preachers to ask, "Have you now peace with God?" Does not this turn many away? When Jesus said, "Except a man take up his cross and follow me ye cannot be my disciples," many were met and turned away, so much so that Jesus said to his disciples, "Will ye also go away?" Oh that we could say as a church as did the disciples, "Thou hast the words of eternal life." We may suffer loss in members for the present, as we did in our opposition to slavery, but the secret empire must fall by and by and that ere long. Then the generations after may wonder at the success of our church in some field of Christian labor. Does not our law on temperance meet saloonists at the door and forbid them entrance? If we could "save men from secrecy" by letting them in the church, so as to instruct them, could we not save men from the rum traffic by getting them in the church and then read from the prophet "Woe unto him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips," etc. If getting men in the church will save men from secrecy, why not get them in and save from intemperance, from polygamy, from Sabbath desecration, from all sin? But we are saving men from the lodge. I have heard men say, "I gave up Odd-fellowship for the church," and so of many other orders. Our very opposition saves many. Let us still trust God and God's plan of separation from sin and labor on. T. S. Walter.

FORESTER CHARITY A FRAUD.

Galt, Ont.

Dear Christian Cynosure:—Allow me to present to your readers an example of the charity to be found among the Foresters.

A Forester in this thriving town of Canada found his frame invaded by consumption in its incipient stages. A member of that order expatiated to him on the advantages of joining it. He had a wife and four children. His friend proposed him. The order sent their physician to examine the candidate, and reported him all safe and well. Years passed. The dues were paid. On a certain Monday, some time last fall, the invalid was not so lively as to take his accustomed drive (and the day was stormy) in time to pay his due to the treasurer. He regretted the omission to his wife, and hoped she would remind him to-morrow that he might attend to it the first thing next morning. On presenting the sum it was peremptorily refused. He was informed that he was non-beneficial. Thus he lost all he had paid in, his sick money coming to him, and $1,000 which should have been paid to his family at his demise. This embittered his life if it did not hasten his death by the excitement eaused by this sad loss to his family, so soon to be left unprovided for and helpless. It was only a few days afterwards that an attack of bleeding at the lungs carried him off.

The question is, where does the eharity eome in? This was the very time to give help. No help eame. Not even the eommon courtesies of life were shown at his interment. To exeuse themselves it was eirculated by the fraternity that it "served him right," as he had no right to praetice a fraud on them when he knew he was sickly. But we outsiders will ask, who were the greater frauds, the order and their physician who knew his state and their rule, or the candidate who was thus mercilessly vietimized in the time of need, when charity should have been rejoicing to aid the needy and destitute?

A Mason said to me he had been nursing a brother Mason all night long with the tender care of a mother. God, he said, would certainly reward an act of charity like that as an aet meriting the rewards and bliss of heaven. I suspeet they had two weeks before put him in Hiram Abiff's sanctum to be manipulated on by Jubela, Jubelo, and Jubelum. It was only on the third week he did begin to show symptoms of returning animation. His son, a lad of fifteen, was by when I said: "Has Mr. P——w not paid you handsomely for all this years ago? Do you not expeet that he will do the same to you when you need it at his hands? Why do you insult his son by telling a stranger that his father has been an object of eharity? He might have had an experieneed nurse who could have tended him better for less money, and not boasted of it as eharity, either." Shaking with rage he walked me out of the place of business into the street, with threats of assassination if I should ever eome to speak on Anti-masonry there again. We shall, if God will it so. James Donaldson.

LODGE APPROPRIATIONS.

Query. If the Legislature of the State of New York can pass a law prohibiting men from wearing the badge of the G. A. R., or any other (secret) society, to whieh he does not belong, and if he that does so beeomes guilty of false pretense, then, when the Legislature of California appropriated $25,000 out of the public funds for the G. A. R. or any other (secret) soeiety's benefit, is not such Legislature guilty of embezzlement? Such funds being the legal property of all the people should only be appropriated for the benefit of all the people. Should, therefore, a veteran, not a G. A. R., be taxed for the benefit and pleasure of a veteran that is a G. A. R.? I trow not.

Another query. General instructions in P. L. & R. classifies as unmailable among other matter, lottery circulars and letters. Again, page 513, 1884,—all matter coneerning lotteries, etc., is unmailable. Page 514, no letter or eireular eoncerning lotteries, etc., shall be carried in the mail; the sender of such mail matter is finable. How can the National Tribune, the official organ of the G. A. R., lawfully pass through the U. S. mail, with the advertisement of the Louisiana State Lottery, from week to week, to tempt the noble veterans of the G. A. R. to sin, and be swindled out of their small pensions; or does the government intend to allow the G. A. R. organ to advertise this swindle to create a thirst for gain, then refuse to transmit our eorrespondence, just to mock us?

The writer is a veteran volunteer, not a drafted veteran, neither a G. A. R.—though he onee was before the ritual changed. The writer wears the badge of acceptance with God which passes current in Heaven. J. O. R.

PITH AND POINT.

AMERICANIZE PROHIBITION.

My dear brother, our prayer is that the Lord may restore you to your usual health and strength to act your part in the mighty struggle that is fast approaching. The two great forces of light and darkness will soon be in the life-and-death grapple. The time is at hand when the devil will be vanquished and his dark kingdom of crime and death completely overthrown. Glory hallelujah! We are glad the Cynosure still remains loyal to Jesus and stand firm for God and truth as Gibraltar. It stands head and shoulders above all other political papers. If a large number of our American friends could attend prohibition conventions and make a strong and decided influence against secrecy at these conventions, they would create a public sentiment against the lodges so that no lodgeman could be nominated. If this could be done it would be better than separation. Very few men here can be induced to vote the American ticket while there is a prohibition ticket in the field.—James Kennedy, San Jose, Cal.

PLEASANT WORK.

The cause of reform is slowly, but surely gaining. Many are eager to learn the truth about lodge worship. Two M. E. preachers made speeches in behalf of Masonry. A reply was published in the American. I distributed one hundred copies. I have sold many copies of "Freemasonry at a Glance" in Clearfield and vicinity. The Masons were considerably stirred, one of them said: "Ronayne is a perjured villain." Another said: "You are making Masons." I told him I would try and make all the Masons I could, and that the Masons should be pleased and pay me for my work, but he would not buy a book. I gave away many of the tracts, "Selling Dead Horses." The Lord was with me, and it was very pleasant work.—Cyrus Smith, Clearfield, Iowa.

THE NEW TEMPERANCE PAPER OF BUFFALO, N. Y.

I send you herewith No. 1, Vol. 1 of the XVIth Amendment. Were it not for its advocacy of secrecy I should consider it a very valuable auxiliary to temperance literature. In spite of its vigorous appearance and strong hits it has the catarrh (secrecy) which will develop consumption. "Who shall deliver us from the body of this death?"—J. D. Young.

A GOOD ENDORSEMENT.

I endorse most heartily the sentiments in opposition to the silly and dangerous observance of Easter, Christmas, etc. I take no part in such imitation of heathenism. May your courageous words aid in keeping back the march towards Rome.—George Warrington, Birmingham, Iowa.

OHIO WORK.

Bro. S. A. George is doing good work for the State Association. And if every friend of the reform will write him what they are willing to do for the year, or years, and at once, with a pledge of something, you may look for a forward movement.—J. M. Scott, Alexandria, O.

HOW THE LODGE GETS INTO THE CONFERENCE.

A worthy colored Methodist preacher set out for conference a short time since and when he arrived a brother minister informed him that he could not get the position of presiding elder or bishop unless he joined the Freemasons. This is the way that Satan has of making so many Masonic preachers, and there are so few wholly for Christ. Thanks to Mrs. S. B. Allen for tracts, etc.—Eli Tapley, Columbus, Miss.

BRIGHT STARRY LIGHT.

Starry worked the first and third degrees of Masonry in our town, and in a masterly manner, as Masons themselves acknowledge, and if any want to know all about the way it is done, don't fail to get such an one to show off the merits of the institution and then many will know why churches are powerless to do service for the Master in saving souls. The light was much too strong for some, but others rejoiced in its brilliancy and took courage. Yours for the right side,—Joseph Luce, Ellington, N. Y.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON VI.—May 10, 1885.—Christ our example. Phil. 2: 5-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus. Phil. 2: 5

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The secret of Christian success. v. 1. No man can do great things without some secret spring of action inspiring him—some overmastering motive, some belief he would be willing to stake the world against. With such a motive and such a belief, our golden text now presents us. To have the mind of Christ is to view every duty and every moral question from the standpoint of his teachings. Any habit in which we cannot think of Christ as indulging without receiving a mental shock, we had best eschew, and if it is the settled purpose of our hearts to be like him, we shall feel an inward shrinking from doing or saying anything which we feel to be inconsistent with our divine ideal. He who ever "spake openly to the world," even when he knew spies and enemies were on his track, would not use secrecy for the promotion of any object however good—and this thought should settle for every Christian the question of joining himself to a secret society for the promotion of temperance. Has the lodge-bound and tobacco-using Christian the same mind that was in him?—he who said, "Let your yea be yea, and your nay, nay;" and who preached a purity so strict, so entire, that to reach it was to be "perfect even as your Father in Heaven is perfect." How would he who had such words of scathing rebuke for "the devourers of widows' houses" look upon the rum traffic and the millions of widows and orphans that it has made? The Christian should feel that same holy indignation which his Lord would feel, and we can easily see that with such a spirit his vote would never be cast with parties that openly or secretly uphold and foster this giant evil.

2. Humility and obedience the two grand tests of Christian character. vs. 7–11. Humility does not mean any ignorance or contemning of our own capacities or powers. It means a willingness to sink self entirely in God's service—to be ready to accept the most humble places and the lowliest offices. Obedience does not mean a mere obeying of the letter of the command but entire consecration of the will. Such was Christ's humility, and obedience; and such must be ours if we would have the same mind that was in him, and be sharers with him in his exaltation.

3. Christ-like Christians are object-lessons to the world. vs. 12–16. There are some Christians who are "crooked sticks"—always finding fault. They may have a sincere love for Christ, yet all they try to do for him is spoiled by constant "murmurings and disputings" with their fellow workers. The Christian should be blameless and harmless, giving no handle for reproach. He should be a light-bearer, giving forth life and light from the Sun of Right eousness. This cannot be unless he is separated from the world. A white garment must not touch coal or pitch; a candle can have no part with the surrounding darkness. "Holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners"—such was the great example we are called upon to imitate.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

What was the secret of Paul's great success? Phil. 4: 13. What is the command to all Christians? 2 Cor. 6: 18. How comprehensive is this command? How complete was Paul's imitation of Christ? Gal. 2: 20.

EXPLANATORY.

The Gospel was first planted in Philippi by Paul, Silas and Timothy, in the second missionary journey of the apostle, A. D. 51. For the circumstances see Acts 16. The general state of the church may be gathered from several hints in this epistle and others. They were poor (2 Cor. 8: 1, 2); they were in trouble, and probably from persecution (comp. 2 Cor. 8: 2 with Phil. 1: 28-30); they were in danger of, if not already in, quarrel and dissension (comp. ch. 2: 1–4 and 1: 27; 2: 12–14; 4: 2). The church grew up under the bracing air of trial, with a peculiar steadfastness, warm-heartedness and simplicity. As in modern churches there was much good and some bad.—Ellicott.

The Christians at Philippi had regarded Paul with love and reverence; and they now sent him a contribution for his support, while chained in his own hired house in Rome. This was sent by Epaphroditus, an ardent friend and fellow-laborer of St. Paul, who had fallen sick on the journey or at Rome (Phil. 2: 27). The epistle was written to be conveyed by Epaphroditus on his return, and to express the joy with which St. Paul had received the kindness of the Philippians.—Wm. Smith. Another cause lay in the fact that there were some disagreements in this otherwise most excellent church. Some of the leaders (see Phil. 1: 15; 2: 4; 5: 14; 4: 2) disagreed as to ordinary methods of management. They strove for pre-eminence in position. Certain headstrong and obstinate members raised a wild debate in the church. Two women—Euodias, "well-favored," and Syntyche, "happy-fortuned," so by their very names showing that they might have been about better business—took sides and went into opposition.—C. S. Robinson.

PRACTICAL.

1. V. 5. Jesus is our ideal, the one perfect man, to whose character and life we are to seek to attain.

2. Our imitation must be not of the mere outward forms, but of the mind and spirit, which will lead to a right outward expression.

3. The proof that we are children of God and younger brothers of Jesus Christ is that we have in us the mind that was in Jesus.

4. Vs. 6–8. The truest greatness is ever willing to lose the appearance and form of greatness in order to preserve the reality.

5. Only when we see what Jesus was before he came into the world, can we understand how great was his sacrifice for us.

6. True humility will preserve the church and Christians from most of the dangers which threaten their usefulness.

7. The only true emulation is to do more good, to serve most, to bear the heaviest burdens, to do the obscure works, and to give honor to others.

8. V. 9. God exalts those who humble themselves.

9. Vs. 12, 13. In salvation there are two elements, the divine and the human. We cannot do God's part; he will not do our part.

10. V. 14. Love to Christ will conquer the spirit of complaining and fault-finding.

11. Love will conquer vain disputes about trifles, and about position, rank, honor.

12. V. 15. God has placed good people in contact with a bad world in order that the Christian life may influence and change the evil. They are not to hide away, but to let their light shine in the darkness. Only thus can the world be made better. The leaven must come in contact with that which is to be leavened.

13. V. 16. Our mission is to hold forth the word of life by example, by precept, in our families, in the social circle, in our country, in the whole world.—Peloubet.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.
H. H. Hinman, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

State Agents.

Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Iowa, D. P. Rathbun, Wayne.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

Degree Workers.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun. Wayne, Iowa.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans.
D A. Richards Clarkville, Mich.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

The Cynosure and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. Phillips,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially by his wife. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. Price, fifteen cents. Ten for a dollar.

The American Party.

First Nomination for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.
Platform Adopted at Chicago, June 28, 1872.
Name Adopted at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.
1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.
1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.
1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Cowell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the probibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures sbould be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy sbould be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

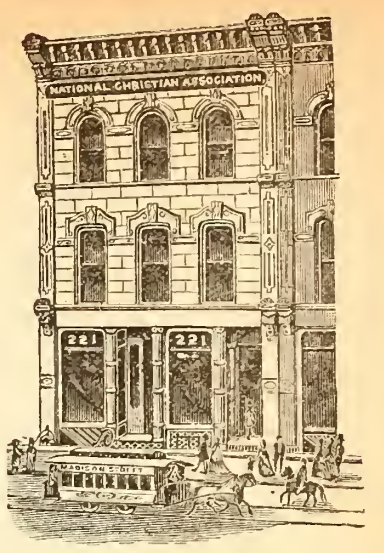
adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
Eli Tapley, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. Galloway, Okahumka Florida.
Wm. Hazenburg, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. Zaraphonithes, Andros, Greece.
C. B. Ward, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. Please designate to which one such funds shall be sent.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

President.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
Vice-Pres.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.
Rec. Sec.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin
Cor. Sec. and Gen. Agent.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
Treasurer.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
Directors.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

Form of Bequest.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

President.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D
Secretaries.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

Alabama.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.
California.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.
Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.
Illinois.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.
Indiana.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno· Sec., S. L. Cook. Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.
Iowa.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.
Kansas.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.
Massachus tts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.
Michigan.—Pres., C. C. Foote, Detroit; Rec. Sec'y, W. H. Ross, Williamstown; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.
Minnesota.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McCbesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.
Missouri.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler, Albany.
Nebraska.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. pooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.
New Hampshire.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.
New York.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.
Ohio.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.
Pennsylvania.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.
Vermont.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.
Wisconsin.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.
West Virginia.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

Editors.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1885

The Senior Editor desires to return thanks to God for recovery from a very severe attack of illness, so far as to be able to greet our readers again; to survey the situation of our cause; and re-unite our counsels for its promotion. He is deeply indebted to the skill and fidelity of Drs. Hiatt, of Wheaton, and Fischer, of Elmhurst, Ill., and to numerous friends for their sympathies, prayers, and tokens of affection; and especially to his associate editor, who is de facto the editor in chief, and to his increasing phalanx of correspondents who have kept the Cynosure firm at high water mark.

Scandinavia, from the old Roman Scandia, once meant nothing but Skone, the southern part of the Swedish peninsula. It now includes Sweden, Norway and Finland. The readers or the Cynosure are in the way of making a familiar acquaintance with the children of "the Northern Lights;" and as "The lonely Cynosure," from which star our paper has its name, holds its lamp steadily above the horizon to guide the navigators of the Polar seas, we trust that our half million Scandinavians already in the United States, and the other millions coming, amid their varying creeds will clasp hands around the one great truth which has made those Northmen the first peasantry in the world viz., that sinful men can only come to God through Christ. The princes of these Northmen have joined the secret lodges in self-defense. The State Church, priests, and bishops are following their civil rulers; even missionaries of the State Church are being drawn into the lodge maelstrom and bow in its temples for worldly advantage. But let the American Scandinavians, whose garments are not defiled with the Christless worships, clasp hands around the one God and Saviour Jesus Christ, and their influence will re-act to save the land of their fathers from the sorceries of the lodge.

The United Brethren General Conference, at Fostoria, Ohio, draws near. Powerful anti-lodge articles are appearing in the Telescope; and Snapp, Givens, etc., are assailing the anti-secrecy law, because forsooth, it provides no trial for those who openly join the lodge! The god of this world must have blinded these men, and they write like men morally dazed; as if the trouble was in the terms of the law, and not in the fact that members have joined lodges and defy the church-law, constitution and all! As if convicted, confessed murderers should pretend to have no objection to hanging, but only to the adjustment of the rope! So secessionists, with regiments enlisted and guns in battery to destroy the government, cried out that they were dealt with unconstitutionally! May God send these church traitors a like defeat. Amen.

The Prince of Wales, as our readers know, is lionizing in Ireland to strengthen the loyalist party. At Killarney the shouts were mingled with hisses. At Cork, on the 15th instant, the shouts and hisses came to blows. The hospitals are now full of wounded police and rioters. One can hardly think that Gladstone approved of this visit which is proving so bloody. A Freemason in France boasted in print that the Prince of Wales would be welcomed and shielded by his Masonry, as secret oath-bound societies would respect each other. The Irish societies think otherwise. The Irish masses taught by their priests, abhor Freemasons, as their deeds are showing. Masonry protects no regular, legitimate government. When the Germans took Paris, the Mason lodges played neutral, when their capital walls were falling.

The Berea Evangelist.—A file of this paper, (Mr. Fee's) has just reached us, and we have read through the successive numbers the story of Mr. Fee for the second or third time, and each time with new enjoyment. It is like the story of Ulysses and the "dire fates" through which Homer takes him to a quiet home and rest at last. When Mr. Fee left the house of the writer in Cincinnati to begin his abolition labors in Kentuckey, the chances were a thousand to one against his life. "Darkness covered the earth and gross darkness the people." His own father disinherited him. The proposition that men could not be property by the law of God, enkindled the rage of a continent; and setting up that doctrine in the heart of Kentuckey by a lone young man was like swimming in a storm to a coast where sea and sky mingled, to set a light on a cliff to keep mariners from the rocks. But the light was placed there in Berea, Madison county, Kentucky, and the children who looked on in wonder upon the mobs of that day, are already learning to say and believe that humanity is a sacred thing; that "While men despise fraud, and loathe rapine, and abhor blood, they shall forever reject, with indignation, the wild and guilty phantasy that man can hold property in man."

THE SITUATION.

Special attention to this article is asked from every one who opens the Cynosure!

In 1832, Wirt and Ellmaker received 228,000 votes from Anti-masons, though Wirt had begged to be let off and went for Clay, Masonic High Priest. The Anti-masons had then men, money and brains enough to have sunk lodge-ism out of the United States, as the worship of visible idols was driven out of Judea, while it filled the whole world outside. But instead, the lodge serpent has reerected its vast temples, multiplied its lodges, and spawned hosts of "orders" with the parent mark of secrecy in their foreheads.

What was it sunk a cause, so mighty in the elements of power? We answer:

1. Garrison started his Liberator one year before (1831) and assailed slavery, the Sabbath and civil government. The escaping slaves, running through to Canada, brought the slave question to every Northern man's door. The lodge hid under the slave-question; went South; organized the civil war; came near to throttling Republican government; and now Masonry lifts its snake-crest on the spot where it fell in New York.

2. The Morgan Anti-masons were ignorant of the nature and power of the lodge. J. Q. Adams puzzled over it, as "a phenomenon;" Webster censured it as "wrong in the principle of its formation;" Seward, in magnificent sentences, showed it "hostile to every government it cannot control;" and Stevens, though with clearer understanding and bitterer hatred, had none but political opposition to give. So these great men let the lodge hide behind the slave-pens of the South; and Satan hid his worship under the smoke and blood of the civil war till slavery fell; and is now ready to renew the fight against God and man.

The "situation" now is, in some respects, exactly what it was in 1834 when Anti-masonry went down.

The devil himself, by his lodge-progeny, the secret temperance lodges, has turned reformer and prohibitionist! All know that Masons are sworn to have their throats cut, or to stand by and back their brother Masons who are distillers, brewers and saloonists. Yet they think the temperance cause will be supported, and the liquor Masons betrayed by the lodgeites, who have put on a blue or red ribbon. Yet they see, at this very moment, that temperance quails before the lodge.

What is the matter with St. John? What with Frances E. Willard and others? Neither of these leaders have any doubt that the lodge is an accursed thing. St. John took enough Masonry in two or three years to make him forsake and despise it for twenty. He knows that secret societies, the litter of the lodge, sunk him some fifty thousand votes, and defeated him as governor, while his whole ticket was elected, except himself. Why then does he not publicly thank us Americans for our votes last fall? The reason is there are enough devil-worshipers among the prohibitionists, as there were among the Kansas Republican prohibitionists to single him out and wolf him down.

We are not censuring St. John. He is brave and good; and may yet turn on the lodges as Lincoln did on slavery, though he quailed before it for awhile. So Miss Willard and her sister were taught by godly parents that the lodge spoiled such great and good men as Dewitt Clinton and was red with murder and black with treason. If either Frances or Mary B. Willard were forced to the oath they would swear their lives against the lodge. Yet their zeal and devotion to the cause of prohibition keeps them in silent companionship with the lodgeites. Again, we are not censuring these excellent, super-excellent women. We are looking at "the situation." The fact is the devil is using prohibition as he quoted Scripture; not for the love of it, but for the dread of what he fears worse; viz., the discussion of his worship. If false worship should cease around our globe to-day, the millenium would begin to-morrow, and he could "deceive the earth no more till the thousand years are accomplished."

When Christ met these "principalities and powers," they conceded that a time was coming which would end for a season their devilish triumphs. They are now using prohibition, as they then employed the hogs, to put off the "time" when the key of the pit without bottom must turn on them. What then shall we do? Forsake or oppose prohibition because Satan takes stock in it? No: in no wise. We must not be of those who "will not do good if the devil bids us." One of the wisest votes ever cast was the vote of the American party for St. John last fall. But we must not let 1888 catch us in a similar predicament. By that time we must illume prohibition so that secretists cannot pass for prohibitionists. We must find some clear-minded Swede or Norwegian, who understands our hand-to-hand conflict between the forces of Michael and the dragon, and send him to the 100,000 believers in his native land, to tell them that a Congregational organ here, the Chicago Advance, is in favor of turning out of associations all who disfellowship the lodge, as they do! We must not only invite Joseph Cook to lecture in Boston against the lodge, but we must get up a powerful national meeting in New England, so as not to be chargeable with with attempting to shift our burdens on the shoulders of Mr. Cook. In short, we must make prohibition so hot in the next three years that secretists will flee out of it.

The Congregationalists of the United States are now seeking to enroll the 100,000 converted Scandianavians in their associations, seminaries, and colleges. But when these honest Northmen find that American Congregational bodies welcome to their embraces those who have drank the cup of devils in wine from human skulls, the Hasselquists, Edgreus and others whom their countrymen trust, will warn them of this horror, worse than the fabled Maelstrom on their own Norwegian coast. We must have some Waldenstrom, or Ekman, or Fernholm, to come across the water, and crowd the largest Chicago churches with our Scandianavian people, and long before 1888 we must make it possible for a St. John to accept our nomination, without social martyrdom. In short, we must put the lodge and its Mormon progeny, where the human auction block and slave coffle now are, in the hot home of false prophets, beasts and false religions.

THE UNITED BRETHREN GENERAL CONFERENCE.

This meets next month in Fostoria, Ohio, and will have before it several important questions which have been more or less discussed in the denominational papers during the past year. They all bear on the position of the church against the secret lodges. The fight this year is made not so much on the rule of the discipline adopted at Westfield six years ago, as upon the article of the constitution which stands back of all rules and sustains them; and instead of attacking the anti-lodge article, a flank movement is made and there is an attempt to confuse and befog the main issue by a quarrel with the fourth article, which says: "There shall be no alteration of the foregoing constitution unless by request of two-thirds of the whole society." The questions asked, says the Itinerant, are these: "Does the word 'whole,' include the entire membership of the church, or is it to be taken in the sense of only two-thirds of the members who have voted? In parliamentary bodies the latter is the rule, although the expression would be more explicit as 'two-thirds of the members present' or 'two-thirds of the members voting.' Again it is asked whether the 'request' is to be made of the General Conference to change the constitution before the General Conference has made any change; or whether, after the General Conference has acted, their action is to be referred to the Church for its ratification by a two-third vote? In connection with these questions is the further question as to the advisability of submitting article 2nd, Sec. 7th to the people—whether it shall remain in the constitution or be stricken out? It is the section which declares the Church's position on secret combinations.'"

It thus appears that an attempt will be made to carry the church over to the lodge by an indirection. As at the last Conference at Lisbon, Iowa, the main question was concealed behind the smoke raised by a discussion of a change in the representations of conferences; so now the stability of the church constitution will be attacked, for if that can be overthrown, the objectional part of article 2nd can be the easier sifted out. The situation is a grave one and demands of all Christians who are interested in the purity of the churches of Jesus Christ, that fervent prayer be made that the adversary be defeated and the truth maintained.

—The officers of the Minnesota association are able to raise $30 per month and expenses for their newly-appointed agent, Rev. J. P. Richards. They ask the N. C. A. for a reasonable amount of help, which Secretary Stoddard is in favor of granting. Let Bro. Richards find a welcome in every town from true friends of Christian reform, and rouse the churches to take their place in the line of battle against the lodge.

A BAD EXCHANGE.

The Scandinavians are now the objects of especial interest to the leaders in the Congregational denomination. A Swedish department is maintained in the Theological Seminary in this city, and a special missionary is engaged among the Scandinavians of the North-west. It is claimed that it is necessary to proselyte among this people who are as a rule all members of the Lutheran church, because the form of church government is not so nearly Scriptural, and the religious life cultivated is more formal. But there are some stalwart facts right in the way which create a serious doubt whether the sect into which they are to be introduced is any more pious and God-fearing than the one they are urged to leave. A comparison of the Lutheran and Congregational church papers will not maintain the superior sanctity of the latter. We question whether the religious life of the families of the one will be found preferable on the whole to the other. But there is one point where the reasons in favor of the change fail entirely. The Congregational churches are falling more and more under the control of the lodge, and if the Advance speaks for the denomination, to ask a Scandinavian to forsake his church for the other is to ask him to give up his testimony against a blank paganism, and fellowship and accept a system in connection with his Christianity which is no better in its religion than Mohammedauism, Mormonism or the pagan systems of Greece and Rome. Individual churches, says the Advance, which shut out the lodge as abominable to God must expect to be refused fellowship by the Congregational churches. Swedish, German, and Norwegian Lutherans, who have been taught that Christ and his Word are enough for the human soul, and who have stoutly held your ground against the insiuuating attacks of the secret lodge, you are now invited into another sect which has abandoned that ground and allows that its members may without sin join hands with the ungodly in the lodge and swear with them eternal secrecy and brotherhood—and, if the Advance article means anything, encourages this infamy. We fail to see where the Lutherans gain anything by changing sects.

LUNACY.

The Inter Ocean prints in its Masonic news the following extract from a Masonic address given at a lodge performance and banquet at Oakland, Ill., a country town near Mattoon. The name of the lodge-infatuated speaker was J. H. Winkler. Whether he was moved to such a strain of eloquence by the stimulants of the feast or not makes no figure. The Masons endorse and publish the stuff and it appears in the lodge department of the Chicago daily. It is a fine illustration of the bloated deception and arrogance of the Masonic system: "As speculative Masons we find them inquiring into the origin of nature and the character of nature's God. Their first conceptions of deity were rude and uncouth, but not more so than many of ours at the present day. As the necessities of mankind increased we find our ancient brethren in the foreground. We find them teaching and performing the religious ceremonies of Egypt, Greece, India and China, and for heathen worlds. We find them at the head of the Mosaic priesthood. We find our ancient brother and one of our patron saints, St. John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea. We find St. John the Evangelist, while Bishop of Ephesus, the Grand Master of Masonry. We find that Homer, the writer of that grand epic poem the Iliad; Abraham, the father of the Mosaic dispensation; Euclid, the father of Geometry; Pythagoras, the Grecian philosopher; Cicero, the father of civil law; Moses, the teacher of the Mosaic dispensation; Solomon, the wisest of men; Odin, the civilizer of the wild tribes of Northern Europe and Asia, and the leaders of the crusades, were all members of our ancient institution. We also learn that the world to-day is indebted to Masonry for the preservation of the Rible, and for what it knows of philosophy, astronomy, geometry, rhetoric, music, poetry, and painting."

—Rev. Joseph, Travis editor of the Free Methodist and chairman of the N. C. A. Board of Directors, has been confined to his home for several weeks with severe illness. He has recovered so as to attend to his duties in the office regularly.

—Last Thursday an appointment was made for Secretary Stoddard to speak in the Swedish Lutheran church on the corner of May and Huron, streets, Chicago, Pastor Ranseen. Bro. Stoddard not having returned from Michigan, Bro. Travis agreed to speak in his place, but he, too was prevented from attending the meeting by a sudden attack of illness.

—Bro. H. Hinman wrote last week of good meetings at Putnam, Conn. "The Advent minister," he writes, "endorsed my discourse on secretism and made public renunciation of Odd-fellowship. In the 5 P. M. meeting there was much testimony against the secret orders and three persons were hopefully converted to Christ. The Salvation Army are working here and doing some good."

—Bro. William Swinburn, an old resident of Chicago, uow removed to Kansas, was formerly a member of Pleiades lodge, No. 478, of this city. He was also an Odd-fellow, Knight of Pythias, etc., but renounced all his lodgery when he came to Christ some four years ago in a revival at Maywood, conducted by the Free Methodist brethren. He has been with Mike McDonald, the gambler and Democratic ring "boss" of Chicago, in the Masonic lodge.

—It is reported in the papers that President Cleveland is an Odd-fellow. Our information from Buffalo is that he is not a Freemason.

DIRECTOR'S MEETING.—There will be a meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association at No. 221 W. Madison street, Chicago, May 7. 1885, at 10 o'clock A. M. As this will be near the close of the year, there will of necessity be considerable business of importance, requiring attention, and it is desirable that every member should be present.

JOSEPH TRAVIS, Chairman.

EDUCATIONAL.

Hillsdale College, Mich., has graduated from its degree courses some 550 students, and at the approaching commencement, June 11, observes its great quinquennial re-union. The poem will be delivered by the popular author, Will Carleton, a Hillsdale graduate of '69, and the oration by Wallace Heckman, of Chicago, of the class of '75. Mr. Heckman was the law partner of C. L. Blanchard, who died last year at Wheaton.

The Board of Edueation of Philadelphia, watchful of the best interests of its present public-school population, has requested the city council to prohibit the public exposure of "debasing, brutaliziug, and crime-inciting pictures and publications."

The Indian students at the Hampton Normal School take great interest in art work, drawing, modeling, earving. One of their teachers says that a taste for drawing is as characteristic of the Indian as that of music is of the Negro.

The thanks of the Cynosure editors are given to Gen. Armstrong for an invitation to visit the Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute at its anniversary, May 21st. The visit of Bro. H. H. Hinman to this institution while laboring in Eastern Virginia was an occasion of mutual profit. His letter of enthusiastic recommendation and also the later account of anniversary exercises by Rev. H. T. Cheever, of Worcester, Mass., will be remembered by our readers.

Northfield Seminary, Mass., better known from its founder and patron, D. L. Moody, was attended by 169 young ladies last year, and is now increased to more than 200. Throughout the entire course, in every term and every week of the term there is one text book used by all classes—the Holy Bible is the only volume that could be so used, and the students will no doubt find it in all after years to have been the most profitable part of their education.

The De Pauw University, Greencastle, Ind., offers a prize of $35 dollars to the student who shall present the best essay on "The best way of securing hearty co-operation of all friends of order in the suppression of the liquor traffic."

—Mrs. G. H. Read, of Bloomington, Ill., says the Union Signal, is makiug engagements in this State for Gov. St. John to fill, from May 18 to 31, inclusive, (Snudays being excepted.) Those wishing to secure him for an address at this time should write to Mrs. Read without delay. Gov. St. John will begin this Illinois lecture trip by speaking first at Marissa, St. Clair county, on May 18. Marissa is the only town in the county that has driven out the saloons. His whole route through the South this spring was a constant line of surprises, surprises, too, of the most pleasing nature.

THE NATIONAL REFORM CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the National Reform Association was held last Tuesday and Wednesday in Pittsburg, and was largely attended. The report of the Financial Secretary, J. W. Pritchard showed that since the last report the receipts were $12,759 and the expenditures $12,279. Addresses were made by Prof. J. R. W. Sloane and Pres. F. A. Spencer of Muskingum College, O., the latter discussing the "Sabbath of the Future." The Committee on Resolutions reported a series coudemning Sunday mail service and papers, running of railway traius, and Sabbath desecration generally; also indorsing President Cleveland for the position taken against polygamy, etc.

The resolutions were briefly discussed, and unanimously adopted. Rev. Samuel W. Dike of Royalton, Vt., addressed the convention on "Divorce Reform," and Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, of Ravenna, O., read an interesting paper on "The Perpetuation of the Republic."

The following officers were elected, after which the convention adjourned sine die: President, Hon. Felix R. Brunot, Pittsburg; Recording Secretary, Rev. W. W. Barr, Philadelphia; Corresponding Secretary, Rev. T. P. Stevenson, Philadelphia; Treasurer, Robert T. Elliott, Philadelphia.

MISSION WORK IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

In March I spent twenty-two week days and three Sabbaths in home mission work in the towns of Alton, Wolfboro, Tuftonboro, Moultonboro, Ossipee, and Wakefield. Visited about 1,000 families, havnig special religious conversation and prayer with about 275 families, including 36 afflicted with sickness. The first Sabbath I spoke to the brethren at Mill Village, the second Sabbath at Moultonboro in the evening, and the third Sabbath at Water Village. I attended prayer meetings at Wolfboro, religion low; Mill Village, none interested; Melvin Village, excellent state; Wakefield, scarcity of male members. The two great obstacles to religion almost everywhere prevalent seem to be church plays and secret societies, and the two go together. At Melvin Village they have, so far as I learned, no lodge members in the churches and no church play. Hence, a revival interest and a fine lot of young people seeking to walk with the Lord. Words fail to express the blessing to my soul as I sought to lead the neglected, the aged, the sick and the poor to the Lord.

One poor widow said: "Two years ago the funeral sermon of my husband was preached but the minister never called afterwards." "A young woman said: "You are the first minister that has offered to pray in this house since my little boy died." My experience would indicate that nearly one-third of the Protestant families of this State are unvisited by a minister of the Gospel from one year's end to another. It would seem that the average minister visits those who attend church and pay, while the rest are neglected. I also bear cheerful testimony that with very few exceptions the neglected families seemed very appreciative and susceptible of benefit. I distributed many tracts, and found sevral cases of marked religious interest. The most discouraging thing observed was the low state of religion among ministers and church members; the most hopeful thing was the friendly spirit of the common people towards pure religion. The harvest indeed is ripe but the laborers few.

I had a very interesting interview with Bro. Isaac Roberts of South Wolfboro, an ex-slave of great intelligence and humble piety. He learned to read by overhearing his master's son whom he escorted to school. I enjoyed very precious hours with Elders Wm. K. Lucas and C. Paris, retired pastors who aided much in establishing the early Free Baptist churches. Formed acquaintance with a seceding Freemason who confirmed Ronayne's Exposition; also a Methodist minister, a seceding Oddfellow, who is opposed to all secret societies; also a Christian young man who was decoyed into the Sons of Temperance but is completely disgusted with such folly. I never before so realized the blind and miserable condition of lodge-bound ministers as after conversing with several of this class. Such men can never be reclaimed by argument. Nothing but divine grace can reach them. Their moral sense is so blunted by sin that nothing less than a miracle can save them. The spiritual members of the churches are waking up to see that resolute steps must be taken to secure the services of pious men as preachers and pastors. Under the ministry of unconverted or backslidden preachers our churches are losing ground from year to year. May the Lord deliver his people from the dominion of blind leaders.

S. C. KIMBALL.

THE HOME.

ASKING.

"If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children; how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?" St. Luke 11: 12.

"O Heavenly Father, thou hast told
Of a gift more precious than pearls and gold;
A gift that is free to every one,
Through Jesus Christ, thy only Son:
For his sake give it to me.

"O give it to me, for Jesus said,
That a father giveth his children bread,
And how much more thou wilt surely give
The gift by which the dead shall live?
For Christ's sake, give it to me.

"I cannot see, and I want the sight;
I am in the dark, and I want the light;
I want to pray, and I don't know how;
O give me thy Holy Spirit now!
For Christ's sake, give it to me.

"Thou hast said it, I must believe;
It is only ask, and I shall receive;
If thou did'st say it, it must be true;
And there's nothing else for me to do!
For Christ's sake, give it to me.

"So I come and ask, because my need
Is very great and real indeed,
On the strength of thy Word I come and say,
O let thy Word come true to-day!
For Christ's sake, give it to me!"

—Miss F. R. Havergal.

A CONVERTED BRAHMIN'S STORY.

J. G. Potter, of the English Baptist Mission in India, writes as follows of a Christian mela he attended at Mainpure:

Telling as are the speeches often delivered at the meetings of our Society in England, I think I never listened to one that moved me more than that of which I give my recollections. Here is as near as possible the speaker's own words:

"I am by birth a Brahman, a resident of the district of Agra. My village is on the banks of the Jumna. In that village I was highly respected, and exercised for many years the office of priest. At times of joy or sorrow, the death or birth of a child, marriage or time of sickness, my services were required and liberal offerings were made to me accordingly. And even thieves and other bad men dared not enjoy their ill-gotten gain till they had handed me a share of the same. By all classes, rich and poor alike, I was honored, if not worshiped.

One day, as I sat by the banks of the River Jumna engaging in my devotions, I was attracted by the preaching of a missionary, who quoted passages from the Hindu Shasters in refutation of the very religion which we, as Hindus, professed. I was stirred by hearing such use made of our own books, and resolved that I would act in the same way with regard to the Christian religion. With that end in view, I spent ten shillings in purchasing Christian books, and commenced to study the Bible diligently in order to find some passages which might be used against the Christian religion. My object was to refute; but instead of that I was, by God's mercy, convinced of the truth of the religion of Jesus.

"Being thus convinced, I resolved at all cost to be faithful to my convictions. I therefore made my way to Agra, and, on a confession of my faith in Christ, was baptized. After baptism I returned to my village. Then came the struggle as to whether I should try to hush up or boldly make known what I had done. I resolved, by God's help, upon the latter course; and first to my sister, and afterwards to my wife and others, I declared the fact that I had become a Christian. At first they refused to believe this statement, but when convinced of its truth they one and all forsook me, my sister abusing me for having disgraced the family and dishonoring the religion of my fathers, and my wife threatening to drown herself in the well to show her disgust and save her honor. The persecution continued, and I was abused and slighted by those who formerly regarded me with awe and reverence.

"One day as I was about to draw water from the village well, the son of the land-owner thrust me away with words of abuse and also struck me, the very man whom he had been taught to regard as almost divine. Driven from my village, I took a piece of land near by and commenced to farm it for a livelihood, and after a while my wife and children came to live with me. My great difficulty was in regard to obtaining water, as I was forbidden to draw from any of the village wells, lest by my doing so the very water should be polluted. This difficulty was not surmounted till the magistrate of Agra came and compelled the land-holders of the district to allow me to draw water. This they did, but only from one well, and this well no other villagers afterwards dared to use, fearing defilement or loss of caste. I had, for Christ's sake, forsaken home, wife, children, and property, and had yet to receive according to the promise in this world an hundredfold.

"This, I thank God has been the case. As a Christian preacher I have met with much to cheer me; and three or four through my instrumentality, have been led to embrace the Christian religion and forsake the religion of their fathers. Moreover, Christ has fulfilled his own word in my experience. 'Ye shall be brought before kings for my name's sake.' During one of my preaching tours I was in the neighborhood of Jeypoor, and, whilst preaching to a crowd of people, was called upon to desist by a headman amongst the native police, and, not having obeyed orders, afterwards received a summons to appear before the native prince, the brother of the king of Jeypoor, next day. When asked why I had not obeyed orders the day before, I replied, 'Your majesty, I was greatly desirous of meeting you, but had not the money wherewith to bribe the attendants at your court, but by disobeying orders have now obtained my heart's desire.'

"The young prince was taken with my answer, and expressed a desire personally to hear of the Christian religion. Accordingly, next day, he convened an assembly, to which he invited Hindu and Mohammedan teachers and myself, and, the assembly being called, himself sat in state to hear the claims of the three religions set forth by their representatives there assembled. For five hours the assembly lasted, and in the end, by the help and blessing of God upon what I was enabled to say, the king decided in favor of the Christian religion, and, addressing me, said, 'Stay as long as you wish in the temple premises, and you shall receive from me provision for your wants. And if you can but prove to me the mystery of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, I myself will become your disciple.'"

It was nearly midnight when the old man had finished his story, but there were none in the company who showed signs of weariness, and many were the eyes wet with tears as the story was being told. The life story there told is that of one of our Agra native evangelists, and the subject of it has long been an agent of our society.—The Friend's Review.

WORLDLY AMUSEMENTS.

It is a sad stumbling block to the unconverted to see professed Christians seeking pleasure or happiness from this world. Such seeking is a misrepresentation of the religion of Jesus. It misleads, bewilders, and confounds the observing outsider. If he ever reads the Bible, he cannot but wonder that souls born of God and having communion with him, should have any relish for worldly amusements. The fact is, that thoughtful, unconverted men have but little or no confidence in that class of professing Christians who seek enjoyment from this world.

They may profess to have, and may loosely think of such as being liberal and good Christians. They may flatter them, and commend their religion as being the opposite of fanaticism and bigotry, and as being such a religion as they like to see, but there is no real sincerity in such professions on the part of the impenitent.

In my earlier Christian life I heard a bishop from the South report a case that made a deep impression on my mind. He said there was in his neighborhood a slave-holder, a gentleman of fortune, who was a gay, agreeable man, and gave himself much to various field sports and other amusements. He used to associate much with his pastor, often invite him to dinner, and to accompany him to dinner, and to accompany him in his sports and pleasure-seeking excursions of various kinds. The minister cheerfully complied with these requests and a friendship grew between the pastor and his parishioner that grew into an intimacy which continued until the last sickness of this gay and wealthy young man. When the wife of this worldling was apprised that her husband could not live but a short time, she was much alarmed for his soul, and tenderly inquired if she could not call in their minister to converse and pray with him. He feelingly replied: "No, my dear; he is not the man for me to see now. He was my companion, as you know, in worldly sports and pleasure-seeking; he loved good dinners and jolly times; I then enjoyed his society and found him a pleasant companion. But I now see that I never had any real confidence in the efficacy of his prayers. I am now a dying man and need the instruction and prayers of somebody that can prevail with God. We have been much together, but my pastor has never been in serious earnest with me about the salvation of my soul, and he is not the man to help me now." The wife was greatly affected, and said: "What shall I do then?" He replied, "My coachman, Tom, is a pious man. I have often heard him pray, when about the barns or stables, and his prayers have always struck me as being quite sincere and earnest. I never heard any foolisness from him. He has always been honest and earnest as a Christian man. Call him." Tom was called, and came within the door, dropping his hat, and looking very compassionately at his dying master. The dying man put forth his hand and said, "Come here, Tom; take my hand. Tom, can you pray for your dying master?" And Tom poured out his soul to God in earnest, prevailing prayer.—C. G. Finney.

STORY OF A STARVING ROBIN.

A lady once came to the Rev. W. Haslam at the close of an address, and said that she did not understand, but would like to know what he meant by consecration of all to Christ. After some conversation, she said, "Well, Mr. Haslam, I'll tell you what I think is the trouble. I have got a comfortable income and a pleasant home, and have surrounded myself with all that, to me, makes life enjoyable, and now I fear if I yield myself wholly to Christ, that he will send me out to China." Mr. Haslam said, "Will you imagine the following incident? It is winter; and there has been a long frost. As you look from the window of your warm room you see a little starving robin on the branch outside your window. Moved to pity, you crumble some bread in your hand and hold it out to the starving bird. Tamed by cold and hunger it hops on to your hand, putting itself entirely in your power. What do you do with it?" "Oh, I would take every care of it, for it has trusted me." "And do you fear to trust Christ? Do you think he will use you hardly? If you yield your will to him he will make it a joy to you to do his bidding." Two years afterwards a lady came to him at the end of the meeting, and, after a cordial greeting, said: "Do you remember a lady to whom you once told a story of a starving robin?" "Oh, yes," said, Mr. Haslam, "and you were afraid to enter the service of Christ." "But not now, Mr. Haslam," answered the lady, "for, oh, do you know, I am going out to China?"

DRESS.

The wearing of costly array is directly opposite to the being adorned with good works. Nothing can be more evident than this; for the more you lay out on your own apparel, the less you have left to clothe the naked, to feed the hungry, to lodge the strangers, to relieve those that are sick and in prison, to lessen the numberless afflictions to which we are exposed in this vale of tears. And here is no room for evasion, "I may be as humble in cloth of gold as in sackcloth." If you could be as humble when you chose costly as when you chose plain apparel, (which I flatly deny,) yet you could not be as beneficent, as plenteous in good works. Every shilling which you save from your own apparel, you may expend in clothing the naked, and relieving the various necessities of the poor, whom "ye have always with you." Therefore, every shilling which you needlessly spend on your own apparel is, in effect, stolen from God and the poor!

And how many precious opportunities of doing good have you defrauded yourself of! How often have you disabled yourself from doing good, by purchasing what you did not want! For what end did you buy these ornaments? To please God? No; but to please your own fancy, or to gain the admiration and applause of those that were no wiser than yourself. How much good might you have done with that money? And what an irreparable loss you have sustained by not doing it, if it be true that the day is at hand, when "every man shall receive his own reward, according to his own labor."—Wesley.

BIBLE READINGS FOR THE YOUNG.

THE TREE OF LIFE. Read Rev. 22.

Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. Rev. 22: 14

1. When did man eat freely of this tree? Gen. 2: 9; 3: 22–24.
2. What right have sinners to eat of the tree of life? John 10: 28; 11: 25, 26.
3. By what river does the tree of life grow? Rev. 22: 1, 2; Ezek. 47: 7–9.
4. Who is the tree of life? Prov. 3: 18.
5. Who shall eat of this tree in the heavenly city? Rev. 2: 7; John 14: 21.

—Notes for Bible Study.

THE FORCE OF NEED.

"Hey, Robin! ho, Robin!
Singing on the tree,
I will give you white bread,
If you will come to me."

"O the little breeze is singing
To the nodding daisies white;
And the tender grass is springing,
And the sun is warm and bright;
And my little mate is waiting
In the budding hedge for me:
So, on the whole, I'll not accept
Your kindly courtesy."

"Hey, Robin! ho, Robin!
Now the north winds blow;
Wherefore do you come here,
In the ice and snow?"

"The wind is raw, the flowers are dead,
The frost is on the thorn,
So I'll gladly take a crust of bread,
And come where it is warm."

O children! little children!
Have you ever chanced to see
One beg for crusts that sncered at crumbs
In bright prosperity?

—Harper's Young People.

MANLY BOYS.

If the boy is father of the man, as I wrote two weeks ago, then the boy ought to be manly. All the boys will say yes to this. But if I shonld ask them, one by one, What do you mean by being manly? I should get some funny answers. One thinks that the way to be manly is to smoke cigarettes; another to chew tobacco; another to swear like a pirate; another to be the bully of the school. The reader of dime novels aspires to manhood by procuring a toy pistol, and setting himself up as a "blood and thnnder" hero. Another admiring the fops who twirl little canes and wear fashionable clothes, tries to imitate them, and make a monkey of himself. But I will not spend my time in proving that to copy the viees, and crimes, and follies of men is not the way to be manly.

Nor is it manly to try to be old before your time—to put away boyish things while you are a boy. It is as natural and right for boys to romp and play as it is for young animals. They can hardly help, even, being a little rude and boisterons sometimes. A little girl excused herself for being unable to sit still, by saying that she was "chock full of teeter." She could not help her restlessness. And it is harder even, for the boys than for the girls. A locomotive has to blow off steam, or it would biow up. And it is just so with the boys. Johnny Prim's mother was a very fastidious woman. She wanted Johnny to be a little man. She told him that he must come right home from school and never stop to play in the streets. If he did he would spoil his nice clothes. Johnny did not like this, so he went to the Bible to find out whether his mother was right or not. He found in the prophey of Zechariah, in the 8th chapter, this verse:

"And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof."

He went to his mother with that verse and said, "Mamma, if that is the way they did in Jerusalem when God dwelt in the midst of it, and it was called 'the city of truth—the mountain of the Lord of hosts, the holy mountain'—"It can't be wrong for me to play in our streets." Mrs. Prim was a pious woman. She did not know before that there was such a verse in the Bible. But when she read it and the verses in the context she had to give it up. The truth is that she thought more about Johnny's clothes than anything else. Many mothers are troubled because their boys are so hard on clothes. But they had better have the trouble that way than in nursing puny, sickly boys, who haven't life enough to tear anything.

I say, then, first of all, the manly boy is not that pale little fellow who mopes in a corner, while the rest are racing and romping all over the play-ground. A man needs strength of body. He needs muscles hardened by exercise. And those boys who are running and jumping and pushing and tumbling head over heels are preparing for the rough and tumble of life. They are laying in a stock of health for after years. That one who is shouting so loud is developing a voice that may be heard in Congress, or from the pulpit, one of these days. My horse "Pet" is a splendid roadster, fast, gay, yet gentle and kind. But when she was a colt she was as wild as a deer. She went racing and chasing around the corrall as if she didn't know what to do with herself. I like such colts. They make the best horses. And so I like lively, noisy boys. They often make the noblest men.

But a manly boy will cultivate in his boy life the spirit and the manners of the grown-up gentleman. He won't be a savage until he is twenty or twenty-one, then suddenly turn around and be thoughtful, polite and polished. Let ns see then what a true gentleman is, and does, and we can learn something about what the true boy ought to be, and do, and not do.

A gentleman always tells the truth. His word is as good as his bond. What does this say to the boy? It says, "Don't fib—don't get in the habit of spinning yarns just for fun. Don't think that it is no great matter if you deceive your father or mother in little things. Be frank and manly in all that you say.

A gentleman doesn't swear. If your mother hears a man using profane language, she says to herself at once, "He is no gentleman." Hence boys mnst not use those little "swear words" that we so often hear on the play-gronnd. If yon say "by golly" now you will say something worse one of these days. I don't know of anything meaner than these Lilliputian oaths that many boys use. They are jnst as wicked as the big oaths that the young swearers have not yet courage to utter. But that is a courage easily acquired, and is sure to come soon if you cultivate it.

A gentleman is always polite to ladies, and the boy who means to be a gentleman will not be rude to the little girls. He will be kind to his sisters. He will carry their books for them to school, and help them over the gutters and bad places. I don't know of a pleasanter sight than that of a brother taking good care of a little sister. I would trust such a boy. There is sure to be the making of a splendid man in him.

A gentleman is kind to the poor, and the boy who expects to be a gentleman will never laugh at any of his schoolmates because they are not dressed as well as he is.

A gentleman is kind to his parents. I remember once seeing a strong man carrying an aged and feeble woman into a railway car, and fixing the cushions for her as tenderly as a mother fixes things for her baby. There were rude men in that car, but they all watched that loving son with moistened eyes. They admired his filial affection. And how proud and happy that old mother looked. I am sure that man was kind to his mother when he was a boy. I don't believe that he slammed the doors and made a fuss when she asked him to bring in some wood or to rnn an errand.

Finally (as the preachers say), the trne gentleman is a Christian. A really noble, honest man cannot neglect his duty to God; and the boy who would be such a man must remember his Creator in the days of his youth. A Christian boy is not a conceited prig or a young Pharisee. He is just as full of life and fnn as any other boy. But he doesn't cheat, nor swear, nor use vulgar words. He is kind to everybody, and especially to those who are poorer and weaker than he is. All the elements of a manly character that I have told you of in this letter may be summed up in these words of Solomon, "Hear, then, the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God and keep his commandments."—The Interior.

TEMPERANCE.

ALCOHOL AND THE HUMAN BRAIN.

[Extract from Joseph Cook's Lectures.]

Who shall say where end the consequences of alcoholic injury of the blood and of the substance of the brain? Here within the cranium, in this narrow chamber, so small that a man's hand may span it, and upon this sheet of cerebral matter, which if dilated out, would not cover a surface of over six hundred square inches, is the point of union between spirit and matter. Inversions of right judgment and every distortion of moral sense legitimately follow from the intoxicating cup.

It is to be remembered that by the law of local affinity the dose of alcohol is not diffused throughont the system, but is concentrated in its chief effects upon a single organ. When a man drinks moderately, though the effects might be minute if dispersed through the whole body, yet they may be powerful when most of them are gathered upon the brain. They may be dangerous when tnrned upon the intellect, and even fatal when concentrated upon the primal guiding powers of the mind—reason and moral sense. It is not to the whole body that a moderate glass goes; it is chiefly to the most important part—the brain; and not to the whole brain, but to its most important part—the seat of the higher mental and moral powers; and not to these powers at large, but to their helmsman and captain—Reason and Conscience.

"Ship ahoy! All aboard! Let your one shot come," shouts the sailor to the pirate craft. Now one shot will not shiver a big ship's timbers much, bnt suppose this one ball were to strike the captain through the heart and the helmsman through the skull and that there are none to fill their posts, it would be a terrible shot indeed. Moderate drinking is a charmed ball from a pirate craft. It does not lodge in the beams' ends. It cuts no mast. It shivers no plank between wind and water. It strikes no sailor or under officer, but with magic course it seeks the heart of the captain and the arms of the helmsman, and it always hits. Their leaders dead, and none to take their place, the crew are powerless against the enemy. Thunders another broadside from pirate Alcohol, and what is the effect? Every ball is charmed; not one of the crew is killed, but every one becomes mad and raises mutiny. Commanders dead, they are free. Thunders another broadside from the pirate, and the charmed balls complete their work. The mutinous crew rage with insanity. Captain Conscience and steersman Reason are picked up, and, lest their corpses should offend the crazy sailors, pitched overboard. Then rages Jack Lust from one end of the ship to the other. That brave tar, Midshipman Courage, who, in his right mind, was the bravest defender of the ship, now wheels the cannon against his own friends and rakes the deck with red hot grape until every mast totters with shot-holes. The careful stewards, seamen Friendship and Parental Love, whose exertions have always heretofore provided the crew seasonably with food and drink, now refuse to cook, furnish no meals, unhead the water-casks, waste provisions and break the ship's crockery. The vessel has wheeled into the trough of the sea, a black shadow approaches swiftly over the waters, and the compass and helm are deserted. That speculating mate, Love of Money, who, if sober, would see the danger and order every rag down from jib to mainsail and make the ship scud under bare poles before the black squall, now, on the contrary, orders up every sail and spreads every thread of canvass. The rising storm whistles in the rigging, but he does not hear it. That black shadow on the water is swiftly nearing. He does not see it. In the trough of the sea the ship rockslike a cockle shell. He does not feel it. Yonder before the dense rush of the coming blow of air rises a huge wave foaming and gnawing and groaning on high. He does not hear it. With the shock like the opening of the earthquake it strikes the broadside; with a roar it washes over the deck: three snaps like a cannon, and the heavily rigged masts are gone; a lurch and sucking in of waves, and the hold is full of water and the sinking ship just survives the first heavy sea. Then comes out mirthfulness, and sits astride the bowsprit, and ogles a dancing tune. The crew dance! It were impossible, even yet, to so man the pumps and right the helm as to ride over the swells and drive into port, but all action for right government of the ship is ended. Trumpeter language mounts the shattered beams of the forecastle, and makes an oration; it is not necessary to work, he tells the crew, but to hear him sputter yarns.

It is fearful now to look npon the raging of the black sea. Every moment the storm increases in fury.

The drunken ship is fast filling with water. Not a man at the pumps, not an arm at the helm. Having destroyed their friends, the crew fall upon each other. Close under their bow rave the breakers of a rocky shore, but they hear it not. At intervals they seem to realize their condition, and their power even yet to save themselves, but make no effort. Gloom and storm and foam shut them up against hell with many thunders. In this terrible extremity Independence is heard to refuse help, and boasts of his strength. Friendship and Parental Love rail at thoughts of affection. Language trumpets his easy yarns and grows garrulous as the timbers crack one after another.

Rage and Revenge are now the true names of Firmness and Courage. Silly Mirth yet giggles a dance, and I saw him astride the last timber as the ship went down, tossing foam at the lightning. Then came a sigh of the storm, a groaning of waves, a booming of blackness, and a red, crooked thunderbolt shot wrathfully blue into the suck of the sea where the ship went down.

And I asked the name of those rocks, and was told, God's stern and immutable Laws.

And I asked the name of that ship, and they said: Immortal Soul.

And I asked why its crew brought it there, and they said: Their Captain Conscience and Helmsman Reason were dead.

And I asked how they died, and they said: By one single shot from the Pirate Alcohol; by one charmed ball of moderate drinking!—The Trumpet.

The Churches.

—Moody and Sankey were with the students of Princeton College, N. J., last Saturday and Sabbath.

—Three of the students in Wheaton Theological Seminary are expecting to enter the foreign mission work.

—A hopeful revival in the Wesleyan church at Oshkosh, Wis., Rev. W. W. Warner, pastor, resulted in the conversion of a number and reviving the lagging zeal of others.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard, on his return from the Michigan State Convention stopped over the Sabbath at Kalamazoo, where he had an opportunity to preach.

—The Reformed Presbyterian synod meets this year, May 24, at Morning Sun, Iowa, with Rev. C. D. Trumbull's church.

—The will of Mrs. Eliza M. Morgan widow of the late ex-Governor Edwin D. Morgan of New York bequeaths $135,000 to charitable institutions and church purposes. The McAuley Mission, and the Cremorne Mission, both founded by Jerry McAuley receive $5,000 each, and the Moody Home at Northfield, Mass., $10,000.

—A benevolent New England lady is considering the idea of establishing a seminary for girls in the South on the plan of Mount Holyoke Seminary, to be under the care of the American Missionary Association.

—Wichita Baptist church, Kansas, now reports 132 accessions as the result of its meetings. The meetings were twice closed, but so great was the interest that the pastor was compelled to re-open the church doors.

—The clergy of Portland, Me., have addressed a courteous request to the owners and conductors of the newspapers of that city to suppress the details of criminal reports, which so greatly imperil the morality of the young.

—The convention which meets every three years in connection with the Congregational Theological Seminary of this city was held last Wednesday, fourteen States being represented by some 200 members. The official report shows the institution out of debt with a total of $327,892 endowment funds and $184,260 unproductive funds, largely invested in buildings. There are nine, and sixty-five students. More money is asked to add to this vast fund, while the financial agent reports much difficulty in securing them. Danish, German and Swedish departments are maintained. In the evening a class of fourteen graduates spoke and the degrees were conferred upon them.

—A religious awakening of great power has been in progress for sometime at Talladega College, Miss., (colored). More than a hundred confess that they have given their hearts to Christ, and every person, save one, connected with the boarding department is a professing Christian. Special interest has prevailed, also, during the winter, in several institutions at the South under the care of the American Missionary Association. At the last communion, 194 members were admitted to the churches there, the largest number, 49, being at Selma, Ala., and the next, 31, at Hampton, Va. Nashville and Tougaloo report a decided interest among the students, with many hopeful conversions.

—Rev. Leonard Withington, D. D., the oldest Congregational clergyman in the United States, died at his residence in Newbury, aged 96 years. He graduated from Yale College in 1814, and at the time of his death was the oldest surviving graduate of that institution. In 1816 he was ordained pastor of the Newbury church, and for forty-two years remained in active service. He was a frequent contributor to the press, and many articles came from his pen after he was eighty years of age He was the author of two books, "The Puritan," and "Solomon's Songs," both of which are well known among theologians.

—A correspondent of the Examiner says: "It is a fact not generally understood that in its resident population, Washington is a remarkably religious city. Statistics of two years ago show 52 Methodist churches with 12,998 members; 45 Baptist churches with 15,332 members; Presbyterians, 20 churches with 4,265 members; Episcopalians, 26 churches with 5,654 members; Lutherans, 10 churches with 2,020 members; Congregationalists, 4 churches with 1,000 members; Unitarians, 1 church with 368 members; Universalists, 1 church with 90 members; Swedenborgians, 1 church with 110 members; Hebrews; 2 churches with 240 members; Romanists, 13 churches with 7,000 members. Total number of churches, 180, members, 49,351. Of this total membership about 21,000 are in the colored churches, divided largely between the Baptists and Methodists, the former having the larger number. There are 177 Sunday-schools, with 40,429 teachers and scholars. This is the largest percentage of Sunday-school members, I think, of any large city in the United States.

—A memorial of Dr. William Carey has just been erected in the village of Paulerspury, England, where the illustrious missionary and scholar was born and spent his youth. Edmund Carey, his father, was parish clerk and school-master in the village. The headstone on his grave, which had fallen somewhat, and the inscription on which was nearly illegible, has been relettered and placed in an upright position, and in addition, a monumental brass has been fixed inside the church, bearing the following inscription: "To the glory of God, and in memory of Dr. William Carey, Missionary and Orientalist, who was born at Paulerspury, Aug. 17th, 1761. Died at Serampore, India, June 9th, 1834. The remains of his father, Edmund Carey, lie near this spot."

—The French Protestant Historical Society suggests a celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the revocation of the edict of Nantes, on the 18th day of October, 1885, and farther suggests that it be observed as a day of humiliation and prayer.

—The appalling spiritual destitution of Brooklyn, "the city of churches," says the Baptist Weekly, is made painfully apparent by the announcement that the Long Island railroad company proposes to run special trains on Sunday mornings to take worshipers to the New Cathedral at Garden City.

—The ancient Waldensian and Free churches of Italy have agreed upon terms of union. And we are glad to notice, says the New York Observer, that due respect is being paid to the rights of age and of Martyr history in this proposed consolidation. The Free Church Monthly assures us that it is not the intention that the ancient church of the valleys shall become absorbed in a new denomination, that is the Free church of Italy. That is still to be known as the Chiesa Valdese, and as it alone is recognized by the government as having a right to hold property in its own name, all the possessions of the new body, whether in the plains or in the mountains, will be vested in it. The union will become more apparent in the south, where all the mission charges and stations of both the churches will be combined, and will be represented in a new synod, meeting annually in Florence or Rome.

—The Chinese gamblers, joint-keepers and opium dealers of Mott street, says the New York World, are good orthodox Buddhists, and do everything in their power to keep up the native faiths and to prevent proselyting by Christian ministers and missionaries. To counteract the work done in the past fall and winter by Dr. Hall and others, there has been what may be termed a revival in Chinatown. Excursions have been made to Bellville, N. J., where is the only Joss-house east of the Rocky mountains. Large quantities of religious literature have been imported from Hong Knog and Canton, especially such works as are popular and interesting from a merely literary stand-point. It is just as if the average American in an Ann street faro hell should find on the green cloth the Old and New Testaments, St. Augustine's writings, Thomas a Kempis and Talmage's last sermons. The latest move in this odd warfare is the holding of native services in Mott street which are largely attended.

—The American McAll Association, which is an organization of American ladies formed two years ago to help Rev. W. R. McAll to rescue France from the infidel, held the first session of its second annual meeting in New York, last Thursday. Delegates attended to the number of about 100 from twenty-six auxiliaries of cities in the States of New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey, Connecticut, and the District of Columbia. The wife of ex-President Hayes and the widow of ex President Garfield were among the number present. The Rev. Martin L. Berger, Secretary of the association, reported that during the year he had represented the association in delivering ninety-two addresses, in forming auxiliaries at Troy, Newark, Elmira, Rochester, and Albany, and in sending $6,124, church collections and individual contributions, to the treasury of the association. At the afternoon session Mrs. Woerine J. Chase, of Philadelphia, was elected President, to succeed Mrs. R. B. Hayes. Mrs. James A. Garfield was among the vice presidents chosen.

LITERATURE.

The Wit and Wisdom of Edward Bulwer-Lytton. Compiled by C. L. Bonney. 264 pp. 12 mo. Price 60 c. John B. Alden, New York.

Lord Lytton, the brilliant and versatile English novilist, who died in 1873, writing to the last, is almost the only one of the great English novelists from whose writings such a compilation would be attempted. Celebrated in political life, as well as in almost every department of literature: poetry, the drama, historical romance, and domestic novel, his works are rather of a reflective, philosophical nature, and have not escaped the charge of an irreligious tendency which may have originated from his admiration of Byron and possible attempts at imitation of that melancholy genius. These isolated extracts, will be found far more profitable reading than the twenty-eight volumes from which they have been culled with diligence and discrimination. Miss Bonney, to whom the public is indebted for this labor, is a frequent contributor to the story department of the Voice of Masonry, which, we are sorry to say, is no recommendation of her abilities.

The Library Magazine for May is an immense number—160 large double column pages with such names in its table of contents as Prof. Goldwin Smith, the poet Swinburne, the Marquis of Lorne, Dr. Pieard, Henry W. Lucy, Prof. R. C. Jebb, Thomas Hughes, Archibald Forbes, from across the water, and our own Dr. William Hays Ward, editor of the Independent, now conducting an exploration in Assyria. Among the articles, "Egypt and the Soudan," an argument in defense of the natives against their European and Turkish oppressors; "The Health and longevity of the Jews," whose escape from the cholera epidemic was last year an interesting study; "The Organization of Democracy," "Contemporary Socialism," "The Future of Industry" and "Co-operation in England," which discuss the various phases of the leading social problem of to-day, will be marked with interest.

On account of the enormous editions required to meet the popular demand, the Century magazine will hereafter be issued on the first of each month. The May edition is 250,000. Besides the papers by Generals McClellan, J. E. Johnston, and Gustavus W. Smith, in this number, the battles of the Peninsular campaign will be further desribed in later numbers by Generals Franklin, Fitz John Porter, Longstreet, and D. H. Hill. General Porter has also written a paper on the second battle of Bull Run, which will appear in the same series, along with a full account of the Bull Run campaign, written by General John Pope, who commanded the Union forces against Lee in those operations.

St. Nicholas serves its little patrons well in stories and pictures. "A House of String" will suggest to many of them how to spend a few pleasant summer hours. The New Orleans Exposition as seen by a young folk's party is very good, and the continued papers: "Among the Law-makers," "The Children of the Cold," "Driven Back to Eden, and "His One Fault," make a good number.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the Tract Fund for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

No.		No. Pages.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	4
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian," 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	4
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	2
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	8
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	4
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	8

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

The annual meeting of the Royal Clan the order of Scottish Clans was held ril 16th at Cleveland, Ohio. The fol- ving officers were elected: Royal Chief, R. Scott, of St. Louis; Vice Royal ief, Alex McKay, of Boston; Royal aplain, A. W. McKenzie, of Provi- nce; Royal Secretary, I. C. Dodds, of Louis; Royal Treasurer, A. McLaren, Cleveland; Royal Master-at-arms, P. Monroe, of Chicago; Royal Inside arden, A. Marnock, of Quincy, Mass.; d Royal Outside Warden, John Smith, Taunton, Mass. The next meeting ll be held on the second Tuesday of ne, 1886, in Chicago.

—A decision was rendered in the Iowa preme Court at Dubuque favorable to e Ancient Order of United workmen, wa State Lodge, generally known as e rebellious faction of that order which as ruled out of the Grand Lodge for n-payment of assessments to the yel- w fever fund South. On a former trial e case went against them.

—Jonn T. Pautlind, an old pioneer in alifornia, left a will which concludes as follows: "I want to be buried by Ma- ns. I don't want any minister or eacher of any kind at the funeral. The asons do not tire in their good work. ospel sharps and I never flocked togeth- muchly. I may not die for a year or ore, but it is best to get things in ape." What an entrance for an im ortal spirit into eternity!

—J. Harrison, member of King Solo- on lodge of Toronto, was expelled Fri- y evening for being a secularist, agnos- c and free-thinker.

—Mayor Grace of New York, has gra- ously consented to open the proceed- gs and deliver an address of welcome to e Supreme Council of the Catholic nights of America on their assembly, ay 12, in New York City.

—We recently reported the refusal of Freemason to divulge in court what ad been told him Masonically or on the uare. But the head of the Mormon ciety, John Taylor knows the same dge to escape the consequences of tell- g the truth. Apologizing in a recent rmon for his evansions in the Clawson se, in which he was examined as a wit- ess, he said the reason he testified he ad no knowledge of certain matters nown to him was "because he did know em to divulge."—Lutheran Witness.

—The former Seventh Presbyterian urch of Cincinnati has been turned in- a lodge building. The Scottish Rite asons held Jubilee at its dedication tely. The turning of a Christian urch into a Masonic cathedral was a eat occasion.

—The New York Legislature is so far nder lodge control as to have passed a ecial law protecting the lodges in the se of their trade marks. No one not a ember of any particular order is al- wed to wear a badge of that order.

—At the last meeting of the Illinois rand Lodge of Masons the treasurer's eport showed a balance of $34,703.89 n hand.

—T. E. Powderly, ex mayor of Scran- n, Grand Master Workman of the nights of Labor, has lately becn at ittsburg, with the specific purpose of lding meeting to revive interest in the rder He also attempted to organize e female wage-workers, of whom there re 7,000 in Alleghany county. There is uch feeling between the lodges of the nights of Labor and the Socialists of ittsburg.

—The first camp of the Patriotic Order f Sons of America in Illinois, was or- anized in this city lately. This order as organized in the city of Philadel- hia in 1847, but prior to the rebellion s organization was very imperfect and s progress consequently slow, the camps ot extending much beyoud the Middle tates When the war broke out it was ntirely suspended. In 1866 the order as reorganized. It has for its object he inculcation of pure American princi- les; the opposition to foreign interfer- nce with State interests in the United tates of America; the cultivation of raternal love; the preservation of the Constitution of the United States, and he propagation of free education—and eeks all these excellent ends in a way hat will surely result in subverting them.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	88½	@89
No. 3	80	@83
Winter No 2		@1 00
Corn—No. 2		48
Oats—No.2	34	38½
Rye—No. 2	68	70
Bran per ton		14 50
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@15 00
Mess pork per bbl		11 80
Butter, medium to best	12	@25
Cheese	05	@10½
Beans	55	@1 45
Eggs		13
Potatoes per bus	40	50
Seeds—Timothy	1 40	@1 50
Flax	1 30	1 45
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 50	@5 25
Common to good	2 40	@4 25
Hogs	3 80	@4 75
Sheep	2 00	@4 75

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 40	@6 15
Wheat—Winter	86	@1 01
Spring		99
Corn	55	@57
Oats	41	@50
Mess Pork		13 00
Eggs		15
Butter	8	28
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 75	@5 00
Hogs	4 00	@4 20
Sheep	1 50	@4 00

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Halielujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—

Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for "THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST," and a new Portrait of

GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life-like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, postfree, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure. Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO ILL.

Ruskin's Works

$600 reduced to $18

Illustrated LIBRARY EDITION.

An edition worthy of RUSKIN,—peerless as he is among living Masters of the English Tongue and of Universal Art,—and, also, by reason of its small cost, is within the reach of every cultured home.

We have paid $600 in cash for one complete set of RUSKIN'S Works—some of them being very scarce, and the early editions containing the best impressions of the fine illustrations and many colored plates, being very highly valued by connoisseurs—in order that with the best modern resources of the printers' and engravers' arts, we might reproduce an American edition thoroughly satisfactory to admirers of RUSKIN, and yet at a low price.

We count this publication as the most honorable—the grandest—achievement of The Literary Revolution, and rejoice greatly that we are able to offer this magnificent edition to the American people; and we glory not more in the author and the treasures he has given us, than in the fact that there is a great and growing American constituency that appreciates RUSKIN.

The edition we present will be complete in 15 vols., crown octavo. It will contain ALL the writings of RUSKIN which are of more than transient or local interest—will contain ALL that is included in any other American edition heretofore published, and nearly 3,000 pages additional. Numerous illustrations, including many fine colored plates, will be presented, far greater in number and much superior in quality to other American editions which have heretofore cost many times the price of this.

Ruskin's Select Works.

Though all admirers of RUSKIN will, of course, desire his complete works, if it is possible to procure them; yet by reason of their magnitude and consequent comparatively high cost they may be temporarily out of the reach of some. To meet the wants of such customers we shall publish an edition of his "Select Works" separately in eight volumes, for the net price of $9.60 for the set. The "specimen volume" mentioned below will be included in this set. For further list of the contents see specimen pages.

A SPECIMEN VOLUME.

The entire set of 15 volumes will be ready not later than August 1, 1885. It will be sold only in sets (and select works as below), at the price of $18.00 —with this exception: To make widely known the superb qualities of the work, we propose to offer, separately, ONE SAMPLE VOLUME containing four of RUSKIN'S most popular works, namely:

The Seven Lamps of Architecture.—Finely Illustrated.
Lectures on Architecture and Painting.—Illustrated.
The Queen of The Air.
The Ethics of The Dust.

All of these are bound in one handsome crown octavo volume, fine cloth, beveled boards, gilt tops, uniform with the set. This volume is NOW READY. On condition that the order is received on or before June 1, 1885, we will sell this volume (only) at the reduced price of 85 cents—15 cents extra if ordered by mail. Purchasers of this volume will be allowed, of course, to complete their sets, but not at this reduced rate.

Specimen PAGES FREE. A copy of the April number of The Book-Worm (monthly 25 cents a year), which contains a specimen chapter from RUSKIN'S graphic pen, sent free on request.

Fair Terms. Books not under $5.00 in value are sent to anyone for examination before payment on reasonable evidence of good faith. 148-page illustrated and descriptive Catalogue of our immense list of Standard Books sent for 4 cents. Mention this paper.

JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher,

P. O. Box 1227. 393 Pearl Street, New York.

FARM NOTES.

THE PLANTING OF EVERGREENS.

A deciduous tree, the buds of which have started, is always a risky thing to handle. With evergreens it is different. They transplant better after vegetation has started and the terminal buds begin to swell. This is one reason why evergreens furnished by nurserymen with other stock early in the season often fail. They have necessarily been dug too early, exposed perhaps to chilling or drying winds during the packing and though fresh and green in appearance when received by the planter, make no start after setting out and gradually turn brown and die. It is much better to order evergreens to be sent separately from other trees and later in the season, say during May or even June, if the season is backward and the new shoots have not made much growth. They should be fresh-dug, quick-packed and soon received. The tender point about an evergreen is its root. If once dried it seldom recovers. It is very important, therefore, that the roots should be carefully protected from sun and wind. If possible, take a cloudy showery day for handling evergreens. If the right conditions do not exist, keep the roots constantly wet and rolled up in matting. If there are a great many to be handled, as for hedging, keep them trenched in moist soil, removing only a few at a time. American Agriculturist.

EARLY GARDEN CROPS.

There are many ways of getting early crops, such as starting the plants in the house or hot-bed, and covering them with glass, etc., after they are set out. But when these methods are not adopted, there is still a chance to have early vegetables and a good garden. It is simply to select the warmest and driest soil, and sow or plant early. It is not desirable or wise to put in the main crop before the soil is in good working condition, but for a few early crops on a small scale, we can well afford to run a little risk of losing our seed by too early sowing. One thing, however, should not be overlooked: Do not depend on this early sowing, but sow or plant again a little later when the soil and weather are more favorable. If the first sowing succeeds, you are so much ahead; if it fails you have lost only your seed and labor. There are some crops which can be sown the moment the frost is out of the soil. Among these we may mention peas, cabbage, cauliflower, spinach, onion, lettuee, celery, beet, carrot, parsnip, etc. It is seldom that these are hurt by early frost. Last year a frost in May destroyed many cabbage plants, but that is very unusual. Among those which we should re-sow without waiting to see if the first escape, are beets, radishes, cabbage, cauliflower, beans and sweet corn. —Agriculturist.

POULTRY SUGGESTIONS.

If they are cared for and always have clean, wholesome quarters, and not crowded, poultry will always be healthy. If a fowl merely acts a little cranky do not imagine it is sick and commence stuffing it with drugs; simply remove it to a pen some distance from the flock, and let it alone a few days. If it proves to be very sick, chop off its head and burn it. For cholera, a strong solution of hyposulphite of soda, given three times a day in teaspoonful doses, is probably the best remedy we have. For gapes, dip a feather in turpentine and insert it into the windpipe. One application will generally cure; two are sometimes necessary. Dip scaly legs in kerosene two or three times. A little sulphur mixed with the food once a week in winter, prevents packing of the crop and irregularities of the bowels caused by over-eating and the constant production of eggs. Gravel and course sand are necessary for the digestion of food. Crushed bones, old plaster, lime, etc., are necessary for the formation of egg-shells. Cayenne pepper in small quantities mixed with the food occasionally during the winter, promotes egg-laying.

Fifty hens will eat and trample down half as much grass, if yarded upon it, as will keep a cow. A coop of small chicks in the garden will destroy an enormous number of bugs and worms. Do not permit your poultry to forage upon your neighbor's premises; it is a mean, contemptible trick, and often practiced by men who would resent being accused of petty thievery. Ducks and geese prefer to have their nests on the ground; some will not lay anywhere else. Place their nests in a row along one side of the pen and separate them with thin board partitions.—Am. Agriculturist.

NELSON'S

Sunday School Books and Cards.

Approved by all Evangelical Denominations.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

T. NELSON & SONS, 42 Bleecker St., N.Y.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, r quarter. .... 21-2cts.
Per year..... ..... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address

T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Scnnacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contraditions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to	$	25.....	10	per cent
" " "		50.....	15	" "
" " "		100.....	20	" "
" " "		250.....	25	" "
" " "		500.....	30	" "
" " "		1000.....	35	" "
" " "		1500.....	40	" "
" " "		2500.....	50	" "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:

Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - - Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - - NewYork.

N. B.--Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER IS THE "WAUKESHA GLENN!"

HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS, NATURAL OR ARTIFICIAL.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a large Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned in the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentieths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—While the new Furnace was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engaged upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation.—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forbear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous and better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words.

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endowment of hoarded bank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bŏŏkt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading: more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'-bind'er, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for casing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, -lĕrnd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The following exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 210,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the new work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

☞We offer the Christian Cynosure for one year and the Dictionary, postpaid, both for only $2.00. W. I. PHILLIPS.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

HOME HINTS.

SPRING WINDS AND COLDS.

Our early spring weather is peculiarly trying to delicate persons, and no one who has any affection of the chest, or bronchial tubes, should expose himself to high winds, especially those that blow from the north or east. As a rule, still cold weather will never hurt any one, if properly clothed, but if moderate weather is accompanied by cold winds, then beware. Nervous people will usually find a headache, and generally depression of the whole system, to be the result of a walk on a cold, damp, windy day. But there are many whose business calls them out in all weathers, and to these we would say take the greatest pains to tone up the system so as to resist cold, and protect the body against sudden changes. Chest protectors of silk, shamois skius, or even layers of newspapers should be worn both back and front, for the lungs lie nearer the shoulders than the chest. It is the food which is digested that supports life. It is a good plan, too, to dash the neck, chest and arms every morning with cold water, rubbing them afterward with a coarse towel. Hot baths should only be taken at night and cold ones in the morning. When a creepy, chilly sensation is felt, and the first symptoms of a cold appear, three or four drops of camphor on a lump of sugar, or in water will often produce a reaction and ward off the threatened attack. Healthful sleep is nature's great restorer, and this should always be procured, but only by rational means; narcotics, except in extreme cases, are to be avoided. A biscuit, a bowl of oatmeal porridge, or glass of warm milk, taken on retiring, will aid in drawing the blood from the brain and produce a sweet, healthy drowsinesss. It is said that colds are often contracted in bed, and those with weak chests will do well to wear a protector at night as well as by day.

FURNITURE POLISH.

This simple preparation is said to be desirable for cleaning and polishing old furniture: Over a moderate fire put a perfectly clean vessel. Into this drop two ounces of white or yellow wax. When melted, add four ounces of pure turpentine, then stir until cool, when it is ready for use. The mixture brings out the original color of the wood, adding a luster equal to that of varnish.

TOO HIGH LIVING.

I have formed a settled conviction that the world is fed too much. Pastries, hot bread, cakes, rich gravies, pickles, pepper sauces, salads, tea and coffee are discarded from my "bill of fare," and I firmly believe that they will be from the recipes of the twentieth century. Entire wheat flour bread, vegetables fruit, fish with a little meat, and milk as the chief drink will distil in the alembic of the digestive organs into pure, rich, feverless blood, electric but steady nerves, and brains that can "think God's thoughts after him" as they have never yet been thought. This is my recipe: "Plain living and high thinking;" and this is my warning: "With high living you will get exceedingly plain thinking." Yours for stomachic rights,

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

A rigid economy in small things is almost unknown among our people. The waste from the table of an American family would keep in comfort a French or German peasant with his wife and children. The waste of fuel in an American kitchen, where an ignorant Bridget presides, would cook the food of another family. The cast off clothing of a fairly well-to-do American family would comfortably clothe another of the same size.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

In Night Sweats and Prostration

DR. R. STUDHALTER, St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used it in dyspepsia, nervous prostration, and in night sweats, with very good results."

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in tha form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, elaims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscenees of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presideuts, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2 00

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 25c. per doz. $3 25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, gripa, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony uf the first three degrees. Paper cover, 88 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of tha most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and tha forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbens Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the InITIATE. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the ChrisTIAN RELIGION. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DeGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Lecchburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the RePUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Templa, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Templa and Council, with engravings showing the signs, gripe, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative, 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that sec societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each, per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan, "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 304 pages.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

Among the settlers on the Dakota land opened by President Arthur and ordered closed by his successor, great activity prevails. Meetings are being held, societies organized and funds secured to test the validity of the government's position in the courts. In the whole district in dispute, lying east of the Missouri, south of Blunt and north of Chamberlain, it is claimed that there are but 900 Indians, while the number of settlers is placed at 5,000.

Health-officers from sea-board cities had a conference in New York, Friday, and decided upon the establishment of rigid rules to prevent the introduction of cholera. Rag cargoes will be closely quarantined until they are boiled or steamed, the sulphur process being voted a failure.

The Mormon bishop, Hiram J. Clawson, was arrested Friday at Salt Lake City for unlawful cohabitatiation.

A cyclone at Prairie Grove, Tex., on Wednesday, killed a fourteen-year-old girl and fatally injured three other persons. A school-house, church and four dwellings were demolished, and a number of children received severe wounds.

Gov. Martin of Kansas, has given notice that the Sullivan Ryan prize-fight cannot take place within the confines of that State. It was announced to be fought at Dodge City.

Thirteen persons, among them a postmaster and an ex-member of the Legislature, were brought prisoners to Oshkosh, Wis., Thursday for fishing with nets. Some were fined $50 and costs, and others had their cases continued.

The steamer "City of Mexico" was seized and her captain, John O'Brien, arrested, Thursday at New York, on the charge of supplying war munitions to the insurgents in the United States of Colombia. The vessel was chartered in March for lumber, but in reality took out a cargo of firearms.

The heaviest snowstorm ever known in Colorado set in Thursday night and continued for twenty-one hours Fully 20 inches fell—as much as the aggregate of the previous falls of the whole winter The snow was very heavy and many roofs fell, while several snow slides are reported. In one place some miners' huts were buried.

The Secretary of the Treasury has under consideration several propositions for the transportation of a large amount of gold coin from the Sub-treasury at San Francisco to the Sub treasury at New York. The transfer of about $35,000,000 of gold coin is contemplated.

Ex-Judge S. M. Moore died, at his home in this city, of apoplexy. He was born in Bourbon county, Kentucky, in 1821, and came to Chicago in 1865. He was a prominent member of the Presbyterian church, and connected with many of its enterprises.

As a result of a water-spout and flood at Medicine Lodge, Kan., fourteen bodies have been recovered, and a number of others are yet believed to be missing.

The bodies of six persons who lost their lives in the great Vicksburg fire have been recovered. It is believed that from fifteen to twenty others are still in the ruins.

Gen. Grant continues to improve and his physicians have ceased to speak of a relapse. He rode out frequently last week and walked a distance of a block.

A disastrous fire took place at Wheaton, Ill, Wednesday, destroying some thirteen stores and dwellings and the Masonic lodge. The Wesleyan church was endangered from sparks which were fortunately discovered. A fire engine, sent out from Chicago, rendered much assistance.

FOREIGN.

A battle on Friday between the Dominion troops and the insurgents under Reil resulted disastrously for the former. A desperate fire was kept up for over an hour. Then after a short cessation, Riel's troops recommenced firing and the prairie was set on fire. This, however, was soon extinguished The Indian style of fighting was indulged in, and the casualties in the Canadian ranks showed that the rebels were a foe not to be despised. Ten killed and thirty severely wounded was the loss reported to Middleton's men.

Two leading Toronto dailies are in trouble. During the tremendous excitement consequent upon the first news of the Northwest rebellion they published Sunday editions and are now in the toils of the law.

A dispatch from Panama Friday says that while a strong barricade was being erected, entirely enclosing the Central and South American Cable Company's office, and great preparations being made for a fight, the Americans arrived, tore down the barricades and took charge of the town. The insurgents were recalled to their barracks by the bugle.

A cable dispatch to the Guion Steamship Line office, on Friday, stated that the Alaska of that line, the fastest vessel that crosses the Atlantic, had been chartered by the British government for war purposes for a period of six months, with the option of purchase at the expiration of that time. This makes the sixth transatlantic steamer that has been chartered by the British government.

General Graham at Suakim on the Red Sea has received definite orders, by telegraph, from General Wolsely. It is understood that the immediate withdrawal of the British troops from the Soudan has been decided upon.

The Afgan question is still under debate, but there are indications of decisive action soon. A London Times' St. Petersburg dispatch says English proposals through Baron de Staal arrived on Friday. England therein proposes to submit the Penjdeh affair to arbitration. It is believed the proposals are most reasonable and equable, and show that Gladstone most earnestly desires peace regardless of public opinion. If these proposals are rejected it will show that Russia is determined upon war. The Moscow Gazette, regarded as official, on the other hand says that if England wants peace she must accept the Penjdeh incident and resume negotiations respecting the frontier.

The Egyptian government is still firm in its determination not to compromise with France for the suppression of French newspapers.

Last week United States marines to the number of 500 took possession of Panama. The insurgent General, Aizpuru, and three of his staff were placed under arrest. The French consul entered a protest against the action of the American marines. A later dispatch, dated the 26th inst, says: All the troops left Panama Saturday night. The consequences cannot be foreseen, on the arrival of the Colombian troops. Barricades are being erected in the streets and sand-bag defenses constructed on the balcony of the barracks, showing that the insurgents are determined to fight in the town. The native feeling is strong. It is considered cruel for the United States forces to withdraw, leaving the people helpless and the city in control of a lawless mob.

BUSINESS.

Weekly papers expect that during the summer there will be a decreasc in their subscription list, but we trust that the friends of the Cynosure will not let this be true of their paper, when 25 cents will send it to a trial subscriber for eight weeks. Cannot each friend send one more trial subscriber?

Have you read the advertisement in this issue offering the Cynosure for eight months free? Show it to your friends and let us see if enough subscribers can not be obtained to overcome the usual discontinuances of the summer months. Let us "hold the fort."

Extracts from some of these letters will be continued from week to week for a short time that donors may learn something of the effect of their benevolence.

From Prairie Center, Kan.:

"I regard the Christian Cynosure as the voice of God to the nation. I trust it will continue in the future, as it has in the past, to 'lift up its voice and spare not, and show the people their sin and the house of Jacob their transgressions." God bless you in your work of reform."

Many kind words of commendation for the paper are received, which are appreciated by your agents and co-workers here. But attention now is especially called to the extracts from letters from ministers located in the South. They have received the paper as a donation from old friends of the Cynosure, who have thus started the reform leaven in new fields, not only widening and extending but also deepening the work of our agent, Rev. H. H. Hinman, in previous years.

From Franklin, Va.:

"I praise God for the National Christian Association that has the moral courage and Christian boldness to stand for the right and expose the sin and iniquity which so cover our land in this age of the world. I am in full sympathy with the Christian Cynosure.

"Intemperance is a gigantic evil, but not doing as much harm to our country as the secret societies, especially Masonry. I am deeply interested in the Cynosure and fully agree with the principles it advocates. May success attend it, and its telling words open blind eyes to see the truth, deaf ears to hear, and many hearts be ready to receive the warning to shun every secret society. Please return our heartfelt thanks to the donor of the paper.

From Benton, Ala.:

"I cannot now write my sentiments in full, but I must say, to begin with, that the Cynosure meets my hearty approval in its efforts to exterminate the twin evils intemperance and secret societies. In 1876 I joined a secret society but did not remain a member exceeding six months, notwithstanding I was the worthy master of the lodge. I was young and hasty, too much so. I soon settled the fact in my mind that the oath I had taken was contrary to the teaching of God's word. I withdrew and denounced the hidden works of darkness. I was offered many inducements to return, but never did so. I further saw that the society had a tendency to paralyze the cause of Christ, and from that day to this I have given my earnest protest against it. The donor of the Cynosure has my warmest, heartiest and sincerest thanks for such a boon."

From Raleigh, N. C.:

"Permit me to assure you that I am in hearty sympathy with you and the entire National Christian Association, and am opposed to secret societies, especially the Masonic fraternity. I assure you I do enjoy reading the Cynosure, and feel that it is a great benefit to me to have it. It is indeed a welcome messenger to my home, and I feel very grateful to the donor, and pray that God's blessing may rest upon whoever it is. God bless them and you."

LETTERS

Containing cash for Cynosure received during the week, ending Friday, April 24:

H Nordahl, Benj J Butler, A S Hamlin, Sam'l Russell, G L Frizzell, S F Fisher, J M Stanton, Maria B Nichols, Kenyon's News Sub Agency, Mary Gaddis, Sam'l Smith, Mrs J R Pierson, H D Jones, Sumner Avery, S L Cook, Rev S C Long, J Cleary, T S Parvin, H M Elwyn, R B Dawson, Dr C Walder, J S Bibbins, Sub News Co, R Dickinson, D G Foster, B G Hunt, A S Boyd, C A Webb. Mrs. H M Cushman. J E Verkler, J W Thompson, Prof R T Morgan.

WHETHER CHOLERA

Is coming or not every householder should know that cleanliness and disinfection are the greatest preventives. The principal and surest factor for this purpose is a perfect cleansing, bleaching and purifying soap, making clothes beautifully white and [illegible] It should be exclusively used in all departments of a household. DREYDOPPEL'S SOAP is sold in full pound bars only by all wholesale grocers and firstclass retailers.

DREYDOPPEL'S BORAX SOAP,

SKIN DISEASES,

Tetter, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Pimples, and all Itching Skin Eruptions, are cured and prevented by the exclusive use of DR. DYOTT'S AROMATIC ALUM SULPHUR SOAP, an exquisite beautifier of the complexion and toilet requisite. 25 cents, by druggists, or sent by mail.

Address Wm. Dreydoppel, Manufacturer, 208 North Front Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dreydoppel's Disinfecting Powder, 15 cts. a large box.

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $10 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill, Chicago.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND-PAINTED SILKS for Patchwork, Tidies, Screens, etc. Send $1 for package, or 50 cts. for beautiful samples. WESTERN ART CO., Salem, O

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to Rev Chiniqay, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED! Rider's Improved Pillow-Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars and see what it is any way. E. W. RIDER.
Mention the Christian Cynosure. Racine, Wis.

HOW TO BUILD
A HOUSE.

A book containing plans for twenty-five houses of all sizes from two rooms up; also several barns; sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents, by

GEO. W. OGILVIE,
234 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill

THE NOVELTY
RUG MACHINE.

[PAT. DEC. 27, 1881.]

Makes Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc., with ease and rapidity. Price only one dollar. Single machine, with full directions, sent by mail on receipt of price. Agents wanted. Apply for circulars to E. ROSS & CO., Patentees and Sole Manufacturers, Toledo, Ohio, Lock Box 184; also Manufacturers of Rug Patterns.

IDAHO COLONY 300,000 ACRES In Snake River Valley—near Eagle Rock, Idaho. 80 to 640 acres to each settler. $1.50 per acre—50 cts. cash—$1. in 3 years. Climate and soil same as California. Send for circular and prospectus. Also Colony lands in California. Monthly excursions, $52.50.
WM. H. MARTIN, 103 Adams St. Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 CTS., sent post-paid. Address,
BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.
DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S
ORIENTAL CREAM, or MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER.

PURIFIES as well as BEAUTIFIES the Skin. No other Cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth-Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of thirty years and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made Accept no counterfeit of similar name The distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayre, said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin. Mme. M. B. T. GOURAUD, Sole Proprietor, 48 Bond St., New York. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the United States, Canadas, and Europe.
Beware of base imitations. $1,000 Reward for arrest and proof of any one selling the same.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 33. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1885. WHOLE No. 784.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Scandinavian Theology... 8
The Black Valley Railroad 8
John Quincy Adams—II.. 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Regions Beyond..... 1
Masonry in the General Assembly..... 2
The Sacredness of Promises and Covenants..... 2
SELECTED:
A Prayer for Peace (Poetry)..... 2
England and Russia..... 2
Trades Unions..... 3
CORRESPONDENCE:
Lodge Jubilee in St. Paul; Wm. Taylor's African Mission: A Minister Beaten by Lodge Rummies; Petitions and Requests; Pith and Point..5,6
REFORM NEWS:
Michigan Convention: From the Illinois Lecturer..... 4
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chap. XVIII—Concluded..... 3
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE CHURCHES..... 12
LITERATURE..... 12
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
Donations..... 13
IN BRIEF..... 13
FARM NOTES..... 14
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

The late city election in Chicago will not be a settled question—perhaps before time for another. Mayor Harrison with his majority in the city council has begun the official count, and are making a record for the courts when the count is contested. Harrison has begun a number of libel suits against the papers and individuals, the Inter Ocean being most honored in this respect. By the time they are concluded we hope Chicago may be able to hold jubilee upon the overthrow of the gang that now controls the affairs of the city.

The power Harrison and the gambler McDonald are able to wield through the saloons and gambling dens is so great as to discourage some good men, who, in their Union League club the other evening, advocated the limitation of the suffrage to the "better classes." We doubt whether such a classification and exaltation of the power of the bourgeoisie will at all accomplish the end they seek. It would be an invitation to the communists to redouble their rage and roaring and setting up a distinction entirely un-American. Let the end be gained by elevating the masses, throwing aristocracy out of the churches of Jesus Christ, and the saloons out of every community.

The dedication of the new Board of Trade building last week marks an era in the history of Chicago as the commercial center of the Northwest. The great building, the finest of the kind in the world, was lately described in these columns. The transfer from the old building which rose from the ruins of the great fire in 1872, required two days of speech-making and the finest banquet ever spread in the Grand Pacific hotel. There are some tokens of good about this affair. The president of the Board, Mr. Blake, is a Christian man who recognizes his obligations to God everywhere, and teaches a large adult Bible class in the Second Baptist church; a clergyman was called upon to offer a dedicatory prayer; and a stubborn fight is being made by the Board against the "bucket" shops—outside grain gamblers. Perhaps the conscience of the Board itself will be reached before long on this point. President Blake says that not more than one-fifth of the members of the Board deal in "margins." That is better than we had hoped. Such dealing should be made a criminal offense, and suppressed.

Although the proclamations from Odd-fellow head-quarters, preparing for the celebration of the late sixty-fifth anniversary, (April 26) hinted that it were better to take some other day than that devoted to Christian worship, yet in many cases the order defied the religious sentiment as boldly as the Knight Templar Freemasons. Our correspondence gives one remarkable instance. The Providence, R. I., Dispatch mentions nine lodges in that city that flaunted their lodge religion in temples dedicated to Jesus Christ. Here in Chicago, Bishop Fallows, ready to use any sensation to advertise his church, got some 400 members to parade with a police escort through the streets to his church. An energetic park policeman ordered the Sabbath-breaking lodgemen off the boulevard and saw that the order was obeyed; but Fallows complimented their Christianity and lauded their sham virtues. Farther to the northwest in a part of the city settled by Germans and Scandianavians the corner-stone of an Odd-fellow temple was laid with great blaring and thumping of bands. Odd-fellowship has now successfully demonstrated the fact of its hostility to the sanctity of the Christian Sabbath.

Few rich men have died less lamented than Alexander T. Stewart, the merchant prince of New York; and little of the vast fortune left to his widow, has blessed humanity. She has just completed as a monument to the memory of her husband, a cathedral in the little village of Garden City, Long Island. No expense of adornment has been spared on the building to make it a perfect specimen of Gothic architecture. Within are no less than six organs, the largest capable of more than a million combinations of sound. The pulpit is bronze, the bishop's throne and the stalls for the clergy are carved mahogany and everything is graud and in keeping, which would require colums to describe. As there are probably not people enough in Garden City to fill the place, at least not enough who would be welcome there, the railroad has put on an extra train on Sabbath to take out a crowd, and make some use of the great structure. Thus, though dedicated to religion, it becomes an agency for the overthrow of religion; and while it bears the name of a house of Christian worship, it is itself worshiped.

The firmuess of President Cleveland in maintaining our national faith to the Indians is not too highly commended. The settlers on the Oklahoma tract in the Indiau Territory have been driven out and the cattle raisers who pasture large parts of the district are expected to follow. The Kansas courts have just decided against the settlers, imposing heavy penalty for their disregard of the proclamations from Washington—a crime tautamount to treason. The disputed territory was sold by the Indians to the Government with the special stipulation that it was to be reserved for other Indian tribes. The President will have other cases to settle before his term closes. Among the border settlements about the Indian Territory there is a continual ferment of the small politicians, hungry editors and men who are landless because lazy, to drive out the Indians and seize their lands. The legislature of Arkansas has even sent a resolution to Congress demanding that the Indian Territory be opened to white settlers. Kansas and Texas have joined the demand. But the pledge of the nation must be kept until we are honorably disengaged from it; and such seems to be the resolve of the administration.

A circular of which we doubt the authenticity has been issued from the New York office of the Grand Army of the Republic, asking for contributions from the public to enable this secret lodge to hold a grand celebration on "Decoration day." If the lodge should do this in its own name there would be no wonder, but in some way it has secured the endorcement of Mayor Grace, Judge Noah Davis, Senator Everts, ex-Post Master General James, General Fisk, Drs. Dix, Robinson, Armitage and others. These names are palmed off as having issued the circular, which is about as likely as that it should come from President Cleveland's cabinet. We have no longer the caustic pen of Gen. J. W. Phelps to expose the folly and sham of decoration day, but a paragraph from the Indpendent a year or two since is worth reprinting in capitals: "The occurrence of Decoratiou Day last week prompt us to some words of question about the propriety of continuing the observance. In itself the idea of such a day is beautiful and every way to be commended. In practice, however, it gives rise to very grave evils. In the South it has caused the appointment of two rival days, the one loyal and the other rebel. On the rebel Decoration Day there is a general holiday. The whites come out in great processions, with rebel flags and badges, listen to rebel speeches, and decorate the rebel graves. On the loyal Decoratiou Day business proceeds as usual and few but the negroes gather to decorate the loyal graves. The fact is that the day is made one of the most potent influences to keep alive the rebel and sectional feeling, and if it could be abolished a great advantage would be gained. The institution injures the cause it was intended to foster."

THE REGIONS BEYOND.

BY REV. J. T. AVERY.

"Go" is a little word, but it is often used very expressively. When we see a person with little force of character and of indolent appearance, we hear the remark, "There is not much go in him." "There is no go in it," "It's no go," are expressions which in their homely way speak of failure and disappointment.

Go and Gospel go together. Go is a part of the Gospel word and doctrine. No man can follow Christ without going away from the cities of Destruction, Carnal Security, and Selfishness. The King's business is urgent. The King of all kingdoms hath given commandment, "Go ye into all the world," "Go work to-day," "Occupy till I come," a field wide as the world, a journey long as life. Salvation is of the Lord, who said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." Jesus has promised to give unto every man as his work shall be. Paul's master motive in service for God was, "the love of Christ constraineth me." Heaven is spoken of as the rest that remaineth for the people of God. Can lazy, indolent, do-nothing, save-your-own-soul Christians go there? Are they making ready for a prepared place? a place where toilers do rest from their labors, where warriors are crowned, and pilgrims forget past journeyings in the bliss of home, sweet home? What surrender have I made—am I making for Christ Jesus, who gave himself for the salvation of the lost, the redemption of sinners? Do I recognize that I am not my own, all I have is His—bought with the precious blood; and that the best service is but the least such love demands? "By their fruits ye shall know them," is the royal standard and test. When Jesus, who sits over against the treasury, shall reveal the motive which prompted the gift, and the amount given, there will be many ashamed when the book shall be opened.—Rev. 20:12.

At a missionary meeting a brother thought well to air a little Latin, and said, with a good deal of gusto, "Money is a sine qua non." One lady said to another, "What did he say about money?" The reply was, "He said money is a sign of going on." Without knowing the mystifying jumble, she had caught unknowingly all and more than the speaker said. "Sine qua non,—an indispensable condition."

Judas carried the bag. Peter at his Master's bidding took a piece of money out of the fish's mouth. God created aud stored all earth's precious metals, and would have us remember that silver and gold are useable materials; even in Christian service the Lord hath need, and would borrow what he hath giveu, so that he may increase and add temporal and spiritual blessings to the lender. Remember, there is a withholding which tendeth to poverty. Christ could do, and could have done without human instrumentality in spreading the gospel tidings. But he wills to put the work into our charge, and honors his church with great responsibilities and opportunity.

It has been calculated that with every swing of the pendulum one soul passes away; with every rotation of the earth, 86,400; and with every thirty-three years a generation! What we do for the salvation of this generation we must do while this generation survives; and yet we act as though we could take our own time to reach these millions. "With 50,000 missionaries at work during ten years, and $75,000,000 a year for ten years to support them, the Gospel might be preached repeatedly to every human being; yet supposing ten million Protestants to be truly evangelical, one per cent. of that number gives us 100,000 laborers. $750,000,000 in ten years seems a great sum; yet should each member of the evangelical churches in England, Europe and America give us $15, the whole amount would be secured! The Crimean war cost nearly as much, and the American war several times as much. England spends every two years on intoxicating drink what would suffice in ten years to preach the Gospel as a witness to every human soul. There remain, before this century closes, twice as many years as we need, on this simple basis of men and money, to preach the Gospel to every living creature."

To strengthen and encourage those whom he sends Jesus said, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you; and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Mat. 28:17. Mark 16:15 shows that with the disciples of Jesus rests a great duty. "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Is the church awake? There is an enduement of power from on high sufficient for the work; if our lack of faith, liberality and selfishness did not keep back, who can tell how soon consecrated efforts would see the kingdom come, and all men knowing the Lord, whom to know is life everlasting.

Kingdoms wide, that sit in darkness,
Grant them, Lord, thy glorious light:
And from Eastern coast to Western;
May the morning chase the night;
And redemption,
Freely purchased, win the day."

Halifax, N. S.

MASONRY IN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

In 1854, one Alfred Creigh, who had presided over a Masonic lodge in Washington, Pa., published a partial history of Freemasonry in that State. In January, 1821, his lodge unanimously adopted the following preamble and resolution:

WHEREAS, we have seen with indignation and surprise the report and resolutions of the reverened Presbyterian Synod of Pittsburgh, which excludes our fraternity from the rights and privileges of that church; and also charging us with degradation and ruin to the bodies and souls of men who become members of our lodges, which they presume to say have pernicious influences both on morals and religion; therefore, on motion,

Resolved, That as Ma ons, we consider every man our enemy in private life who wantonly attacks our ancient and honorable institution, and we pledge ourselves in the most solemn manner to withdraw our support and aid from any person who professes himself unfriendly or uses any direct or indirect means to injure the fraternity and our sacred order.

From the annals of this lodge it appears that in 1806, a lawyer of the town, one Obadiah Jennings, was "raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason." Ten years later, Jennings changed his occupation and became a preacher in the Presbyterian denomination, and was elected moderator of the General Assembly of 1822. The year previous, the Pittsburgh synod had taken decided stand against Freemasonry, and it was hoped that the highest court of the denomination would take similar action. "When Sanballat (the enemy in secret) heard of it, it grieved him exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel," and when the question was introduced, the "enemy in secret" was prepared as the following extract on page 291, of Creigh's Masonic history abundantly proves: "Steadfastly and adheringly did he (Jennings) advocate the purity and the principles of the Masonic institution. And through his unbounded influence, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, when the question of Masonry was presented to them, immediately postponed its consideration for two reasons: first, because some of their own excellent divines and members were Masons, and secondly, that they had not sufficient information upon the subject."

R.

You strike out "revelation," and we will prove that the whole fabric of civilization rests upon the rotten basis of compacts made by self-willed individuals and selfish communities. For example, it is a crime to steal, and hence the thief, if caught, is punished. Who says it is a crime? The law says so. Who made the law? These or those men. But it is no sin, it is not a violation of God's law. Therefore, no man must steal, because if caught he will be punished. Now, plenty of people venture thousands of dollars to make some profit. That thief does the same thing precisely; he ventures two or five years of his time and liberty to make a big profit. The former does not think of losing his capital, and the latter does not think of being caught while at the venture. Where is the thief's crime if the right of possession is not of Divine origin? The thief is punished for the protection of property in the possession of a class of people; but he is neither a sinner nor a criminal. That is the nature of law without revelation.—American Israelite.

THE SACREDNESS OF PROMISES AND COVENANTS.

WHERE OATHS BELONG, AND HOW EVIL COVENANTS MAY BE ANNULLED.

Promises and covenants are agreements to perform special things—to do certain acts or not to do them, either within a specified and limited time, or during our natural life. It is most reasonable, and every way just and right that the party making a promise should know what he promises, lest he be unable to fulfill it; and what he covenants to keep, lest he find it impossible to keep it.

All persons exercising good judgment, even naturally, refuse any such blind agreements as are inroads upon our safety and liberty as enemies only would ask of us. But as all humanity is beset with enemies, it becomes those who would escape every kind of snare to seek to know the remedy or cure of an evil as well as the preventive; for some well-meaning souls will be ensnared for lack of knowledge and foresight.

God has said, "Thou shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths," and, "When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it, for he hath no pleasure in fools; pay that which thou hast vowed." The tenor of Scripture seems to show that oaths and vows were made exclusively to God, and not to men, though men were sometimes affected by their fulfillment or non-fulfillment; and that solemn oaths that men sometimes, but unnecessarily, administer to one another about their dealings with each other, never are authorized of God, but are a perversion of the very principle of promises and covenants that ought to have a candid yes or no to them and no more.

Further requirement than this betrays insincerity and a spirit of suspicion and treason of them who ask it. For it is as easy to punish known, wilful lying if the laws were so made to do it, as it is to punish those who knowingly swear to a lie. But like many other evils, it is so common as to command respect, and thus becomes in a great measure established by age and custom. Promises should be slowly and cautiously made and faithfully kept. God, who alone is good, has a right to require a vow or an oath, for he never will require a wrong thing of a creature.

Not so is man toward his fellow-man, for man ever "lieth in wait to deceive" his fellow; hence "beware of men" and avoid oaths and solemn obligations to them. A candid yes or no ought to satisfy every reasonable mind for the performance of all righteous obligations. And so sacred are righteous promises that no one can purposely and unnecessarily break them without being false in heart and character.

Mankind everywhere feels the necessity of "No going back on contracts," and shape their laws accordingly; but never to favor those contracts deceitfully obtained. But Satan ever exacts the fulfillment of such—even to the covenants made with death and with hell. And so great is the power of a covenant in the human soul that it "behooved Christ to suffer and to die" to break this covenant, that man did not possess the power to break; and all who become entangled or ensnared in these meshes of the evil one, must needs come to him who has "all power in heaven and in earth,' and he will break this death-bound covenant for you, and bid you go free forever; "greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world;" and "whom the Son makes free is free indeed."

Then come, O ye who "labor and are heavy laden" with Satan's Masonic or other obligations upon you, which you know not how to break; "take," says Christ, "my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest to your souls."

L. D. B.

Montmorenci, Ind.

A PRAYER FOR PEACE.

Give us peace in our time, O Lord,
From the desolating sword,
From the devastating flame,
Peace! Peace! in thy holy name.

The preachers of thy word
Are false to the trust conferr'd;
And defile thy temple gate
With the heresies of hate.

The eyes of the young man glow
As the wild war trumpets blow,
And the women shout and cry,
As they cozen them forth to die.

And they go, the brave and strong,
For the right that may be wrong,
To feed the ravenous tomb
With their beauty and their bloom.

From the mountains to the sea
Floats up, O Lord! to thee,
To the footstool of thy throne,
The long, low, tremulous moan

Of a childless multitude,
Tender, and fair, and good—
Of mothers forlorn, forlorn,
Bereft of their early born;

And of widows, forlorn as they,
Whose hope, whose prop, whose stay,
Lie low in the hasty grave
Of the unreturning brave.

For the sake of the perishing Realm
That our passions overwhelm,
For the sake of thine outraged laws,
And of Liberty's holy cause,

Send us, oh, send us Peace!
Let the guilty carnage cease,
Oh stay the avenging rod,
Peace! Peace! O Lord our God.

—Charles Mackay.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

PROF. GOLDWIN SMITH BELIEVES WAR UNNECESSARY.

At the annual dinner of the St. George's Society, says the Washington dispatch of April 26, to the New York Herald, Prof. Goldwin Smith, who was present as a guest of the society, made some remarks concerning the Anglo-Russian situation in Central Asia. He said that he was one of those Englishmen who had always deplored the quarrels with Russia, had earnestly desired her friendship, and who had looked back regretfully to the days when the two nations were standing side by side for European independence against the first Napoleon—one of those Englishmen who believe that there is no necessary or real antagonism between the interest of the two peoples, no reason why they should not in peace and comity develop each in its own lines. He recognized the growth of the Russian Empire in Central Asia as not less natural than the growth of the British Empire in Hindostan; the beneficence of the power which has closed the slavemarts of Khiva and Bokhara, and the legitimacy of Russia's desire for access to an open sea, and he could not see why she should not enter the Mediterranean as the friend rather than the enemy of England.

The Professor said that these were the views and sentiments which, as a public writer, he had always maintained. He hated Jingoism, and did not love aggrandizement. It was doubtful if England was richer or happier for possessing India, and he looked forward to the day when, her mission there being accomplished, she would peaceably withdraw, but at the present moment the overthrow of British rule would not be a gain to India or to humanity.

England did not wrest India from a nation or a national government, but from a murderous chaos of warring races and religions following the downfall of the Mogul Empire. It fell to her, not because she was more rapacious than others, but because she happened to be stronger and more resolute. The speaker said that he had little faith in conquest as an instrument of civilization, but if ever a sincere effort to give conquest that character has been made, England has made that effort in the case of India, especially during the last half century. She has given India peace instead of ceaseless war and havoc; she has made life and property secure to a degree never before known; population has immensely increased; famines no longer lay waste whole districts; railways and works of public utility are built in place of imperial palaces and tombs; widow-burning, infanticide, and thuggery have been put down, and a code of law has been introduced in which the genius of the greatest jurists has been tasked to combine the principles of civilized justice with minute respect for the special ideas, customs, and interests of the Hindoo. The subject race is being gradually associated with the ruling race of the Government. Colleges for the natives have been formed, schools are built, and agriculture and industry are liberally fostered. Nor does England monopolize India—her ports and trade are open to all nations alike, and the American missionary preaches as freely under the British flag as the missionary of the Church of England. If the British power were to fall, the first consequence would be that the old murderous chaos would come again. An enemy of England might desire the catastrophe, but not any friend of civilization.

A RUSSIAN VIEW.

M. Fredrick De Martens, professor of international law in the University of St. Petersburg, wrote on March 22 a very interesting letter to the London International Arbitration and Peace Association on the present dispute between England and Russia in Central Asia. He gives the peace side of the question from a Russian point of view, and his remarks are worthy of reproduction in brief. He begins by saying that "the present collict has arisen from the Boundary Commission finding it impossible to begin the demarcation of the Afghan frontier, because the Afghans have occupied Penjdeh, and the Russians have accordingly seized Pul-i-Khatun and the Zulfekar pass. It is undoubted that if the Afghans had not taken Penjdeh the Boundary Commission would certainly have begun already its work of demarcation, and no panic, no ill feelings between both countries would exist at present." The main point of Professor Marten relates to England's fears about a Russian attack on India. He says:

"I know that the English public is attributing to the Russian Government the beautiful scheme of the conquest of British India. Just as several years ago there was in England the idea that Merv was the 'key of India,' so now many are convineed that the key of India is Herat. So far as I can judge by the English papers and the speeehes of your statesmen, the idea has taken deep root in the public mind and government cireles that the English possessions in Asia must be protected by every possible means against contact with the Russian possessions in Central Asia. As to the conquest of India, I can assure you that few men of sound sense in Russia regard British India as the goal of the victorious progress of our arms. On the contrary, the eonquest of the barbarian tribes and khanates in the heart of Asia is generally regarded as involving a heavy burden upon the Russian exehequer; and imperious necessity alone has prevented the Russian Government halting when and where it fain would have halted. But I must repeat to-day the same opinion which I have expressed in 1879 in my pamphlet, 'Russia and England in Central Asia,' namely, that an immediate contact between the English and Russian possessions in Asia, would exercise a happy influence on the relations of these two powers both in Europe and Asia.

"The proximity of Russia and England in Asia,' I wrote six years ago, 'is calculated to inspire the English Government with greater respect for the rights of Russia, and to stifle every thought on the part of the latter of subverting British interests in India. England having, through the contact of the English and Russian possessions in Central Asia, lost her insular position, will be forced to abandon her insular policy.' I am now more strongly convinced than in 1879 that the force of things is bringing England and Russia closer together in Central Asia, and that force is stronger than human will. The contiguity of the possessions and spheres of actions of these two great European powers will prove a positive benefit and not a calamity, and will give the only practical and solid basis of a thorough understanding between them. Not a word would I change in what I wrote in 1879, but I must also repeat to day that a war between Russia and England in Central Asia would be the greatest calamity to both of them, and would develop the prowess and confidence of the Asiatie race in their own forces. And what could Russia do with 250,000,000 Hindoos and Mussulmans? What could England do with the Turcomans and other Asiatic tribes which are at present under Russian rule? I will conclude with the expression of the deepest conviction that the Russian and English Governments will come to find a new modus vivendi in Central Asia."

Our religion is to be estimated, not by a few intensities, but by a vital and generous glow and activity throughout our whole life. We are not to mourn because we do not feel; but if, having feeling, we find no expression for that feeling in life, we may well mourn.

Lies are hiltless swords, which cut the hands that wield them.

TRADES UNIONS.

BY E. A. KIMBALL, INSTRUCTOR IN MECHANICAL DEPARTMENT, UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS.

Born of ignorance and incompetence, they are alike a curse to the individual and to the country. Until about the year 1860 they had not aequired very much prominence in this country, but from that time on until the spring of 1882, the period of the great strike of the iron workers in various parts of the country, when thousands of workmen voluntarily abandoned their places in order to compel their employers to acceed to their terms, they have had a constant increase in numbers. In nearly all branches of manufacture similar organizations exist.

What is the true animus of such organizations? Let us take, for example, the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. To start with, they proposed to fix a uniform rate of wages for all classes or grades, of workmen, so that the skilled and the bungling, careless man should receive like reward: that would be in harmony with the man with the vineyard, provided the employers would agree to a penny a day. But instead of a penny a day, the rate was to be fixed at the highest price, so that the incompetent workman should be raised to a level with the competent one, notwithstanding his work was inferior as to quality and quantity.

Naturally there were some who objected to any leveling process: for instance, such as were naturally fitted for their business, and, in addition to this, were in the habit of spending their spare time in reading and study to enable them to beeome masters of the principles of their business, so that they might be ready to fill responsible positions whenever such should open. But the union men did not readily acquiesce in refusals of membership. A foreman in a shop was such game as justified any means to eapture him. In the first plaee flattery would be employed, that failing, personal solicitations of friends, and after repeated refusals, threats of "starving out" were indulged in, and this was to be aceomplishsd by rebellion against his authority, or reports of incompetency or pretended ill usage, etc.

Another very important object was the restriction as to the number of apprentices an employer might take, this to be regulated by the number of men employed, the number of apprentices being ridiculously small. The object of this system was to maintain a searcity of workmen, which would enable them to dictate the prices to be paid. The effect has been to keep hundreds of boys from learning trades who have been eager to do so. To offset and to make up this defiency, such men as could be obtained have been brought here from the Old World: therefore the latter part of the plan has failed to work any better than the former.

It has been a favorite way to select some member of the fraternity endowed with a glibness of speech and irrepressible self-conceit to travel about the country to herald a coming millenium to all believers in the doctrines put forth. Such apostles were paid from the treasury of the union.

The same amount of money, spent for books for personal advancement, or by the union in fitting up and maintaining reading rooms, would have been of much more benefit in every way: for these demagogues have taken the hard earnings of those who could ill afford it, to enable them to live at their ease, or without manual labor.

Perhaps a stronger motive that influenced these unions has been to reduce the hours of labor from ten to eight hours per day, and this has been contended for long and eagerly, but it has failed to convince any employers or any thoughtful, disinterested person that ten hours for a day's work is too much for a healthy person who is interested in giving a fair equivalent for the wages received.

In many instances the leaders in the first organized trades-unions have established themselves in business, and in no case have they conceded any of these points to their workmen.

In some of the leading manufacturing establishments in this country the proprietors have provided libraries for the use of their employes. Among these may be mentioned Brown & Sharpe of Providence, R. I., and the Cheney Bros., of South Manchester and Hartford, Conn. As an offset to the "apprentice system" of the trades-unions, the State universities, endowed by act of Congress in 1862 for the promotion of agriculture and the mechanic arts are doing a great and thorough work in educating young men thoroughly, both practically and theoretically, so that they go out from these institutions after a four years' course of study and practical work, fitted to take high rank in their various departments. It is a little curious that the work done in all of these institutions is in advance of that done at the Russian schools in the technical departments.—Ind. World.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XVIII.—Concluded.

Rejected truths have a curious faculty of bewildering us by their sudden reappearance in all manner of unexpected ways and places. Nelson had stubbornly shut his eyes to the fact that there could exist any such alliance offensive and defensive between Masonry and the liquor traffic. He had said with thousands of unthinking prohibitionists, "The lodge and the dramshop are separate issues," and refused to believe that they were in reality Siamese twins. But if one could so successfully protect the other in a lonely mountain region of Tennessee, why not in Jacksonville? why not anywhere else?

Jesse Dukes was a true mountaineer. He had that spirit of retaliation and vindictiveness which has made his race famous in the history of family and border feuds; he had also their gracious instinctsof hospitality as shown by the way in which he pressed Nelson to come in and share his humble fare and lodgings. The latter was much too hungry to refuse the first, which he found excellent; and too weary not to be able to put up with the latter, in spite of the utter lack of all civilized appliances; and naturally he improved the opportunity to learn more about his host.

On losing his property, Dukes had taken up the trade of a trapper and built him a rude cabin by the edge of the river, and while he attended to his traps, or smoked his pipe in his low cabin door through the long, dreamy, summer afternoons, he nursed in his heart dreams of vengeance. This modern Naboth was by no means an ideal Christian, who could forgive until seventy times seven; on the contrary he was a very good specimen of an unregenerate man. For the lodge under whose protecting shield he had been swindled out of his all he eherished that feeling of sullen, helpless wrath with which wronged and outraged men regard institutions too powerful for them to combat, and on which they can only heap smothered curses.

Seated by the fire after they had eaten their homely supper, for the evening had closed in chill and frosty, Jesse Dukes entertained his guest with a series of anecdotes, showing the singular majesty of the law under Masonie rule.

"I 'member now a treasurer in a bank, a high Mason, that spekilated with the bank's money to the tune of thirty thousand dollars," he said, while the dim light played over his features and threw the corners of the cabin into deeper shadow, giving a Rembrandt-like touch to both. "Wal, they 'rested him and put him under bonds for trial. One o' the bondsmen was a high Mason, too, and doggoned ef the sneakin' varmint didn't contrive to put all his property out of his hands, so that when the treasurer took leg-bail and run off to Canady, he didn't hev to fork over a red cent; the rest hed to pay it all. One on 'em it completely ruined—that was my old neighbor, Ben Barksdill. Jist cleaned him out of everything he hed. Ben was a stout, strong man, but he was too far along in life to ever reckon on scrapin' enough together to git back the home and the farm all clear of incumbrance that hed to go under the hammer afore he could pay his part o' the surety. Arter that happened he sorter went inter a decline and died. The doctors called his disease by one of their larn'd names, but they needn't tell me. I watched with him the night he died, and I tell ye, stranger, that man died of a broken heart. A few years afterward the treasurer come baek spick and spau and smilin', and the justiees let him go free—never laid a finger on him. But they took up a poor boy that never had any eddication or bringin' up whatsomever, and sent him to jail for five years jist for stealin' an old watch; and it wa'n't re'ly proved agin him, nuther.

"And I 'member a case meaner nor that of a man that was treasurer for a town, and stole a right smart lot o' the town's money. He was a Mason, and what should he do but go out to the barn, git a rope and tie himself up, so's to make it appear as if it was all the work of robbers. He made up a good story, a re'l thrillin' one, fit to go inter a novel, and some believed it and some didn't. When the case come to trial, the sheriff, right afore judge and jury, took a piece of rope and tied his own hands in exactly the same kind o' knots, and showed the court jist how easy it could be done. Now what would a been your verdiet, stranger, ef you'd been sittin' on that ar jury?"

"I don't see but one conclusion, Mr. Dukes," said Nelson. "I should think no better proof could have been given that the treasurer stole the money himself and hit on this ingenious plan to evade detection. He certainly was not acquitted?"

"He sartinly was, stranger, with all that evidence right afore 'em. And I kin tell you of meaner things nor that. We hed some onpleasantness at a 'lection, and Dick Mosely, a sandy-haired chap that never happened to hev jined the lodge, got mixed up in the fracas, and was 'rested on the charge of flourishin' a revolver round a leetle too promiskus like. He swore he didn't hev one about him, others swore he did, and he was sent up for four years. And not long aterward a feller that was a Mason picked a quarrel with a man he hed a grudge aginst, whipped out his revolver and fired, jist barely missin' his head, and the court fined him ten dollars.

"And I kin tell you meaner things nor that," continued Jesse Dukes, taking up his climacteric refrain. "I know'd a Masonic sheriff that was sent to 'rest a man on a double charge of forgery and bigamy, but he kept puttin' it off till the raskill made tracks for Mexico. Now I want to tell ye how that same sheriff did by poor Job Muzzy. Doggoned ef it don't rile me up when I git to thinkin' on't. Job was as honest a feller as ever breathed, but he'd been unfortunit—sickness in his family, and then he wa'n't re'ly one o' the forehanded sort, he nor his pap afore. But he did one thing and another—teamed some and so managed to rub along. I come across him onc morning, and he seemed oncommonly chipper. 'I'm goin' off to work at lumberin',' sez he, 'for awhile. I've jist bought a wagon, and I've mortgaged my hosses as part payment on't, and I'm kalkerlatin' to make a fresh start in the spring.' And he spoke of how he hated to leave his family, and his little gal in perticler. He was jist bound up in that child, Lil her name was, and no wonder, for she was the cutest, peartest thing; and I remember while we stood there a talkin', her a runnin' out in her white sunbunnit and her curly hair, yaller as gold, callin' 'pappy' in her putty baby way. Job went off tellin' everybody the same straight story that he told to me, and what did that Masonic sheriff do but send a special deputy arter him to bring him back on pretense that he was goin' off to evade payin' the debt, and lodge him in jail where he lay three or four weeks without the shader of proof agin him. And that wa'n't the wust on't. While he was there in jail his little Lil took sick and died, acryin' in her last minutes for her pappy. And they sed it was enough to melt a stone to hear poor Job Muzzy take on when he come out, and found only a little grave and one of her yaller curls left him of his darlin'.. I tell ye, stranger, things like them burn inter a man's heart. I ain't a Christian, nor onc that's hed much schoolin', but I kin read and I kin think, and I know that in the Book they swear on in every court room there are heaps of sich texts as this: 'Woe to them that decree unrighteous decrees to turn aside the needy from judgment, and to take away the right from the poor.' And it's better than meat and drink to me to read them ar passages and think the Lord Almighty has got a day of reckoning coming."

And the trapper's eyes kindled with a fierce, sinister gleam, as if already his imagination saw that day dawning. This rough mountaincer, sitting in his lonely cabin and pouring forth his terrible indictments of that Secret Empire which holds in its invisible clutches the life and property of American citizens, scemed like a confirming angel who had suddenly started up to bear witness to the truth which from Martin Treworthy's lips Nelson had so often treated with that apathetic indifferencc which is more than half skepticism.

It was in Jesse Dukes' cabin that he wrote his first letter after his flight from Jacksonville, but through somc unfortunate accident it was delayed, and Martha, in the lack of all tidings from her betrothed, began to feel an anxiety secretly shared by Martin Treworthy, to whom Nelson was as the son of his old age.

(To be continued.)

REFORM NEWS.

THE MICHIGAN CONVENTION.

The last mceting of the Michigan Christian Association opposed to secret societies, held at Brighton, and closing Thursday evening, April 23d, was without doubt one of the most pleasant and profitable meetings our association has held for a number of ycars. From first to last God was manifestly present, and one could not help observing the oneness of heart and mind which prevailed.

The routine business was gone through with promptly and without discord. A good audience was present Tuesday evening, and Bro. Stoddard gave us an excellent address, which was attentively listened to by the hearers. Wednesday was for the most part taken up with business, mingled with profitable discussion of various topics, presented in connection with the work. On Wednesday evening Bro. C. A. Blanchard, well known to Cynosure readers, appeared upon the scene, and was heartily welcomed. Those who heard what he said that night could not but be impressed with the correctness of our position, and the ultimate triumph of our cause. The following day, in the afternoon, will henceforth date the renunciation and denunciation of the institution of Freemasonry by the pastor of the M. E. church of Brighton, Rev. S. A. Deane. Oh how prayers went up to the throne of God for this brother who stated that he realized what this step would cost him!

Bro. Deane is a youngerly man, of intellectual ability, and spiritually minded. He stated how a number of years ago he was deceived into joining the lodge in Canada, and had visited one lodge in Michigan. He had no particular charge to bring against the members of his lodge, some of whom were his best friends; but his clear statement was that Masonry was bad. He hesitated not to state that he, like all others who had seceded from the lodge and exposed its inner workings, had been, in lodge phrases, "dead fourteen days, and raised from the grave, etc.," but stated that his main objection to Masonry was that it "kept men away from Jesus Christ and out of heaven." What more serious objection could possibly be urged against an institution.

Hear it, ye ministers professedly anti-secret, yet fearing to attack this foe to civil and religious liberty! Masonry keeps men away from Christ, and out of heaven. Hear it, indifferent congregations, who insist that your pastor shall preach the Gospel and let these crying evils alone. Hear it, thosc who are ready to slight and condemn the one who has set himself with all his substance against this evil and in all ways and at all possible opportunities gives the trumpet no uncertain sound. Masonry keeps men away from Christ and out of heaven. It is idolatry and heathenism continued. It is a refuge of lies. It is an institution with the blood of more than one victim on its glittering tinselry. It is a conspiracy against the individual, the family, the country, and the church. It is all this, and how can its followers be otherwise than away from Christ, and if away from Christ, then out, forever out of heaven, unless like Bro. Deane they come out and are separate. Bro. Deane stated that all he asked of those who would find fault with him for taking this step, was to appear and answer the arguments advanced by Pres. C. A. Blanchard last evening. And this the lodgemen cannot do.

Bro. A. H. Springstein was present and on Wednesday afternoon gave with telling effect, his awful experience in Masonry. He is employed as agent for the association for three months. All who wish their communities to hear the awful disclosurcs he can give will do well to address him at Warren, McComb county, Mich. Bro. S. feels called of God unto this work, and it was evident to all that God was with him. Arrangements are being made for some colporteur work in the near future. A goodly number have not paid their annual dues as shareholders in this association; will all such send their money to the treasurer, Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford, Calhoun county, Mich.?

The great Wesleyan reform connection was reprcsented by only three ministers, one of them pastor of the church where this convention was held. The Free Mcthodists were represented by one, Bro. Hartley, and the United Brethren by Bro. Hamp. Don't let any one think me a crank, if I say, these reform churches need reforming on the question of secret societies, and their relation to the work. I say it is a shame. A goodly number from abroad were present, however, and in spite of the prevailing indifference and lack of interest on thc part of Wesleyans and others, the work will doubtless go on.

Bro. Blanchard gave a second address on Thursday evening. Brethren Clark and Foote were on the ground when the convention assembled and did efficient work. Their very faces are an encouragement to the workers. Bro. Clark was musical as ever. How our association, and others doubtless, will miss them when they are gone. They hope to live to see this reform succeed. May God bless both the work and the workers, is my prayer.

Rev. D. A. Richards was made president for the year to come; A. H. Springstein, vice-president; H. A. Day, secretary; and Geo. Swanson, Jr., treasurer. An efficient board of trustees were also elected: H. F. Buffham, Dr. M. Veenboer, W. B. Loomis, C. C. Foote, B. Hamp, Z. Derbyshire, which with president, secretary and treasurer, ex-officio members, makes nine. Bro. Ross, former president, who has rendered efficient service, was unanimously re-elected, but was obliged to resign. Bro. Richards was then elected to the position, who though feeble in body and with the weight of years upon him, seems inclined to die at his post. We have no one yet to fill the places of these aged men when they are gone. Let us pray for more laborers for the harvest is white.

H. A. DAY, Secretary.

FROM THE ILLINOIS LECTURER.

NEW HEBRON, CRAWFORD CO., ILL.

The United Brethren here have a nice, large, brick church, and an interesting congregation. Rev. A. L. Cullon is pastor, and with his people, who are in sympathy with this reform, gave us a warm, Christian welcome and the use of their church in which to lecture. Here I addressed the people on the anti-Christian character of secret societies and was listened to with marked attention for nearly two hours. Some of the craft were present and one of the latter, who professes to be a Christian, asserted after dismission, that I had "not uttered a word of truth in it all." This, too, in the knowledge of the fact that I had quoted whole passages of Scripture, as well as the oaths, penalties, etc., of Masonry. The next day I returned to Robinson, the country seat, where I have secured the court house in which to lecture.

MARSHALL, CLARK COUNTY.

Here I was informed by a member of the M. E. church and the Masonic lodge that, "Although our pastor is a Master Mason he will read a notice of your lecture to the church, if you will just write it off. Write it and I'll hand it to him." I did so and the gentleman delivered it, as he had promised. On meeting the pastor at the close of his morning service on Sabbath, I asked him if he had given notice to his people of my lecture for the next evening. He replied that he had not, that he considered it "Silly to lecture on that subject, I know I should feel so; you do no good by a direct attack. If I believed it to be an evil, which I do not, but in many instances a positive good, my way would be to oppose it quietly, and not by denouncing it in public: for in this way you defeat yourself. If I believed it to be an evil, I would not hesitate to oppose it publicly and privately. It is not because I fear to oppose it, but because I don't believe it to be an evil—but a positive good."

So much from a Masonic pastor who has not visited his "positive good," in "six months." He evidently considers intemperance to be an evil, by the way in which he denounced it on Sabbath morning. Why not apply his rule, and "oppose it quietly, and not be denouncing it?" What charming consistency! How can one oppose an evil "publicly and privately" and do it "quietly?" The good of this world has blinded such eyes. "The wise men are ashamed, they are dismayed and taken: lo, they have rejected the word of the Lord; and what wisdom is in them?" Jer. 8: 9.

Equally consistent was his action, for while he withheld the notice, he attended the lecture. Let us hope that he no longer considers it any more "silly" to lecture on that subject than it is to listen to the same. Rev. E. R. Troyer, Evangelical pastor, called on me to announce my lecture to his congregation at the close of his services, which were in German. He then warmly urged his people to attend. He also informed me that I could use their church and be welcome to it. But the Christian church was more centrally located and we were welcomed to it, and so it was announced for the next evening in it. The evening of Sabbath I spent with the Congregational people, and preached for them, their pastor being indisposed.

On Monday evening the spacious Christian church was thrown open to the people, and Rev. G. G. Platz, an old presiding elder of the Evangelical church, opened our service with prayer. After which, for about two hours, I discussed the anti-Christian character of "Freemasonry and kindred secret societies." At its close, a gifted young minister of the Gospel said to me, "I had no idea that it was of such a character. I had some notion of joining one of these orders, but I'm done with them." The same day before this lecture took place I had a conversation with Wm. St. Martz, an old soldier whose address is Martinsville, and whose first battle was Pea Ridge, where Pike's Indians scalped our dead and wounded. All of which he does now testify to, and gives with horrible exactness, including sickening details of revolting atrocity.

MARTINSVILLE, CLARK COUNTY.

Here I obtained the Christian church in which to lecture and for two nights, I addressed the people. Some of the craft were present and showed some "signs" of disapproval, but threw no "tokens." To-day a ragged, grizzled biped with tobacco streaks from both corners of his mouth, said to me in the presence of a crowd on the street, "I don't think any man oughter be 'lowed to talk the way you do, after bein' in the lodge, then turu roun' au' give it all away. I just don't think so, I don't." Here the crowd laughed, either at his comical appearance or at his lodge logic. When quiet was restored I asked, "Does Masonry deprive a man of his rights as a citizen when he takes its oaths?" "Sartinly not."

"Then," said I, "is not one of our rights as citizens, that of free speech?"

"Ya'as."

"Well, then, what are you complaining about?" Then came the loudest laugh, and there could be no mistaking on whom it was.

The "Morgan-killers" are quite defiant. I called to see the M. E. pastor who said, "You are a minister, I presume?" I replied, "I am so taken and accepted among brothers and fellows. Are you acquainted with that phraseology?" I asked.

"I am," he answered.

"You're a Mason then?" I said.

"Yes, sir."

Thereupon, I handed him Finney on Masonry, and learned that he never had read it. Handing it back he remarked that he "did not want to read it." I gave him "A Voice of Warning," "Extracts," then, "A Disertation on Masonie Charity," and left him "Selling Dead Horses." Geo. T. Dissette.

CORRESPONDENCE.

LODGE JUBILEE IN ST. PAUL.

PAGANISM IN A CHRISTIAN PULPIT.

St. Paul, Minn., April 28th, 1885.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—Last Easter Sunday the Jackson street M. E. church assembled about sixty Sir Knight Templars in the front seats of their church taking the back seats for themselves. Their pastor, Sir Robert Forbes, K. T., officiated as prelate for the church and commandery. The Sir Knights had a ritual in printed pamphlets for the occasion, "authorized by Grand Commandery of State of Minnesota—K. T." It contains a "processional hymn," the Lord's prayer, anthems, psalms, Easter hymns, the Apostle's creed, collect for Easter, prayers, ten commandments, "commemoration of the dead," and "the requiem." The prelate preached a sermon. The first sentence startled us. It was, "Freemasonry is a benevolent institution." The second sentence was even more startling; it was, "Freemasonry is not strictly a secret society." And continuing the strain he said: "It is not a religion." "Knight Templarism is a Christiau institution, none but Christians are eligible to it. Its ritual is based on the New Testament. There is a connection between Knight Templarism and Freemasonry. None but Royal Arch Masons are eligible to Knights Templars. It is fitting that a Christian church should extend its hand to a Christian institution and give them the best seats. The good of all systems is incorporated in Christianity; it is final: this religion, you, Sir Knights, are sworu to defend. In its defence you have something worthy of your steel. May the blessing of God rest upon you, the members of the order."

The above are extracts from the sermon. We were requested to remain seated while the "Sir Knights" passed out. In a stentorian voiee the command was given, "Attention—Sir Knights!" They all responded by arising and placing, with their left hands, their plumed hats upon their right shoulders; and then with great solemnity, at a pace of about four inches long, they tramped out of the church.

As 1 turned and looked at that sworn blasphemer iu the pulpit, a strange sensation eame over me. I felt the utter powerlessness of truth uttered by unaided human lips, to turn the people away from lodge blasphemy. So infatuated are they with the charms of secret lodge worship that they seem to thinking men, untainted by secreey, to be determined by the help of the devil to get to hell if possible, and take all they can along with them. I am reminded of what a saved Knight Templar said to me in answer to a question in regard to a conversation I had had with a 33d degree Mason; he said, "He is a child of the devil, and the devil is a liar; that is all you can say about it."

But our faith is endorsed by the prophetic utterances of the Holy Ghost. See 2 Thessalonians 2: 9–12: "Whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness."

Last Sunday morning the Odd-fellows with their regalia on assembled in the same place to celebrate their anniversary. Sir Knight Robert Forbes, the pastor of the church, who is also an Odd-fellow, preached a sermon on Odd-fellowism from the text, "And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean you by this service?" Ex. 12: 26. In his sermon he said, "Since 1819 they had expended thirty millions in charity. Now they were spending two millions a year in charity. The membership numbers half a million. We have a right to investigate the character of an institution that has expended thirty millions in charity." In his prayer he had said concerning Odd-fellows, "thy servants have spent millions of dollars in charity and love not published in the papers; in secret they have been going about doing good. May their work begun on earth, be completed in heaven." Continuing the sermon, he said, "First, Odd-fellowship is not a secret society, but a benevolent society. I would not belong to a secret society. This society is glad to have the public know all about it. I am not here to defend it; it needs no defence. Thirty millions spent in charity justifies its existence. Christianity will be the universal creed of humanity. The world cannot yet appreciate the sermon on the mount. Christianity is in its infancy and needs every crutch it can get. Some do not like this society because of its oaths; but such do not know what they are talking about. They, however, give us free advertising, and we enjoy what they say. Father Taylor, the Boston sailor's preacher, prayed for our order, and that the hearts of our enemies might become as soft as their heads. (Laughter.) The principles of the order are as old as Job. Job was respected because he delivered the poor and the fatherless. The chief work of the Odd-fellow is to relieve the sick, visit the widow, and care for the orphan. You may search the world over and you will not find a widow or an orphan of an Odd-fellow in a poor-house. This cannot be said of the church. A wealthy Methodist, who was also an Odd-fellow, gave a legacy to the Methodist church, but that act was due to the education he had received in the lodge room of Odd-fellows. Some will say that I put Odd-fellowship before the church; but I do not. The church has been too much occupied with doctrines to attend to the poor. Odd-fellowship, in its charities, puts the church to shame. When the truth of Odd-fellowship becomes fully known the prophecies of the Bible will be realized. That time is coming, when it comes it will then be seen that Odd-fellowship played no unimportant part in bringing it about. Peter the Great, was not great; Napoleon was not great; John Howard and Jesus were great. He who visits the widow, carries her a cord of wood, and puts little shoes on the orphan's feet, he is great. This is greatness that tramples the meanness out of us. God bless every organizatiou that does this. If there be any heaven it is because there is an earth. It is pious, and O, so pious! to take the sacrament, offer prayers, and sing hymns, but it is more pious to feed the hungry, bury the dead, and clothe the poor. Moody was asked if he believed in recognitiou of friends in heaven. To which he replied, 'I believe in the recognition of friends on earth.'" The above are some of the principal things he said in his sermon. In closing they sang the hymn commencing, "Who is thy neighbor?"

I distributed anti-secret literature at the door as the people passed out, notwithstanding the church officer who carries the contribution bag pushed me away, stating that they would have noue of that crankism around there. The people all received the tracts. May the truth dawn upou the minds of the benighted as they read it.

The readers of the Cynosure will easily see through the lying sophistries of the lodge victims as disclosed in the above sermons. But I must say a word in regard to their benevolence. They are well guarded against getting any poor people in the order. And the man of moderate means pays just the same as the rich man pays. If the rich man is sick he gets as much from the lodge as the man of moderate means. And this preacher puts that rich man down as an object of charity to glorify a false religion. Rich men and others who were no objects of charity at all got all, or nearly all, of that thirty millions. Even if they did spend millions upon their own bodies when sick, and their wives and children, when they themselves were dead, they spent, I suspect, at least 150 millions more iu suppers, and lodge work to carry on a false religion, etc. And the man of moderate means had to contribute as much of his hard-earned money to this 150 millions as the rich man of his easy-gotten wealth to the same purpose. We are reminded of the adage, "Fools make feasts, and wise men eat them." nI the case bcfore us it is plain who the fool is.

No doubt prophecy is fulfilled in the existence o. that seeret order, but not in the way that preacher indicates. We heard a Jewish rabbi in an address at an Odd-fellow anniversary express his joy that all Odd-fellows could unite in the worship of God in their lodge as they could not in any of the churches. He said that because he understood that Jesus was rejected from the lodge worship, which is true. And that settles it to be a fact that it is a false religion. The same words that Jesus uttered to the forefathers of that Jew in John 8: 12–59, "Ye are of your father the devil," etc., has the same force of application to the Jew of this day as of that day. And also to the Odd-fellow lodge which undertakes to serve God without Jesus, to please the Jew.

Captain Castle, the late editor of the St. Paul Dispatch, has on account of ill health retired from the editorial chair, and given up the Dispatch. It is reported that he is dangerously ill. He allowed the columns of his paper to warn the people against Masonry. It was a great thing for him to open the columns of his paper for that purpose. Probably his soul is lost. Will the readers of the Cynosure pray for his salvation? Other city editors will not allow opposition to secretism iu their papers. And you see that the secretists have got quite a champion in the Sir Knight of the Jackson street M. E. church.

William Fenton.

WM. TAYLOR'S AFRICAN MISSION.

Willimantic, Conn., April 23, 1885.

Dear Cynosure:—In your last issue, on missionaries to Africa, you quote the remarks of the U. S. Consul at Sierra Leone and say you see no reason why white people may not live in the valley of the Congo, and you give the extremes of temperature, 97 degrees to 53 degrees, showing a great uniformity of climate. It is even more uniform on the coast, the extremes being 95 degrees and 60 degrees, and the mean temperature for the year about 81.5 degrees. Doubtless the highlands of the upper Congo are comparatively healthy. But the uniform testimony of all who have lived on the coasts of tropical Africa is, that it is the worst climate in the world. It needs no better evidence than the fact that while European colonists have found homes in the most remote parts of the world, they have been unable to colonize tropical Africa, except by civilized natives. Sierra Leone, the oldest and wealthiest of West African colonies, has probably, never had two hundred permanent European residents. People go to Africa for temporary purposes, and get away as soon as practicable, and the great uniformity of temperature is one cause of debility and disease; and next to that is the immense rainfall making it intensely malarious.

The difficulties of Bishop Taylor's party will but have begun when they start on their inland journey. One who has never seen an African forest, such as it is for many miles inland from the coast, can have very little conception of its difficulties. No roads except foot paths, no beasts of burden, no bridges, and no supplies of food such as are essential to the health and vigor of persons reared in temperate climes. It is altogether improbable that these missionaries will make more than five miles per day, and if I were to venture a prediction, it would be that they will stop within three hundred miles of the coast.

I have great respect for, and confidence in Bishop Taylor, but think, with the consul, that no one who had ever been in the wilds of West Africa would ever tempt Providence by taking little children to that inhospitable clime.

Let there be constant prayer that God may keep this devoted band, and, if possible, save them from the consequences of their mistakes.

H. H. Hinman.

A MINISTER BEATEN BY LODGE RUMMIES.

Elgin, Iowa, April 28, 1885.

Editor Cynosure:—We are in the midst of the prohibition warfare here in Fayette county. Several successful seizures and prosecutions have been carried on, and nearly all over the county they have yielded to the requirements of the law; but at this place they are organized. The leaders of the liquor interest are Democrats and Masons and Odd-fellows. All who belong to the orders lean that way, if they do not act, with but few exceptions at least, in this town. Last Wednesday, two great burly Germans met me on the street and attacked me, knocking me down several times, pounding and kicking me till a lady friend ordered the justice to stop the riot. The officer instead of putting them under arrest, simply went with them to another justice, where a $1.00 fine was paid by those who hired them to whip me; and they went clear. The two justices and three constables all belong to the orders and we have to go to the county seat for justice and don't always get it there. But we are bound to show these lodge rummies that they must not fight against the State of Iowa. H. HULL.

PETITIONS AND REQUESTS.

SABETHA, Kans.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I cut out the form of petition as given in the Cynosure to the Legislature, pasted it on paper and presented it to the people. I obtained eighty-six names and sent it to our Legislature convened at Topeka, but never heard of it afterwards.

I presented it to a life-long Mason; he said he sympathized with the petition, but dare not sign it; it would ruin him. I said no more at that time, but in a few days after I presented him the memorial to the Congressional committee forbidding the dedication of the Washington monument by the Masons. He again replied, "I dare not put my name to that paper." Again I said no more, as there would in all probability be a more convenient season: and so it came. The third time I presented the petition asking Joseph Cook to deliver one or more of his Monday lectures against secret societies, he again said, "It is just as I told you before. I know that all your petitions are right, but I dare not sign any of them. If I do I am a ruined man."

"Why so?"' I asked.

Said he, "the whole Masonic fraternity will be on my track and crush me and ruin my business."

"I said to him, "Are you not an American citizen? Have you not the right under the constitution of the United States to sign what you deem to be right and proper? "Well," said he, "I dare not sign that, although it is right and proper." Do you not see," I asked, "that you have sworn away your citizenship for less than a mess of pottage, and that you are no more a free American citizen?" "Well," replied he, "it looks a little that way."

He is a warm-hearted member of the M. E. church, and I must say he is a peacable, quiet citizen and a strong prohibitionist and voted for St. John.

I believe that the Masonic twaddle at the dedication of the Washington monument did more to open the eyes of the American people on the impudence and hatefulness of secret societies than almost anything else could have done; it was so sickening to sensible people. It filled them with loathing and disgust. Its folly and wickedness are being made manifest to all men in spite of all the efforts to conceal and never reveal the secrets of Masonry. Why there is scarcely a boy or girl of ten years of age in Sabetha, but can give the grand hailing sign of distress and the penal signs and say "Ma-ha-bone" and give all the grips up to the seventh degree just as correctly as the Masons themselves.

JOHN THOMPSON.

PITH AND POINT.

FROM A CONGREGATIONAL PASTOR.

I do heartily endorse the high Christian stand which you and your paper take for "prohibition and Jesus Christ" against intemperance and secret societies. There are no two evils so hostile to the church of Jesus Christ as whiskey and lodgery. They are especially destructive to the colored people of this place. Their churches are little better than dead from the evils above named. Still worse, nearly every colored minister here is a member of some secret order. "Like priest like people." I met one of these secret society leaders here not long since, and his boast to me was that he—a man morally rotten—could say to his lodges, "Let us kill out these preachers and churches that don't tolerate secret societies, and it would be done." My church and I are pledged against secret societies and intemperance.—J. W. R., Dallas, Tex.

THERE HAVE BEEN MANY MORGANS.

On the train, while on my way to Salem, I was hailed by Capt. J. D. Cole, of Elizabethtown, Ky., who fearing that he had struck a "rough-ashlar," asked, "How long is it since you were made a Master Mason?" "Ever since I was raised from a dead level to a perpendicular," I replied, and added, "Now, sir, that is not in the regular work; that's a catch question." "I know it, I know it; but I knew that you could answer it if you had ever been there," he replied, apologetically. As he stated that he was raised in the vicinity of the old fort in which Morgan was confined, I asked if he really believed that he was murdered by the craft. He looked at me bewildered to think that a "living perpendicular" could ask such a question. "Why, of course he was murdered, and there have been many Morgans since his time, and any man who thinks he can do as he did ought to be murdered." —GEORGE T. DISSETTE.

NO WOMEN WANTED.

Many men entered the service of their country by enlisting in the army, the whole number constituting the grand army of the republic, or Union army, which has long since been discharged and returned to the peaceful avocations of citizen life. That it was necessary to organize such an army was a sad calamity. It retarded morals and religion to a fearful extent. War is always demoralizing. Men amid scenes of carnage become wild and reckless. It is not good for our best citizens to become familiar with scenes of bloodshed. War is wholesale murder. Men engaged in war are deprived of the good influence of women and talk and act far different than when in the company of their wives, mothers, sisters, and daughters.

If women voted there would be a better atmosphere at the polls which is very much needed to purify the ballot. Then why organize Grand Army Posts and exclude women as in times of war? There is a bad moral atmosphere wherever good women are excluded, or where they will not go. In Freemasonry where women are excluded its members familiarize themselves with murder every time they throw a due guard, and the more it is practiced in the lodge and out of it, the brighter the Mason and the more familiar the mind is in cutting throats, tearing open the left breast, plucking out the heart, severing the body in twain, but women do not take a part in such charity which is truly Masonic.—CYRUS SMITH, Clearfield, Iowa.

A BAND OF HOPE IN TEXAS.—HELP THEM.

We are about to organize a Band of Hope, and have added to the pledge, one against secret societies. Our income is about $150 per year and we live on almost half rations to save money to carry on the work of the Lord. Perhaps some of the readers of the Cynosure would like to help the work in this dark city; any contributions in money, tracts, books for the library, temperance papers for children, will be thankfully received, and God will reward the giver. Address—REV. WARREN PARKER, San Antonio, Texas.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPERS AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

I noticed lately in a S. S paper three significant letters of a society of boys and girls who by having a "pledge" and a "badge" were formed into a special "Band" of the active workers for the school. This "Band" and its self-righteous assumptions suggested this question: Would Jesus when on earth have thus acted, and worn or sanctioned a badge as honor for serving the school? or would he have been more likely to condemn such a proceeding as fostering pharisaism and self-conceit for doing nothing more than what it was every scholar's duty to do? I fear that such "B. F. B." letters and "pledges" and "badges of Honor" rather tend to nourish the spirit dominant in secret societies than what Jesus would approve in his Sunday-school or in his church. What say you?—AN OLD BOY.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON VII.—May 17, 1885.—Christian Contentment. Phil. 4: 4-13

GOLDEN TEXT.—The God of peace shall be with you. Phil. 4: 9.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The secret of contentment. vs. 1–8. He who can truly say, "All my springs are in thee," will be joyful in poverty, in sickness, in every circumstance of outward trial, for his rejoicing is in the Lord. This is a very important point. To rejoice in what he gives us and to rejoice in him are two very different things. Rejoicing Christians are always progressive Christians.

"A cheerful heart goes all the way,
Your sad tires in a mile 'a."

The one thought that Christ is ours should be infinite matter for rejoicing, for whatever we may lose of outward good, if we have him we have all things. Time nor change nor persecution can touch our one Chief Possession. "Be careful for nothing," is another prime element in true content. We delight in the tame trustfulness of a pet bird or animal which takes its food crumb by crumb from our hands. Is there not in the Father's infinite heart a pleasure somewhat akin when we are willing to drop every anxiety for the future and take our daily supplies direct from his hand, without any worry for the morrow. It is only in this state of childlike contentment that we can have the peace of God which passeth all understanding, the peace which keeps us, which is like a rampart round our souls, over which no foe can pass. Another chief element in contentment is right thoughts. The mind "can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven." Said a pious woman slowly dying of disease, when asked how she endured in uncomplaining silence such nights of pain and sleeplessness: "I think of Jesus and I forget about it." There is too little contentment with our lot even among Christians, but there would be far less if Ingersoll and other infidel teachers could make the world converts to their doctrine, for they take away the ground and basis for contentment—Christ in you the hope of glory.

2. Contentment does not depend upon our outward estate. vs. 11–13. Paul here cites his own example as one of perfect contentment. How many Christians would be willing to do this? Said John Wesley, "I should no more dare to fret than to curse and swear," yet how much dishonor we bring on our Lord's cause by fretting over trifling ills. It is true that it is often easier to bring our faith and courage up to the test of one great trial than to bear patiently and uncomplainingly a thousand petty ones, yet even the supremely difficult is possible with Paul's motto, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How does rejoicing in the Lord give strength? Ne. 8: 10. Is the Gospel full of exhortations to rejoice? Rom. 12: 12; 3: 1; 1 Thess. 5: 16; 1 Pet. 4: 13. What incitement to content? Ps. 37: 16; 15: 16; 16: 8.

EXPLANATORY.

"Rejoice in the Lord." In the Lord God, manifested to us in the Lord Jesus. This shows the nature of Christian joy. (1) It is not mere selfish pleasure, for Christ's was not; it is not mere happiness, or good nature, or looking on the bright side of things. It is not delight in sin. It is not a refined selfishness, seeking one's own pleasure in a higher and more refined way. (2) It is (a) joy in the Lord's character—a delight in him for what he is; (b) it is joy in his love and conscious friendship; (c) it is joy in his service; (d) it is joy in doing good to others; (e) it is the joy of faith in his loving care over us; (f) it is the joy of the free activity of a holy nature; (g) it is a joy that endures, a joy that will be the same in heaven, only more complete.—Pel.

"Unto all men." Even to the perverse (chap. 2: 15), that so ye may win them. Exercise forbearance even to your persecutors. None is so ungracious as not to be kindly to some one for some motive or another on some occasion; the believer is to be so unto all men at all times. —J., F. and Brown.

"The Lord is at hand." May mean that he is ever near his people, a very present help in time of trouble, but the general usage of the New Testament points decidedly to the second coming of Christ.—Johnstone.

It is necessary to call solemnly to mind the much forgotten second coming of the Lord. (1) It brings holy joy in every way; (2) it is a rampart and wall against all hate and harm; (3) it inspires care-conquering prayer; (4) it enfolds us in God's peace.—Lange.

"Let your requests be made known unto God." With generous, filial, unreserved confidence. Prayerful trust in God as an overruling Providence, as one who feeds the ravens and marks every sparrow's fall, is the legitimate antidote for anxious care.—Cowles.

"Your hearts and minds." Better, "your thoughts." The heart needs such guardianship, as the seat whence all evil arises in man (Mark 7: 21, 22) and breaks forth into act, but even more than the guarding of this, will God's peace do for men. It shall keep watch over the thoughts, too, as they spring in the mind, and guide them aright.—Schaff.

"Whatsoever things are true." To love truth for truth's sake is the principal part of human perfection in this world, and the seed-plot of all other virtues.—Locke.

"Whatsoever things are lovely." The things that are lovely comprehend everything that is fitted to conciliate or express the sentiment of affection and esteem. It embraces such dutiet as benevolence, urbanity, courtesy and sweetness of temper; whatever, in other words, springs from love in us and generates love in others.—Butler.

"Of good report." This is a word of peculiarly religious meaning, well-omened, auspicious. Here it seems to denote things in their nature so excellent that to name them is a goodly and sacred thing.—Cook.

"And the God of peace shall be with you." The God who enjoys peace, the God who brings peace, whose laws are the way to peace. All they have to do is to receive this peace by receiving and loving and obeying him This he says speaking out of the depths of his own experience. The inversion, (comp. with v. 7) is striking. To have "the peace of God" with us is much; to have "the God of Peace" himself with us is more.—Plumptre.

"I have learned . . . to be content." It is not the content of stupidity, which can see and hope for nothing better. It is not the content of fatalism that is satisfied with things just as they are, no matter how wrong they may be. Christian contentment trusts to God what it cannot change, with perfect rest in his goodness and love It uses every means God gives to improve its condition and that of others. When we are content with what we have, we must remember that God's promises, and prayer, and activity, and powers, and instrumentalities are among the things we have. And not to use them is to be content with much less than we have; which is a sin always, and sometimes a crime. Christian content is not the enemy, but the best friend of progress; for it does all it can, and does not waste its energies in fretting and complaint.—Pel.

"I can do all things through Christ." The word "do" is scarcely comprenensive enough to suggest the full sense of Paul's words. Rather, I am equal to all things, am strong for all things, through Christ who gives me all strength. It covers not doing only, but suffering as well; anything the Lord's providence may bring upon him.—Cowles.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.
H. H. Hinman, Willimantic, Conn.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Geo. T. Dissett, Cynosure office.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Mich., A. H. Springstein, Warren.
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc
Minn., J. P. Richards, care Prof. Paine, Wasioja.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun, Syracuse, N. Y.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambershurg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimhall, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Occan (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenlent) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.
PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.
NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.
1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.
1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.
1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Capwell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimhall, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with hooks of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should he immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

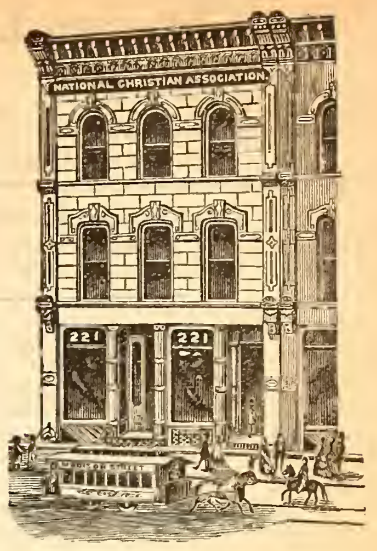
adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oherlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.
C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
VICE-PRES.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.
REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin
COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton-W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our Republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D
SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.
CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.
CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.
ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.
INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno· Sec., S. L. Cook. Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.
IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.
KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.
MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.
MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.
MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasloja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.
MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler.
NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Croshy, Gilford Village.
NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.
OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.
PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesharre.
VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.
WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood. Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.
WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Gratton. Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1885.

A Puritan lawyer named St. John defended John Hampden in a three days' speech, when he was persecuted for refusing to pay ship-money to Charles I.

Three or four lectures have been given to Swedish churches in Chicago lately by Pres. C. A. Blanchard and Secretary Stoddard with apparently excellent effect. Fifty or sixty three months' subscribers could easily have been taken in those congregations. We shall be happy to announce how many were obtained.

THE SWEDISH STATE CHURCH BISHOPS, most or many of whom belong to and "brother" with Freemasons, are charging the Free Church people with being "Socinians" and heretics of one sort and another. Dr. Waldenstrom replies to Bishop Landgren that his teachings differ from the Socinians heaven-wide.

"HYPOCRITES."—Our Saviour, eight times in a single chapter, called church leaders whose leading motive was money, "hypocrites!" and twice calls them "fools and blind" for prefering church rules and rites to goodness. See Mat. 23d chapter. Yet Christ spoke, and WAS the truth.

MASONS IN MEXICO.—Josiah Quincy in his life of John Quincy Adams, says (p. 223) that Joel R. Poinsett in a letter to the public (Niles Register, Vol. 38, pp. 91–3) says he was instrumental in founding five Masonic lodges in Mexico. Poinsett was minister to Mexico, during Mr. Adams's term, from 1825 to 1829. He was afterwards Secretary of War under VanBuren.

THE FOSTORIA, OHIO, CONFERENCE is now near. Let this meeting be remembered by every Christian in the family, closet and prayer-meeting. Secretary Stoddard hopes to attend it: and every enlightened and capable man and woman in Ohio, who loves Christ and hates his rival should attend the conference if possible, and keep up a daily prayer-meeting while it lasts. Senator Thomas Corwin of Ohio, said, "Put fifty men together, one being a slaveholder and the others non-slave-holders, and in nine cases out of ten the one will control the forty-nine." So the meagre and contemptible, because hypocritical, minority, will control the U. B. General Conference at Fostoria unless God prevents it. "We wrestle not against flesh and blood."

SCANDINAVIAN THEOLOGY.

Bishop Landgren classes Waldenstrom with Socinians; and we learn that Lutheran Swedes in this country extensively doubt or deny the theological soundness of Ekman, Waldenstrom and other Free Church leaders in Sweden.

Faustus Socinus, founder of the sect called Socinians, says Webster, "Denied the trinity, the deity of Christ, the personality of the devil, the native total depravity of man, the vicarious atonement, and the eternity of future punishment." Their spiritual descendents, the Unitarians, are of endless varying shades of belief concerning Christ; from regarding him as super-angelic, lower only than God, to a mere human being to whom God delegated all power. Waldenstrom denies that he is a Socinian, but his statement of his belief, unless mistranslated, lacks explicitness; with the single exception of the sole, exclusive authority of the Bible, which he declares with terrible earnestness.

We have received the names of Prof. Martin Johnson, Upsala, and Rev. C. R. Hasselrot, Stockholm, as able opponents of the lodge, with a request that we open correspondence with them, which we hope to do. They are said to be orthodox, State Church Lutherans.

Of course if Jesus Christ was a created being, he owed all the duty he can do, to his Creator, and one of our sins laid upon him would sink him forever. But we must think and hope that the Free Church Scandinavians have not fallen into this "heresy," "denying the Lord that bought them!" Our readers shall have the benefit of our discoveries concerning this interesting people.

Since commencing this writing we have read more of Waldenstrom. He is truly an extraordinary man; and, we must think, a sincere child of God. He adopts fully the Augsburgh Confession of twenty-one articles, drawn up by Melancthon, and held by all the original reformers, who all worshiped Christ as we do, and also do "the host of heaven." But Waldenstrom objects to the Symington view of Christ's atonement, who held the commercial theory, to wit; that Christ "paid" so much suffering for the souls that are saved. And some of his speculations as to the nature of God seem to us daring and exceptionable. Bloody battles have been fought about the question whether Christ was of the same or only of like substance with the Father. A single Greek letter (iota) the smallest in the alphabet, separated these contending armies! As to the mode of God's existence we are safe only when we keep to the simple declarations of the Bible: "Touching the Almighty, we cannot find him out." Job 37: 23.

But we trust no theological or denominational points will keep our half million Northmen from standing shoulder to shoulder against the lodge, which is their common foe, an opposition religion, claiming to send its members to heaven without Christ, his atonement, or the Holy Ghost. Nineteen different denominations have been represented in our National Conventions, and no one of them has suffered, but all have been strengthened by our united testimony for Christ against anti-Christ.

Lutheranism, in this country, has neither State support nor civil power, as in Sweden and Norway; and as these are the chief causes of bitterness in the "Home-land," each branch of the Scandinavians can present a united front against the secret worships of Satan without forsaking the views which they deem important and hold dear.

THE BLACK VALLEY RAILROAD.

WHICH LEADS NATIONS TO DESTRUCTION.

Readers of the Cynosure, we make one simple request of each of you. It is, that you will take up and read through the book of Judges, and mark the descent of the Hebrew commonwealth from the holy commands of Sinai, guarding life and purity and property, to the condition in which this book leaves these wise and war-like Hebrews; without law or morals, public spirit or private decency, practicing sins—

> "Such as Sodom never knew
> And even brutes never practice."

Joshua was their Washington. They were twelve united states who gained their independence by their swords. They worshiped one God. They walked in his statutes. The Penteteuch was their constitution, and Moses their lawgiver who taught them to trust in a promised Messiah—Christ. Their state lines run without compass, were kept without brawls, and this wonderful people were at once the awe and admiration of the swarming nations of the East. This lofty and wonderful people traveled steadily down to lower than brutal debasement, named only twice or three times in the whole Bible. (Judges 19: 22 and Rom. 1: 27.) Their rulers were guerrilla chiefs, in spite of whose irregular prowess they were often serfs or slaves to the heathen tribes whose Gods they worshiped openly or by stealth; and the book winds up with the loathsome scene at Gibeah: the cutting up of a dead concubine, and the insane carnage which nearly extinguished one tribe and terribly depleted the rest, who fought each other because some did not fight Benjamin; and they butchered the men of Jabesh Gilead to take their women for wives to the remnant of Benjamin whose detestible crimes brought on the war.

We have glanced over this disgusting scene of horrors to mark the one solitary and sufficient cause of the descent of that people from a nation to a horde, and we give the cause and way-marks of their descent in the words of the book itself. Thus:

"I said: Ye shall throw down their altars, but ye have not obeyed my voice." Their gods shall be a snare unto you." Judges 2: 2, 3. "They forsook the Lord God * * and followed other gods." 2: 12.

The children of Israel forgot the Lord their God and followed Baalim and the groves. These groves are claimed by Masonic books (The New Masonic Tressleboard) to have been ancient lodges. Then after several assassinations of their incompetent rulers, the people were ground to the earth by a ruler named Jabin, from whom Deborah delivered them; and in her song she states in a word the cause of their loss of their liberties. "They chose new gods, then was war in the gates." Judges 5: 8.

But the object of this article is not to excuse our readers from a careful review of the whole book, which shows that the Israelites continually extemporized religions like the man Micah of Mt. Ephrim, who started a religion out of eleven hundred pieces of silver, stolen from his cursing and swearing mother; got a Levite tramp to be his priest, and worshiped like a Freemason till his lodge was wiped out by a company of Mormon Danites, whose religion was in their daggers.

Now, a moment's thought and reflection will show any candid and competent mind that the secret lodges of Europe and the United States are morally, spiritually, socially and politically identical with the borrowed, extemporized and got up worships which sunk Israel from the summit of Sinai to their political, moral and social Gehenna; till the sword of David restored the worship of God, the sacred oath and the system of morals, as we have it from the decalogue.

And if this be so, we see why the oath is losing its sacredness as Washington predicted*; why court houses sink into popular contempt till people who built them, burn them as in Cincinnati. See why divorces multiply; why marriage is weak; why the Prince of Wales is now a mousing Mason in Ireland, shielded by the popularity of his wife; why O'Donovan Rossa can defy all government, divine and human, and yet have money and followers. In short, these myriad false worships have put our Christian civilization on the Black Valley National Railroad. We are on a down grade and the breaks are getting weak. Our only refuge is in God. Christ is yet to rule this globe with an everlasting dominion.

—Rev. A. H. Springstein has removed from Pontiac to Warren, Macomb Co., Mich. Correspondents will please notice.

—Elder J. L. Barlow has accepted a call from the Baptist church, Wheaton, and has removed thither from Lima, Ind. His ministry began last Sabbath.

—Secretary Stoddard spent the Sabbath with his mother in Galva, Ill. He has appointments to lecture in Immanuel Swedish Lutheran church, corner of Sedgwick and Hobbie streets, Chicago, pastor C. A. Evald, on next Sabbath evening; and on the following Wednesday evening in the Gethsemane Swedish Lutheran church, pastor Ranseen, corner May and Huron streets.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard on his return from the Michigan State Convention spoke last Wednesday evening in the Swedish Methodist church, corner of Oak and Market streets, in this city. This is his second lecture in this church and a large audience greeted him.

—Rev. R. Loggan, the Kansas lecturer, sends word from Clay Center, in ——— county. He spoke there on Monday and Tuesday evenings of last week, and preached in the Free Methodist church the preceding Sabbath. His audiences were good and careful attention was given to his arguments, though a number of his hearers were from the lodge, who were struck with astonishment, at the familiarity with their standard authorities. The Odd-fellows having lately had their annual festival on the Sabbath, Bro. Loggan gave the last evening to them, giving a Scriptural view of their principles. These are the first meetings for the reform in the place.

—Elder D. P. Ruthbun writes from Rutland, Vt., of a series of very successful meetings in Bloomingdale in northern New York, where he lectured eight nights, working the degrees, the first work of the kind ever performed in the place. Elder Rathbun struck a popular vein, receiving some $144 for his work, Mr. S. Wardner, brother of the editor of the Wesleyan, being especially interested. On his way home to Iowa, he will speak a few times in Michigan and then will give chief attention to the work of an evangelist, lecturing occasionally as the Lord opens the way.

—The funeral of the late Judge Samuel M. Moore in this city last Tuesday, was largely attended by city officials, Judges of the courts, and prominent Presbyterians, the services being conducted by Dr. Kittredge, assisted by Dr. Herrick Johnson. Judge Moore was reported a member of the Apollo Knight Templar Commandery, but his relation to the order is sufficiently shown in the fact that it was in no sense recognized, although seeking by a costly floral gift to receive some notice.

—Three hundred conversions are reported in connection with the revival work in the two Congregational churches in Fitchburg, Mass.

*In his farewell address, Washington writes: "Let it simply be asked, where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation, desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in the courts of justice."

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.—II.

While the limits of a newspaper sketch cannot represent with any great fulness of detail the character of such a man as John Quincy Adams, yet it is possible to give a more complete and just account of some portions of his life than can be found in any other form. The record of Mr. Adams as an Anti-mason will not be found in any other publication so fully written out as in the Cynosure of April 15th. In searching for material for that article facts not easily accessible to most of our readers respecting his religious and also his public life were found which ought to be more widely known.

It was fondly hoped that in this connection also there might appear a letter from Charles Francis Adams, the son so frequently and affectionately noticed in his father's diary, but on account of extreme age and the infirmities attending it he is obliged at present to "decline writing for publication at all." "He wishes you all success and would write himself if possible," is the word he sends by another, faithful to the last to the principles fixed in his early mind by close association with his great father. How lasting have been the remembrances of those bracing drives in the salt breeze of the sea between Quincy and Boston, attending Anti-masonic conventions and conferences!

RELIGIOUS CONVICTIONS.

John Quincy Adams came of a devout race. John Quincy, his great grandfather, was throughout a long and responsible public career a man of exemplary private life and of earnest piety; his mother's father was pastor of the church at Weymouth, Mass.; his grandfather, John Adams, was deacon of the church at Quincy. His own parents, with an earnest spirit of devotion to God, had their child baptized when but a day old. During his first ten years he was much the companion of his mother, for events were rapidly conspiring to bring in the Revolution, and his father was a keen, far-seeing and active participant. The value of this early training can be estimated when it appears to have guided the habits and conduct of young Adams in the temptations of Continental life amidst which he was thrown at eleven years, when he accompanied his father on the first mission to France. He was for seven years much of the time in Europe; having been made at fourteen secretary of legation, and returned home to study two years and take his degree at Harvard in 1788, when twenty-one years old. Three years later, just as he entered the practice of law in Boston, Tom Paine, having returned to England, published his "Rights of Man," the first attack from the pen of this apostatized Quaker preacher upon the Christian religion. John Quincy Adams was roused with indignation and replied in a series of able papers in the Boston Centinel. His defense of Christianity attracted wide attention.

In April, 1802, having spent most of the eight years preceding as representative of our government to Holland and Prussia, Mr. Adams was elected to the Senate. On reaching Washington, like Paul who always sought out a synagogue, this "pious New Englander," as Morse calls him, instinctively looked for a house of worship for the Sabbath, and instantly noted that not a church of any sect existed, but religiously disposed people met for worship in the Capitol or Treasury office.

In 1809, Mr. Adams was appointed Minister to Russia by President Madison. While in St. Petersburg he wrote a series of letters to his son, then in college, which were afterwards published in a volume. The book is very rare and we have been unable to secure more than a part of the preface and of one letter. "Their purpose," says the prefaee, "is the inculeation of a love and reverence for the Holy Scriptures, and a delight in their perusal and study. Throughout his long life, Mr. Adams was himself a daily and devout reader of the Scriptures, and delighted in comparing and considering them in the various languages with which he was familiar, hoping thereby to acquire a nicer and clearer appreciation of their meaning. The Bible was emphatically his counsel and monitor through life, and the fruits of guidance are seen in the unsullied character which he bore through the turbid waters of political contention to his final earthly rest."

The following from one of these letters is taken from a very rare pamphlet, published in 1828, toward the close of Mr. Adams's Presidential term, and urging his re-election. An appeal was most powerfully made to Christian parents to unite in retaining at the head of the nation a man who in the midst of his official duties in a foreign court could write such letters to his son:

"So strong is my reverence for the Bible, so strong is my belief that when daily read and meditated upon, it is of all books in the world that which contributes most to make men good, wise and happy; that the earlier my children begin to read it and the more steadily they pursue the practice of reading it throughout their lives, the more lively and confident will be my hopes that they will prove useful citizens to their country, respectable members of society and a real blessing to their parents."

"I advise you, my son, in whatsoever you read, and most of all in reading the Bible, to remember that it is for the purpose of making you wiser and more virtuous. I have, for myself, for many years made it a practice to read through the Bible once every year. I have always endeavored to read it with the same spirit and temper of mind that I now recommend it to you; that is, with the intention and desire that it might contribute to my advancement in wisdom and virtue. My desire is indeed very imperfectly successful; for like you and the Apostle Paul, I find a law in my members warring against the law of my mind. But as I know it is my nature to be imperfect, so I know it is my duty to aim at perfection; and feeling and deploring my own frailties, I can only pray Almighty God for the aid of his Spirit, to strengthen my good desires and subdue my propensities to evil; for it is from him that every good and perfect gift descendeth.

"My custom is to read four or five chapters of the Bible every morning, immediately after rising from bed. It employs me about an hour of my time, and seems the most suitable manner of beginning the day." "Every time I read the Bible I understand some passages which I never understood before."

"In my last I showed you, from the very words of our Saviour, that he commanded his disciples to aim at perfection; and that this perfection consisted of self-subjugation and brotherly love, in the complete conquest of the passions, and in the practice of love to our fellow creatures, including among them our most inveterate enemies."

How rare are such sentiments now that a half century has passed over our national politics! How noble at any time and from any pen!

In 1826, during a visit to his home in Quincy, Mr. Adams, then Chief Executive, united with the church in that place. He makes this entry in the great diary, Sept. 8:

"I informed Mr. Whitney also of my wish to join in communion with the church of which he is the pastor. I ought to have joined it thirty years ago and more, but the tumult of the world, false shame, a distrust of my own worthiness to partake of the communion, and a residence elsewhere and constantly changing, made me defer it to a more convenient opportunity. But my fathers for nearly two centuries have been members of this church . . . . It is right that I should make a public profession of my faith and hope as a Christian, and no time can better than now."

He accordingly united with the church October 1st. "In religion, as in politics," says Seward, "he was independent of parties. He would become linked to no sect in such manner as to prevent him from granting his countenance and assistance wherever he thought proper. He was a frequent attendant at Presbyterian and Episcopalian churches, and was liberal in his contributions to these and other denominations; it being his great desire to aid in building up Christianity, and not a sect."

For many years Mr. Adams was a member, and one of the vice-presidents of the American Bible Society. In reply to an invitation to attend its anniversary in 1830, he wrote a letter full of noble, Christian sentiment, expressing his gratification at the success of the Society, and adding:

"The distribution of Bibles, if the simplest, is not the least efficacious of the means of extending the blessings of the Gospel to the remotest corners of the earth; for the Comforter is in the sacred volume; and among the receivers of that million of copies distributed by the Society, who shall number the multitude awakened thereby, with good will to man in their hearts, and with the song of the Lamb upon their lips?"

THE OLD MAN ELOQUENT.

Mr. Adams became President of the United States March 4th, 1825. The campaign had been trying and bitter, but of the four candidates: Adams, Jackson, Clay and Crawford, the former was head and shoulders above them all. He had the popular majority, Jackson the majority in the Electoral College, but not a decisive one, and in the election in the House of Representatives the influence of Clay was given for Adams. Clay was a Freemason, but had given out that he left the lodge several years before. In the next election he courted Masonic votes, but could not woo like Jackson. Mr. Adams, though supported by the Federalist (afterward Whig) party, had during his Senatorial career acted entirely independent of party relations, as indeed he did throughout his whole life. He had thereby incurred the bitterest wrath of that party in Massachusetts. He had no political debts. He did not himself, or by any agent, hold out any tacit inducements for votes. When a candidate for re-election in 1828, he was urged to use $5,000 to promote his cause, but refused at once and upon principle. In his cabinet were Richard Rush and William Wirt, afterward celebrated in Anti-masonic history. The importance of public improvements and domestic manufactures had been long urged by Mr. Adams, and as President he impressed his views successfully upon Congress and the people. The visitor to the Charleston Navy Yard, near Boston, will not soon forget the inscription cut in the immense granite walls of the dry dock, connecting this work with Mr. Adams's term. As author of the "Monroe doctrine," while Secretary of State, 1817–25, and the chief expounder of the principles of neutrality which have since governed the foreign relations of our government, he had during his term an opportunity to establish them as part of our American theory. "His retirement says Morse, (1882) brought to a close a list of Presidents who deserved to be ealled statesmen in the highest sense of the term." Colton, in his Life of Henry Clay, says that "the administration of Mr. Adams was the most wise, patriotic, pacific, just and wealth-producing in the history of the country." While at one time his honored father had paid $15,000, American money, for a suit of clothes, the administration of John Quincy Adams paid $1,400,000, for permanent public improvements; $30,000,000, or more than one-third, of the national debt; and left over $5,000,000 surplus in the treasury: and this was achieved in the face of an opposition "more determined," says William H. Seward, in 1849, "bitter, and unscrupulous than any which has ever assailed a President of the United States."

But neither as foreign minister, Senator, Secretary of State, or President did Mr. Adams achieve his highest honors. He was allowed but two years, rest when his district returned him as Representative to Congress and continued to re-elect him until his death in 1848.

Mr. Adams was not at first directly identified with the abolitionists. Henry Wilson in his "Rise and Fall of the Slave Power" refers to this want of accord. Though he was the trusted leader of this party in Congress in their great fight for freedom of speech; though distinguished above all other men for his earnest, persistent, and finally triumphant battle for the right of petition against slavery; and though he was the first to enunciate the doctrine of the "right of the Government, under the war power, to emancipate the slaves"—the very right which formed the basis of Lincoln's proclamation,—yet he had little direct affiliation with the Abolition party. Their support was finally his almost sole human encouragement as he fought single-handed, the good fight of freedom on the floor of Congress. Without it he could not have endured the torrent of opposition and abuse that for years swept around him like an angry sea. He came more clearly to see the ruin to which the slavery party would bring the country and the acquisition of Texas made him avow himself an Abolitionist. Benjamin Lundy exposed the Texas plot to Mr. Adams, and with the facts thus gained he electrified the House, 1836, by his attacks upon the plot for enlarging slave territory and the Mexican war.

On every subject except slavery Mr. Adams was always heard with the utmost respect, but his galling attacks upon the supporters of that system brought him into frequent collision with a majority of the members who finally became excited to the highest pitch of frenzy. At one time in their rage the slave holders attempted a vote of censure upon Mr. Adams. Single-handed he fought and overthrew them before an adjournment was allowed that day. For more than seven hours he was upon his feet, refusing to sit down while he was under the threat of a censure.

His conscientious fearlessness was at last vindicated when in 1839 the clerk of the House prevented for four days any organization. In the emergency all eyes were turned with unbounded confidence toward Mr. Adams, when at last he arose and took upon himself, with universal approval the responsibility of putting the motion which organized the body.

Hon. John Wentworth in an address in Chicago in 1882, spoke of the pleasure of his acquaintance with Mr. Adams in Congress as with the "most learned and experienced statesman in the country;" and as one of the committee who escorted his remains to New England, there was, he says, no such demonstration of respect and grief before the day of Mr. Lincoln.

It was in February, 1848, that this remarkable career was brought to a close. A resolution thanking the generals who took part in the Mexican war was presented, and Mr. Adams, amid the general expectation arose to speak, but fell under a paralytic stroke before he uttered a word. He roused a few hours later, before death claimed his due, to say only the words: "This is the last of earth—I am content."

—Lotteries are sanctioned by the Romish church and the government in Mexico. A lottery office is on nearly every block, and there are at every corner men, women and children peddling tickets like newspapers. Many of the hospitals and other charitable institutions are sustained by this sort of gambling, and the only railroad in Mexico that is owned at home was constructed upon the profits of a lottery. The principal institution in the city of Mexico is "The Lottery of Divine Providence," and the dead walls were lately covered with placards announcing that on the anniversary of the appearance of the Holy Virgin to the shepherd at Guadaloupe would be celebrated by great religious ceremonies, with cock fights, bull fights, games of chance and other attractions.

THE HOME.

THE DAY STAR IN THE EAST.

I.

Each morning, in the Eastern sky, I see
The star that morning dares to call its own.
Night's myriads it has outwatched, outshone;
Full radiant dawn pales not its majesty;
Peer of the sun, his herald fit and free.
Sudden from earth, dark, heavy mists, are blown;
The city's grimy smoke, to pillars grown,
Climbs up the sky, and hides the star from me.
Strange, that a film of smoke can blot a star!
On comes, with blinding glare, the breathless day:
The star is gone. The noon doth surer lay
Than midnight gloom, athwart its light, a bar.
But steadfast as God's angels planets are.
To-morrow's dawn will show its changeless ray.

II.

The centuries are God's days; within his hand,
Held in the hollow, as a balance swings,
Less than its dust, are all our temporal things.
Long are his nights when darkness steeps the land;
Thousands of years fill one slow dawn's demand:
The human calandar its measure brings,
Fceble and vain, to lift the soul that clings
To hope for light, and seeks to understand.
The centuries are God's days; the greatest least,
In his esteem. We have no glass to sweep
His universe. A hand's breadth distant dies
To our poor ears, the strain whose echoes keep
All heaven glad. We do but grope and creep.
There always is a Day Star in the skies!

—Helen Jackson, in the Independent.

CAPTAIN BALL'S EXPERIENCE.

OR THIEVES IN THE CHURCH.

"I have had a strange experience," said Captain Ball, speaking with much emotion, "it began about three weeks ago. I had lately been making some very good trades, and one night as I was walking home, reckoning up my gains, and feeling a pride and triumph in the start I had got in the world by my own shrewdness and exertions, it was starlight, and very still; I could scarcely hear a noise but the field crickets and the tramp of my horse on the dark road, when suddenly a voice said, 'What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul.' "

"Was it actually a voice?" I questioned, as I hesitated.

"No, I knew it wasn't all the time. But the impression was just as distinct and as unexpected as if it had been spoken by some person in my ear. I went to talk with my minister, I wanted to get into the church where I thought I would be safe. I had no conception of repentance and a change of heart. I supposed our pastor would commence questioning me about doctrines, and so forth, to let me know what I would have to believe before I could become a church member. But he didn't take any such course. He made me go into the house and sit down in his study where he talked about the blessedness of this world, independently of its rewards hereafter. Then he said:

" 'Captain Ball, do you know the first thing required to be done if you would be a Christian?'

"I did not know.

" 'The Christian life of a faithful follower of Jesus Christ,' said he, 'can be founded only upon repentance. Now it is easy to say we repent, but the only repentance that is worth anything is an active repentance—by which I meau not only sorrow for sin and an earnest desire to avoid it in the future, but one that goes to work, and seeks, so far as is in its power, to make amends for every thing wrong that we have done. Is there a person in the world Captain Ball, who can look you in the face and say you have wronged him?'

"He knew my weak point," added the Captain. "Every one has his weak point, and I suppose the lancet must be applied there first. That question was like a sharp steel driven into my soul, I writhed and groaned inwardly, and struggled, and perspired a long time before I could answer. I saw it was going to be dreadful hard for me to be a Christian. I meant, however, to get off as easy as I could. So I determined to confess something which I supposed was known to everybody who knows me —my horse trade with Peter Simmons last spring.

" 'Did you wrong Peter?' said the minister.

"I shaved a little," said I.

" 'How much?' said he. 'Tell me honestly what you think.'

"I let him have a ringboned, and windbroken nag that I had physicked up to look pretty gay—worth for actual service, not over ten dollars, and got in return a sound and steady beast worth sixty dollars and twenty-five dollars to boot. So I honestly think, said I, that I shaved him out of about seventy-five dollars.

" 'And with seventy-five dollars in your possession belonging to poor Peter Simmons do you think you can commence a life of Christian purity? Do you think that Christ will hear your prayers for pardon, with stolen money in your pocket,' said the minister.

"I said something about a trade, and men must look out for themselves when they swap horses—but he cut me short.

" 'Your own soul,' said he, 'will not admit the excuses which your selfishness invents.'

" 'But the rule you applied,' said I, 'will cut off the heads of church members as well as mine. There's Deacon Rich, he trades horses, and shaves when he can.'

" 'No matter,' said he, 'whose head it cuts off; no matter what Deacon Rich does. You have to deal with your own soul and with your Lord. And I tell you, whether you are out of the church or in it, a single dollar which you have unjustly and knowingly taken from any man without rendering him its full value of your ability—a single dollar, I say, will be like a mill-stone hung upon your neck, to sink your soul into the sea of spiritual death.'

"I couldn't stand that. The Spirit of God used those words with terrible effect upon my heart. I was greatly agitated. The truth spoken by the pastor appealed to my understanding with irresistible power. I went away, but I couldn't rest. So I took seventy-five dollars and went to Peter and paid him, making him promise not to tell any body, for I was ashamed to have it known that I was conscience-stricken, and paid back money. Then I went to the minister again and told him what I had done. He didn't praise me as I thought he would. He took it as a matter-of-course, and no more merit in it than to wash my hands before sitting down to supper. On the contrary he suspected that my hands were not quite clear yet. He wanted to know if I had wronged any body besides Peter, I tried to say no, but my conscience wouldn't let me. I could have told a plumper lie once without flinching—Yes, and flattered my own heart to believe the lie. I was discouraged; I felt bitterly disheartened. It was indeed so much harder to be a Christian than I supposed, that I regretted going to talk with the minister at all. Like the young man who had great possessions, I was on the eve of going away sorrowful. But my heart burned within me and I was forced to speak."

" 'In the way of business,' said I, no doubt I have taken advantage here and there, as every body does; as church members themselves, do when they can.'

" 'What everybody does is no rule for you and me, Captain Ball,' said the minister. 'It is to be a Christian in the fullest sense—not simply to be church members—that we must strive for with all our hearts. The fact of being in the fold does not make the lamb: there are wolves in the fold, alas! but we are by no means justified in doing as the wolves do, even when they appear in sheep's clothing.'

"I felt the rebuke. 'Well,' said I, 'there is Deacon Rich, I think he paid me a note twice. The first time he paid it we were transacting some other business, and by some mistake the note wasn't destroyed. I found it among my papers afterward. I was a good deal excited, and lay awake more than one night thinking what I ought to do about it. The deacon was a hard man I considered, and took advantage of a man when he could. He had driven more than one hard bargain with me.'

The deacon who was present, and heard these allusions made to himself, winced and coughed uneasily. Captain Ball went on without appearing to mind him.

" 'So,' said I to the minister, 'I concluded I would serve the deacon as he would serve me under similar circumstance. I kept the note by me a good while, and when I thought the particulars of our settlement had slipped his mind, I said to him one day, "may be you would like to take up that note," which had been due then a considerable time. He was surprised, looked excited and angry—said he had paid it, and held out stoutly for awhile; but there was the note. There was no proof that it had been paid, and finally took out his pocketbook and with some pretty hard words paid it over again with interest.'

" 'And now,' said the minister, 'what are you going to do about it?'

" 'I suppose,' said I, 'the money must be paid back.'

"So I went to the deacon the next day, and told him that on reflection I was convinced that he was right, and I was wrong about the first payment of the note and returned the money—one hundred and thirteen dollars—a good deal to his astonishment.

The deacon coughed and wiped his forehead.

"I hoped then, all was right," continued Captain Ball. "I tried to satisfy my conscience that it was; but I was afraid to go back to the minister he has such a way of stirring up the conscience and finding mud at the bottom, when we flatter ourselves that because it is out of sight there is no impurity there.

"And I knew that as long as I dreaded to see the minister, something must be wrong; and on looking into my heart I found the matter of a mortgage which I had forclosed on a poor man and got away his farm, when he had no suspicion but that I would give him time to redeem it. By that means I had got into my possession property worth two thousand dollars, for which I did not actually pay, and for which Isaac Dorr never actually realized more than half that amount. But the proceedings were entirely legal, and so I tried to excuse myself. But my awakened conscience kept saying, 'You have taken a poor man's land without giving him a just return. The law of God condemns you although the law of man sanctious the wrong. You shall have no peace of soul—your heart will burn you until, with justice, you wipe out your injustice to him and to all others whom you have wronged.'

"Against the decree of my conscience I rebelled a long time. It was hard for me to raise a thousand dollars, together with the interest due from the time the mortgage was foreclosed; it was like taking a portion of my life to be obliged to subtract so much from my gains and give it to a man who had no legal claim upou me, and I groaned and mourned over it in secret, and tried to pray—but that mortgage came right up between my prayer and God, and heaven looked dark and frowning through it. At last I could not resist the appeals of my conscience any longer, and I went again to the minister, told him my trouble, and asked him what I should do.

" 'There is a simple test,' said he. 'Do you love your neighbor as yourself? If you do, you will be just to him if it takes from you the last dollar you have in the world.'

"That was a terrible sentence. I went out staggering from it as if I had received a blow. 'O God!' I said, 'how can I be a Christian?' But I had help beyond myself, otherwise I could never have endured that struggle. I knelt before God and solemnly vowed for his sake, for the sake of his pardon and love, I would not only do justice to the poor man I had wronged, but would give up all if need be, all I had in the world so that I might find peace in him. A strange soothing influence came over my soul, and a voice seemed to say: 'Though you lose all you have, God, Christ and the blessing of a heart pure and peaceful shall be left—the best and only true source of happiness and life.' And in the solemn night time, after I gave up the struggle, that comfort seemed to me so great and precious, that I felt willing if it would only stay with me to accept poverty, and to go into the world poor and despised, hugging that priceless blessing in my heart. The next day I was as light as if I had wings. Nothing could keep me from going to see Isaac Dorr, with a couple of hundred dollars in my pocket, and a note for the remainder of what I owed him.'

"Well," said the narrator, with tears running down his cheeks, "I only wish that every person could have seen the Dorr family when I visited them, and made known my errand. Poor Isaac had grown discouraged, and had just made up his mind to quit his wife and children and go to California. His children were crying, and his wife in an extremity of distress and despair. She received me a great deal better than I anticipated; I had acted according to law, she said, and Isaac, careless and improvident, was greatly to blame.

" 'Yes,' said Isaac, with the firmness of a desperate man, "it was a savage game you played on me, but I was a fool ever to get in debt as I did and then fancy that any man would not take an advantage when the law permits it. I am ruined in consequence, and here you see this woman and these babies—'

"The poor fellow broke down as he looked at them, and cried like a child.

" 'Isaac,' said I, as soon as I could, 'I have come to show you that a man can be honest even when the law does not compel him to be. I want to do right, Isaac, because God commands it, and I have come to tell you that you needn't leave your wife and baby yet, unless you prefer to.'

" 'Prefer to—go off to a strange country and leave them here to suffer?' he cried, and he caught the children in in his arms and wrung his wife's hand, and sobbed as if his heart would break.

"Then I counted the money I had brought, and explained what I intended to do, and gave him the note, and such surprise and happiness I never saw. They would have kissed my feet if I would have let them. It seemed to me as if heaven was opened then and there—and it was opened in my heart with such a flood of light and joy as I had never experienced or thought possible before."

"My friends," added the captain, his once hard voice, now almost as mellow as a woman's, his cheek still moist with tears, "I have been constrained to make this confession; I thank you for listening to it. The minister tells me a man may be a church member without being a Christian. I mean to be a Christian first, and if I fail—"

He could proceed no further, but sat down with an emotion more effective than any words.

I have nothing to add to this narrative except that he became a church member, and that the example of thorough repentance, of childlike faith in Christ, and of rigorous, practical, every-day righteousness elevated many degrees the standard of Christianity among my people.—Watchman and Reflector.

STRETCHING THINGS.

"I'm most dead! It is as hot as fire, and I've been more than a dozen miles after that colt!"

Andrew threw himself at full length on the lounge, and wiped the perspiration from his forehead.

"Where did you go?" inquired his father.

"I went over to Brigg's corner and back by the bridge."

"That is a little less than a mile and a half. Is it so very warm, Andy? It seems quite cool here."

"No, not so dreadful, I suppose, if I'd take it moderate; but I ran like lightning, and got heated up."

"You started about five o'clock, my son, and now it lacks a quarter of six," said his father, consulting his watch.

"Yes, sir; just three-quarters of an hour," answered Andrew, innocently.

"Does it take lightning forty-five minutes to go a mile and a half?"

"I didn't mean exactly that, father, but I ran all the way, because I expected the whole town would be here to-night to see my new velocipede," explained Andrew, reluctantly.

"Whom did you expect, Andy? I wasn't aware that such a crowd was to be here. What will you do with them all?"

"Jim, Eddie, and Tim told me they'd be round after school; and I wouldn't wonder if Ike came, too; that's all."

"The population of the town is five thousand, and you expect three persons. Well, as you are very sick, I am glad no more are coming. You couldn't play with them at all."

"Sick!" cried Andrew, springing to his feet; "who says I'm sick?"

"Why, Andrew, you said you were almost dead. Doesn't that mean very sick?"

"You are so particular, father, about my talking. I don't mean exactly what I say, of course. I wasn't nearly dead, to be sure; but I did some tall running, you bet. There were more than fifty dogs after me, and I don't go much on dogs."

"Quite a band of them! Where did they all come from?"

"There were Mr. Wheeler's sheep-dog, and Rush's store dog, and two or three more; and they made for me, and so I ran as fast as I could."

"Five, at the most, and not fifty, Andrew."

"There looked to be fifty, anyway," answered Andrew, somewhat impatiently. "Carter's ten acre lot was full of dogs just making for me; and I guess you'd have thought that there were fifty if it had been you."

"Ten acres of dogs would be a great many thousands. Have you any idea how many?

Andrew did not like to calculate, for it occurred to him what a small space ten or fifteen thousand sheep would occupy when camping, and ten acres of dogs would be past calculation.

"But," his father continued, "I know of no better way to break you of the foolish habit of exaggeration than to tell the children of the trouble you had in going after the colt. You ran like lightning, encountered ten acres of dogs, which would be hundreds of thousands, traveled more than a dozen miles to get one and a half miles in a straight line, expected to find five thousand people here to examine your new velocipede, and when you reached home you were nearly dead!"

"Please, don't, father; the boys and girls will all laugh themselves to death; and I won't exaggerate again if I live to be as old as Methuselah!"

"Laugh themselves to death at a simple story like this? I hope not, but rather hope it will set them to watching their own manner of telling stories, so as to be sure they do not greatly overstate things. Habit, my son, grows with years, and becomes in time so deeply rooted that it will be impossible for you, when you become a man, to relate plain, unvarnished facts, unless you check the foolish habit in which you indulge every day of stretching simple incidents into the most marvelous tales."—Christian Neighbor.

PANTHERS.

They ascend the immense trees near the mouth of the Columbia, which are frequently 300 feet high, and sixty, eighty, or even a hundred feet to the first limb, precisely as a cat would climb them, and, when wounded, will sometimes go to the very top. In one instance, I found a small glade in the forest, where, from the sign, it was evident that two or more of them had been gamboling, and like kittens scurrying around in the grass, and then, bounding against the trunk of a tree at a point at least ten feet from the ground, they had ascended apparently on the run, tearing off great pieces of bark, and leaving claw marks a foot long on each side. Although they may in some localities spend the day in lying upon the limb of a tree, I think they always prefer rocky ledges and caverns for that purpose, where such are accessible. In San Diego, near the Arizona line, the rugged, rocky ranges furnish admirable retreats for panthers, there usually called mountain lions; and although not so abundant, they are, I think, more frequently shot than they are further north, for reasons that will soon be explained. Like all the cat tribe they are partial to warmth, and upon days when it is rather cold in the shade, they frequently come out of their lairs in the middle of the day and lie upon the rocks near by to bask and drowse in the warm sun, and as the ranges there are generally very sparsely timbered, they are occasionally discovered by hunters, when the chances of getting within shot are better than under almost any other circumstances. But for all that, they are animals that are seldom shot, no matter how abundant they may be, and their disappearing so rapidly before the march of civilization is a mystery that I can only solve by the conclusion that being a large, entirely carnivorous animal, they are immediately affected by the least thinning out of the large game, and are driven by hunger to seek places where the rifle has not begun its deadly work; unless, as they seem to have done on the McCloud river, they turn their attention to the stock of the settler. Many of them are poisoned by the sheep and cattle-men of the southern counties, when their visits to the flock and herds become too frequent. I have often seen their hides nailed to the walls of the lonely cabins of the stockmen there, and, upon inquiry, have found that they were poisoned in at least three cases out of four. I am quite settled in the belief that a panther would be no match for a grizzly. It is quite possible that their superior agility might sometimes make them a match for a black bear, but I can only conceive of their being able to kill a grizzly by fastening upon him in a position where the bear was unable to inflict any injury upon them, as a single, well-directed blow from the paw of a full grown grizzly will crush in the ribs of an ox, and would, I fancy, leave but little fight in any panther.—American Naturalist.

TEMPERANCE.

PROHIBITION IN IOWA.

The Rev. W. A. Waterman, of Marion, Linn Co., Iowa, who is attending the triennial convention of the Congregational churches of the Northwest, is the President of the temperance alliance of Linn county. Regarding the prohibitory law and its workings in Iowa he said to a reporter of the Inter Ocean that the law was being generally enforced throughout the State, more especially in the interior portions. "In the larger cities," said he, "those on the borders of the State I mean, the people have not moved to enforce the law to any great extent. But recently movements have been started by the formation of citizens' leagues in accordance with the demands of the citizens for the enforcement of the law. There is no doubt but that the law will be upheld, and successfully enforced. The saloons must go. Several brewers and many saloon men have compromised with these leagues, and pledged themselves to leave the State."

"How many saloons are there in Iowa?"

"There were 4,000 saloons in the State on July 4 last, when the law went into effect. I cannot give the exact number now.

"What per cent of reduction should you suppose the passage of the prohibitory law had made in the State."

"There is probably a reduction of nearly 75 per cent in the number of saloons that have ceased to do business openly, at least. In Linn county there were three breweries and seventy saloons when the prohibitory law went into effect. Now there is no brewery making intoxicants, and no saloon running openly in the county. We have had detectives at work all over the county, and whenever we have found the evasive temperance drinks to contain a sufficient amount of alcohol (by means of chemical analysis), to produce intoxication, we have proceeded against the sellers thereof, and they have been convicted in every instance and sentenced to the full extent of the law."

"Are the courts in accord with you?"

"Yes, the law has been sustained in every questionable phase by the decision of the Supreme Court. And the right of injunction has also been declared by the same court. That is, the court has decreed that we have a right to obtain an injunction against the manufacture and sale of liquor in any court of the State."

"What is the popular sentiment regarding the law?"

"The popular sentiment is with us, and is constantly increasing in favor of the law and its enforcement."

"What is the feeling with regard to your foreign population?"

"Our German population in the interior, mostly farmers, as much as they are reputed to love their beer, are now generally with us, and desire to see the law enforced, to save their young men, who have been in the habit of drinking whenever they went to town."

"What is the extent of illicit business in the State?"

"I cannot, of course, give the exact extent of the business, but since the law went into effect there has been more distilled liquor smuggled into the State probably than before, for the reason that beer is too bulky for smuggling purposes. Much of the liquor that is smuggled as 'hardware,' 'groceries,' and other ways is confiscated, and the shippers are prosecuted in every direction. They are reported to the revenue officers, who prosecute them for not branding and stamping their goods on the outside. The Republican party is united, and now presents a solid front for the strict enforcement of the law, and there is no probability that the party will be divided or retrace its steps, or lose control of the State. The 'whisky ring,' or the non-prohibitory wing of the Republican party, made issue 'Enforcement or Repeal,' and the popular voice was for enforcement. They now see and realize that we can and do enforce the law. They cry that we are making things too hot for them, but it is now too late for them to draw back. Every attempt that they made to carry the legislature in districts where they spent thousands of dollars, has resulted in their defeat, and a prohibitionist has been returned. They made a great cry of 'personal liberty' during the canvass, but we were after them with the argument that we were not interfering with what men wanted to eat or drink. We did not propose to interfere with any one's right to eat or drink whatever he pleases. What we do propose is to stop the manufacture and sale of intoxicants in Iowa. The people were easily made to comprehend this fact, and the result was made manifest."

In conclusion Mr. Waterman asked: "If there is more intoxicating liquor sold under a prohibitory law, and more drunkenness is apparent, then why do we behold the extensive liquor interests of the country combining and concentrating all their power and forces against the passage and enforcement of such laws, as we invariably do? Is it not amazing that large moneyed interests will spend vast sums of money to defeat their own interests and destroy their profit in the trade?"

A large liquor selling firm in Chicago has sent out circulars to its patrons in Iowa, declaring that they "are prepared to ship liquor in demijoins or jugs securely boxed so that the contents cannot be known, and with no marks except the address;" "all marks and brands are erased from the cases." "Goods" must be paid for in advance, however, as they cannot be shipped C. O. D.—Northwestern.

A correspondent from Topeka, Kansas, to the Christian Witness says: At one time nineteen saloon-keepers were put in prison in Topeka, after our new Governor, John A. Martin, took his seat. Fines of near $14,000 were turned over to the school fund in the city at one time. The children of a dissipated man got damage of over $2,000 of saloon-keepers. Troubles come thick and fast so that there is not an open saloon in the capital city of Kansas.

THE CHURCHES.

CHICAGO BIBLE INSTITUTE.

The course of instruction arranged for the Bible Institute soon to be held in Chicago, will include,

I. Christian Doctrine:—some of the great fundamental truths revealed in Scriptures,—sin, justification, the mediatorial offices of Christ, the Holy Spirit's presence and work.

II. Biblical Exegesis:—an analyitical study of texts and passages in the English Bible.

III. Elementary Church History:—the planting of the church; fall of the Roman Empire; the Reformation.

IV. Practical work, meetings, inquiries, etc.

The Institute will be held four and perhaps six weeks, under the management of the Rev. Prof. W. G. Moorehead, D. D., who will be assisted by other ministers and Christian teachers.

Address Miss E. Dryer, Bible Institute, 150 Madison St., Chicago.

Signed by D. L. MOODY, REV. DR. E. P. GOODWIN, MAJ. D. W. WHITTLE.

THE SWEDISH-AMERICAN BIBLE SEMINARY.

ST. PAUL, April 23, 1885.

The Bible Seminary has made some advances since I wrote last. We have just had our examinations and commencement exercises, and graduated five students for the ministry out of thirty-eight.

We have obtained so far, almost entirely from Swedish Baptists, $28,000 in subscriptions towards endowment, about $12,000 in wills, and lately also $10,500 towards our first building, together with forty acres of land within town limits in Stromsburgh, Nebr., whither we go now to locate permanently the new institution. We have been able to close the school year without a dollar's indebtedness. This seems to us as wonderful as the feeding of the five thousand on the shores of the lake of Galilee; for we began without anything, trusting in God. After our reorganization soon in Nebraska, I shall send you a copy of our constitution. It will please you, and your readers as well, I am sure. In haste, yours, J. A. EDGREN.

P. S. As to secretism in the churches, I consider it an abomination, and will, together with all Swedish Baptist churches, direct a decided testimony against it. You will no doubt see this even from the constitution of our Seminary.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard, after urgent solicitation, has consented this week to begin a series of Gospel meetings in one of the West Side Presbyterian churches of the city.

—Rev. W. W. Kelley and wife, says the Free Methodist, sailed on the steamer Anchoria, on Saturday at 2 P. M., for Glasgow. The band of five will leave England about May 15th and will then, in the shortest time necessary make their way to their future field of labor in the Congo Valley. The prayers of God's people should follow them.

—Miss Francis E. Townsley, a former Wheaton student, has been regularly ordained and installed as pastor of the Baptist church at Fairfield, Neb. She is the first woman ordained by this organiztion, has been about ten years in evangelical work, and is described as an "earnest, godly woman, full of power."

—The editor of the Evangelical Repository, Rev. J. C. Boyd, D. D., says the Instructor, announces his retirement from his connection with that periodical with the issue of the May number, for the reason that justice to himself and his congregation requires it. Dr. Cooper has been appointed by the Board of Publication to fill the vacancy. The readers of the Repository will recognize an old friend in the doctor if he should see proper to accept the appointment, and after so much experience in a former occupancy of the position it should not be a very difficult undertaking in connection with his other labors.

—On Monday evening next, May 11th, Rev. P. A. Seguin, of the French Protestant church in this city, will lecture in the hall of the N. C. A building, 221 West Madison St., at eight P. M. His subject will be "The Theology and the Tricks of the Jesuits." The past experience of Father Seguin entitles him to a good audience on this topic. His French mission increases in numbers and influence, with frequent baptisms of converts who are gatherd in from Romish superstitions.

—One of the most industrious pastors in Chicago is Rev. Mr. Torgerson, of the Independent Evangelical Lutheran church on Indiana St. He accepts none but such as give evidence of being regenerated, and insists on a pious and godly life as a condition of membership. He is opposed to the secret orders and through his influence many among the Scandinavian people in this city have been kept from joining or are brought out of this snare of the evil one. During the year 1884 he solemnized 250 marriages, attended 153 funerals, administered the ordinance of baptism to 443 persons, and now has a class of 114 catechumens to whom he gives daily instructions in the Word of God.

—Miss Sarah F. Smiley, formerly a preacher in the Society of Friends, and now quite distinguished as a Bible reader, has been licensed by Bishop Kinkerbocker to visit all the principal Episcopal churches in the Indiana Diocese, and began a series of Biblical expositions at St. Paul's church, Richmond, Ind., on the 28th ult.

—After his sermon Sabbath evening, Apr. 26th, in the German Evangelical Reformed church at Baltimore, and while he was praying for people lying at the point of death, the Rev. August Kraus was stricken with paralysis, became unconscious, and passed away early Monday morning.

—There are more students, in the Christian college in Madras than in the Governmant and Hindoo colleges together. Christians in India are convinced that a great preparatory work is going on, to be soon followed by large results.

—Some twenty Warwickshire clergymen of the Church of England have issued a strong protest against horse-racing. They state that, in their opinion, horse-racing and steeple-chases, as at present conducted, are demoralizing in their tendency and degrading in their influence. As ministers of the Gospel of Christ they feel it their bounden duty to protest against them.

—A dispatch from Princeton, N. J., April 26th, speaking of Mr. Moody's meeting says: "In spite of the inclement weather large audiences have been attendant upon the services. At 9 A. M. Mr. Moody preached before a crowded house in the First Presbyterian church. At 11 A. M., assisted by President McCosh, he addressed the college and seminary students in Marquand chapel. The chancel was occupied by professors from all departments of the college, School of Science and Theological Seminary. In the afternoon Mr. Moody spoke to the colored Witherspoon street congregation, urging upon them the importance of prohibition, which will be the issue at the polls to-morrow. At 3 P. M. he again delivered a sermon to a large audience at the First church, and at 5 P. M. conducted the vesper service at the college chapel. In the evening the seats and galleries of the First church were again crowded to hear the evangelist's closing sermon. Mr. Moody has been working indefatigably since his arrival at Princeton.

—The Friend, of Honolula, S. I., mentions the arrival at that port of 948 Japanese emigrants. It says that the Hawaiian Board have taken steps to provide a school and religious instruction for them, and that religious services are held every Sunday.

—The glad news comes from the Syrian Protestant College at Beirut that there is a religious movement among the students such as never has been known in the history of that mission. At a meeting, January 28th, Dr. Jessup writes, forty students stood up to express their resolution to serve the Lord.

—The "King Sister," daughter of the late King Mtesa, of Uganda, Central Africa, whose friendship for Stanley and request of missionaries for his people made him known throughout the civilized world, has embraced Christianity. Her brother succeeded to the throne without bloodshed, owing, it is said, to the influence of the missionaries.

—The scientific expedition of the French Geographical Society to Cape Horn, with the cordial assent of the French government, deeply impressed with the good work done by the English missionaries in reclaiming Terra del Fuego in South America from barbarism, have presented them with the buildings they had erected for their observations.

—At Odessa, a peasant, belonging to the Bible reading sect of the Stundists, has been sentenced to three years' imprisonment on a charge of blasphemy in preaching against the image worship of the Russian church. He denied, however, the use of the words imputed to him. He was defended by a Jewish advocate, though Russian law forbids Jews to hold briefs in such cases.

—The Free church Presbytery (Scotch) of Calcutta, has voted to request the General Assembly to permit them to authorize the occasional administration of the sacraments by laymen. It is urged that this will provide for large districts in which regularly ordained ministers are not found, and that elasticity in this matter will be a safeguard on the one hand against sacredotalism, and on the other against irregularities.

LITERATURE.

A most timely and attractive little volume has just appeared on "England and Russia in Asia," by George Makepeace Towle. It is the first of a "Timely Topics" series to be issued by James R. Osgood & Co. This volume, in a cheap and compact form, covers the entire subject of the relations and rivalry between England and Russia in the East. It deals not with one phase only of the Anglo-Russian crisis, but exhaustively with all the historical events and circumstances which have led up to it, and of the causes, remote and near, which have brought it about. The reader, after having finished its perusal, will have obtained a clear understanding of the whole subject. Mr. Towle gives an absorbing account of the conquest and government of India by England from the beginning to the present; traces the advance of the Russians through Central Asia for more than two centuries, from their first setting-out down to their occupation of Afghan territory only a few weeks ago, describing with graphic pen the traits and customs of the Tuscomans now under Russian rule; and closes with a forcible presentation of the motives and rival purposes of Russia and England in the East. The book is written in a clear, simple, vigorous style, and forms the best, indeed the only complete survey of the subjects which has been published. This handy volume is to be at once followed by one on "England, Egypt and the Soudan," by the same author; and by similar volumes, from time to time, relating to such "timely topics" as come up to attract the attention of the world.

The Converted Catholic seeks the conversion of Romanists to Evangelical religion, and is conducted by Father O'Connor who was for many years a Roman Catholic priest, but is now pastor or a Converted Catholic congregation in New York City. The April number contains articles on the Reformed Catholic work and the freedom-of-worship bill; letters from many converts from Rome and renunciation of that church by Rev. D. Mackay, of Edinburgh, who has united with the Scottish Episcopal church. A sermon, "Search the Scriptures," by Rev. John J. Casey,, B. D., in reply to Father Ryan's Attack on the Bible: the opening chapters of "The Moral Theology of the Jesuits," giving an admirable sketch of that famous society; the fourth of Father O'Connor's Letters to Cardinal McCloskay; and Rome Pagan and Papal. James A. O'Conor, 60 Bible House, New York.

A PORTRAIT of General George B. McClellan forms the frontispiece of the May Century. Among the other engravings in this number are a full-page picture of Generals Lee and Jos. E. Johnston, taken after the war, a full-page portrait of General Grant, from a photograph made in 1864, and portraits of Generals Heintzelman, Sumner, Keyes, Couch, Gustavus W. Smith, Magruder, Huger, and D. H. Hill. There is also a cut of the French princes who served on General McClellan's staff. Mr. E. V. Smalley's first paper on the New Orleans Exposition appears, with a number of pictures, mostly character-sketches. The war features are numerous. The arcticles by Gen. McClellan and Gen. Jos. E. Johnston, on the Peninsular Campaign have already been announced, and in addition there are contributions from two other ex-Confederate officers, supplementing General Johnston's paper. Gen. Gustavus W. Smith, who took the temporary command of the forces opposed to McClellan after General Johnston was wounded at Seven Pines, writes a description of the second day's fight at Seven Pines. Gen. John D. Imboden contributes a paper of "Incidents of the Battle of Manassas," in which it will be remembered his battery took a prominent part about the Henry house. He adds a number of anecdotes of General Bee (who was killed in this engagement), General "Stonewall" Jackson, and General Beauregard. "Lieutenant Greeley at Cape Sabine" is the title of an article written by Ensign Harlow, of the relief expedition. That part relating to the history of the Greely party has been approved, as to the facts given, by Lieutenant Greely. An article on dogs furnishes the best illustrations of the number.

Literary Life has articles on "Karoline Muran," an ambitious and talented young Austrian woman, who is making her mark as journalist;—on Chicago Illustrated; S. G. Pratt, the musical director and composer of Chicago; "A Woman's Work," a prize story; and Anecdotes of Authors.

ILLINOIS STATE WORK.

Cash donations received from March 7 to April 25, 1885:

J. W. Switzer, and John Gardner, each	$10 00
Rev. H. Van der Ploeg	6 75
Mrs. N. R. Weed, C. H. Boyden, E. Williams, Joseph Dobler, E. R. Worrell, each	50
P. P. Chapman	2 00
O. A. Williams, Mrs. H. E. Hayden, Jno Bradley, C. A. Clinton, Mary McDowell, Mrs. C. A. Tillson, each	1 00
Mrs. Woodard, William Cody, P. Lintner, each	25
J. W. Thompson	75
Mrs. S. H. Nutting, B. Williams each	2 50
N. P. Eddy, H. G. Hanson, a Wesleyan reader, J. P. S., W. I. P., each,	3 00
Dr. E. C. Guild	5 00
Mrs. L. H. Plumb	15 00

W. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer.

OHIO'S REPORT FOR APRIL.

Whole amount pledged to up date, $254.75. Cash received:

Ap. 2, Miss Jane Stitt, Utica, O	$5 00
" Mrs. Mary Kirkpatrick, "	5 00
April 3, K. A. Orvis, Columbus, O	2 50
" 16 J. M. Faris, Concord, O	3 00
" 16 W. H. Winton, Bowling Green, O	1 00
April 21, Laurence R. Livingston, Oberlin, O	1 00
" 21, Geo. Clark, Oberlin, O	1 00
And from C. W. Strickler, Clearport, O., paid to J. M. Scott, Treas	2 00

S. A. GEORGE, Sec.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE,

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can he used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100, $3.60. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago. Ill.

The Master's Carpet,

BY

E. Ronayne.

Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should procure and carefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying

Freemasonry at a Glance,

which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 429 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents. Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN BRIEF.

ENGLISH AND RUSSIAN FORCES.

Russia has more soldiers and more ships of war than any other country in the world. In her standing army there are 780,000, and she has 358 ships in her navy. It costs $125,000,000 a year to keep her military establishments on their peace footing, and her military authorities say they can place 2,300,000 trained men under arms in war time.

The English standing army is 182,000 men. This includes the English regular troops serving in India. The English war office authorities profess to be able to put 642,000 well drilled and effective British troops in the field if called on to do so. This does not include the Indian auxiliary forces, which swell the total of British forces at home and abroad to over 1,000,000 men. It costs England $90,000,000 a year to keep up its regular army. In 1853 there were 52,000 Irish soldiers in the English army; now there are only 31,000. In 1853 a great number of Irishmen from the Tipperary, Armagh, Kilkenny, and other Irish militia regiments volunteered for active service, and were sent to the Crimea. The English navy contains 283 ships.

Says the geological girl to the apple merchant—Give me some gneiss apples, that's schist what I want; give me two quartz, strata way, so I may catch mica. —Boston Beacon.

The Governor of Kansas makes two important statements in his proclamation for an arbor day. He says that "the State which the pioneers found treeless now bears more than 20,000 acres of forest, all planted by our own people." And he also says "that there has been an increase in the rainfall in Kansas is fully proved by the statistics of our oldest meteorologists."

The Paris Gaulois says that the supply of furs is becoming exhausted, and that by and by a suit of sables will be dearer than rubies, if indeed a good one is not so at present. The most costly fur mantle in the world is said to belong to the Duchess of Edinburgh, who inherited it from her mother. It is valued at $60,000. The present Czarina has one almost a counterpart of it. A suit of sables belonging to Adelina Patti is said to be worth nearly $40,000.

Benson J. Lossing having been asked to designate which of the Bahamas is the San Salvador on which Columbus landed, replied that it has long been a debatable question and is still unsolved. Six islands of the group claim the honor. Popular belief holds to Cat Island, while historic and scientific investigators give reason for believing that each of the other five islands was the first landing place of the great Admiral.

The anchorages of Narrakal and Alleppy, in India, are said to be perfectly smooth and quiet, even when the sea outside is tumbling in before strong southwesterly gales. To explain this, Dr. W. King mentions that analysis proves the existence of oil in the muddy bottoms of these anchorages, and he supposes that there are deposits of petroleum, either beneath the sea-bottom or along the coast, from which oil continually oozes up, and calms the otherwise troubled waters.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $25	10 per cent
" " " 50	15 " "
" " " 100	20 " "
" " " 250	25 " "
" " " 500	30 " "
" " " 1000	35 " "
" " " 1500	40 " "
" " " 2500	50 " "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:

Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - Chicago.
Cen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - - New York.

N. B.—Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

Have you a mind of your own? If so, listen to us just a moment. You are not enjoying good health; you have tried internal medicine, and you are not well yet. Now, why will you not put prejudice aside, and try our treatment? We will send you, on trial, one of our ELECTRO-MEDICATED APPLIANCES to suit your case, provided you agree to pay for it, if it cures you in one month. If it does not cure you, it costs you nothing. Is not this a fair offer?

Different Appliances to cure DYSPEPSIA, RHEUMATISM, LIVER AND KIDNEY DISEASES, PILES, LUNG DISEASES, ASTHMA, CATARRH, LAME BACK, AGUE, DEBILITY, and many other Diseases. Remember, we do not ask you to buy them, blindly; but merely to try them, at our risk. 125,000 Cures made during 1884, in cases where all other treatments had failed. PRICE VERY LOW. Illustrated book, giving full particulars, and blank for statement of your case, sent free. Address, at once,

ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO.,
564 State Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.
AGENTS WANTED.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contraditions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Rced. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.
Furnished in any quantities at

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.
Three degrees, in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.
Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—
Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.
Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

FARM NOTES.

FARMER'S HOUSES.

While it is creditable to every farmer that he looks well after his farm, it is certainly of the highest importance that he have a special concern as to his farm-house. There is no more dreary place, assuming the title of a home, than a rough, dilapidated tenement, located on a farm. It is all the more dreary if it has nothing within it inviting to the mind, no greatful cheer of books, no pleasant furniture and neat adornments, and lacking surroundings of good fences, fine shrubbery and flowers, a pleasant lawn and appropriate shade trees. Lost. indeed, to anything approaching refinement, must be that mortal who can dwell in a rickety, unpainted building, with bars for a front gate, chickens wallowing before the door, pig-pens elbowing the house in the rear, scraggy trees never cared for, or no trees at all, no cheering shrubs, no neatness or trimness. A plea for poverty is no excuse: the universally shiftlessness or indolence is the cause of such a picture.

Farming is hard work at the best; and where it amounts to abject drudgery, with no sunshine in doors, it is no wonder that farmers' sons and daughters become restive and long for the time to come when they can throw off the shackles of an unsatisfying servitude, and seek other fields of employment where they can enjoy some of the privileges they cannot have at home. Do not enrich the soil of the field by impoverishing that of the household.

It is no gaudiness or lavish ornaments that are needed. A home can be plain but still lovely. Nature can aid greatly if industry is applied to use her agencies. It is not a waste to have her bestowments. "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." There need be no loss to be tastefui. Nature and beauty are synonomous. Good taste and good economy can, therefore, be made handmaids to each other.—Farmer and Manufacturer.

As a rule, farmers sow too much seed to the acre. The plants crowd each other, and consequently cannot "stool" so much. An inferior crop will follow. If you intend to sow two bushels of grain per acre, run that two bushels through the separator until you have a bushel and a half of plump grain left, and sow that You will see a more vigorous growth, the plants will have more room and will be stronger, and, other things being equal, the harvest will be larger. In regard to garden seeds, sow none until you have tested them. This is a good plan to pursue with corn for the field crop. You will then not need to mourn so much over vacant hills. Plant only assuredly good seed of whatever kind.

The dry cow deserves special attention at this time of year. To feed for milk and butter, is not to wait until the cows have calved, but now. A good milker should be in good flesh at time of calving; hence, she should begin to recuperate now, and lay on flesh. It is unreasonable to suppose that a cow in poor condition can nourish a calf for a greater or less time, and have much left over for creamery. Feed some grain with your straw and cornstalks. Wheat middlings are good, or about one pound per day of new process linseed meal. The old oil-cake meal should be fed with caution.

The same advice for the sheep raiser is timely. If ewes are not kept in good condition, the winter through, begin as early as possible to get them so. Insure warmth and protection. Improve the quality and increase the quantity of food. Clover hay, with corn and bran, or, for young animals, oats are what is needed. Many approve of ensilage for sheep, on account of its succulence. A strong ewe will rarely have weak lambs; and the stronger the lamb at birth, the better its chances for living.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

In Debility.

Dr. W. H. HOLCOMBE, New Orleans, La., says: "I found it an admirable remedy for debilitated state of the system, produced by the wear and tear of the nervous energies."

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

NELSON'S

Sunday School Books and Cards.

Approved by all Evangelical Denominations.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

T. NELSON & SONS, 42 Bleecker St., N.Y.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

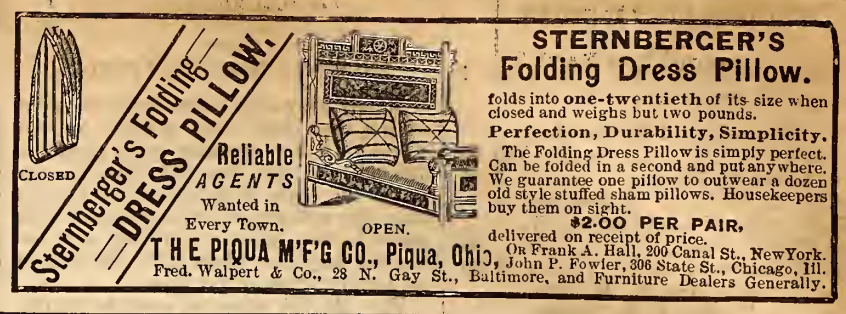
IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St., Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.

SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.



By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER

IS THE

"WAUKESHA GLENN!"

HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS NATURAL OR ARTIFICIAL.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL

A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a la ge Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned in the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentieths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—Whil the new Furnac was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engaged upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forhear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous and better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words.

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endowment of hoarded bank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bŏŏkt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading; more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'-bind'er, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for casing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, -lĕrn'd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The following exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 310,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the new work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

☞We offer the Christian Cynosure for one year and the Dictionary, postpaid, both for only $2.00.

W. I. PHILLIPS.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for "THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST," and a new Portrait of GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, postfree, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

Is a charming illustrated magazine, published by J. F. Avery, Halifax, Nova Scotia, containing forty pages monthly of anecdote and argument for the Christian home. Every number is profusely and finely illustrated. We shall be happy to introduce this magazine to hundreds of American homes and have secured a special arrangement from the proprietor. Buds and Blossoms is 75 cents per year. With the Cynosure the two will be $2.25, or any subscriber who has already paid for this paper can get the magazine at the same rate.

Home is woman's domain and she is entitled to everything that can add to its comfort and spare her annoyance. "The STERNBERGER FOLDING DRESS PILLOW" is one of the many conveniences which materially lighten the labor and burdens of the housewife. An advertisement in another column gives full details in regard to this favorite article, which is meeting with such remarkable sale wherever it is introduced.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Standard Works
—ON—
SECRET SOCIETIES
FOR SALE BY THE
National Christian Associat'n
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accuratcly truc to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Anoient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each: per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher In cloth, 25c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, drese of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and provea that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doeshurg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1 00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and pensities. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in thie work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic hondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications 10 cents each: per dozen 75 cents

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2 00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated, A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M S Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each: per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that sec societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in thie title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The decreasc in the public debt for April was $5,464,596, and for the ten months just ended $50,075,230, against $5,232,075 and 87,060,474 for the corresponding month and ten months last year.

During the month of April Postmaster-General Vilas appointed 600 postmasters at fourth-class offices. The majority were appointed to fill vacancies.

N. C. Jordan relieves A. U. Wyman in the office of Treasurer of the United States. The bond of Mr. Jordan, $150,000, is approved by the Solicitor of the Treasury.

COUNTRY.

General Grant is slowly gaining. "The General still improves, is all I can say to-night," said Col. Fred Grant Friday evening. "He dictated for an hour and half to-day, and will finish up the Appomattox campaign to-morrow. He begins now to feel confident himself that he will recover. The pain in his throat is very slight and only at intervals, and does not now affect his speech or swallowing. The second volume of his book will be in the hands of the publishers as soon as the maps are furnished which will be in a short time."

An inquest was held in this city Thursday on the body of Mrs. J. J. Shay, who died while under the influence of chloroform in having her teeth extracted by Dr. W. E. Day. The verdict of the jury was that she came to her death from chloroform, and charged Dr. Day with gross negligence and criminal carelessness, and recommended that he be held to the grand jury.

O. L. Dudley, chief agent of the Illinois Humane Society, prosecuted Wm. Green, in the circuit court, for extreme cruelty to his horses. Green is a large farmer at Tonica, La Salle county, and was proven guilty of starving some of his horses so that they died. He was fined $25 and costs, amounting to nearly $400.

Under the search and seizure clause of the prohibitory law sixty-two barrels of liquor were captured by the Temperance Alliance at Muscatine, Ia. The people there are determined to shut up the saloons.

John Aird, in the district court at Salt Lake, pleaded guilty to unlawful cohabitation, promised to abandon it and sustain the laws. He was fined $300. The cases of Barney Young, charged with polygamy, and Ages McMurrin, perjury in the same matter, were continued. C. V. Spencer pleaded guilty, threw himself on the mercy of the court, promised to abandon polygamy and dissuade others from it, and sentence was suspended during good behavior.

The entire force of the construction department at the Brooklyn navy yard was discharged Friday.

George Mack, a colored murderer, was taken from the officers near South Bend, Kan., Thursday night, and with a rope around his neck, was dragged by a galloping horse into town, where he was suspended to an awning in front of a billiard saloon. One of the mob sent a bullet through the corpse and in fifteen minutes the coroner cut it down.

In a drunken rage Sunday night Adolph Hess, near Concordia, Ohio, beheaded his little child with an ax, beat his wife to death, and then hanged himself to a rafter.

A collision occurred on the Iron Mountain road seventeen miles from St. Louis, Monday afternoon, between a special and a passenger train, two persons being killed and several injured. A misunderstanding of the train-dispatcher caused the disaster.

A shower of fish, large and small, fell on the farm of George Knight, in Knox county, Indiana, the other day. Mr. K. gathered up nearly a wagon load of the fish as proof of the occurrence.

The First Illinois Infantry was ordered to Joliet last week, and the infantry and battery of that place were ordered to rendezvous at their armories. A conflict with the strikers in the stone quarries was expected. The Governor has decided that the property of the quarry owners must be protected at all hazards. The strike threatens to seriously interfere with building operations in Chicago, these quarries being the chief source of supply of foundation stone.

A tornado at Pleasant Hill, Mo., Wednesday night wrecked houses, blew thirteen freight cars off the track, badly injuring three men who occupied the caboose, and killing a number of hogs with which some of the cars were loaded. A child was killed at Holden, and property in the vicinity suffered severely.

FOREIGN.

The troubles at Panama have been brought to a very satisfactory ending through the influence of the American forces. Admiral Jouett acted as arbitrator between the Panama rebels and the Colombian troops, and the result is peace instead of war. The Admiral and his men deserve the commendation forwarded by Secretary Whitney.

A brig arriving at St. John, N. B., Sunday night brought the captain and two sailors of a barkentine, which had been wrecked by ice April 5. The men had been eighteen days exposed to rigorous weather. Others of the crew who took to the long boat are supposed to have perished.

The reception to the Prince of Wales at Omagh, Ireland, was a very brilliant affair. The Nationalists had arranged to make a counter demonstration and were arrayed in procession form, but the police charged upon them, captured their black flag and drums, and dispersed them completely. The Prince has returned to London.

The speech of Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons on Monday last on the vote of credit of $55,000,000, was received with profound interest throughout Europe and was published in full in all the large dailies. It dispelled any idea that may have been previously entertained that England would make concessions to Russia. The general opinion of the press was that the speech would make war certain.

An agreement has been concluded between the English and Turkish governments by which the latter will allow the vessels of the former to pass through the Dardanelles in the event of war with Russia. In return for this favor Turkey will be allowed to send an expedition to occupy the Soudan by way of Suakim, and England will restore Cypress to Turkey at the end of five years and guarantee the integrity of the States of the Porte.

A dispatch from Tripul says the Afghans are encaged at the British and accuse Sir Peter Lumsden of deserting them as the Russians did in 1878. The Afghan member of the frontier commission has made a protest, in which he says that it was shameful for the British to encourage the Afghans to resist the Russians at Penjdeh and afterward to abstain from rendering any assistance.

LONDON, May 1.—There is a slight relaxation in the tension of the relations of Russia and England. Russia appears to be disposed to entertain England's latest proposals to submit to the arbitration of one of the crowned heads of Europe the question whether the convention of March 17 was broken by Russia. It is believed that the King of Denmark will be selected as arbitrator in the event of mediation being accepted.

LONDON, May 2.—The Daily News this morning says: "A special messenger has left St. Petersburg and will arrive in London Monday or Tuesday, bringing Russia's answer, which will probably be a formal acceptance of the English proposals. The Czar has intimated to England through Baron de Staal that he earnestly desires peace.

BUSINESS.

A Kansas subscriber sends this ringing note: "Sometimes I may be delinquent in payment; if so, please send me a square dun."

From an Indiana subscriber: "If we could get our literature scattered all over the South, as well as the North, we could have good hope of electing the next President."

The publisher will be glad to furnish the address of parties, South and North, who will appreciate the Cynosure and advance the reform. All donations for this object will be reported in the Cynosure.

Among the first to send in his donation towards furnishing the Cynosure to ministers was Mr. J. Ruttey, of Kansas. This week he sends another donation "to furnish instruction to some one through the Cynosure." If you wish to know whether any good is done through such donations, read the extracts which have appeared in the Cynosure during the past few weeks and which are continued below.

From McLeansville, N. C.:

I am both pleased with and grateful for the Cynosure. Would be glad to know the name of the kind donor.

Rev. M. Clark, Principal of the Norfolk, Va., Mission School, has an enrollment this term of nearly one thousand students. He writes: "I am much pleased with your paper, and am greatly obliged to the friend who has paid the subscription. Secret societies abound in Norfolk among both colored and white."

From Knoxville, Tenn:

I most fully approve the sentiments expressed in the Cynosure. Having had some knowledge of the workings of Freemasonry in different particulars, I know that they are detrimental to the best interests of both church and state.

From Jenifer, Ala.:

I have been the recipient of your good paper and prize it very highly. I think with the aid of it I can do a great deal of good by telling others of its contents, and in that way I hope to lead some one else to take the paper. I abhor all kinds of secret societies.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Flizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	88½	@89½
No. 3	80	@83
Winter No 2		@1 02
Corn—No. 2	48¾	49¼
Oats—No.2	34	36½
Rye—No. 2		69
Bran per ton		11 00
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@15 00
Mess pork per bbl		11 55
Butter, medium to best	12	@24
Cheese	5	@10
Beans	55	@1 45
Eggs		11
Potatoes per bus	35	45
Seeds—Timothy	1 40	@1 53
Flax	1 30	1 39
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Green to dry	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to	4 80	@5 75
Common	2 40	@4 60
Hogs	3 50	@4 55
Sheep	3 25	@5 00

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 40	@6 15
Wheat—Winter		@1 03½
Spring		1 02
Corn	57	@58½
Oats	42	@54
Mess Pork		13 00
Eggs		15
Butter	8	28
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 75	@5 20
Hogs	3 80	@4 20
Sheep	1 50	@4 00

LOOK AT THE
YELLOW TAG
AND SEE IF YOUR SUBSCRIPTION EXPIBES THIS MONTH. IF IT DOES, PLEASE LET US HEAR FROM YOU AT ONCE.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND-PAINTED SILKS for Patchwork, Tidies, Screens, etc. Send $1 for package, or 50 cts. for beautiful samples. WESTERN ART CO., Salem, O

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to REV CHINIQUY, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED! Rider's Improved Pillow-Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars and see what it is any way. E. W. RIDER.
Mention the Christian Cynosure. Racine, Wis.

HOW TO BUILD
A HOUSE.

A book containing plans for twenty-five houses of all sizes from two rooms up; also several barns; sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents, by
GEO. W. OGILVIE,
234 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill

THE NOVELTY
RUG MACHINE.

[PAT. DEC. 27, 1881.]

Makes Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc., with ease and rapidity. Price only one dollar. Single machine, with full directions, sent by mail on receipt of price. Agents wanted. Apply for circulars to E. ROSS & CO., Patentees and Sole Manufacturers, Toledo, Ohio, Lock Box 184; also Manufacturers of Rug Patterns.

THE PERFECTION FASTENER and COLLAR BUTTON will hold any necktie or scarf in place perfectly. Send 15 two cent stamps for gold plated sample. A. L. GILBERT, Box 133. Milwaukee, Wis.

IDAHO COLONY 300,000 ACRES In Snake River Valley—near Eagle Rock, Idaho. 80 to 640 acres to each settler. $1.50 per acre—50 cts. cash—$1. in 3 years. Climate and soil same as California. Send for circular and prospectus. Also Colony lands in California. Monthly excursions, $52.50.
WM. H. MARTIN, 103 Adams St. Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts., sent post-paid. Address
BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $10 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill, Chicago.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 34. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 14, 1885. WHOLE NO. 785.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Grandest Proposition of the Year..... 8
The Lutherans and the Advance..... 8
German United Evangelical Church..... 8
Grand Army Pauperism.. 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Uncertain Trumpets..... 1
How the Lodge Weathered the Storm..... 2
The Courage of Conviction..... 3
SELECTED:
Through the Temperance Lodge Mill..... 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chap. XIX..... 4
REFORM NEWS:
From the Illinois Lecturer..... 5
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
N. C. A. Annual Meeting... 8
CORRESPONDENCE:
Canada Grangers; The G. A. R. and the Governor; Straight Paths; Let the Candidate Face the East; From a Mother in Israel; Pith and Point..5,6
N. C. A. Board Meeting.... 9
Horse-shoes, Charms and Spiritworship..... 9
LITERATURE..... 9
National Reform Convention..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE CHURCHES..... 12
SECRET EMPIRE..... 13
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
FARM NOTES..... 14
HOME AND HEALTH..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 13

The Cynosure has ready for next week a fine portrait of Hon. Gerrit Smith, of New York, with a sketch of his life and a large portion of the last address he ever made against the lodge in 1870. This will make a valuble number for circulation among friends who do not read the Cynosure.

"Where thieves neither break through nor steal" is a hard text to fence agaiust. Mr. Ray of Milwaukee, had a "burglar-proof" residence. Last Wednesday night a solitary masked robber cut the telegraph, telephone, and burglar-alarm wires, roused the family and stood them, servants and all, in a row, while he sent Mr. Ray to bring all the convenient plunder in the house, escaping safely with it all.

Governor Hubbard of Minnesota, whose veto of a lodge grab at the State treasury is gaining him friends among decent people in equal proportion to the insolent denunciations of the Grand Army posts, has a record as member of the order which does him credit. It is asserted that during the campaign his name was proposed for membership in the Garfield lodge. Whether he ever got his foot into the trap may be doubted, for the lodge claims that he never paid his muster-in fee or dues: but, at least they have the sweet revenge of having made him a suspended member, and as such they stab at his reputation with hearty hate.

The only sectarian institution, we believe, which is patronized by the Government in the education of its Indian wards is the Catholic school at Feehanville (after Archbishop Feehan) Ill., near Chicago. Fifty Sioux boys have been maintained here, but the priests, wishing to keep the institution for boys from the city, many of whom are from wealthy families, propose that the Government shall remove the young Sioux to one of their schools in Minnesota, where they propose to take entire charge of the educational interests of the Indians. The Catholic Indian Bureau, therefore discourages the sending of Indian youth to Carlisle and Hampton, where the wholesome, unsectarian, but thoroughly Christian training unfits the pupils to be good Catholics. The Government has paid $120 each for fifty pupils at this Romish school. That certainly should be the utmost limit of such patronage.

Angus Cannon, president of a Mormon "stake," or district, has at last received the heaviest sentence the law allows for polygamy. He was arrested last January and received his sentence Saturday. The disgusting statements he made respecting his private life and efforts to obey the law showed the depravity of the Mormon system. Though claiming to have obeyed the law he showed the utmost defiance and his speech to the court was wildly cheered by the rabble over whom he holds ecclesiastical rule. After he has been six months in prison, banished from the embraces of Mormon women, he may be more humble. The Edmunds law is now having a fair opportunity of proving its value. But few are so sanguine as to suppose that this law enforced to the last will uproot the "Mormon cancer."

The sale at auction of Chicago University, grounds and buildings, to satisfy a mortgage is a unique chapter in the history of American colleges. The fact of its indebtedness to the Union Mutual Life Insurance Company for a loan, and the suit for foreclosure of the mortgage lately decided in favor of the company in the United States court here, is well known. The loan and accrued interest amounted to the vast sum of $312,000. More than a year ago the company offered to settle at considerable loss, and President Anderson made manful endeavor to meet the condition of the offer, but failed. The valuable grounds were given by Stephen A. Douglas on condition that a building worth $100,000 should be erected and the property should never be sold or alienated. It is now sold, and at auction. The single bid was for $275,000, by the president of the insurance company. The heirs of Mr. Douglas have watched their interest and will maintain their claim. The Dearborn University is also located on the ground with its great telescope. This belongs to a separate corporation from the University. The institution has for many years been under Baptist control, and has been recognized as the leading college of the denomination in the West. The question is now, whether a new effort shall be made to hold the University or build anew at some other point.

A decision of the Iowa Supreme Court brings at least one secret order within the control of the courts. The "Supreme Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen" has been in the habit of drawing on the State lodges to distribute in other parts of the country. The first body is located at Louisville, and incorporated under Kentucky law. The Iowa lodge resisted the claim that their funds could be taken trom the State against their will, either to pay death benefits in Kentucky or aid the yellow fever sufferers further South. The pressure being great the Iowa lodge seceded, and the fight went into the courts which have now given a second decision, contrary to a former one, sustaining the Iowa lodge. The Supreme Court has decided unanimously that the order is chiefly an insurance organization and, as such, amenable to the State insurance law. So this victory of the Iowa lodge may be its Waterloo after all. Along with other lodges the claim has always been that as benevolent (!) associations they were exempt from State or other legal supervision, and the right of inspection, which public authority is supposed always to exercise over corporations which have its permission to be, could not be exercised. But all other insurance companies are under strict legal supervision, and since it is established by the Supreme Court that the obtaining of some sort of life insurance was the main object of the members, they have a right to State protection. It is no more than fair, the papers argue, that there should be no exception made in favor of a secret insurance company. It should be made legally secure as any other. We should like to see the principles of this decision carried out.

The trial of Richard Short for the attempted assassinatiou of Captain Phelan in the office of the Fenian chief, O'Donovan Rossa, in New York, resulted last week in an acquittal, and so the Freemasonry of the dynamiters is vindicated. Phelan claimed to have been decoyed from his home in Kansas City by the conspirators about Rossa's office, who intended to kill him for violating his secret oath to this murder lodge. During the trial Phelan was carefully guarded against any more assaults and had three revolvers about him which were taken away and laid on the judge's desk. He testified that this cut-throat lodge raised subscriptions for the "resources of civilization"—and they stab each other if the plans by which they civilize the world are revealed! The jury was watched by two sets of detectives, but Short was acquitted: and now one of the jurors is arrested under charge of perjury and contempt of court as a juror. He seems to have played the true Masonic game—got on the jury to save his lodge brother. Our authorities have not succeeded in getting within the ring of this lodge, as did the Dublin trials with the Irish Invincibles, the Phœnix Park assassins, but if allowed a little rein, they may exterminate each other.

Although the preparations for war are still proceeding in England, the announcement that a settlement by arbitration will be secured is received with great disfavor. But in carrying out his principles of Christian statesmanship, Mr. Gladstone has proved his superiority among his compeers; and though the popular war fury may for a season fill the columns of the press, it certainly must give way to reason and good sense. It is more than probable that the Afghans were the aggressors in the late battle and that the disputed territory about Penjdeh belongs on the other side of their line. England, at least, has little authority over that territory, little enough to go to get into a fight about. Let us hope that war on so slight provocation, by a nation of England's standing, is a thing of the past, a "relic of barbarism." Already has arbitration settled disputes between nations at least thirty-three times, in which our own Government has been a party eighteen times and England in twelve. Five nations not reckoned as Christian have been parties in these arbitrations. Arbitration has been officially recommended for the settlement of international disputes by four Presidents and by the Senate and House of the United States, by the Emperor of Russia, by the British Parliament, by the French Chamber of Deputies and by many other powers. The recommendation and the practice should be universal.

UNCERTAIN TRUMPETS.

BY PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

The Advance, in its comments on the Washington Mouument's dedication, clearly intimated its opinion that Freemasonry was a religion. In its issue for March 19th the same paper intimates that no church can prosper which refuses to admit members of this and other similar organizatious to its membership. The question at once arises, Why cannot a church of Christ prosper if it refuses to admit members of the Masonic church to its number.

In the article on the Monument the editor does not say whether the Masonic religion is true or false; but from the drift of the writing it would be inferred that he disapproved of the system. It may, however, be assumed that Masonic or secret-society religion is Christian, and that the orders are carrying on the Saviour's work among men. In the light of this theory let us examine the second statement of the Advance.

Does any Christian church knowingly receive a member of another such body without a dismissal from the first to the second? Suppose ten members of Dr. Kittredge's church to present themselves for membership in Dr. Goodwin's. They are questioned and the fact of this membership is ascertained. The committee of the First Congregational church ask for their letters of dismissal. They have none, and tell the First church that they wish to retain their places in Dr. Kittredge's church and at the same time unite with Dr. Goodwin's. They say that if in both churches there will be certain social and business advantages which they can secure; that they will pay at both treasuries; are truly converted Christian people; will attend services at one place when there are none at the other, and in case of a collision of appointments divide their attendance equally.

The First church would at once say: No. You cannot serve the Third Presbyterian church and us too. You must choose between us. If you prefer us, come and we will receive you. If not, you are in a good place now: stay where you are. The case is even stronger than this. Take the Leavitt Street and Union Park churches. Both are sister Congregational churches. Will one receive members who at the same time desire to hold membership in the other? Of course not; and the Advance would probably be able to show that the request for double membership was absurd and ridiculous, if not wicked, and that organizations admitting such relations would rapidly disintegrate. If this is so plain a case, why is it so unscriptural to require a man to bring his dismissal from the Masonic church when he comes to unite with a Congregational?

But the case is far stronger than this; though if it were not, the position of the Advance would be illogical and ruinous to our churches. Freemasonry and its off-shoots are not only religions. They are pagan religions, transplanted to a Christian land and hidden from the general public by signs, tokens, oaths and penalties. Lying and cruelty, the two distinguishing characteristics of false religions, are developed to an astonishing degree in them; and every organization to which they are admitted they control or destroy. They bind men to the concealment of crime, and to fellowship with the ungodly, under penalties of cut throats and quartered bodies.

If men openly leave these heathen religions, they are persecuted by those who remain in them. Hence many men desire to retain both memberships. They want to stay in the pagan religion and join Christian churches too; and the Advance, which would say that it is perfectly Scriptural to require a member of one Congregational church to bring a dismissal before uniting with another, says that it is so unscriptural to ask a Knight Templar, who drunk wine from a human skull, to bring his letter from the Commandery church when he wishes to unite with a Christian church, that no body of Christ doing it can hope to prosper!

The Advance is wrong and, if the Lord tarry long and our churches are not entirely secularized, will one day confess its mistake and require men to abandon idolatry in the United States as well as in Turkey before uniting with the people of Christ.

Wheaton College.

ON THE SAME SUBJECT BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

"For the statutes of Omri are kept, and all the works of the honor of Ahab, and ye walk in their counsels."—Micah 6: 16.

Not long since the editor of the Advance declared that churches which exclude from their fellowship members of secret societies need not expect prosperity nor the favor of other churches, since they exclude some who profess to be their brethren.

What wonderful tenderness for the rights of Christian (?) Freemasons! Without stopping to enquire whether a person, who says to a church that a certain part of his future life must be perfectly exempt from all control, investigation or inquiry on the part of the church, does not thereby violate the fundamental principle of Christian fellowship, I would ask, does not the editor know that all the great religious sects, including that of which he is a member, are organized on the express principle, and with the distinct understanding. that they are not to receive all Christians, but only such as can assent to their doctrinal basis, and promises to conform to their covenant? There does not seem to be any question about the right of every church to act on this principle, except on the part of a few "fanatics," who hold that these religious sects are wholly unauthorized and are practical obstructions to the progress of the Gospel. With this class we apprehend, the editor has no sympathy, and that he is the organ and advocate of denominational divisions and is estopped from urging any such objection to tests of membership.

But the deplorable fact is, that while these sectarian churches have been quite ready to frame shiboleths for their brethren, "to make a man an offender for a word, to lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and to turn aside the just for a thing of naught," (Isa. 29: 21), they have not been at all careful to exclude those guilty of gross sins against God and humanity. They have had more respect for the statutes of Omri, and the counsels of Ahab, than the commandments of Jehovah. The great Presbyterian church divided on the question of old or new school theology. No question of Christian character was involved. It was simply the mouthing of a shiboleth. In the meanwhile both parties welcomed to their fellowship those who made merchandise of the bodies and souls of the brethren of Christ. There are now in the United States seven or eight different kinds of Presbyterians, with different terms of church fellowship. Nor has Congregationalism been at all exempt from the general practice of condoning iniquity, and so occupying the churches in heresy-hunting that they would lose sight of the wolf that was gnawing at their vitals. Here in Connecticut the feud was bitter between the followers of Drs. Taylor and Tyler, between Bushnellism and anti-Bushnellism, divisions that rent the churches asunder and greatly hindered the progress of the Gospel. Yet in either case tobacco-using, rum-drinking, slave-holding, and Freemasonry, were freely tolerated, so only the church member who practiced these abominations was true to the party, and helped in its promotion.

So far from denouncing and excluding all in iniquity, the sects have rather denounced and excluded those who have reproved it. There never was any question as to the standing, as a Congregational minister, of Dr. Nehemiah Adams, who devoted his best energies to the defense of slavery; while Dr. Geo. B. Cheever of New York, who made the pulpit, the press, and the forum resound with his eloquent denunciations of this iniquity was, because of his earnestness, together with his faithful church, excluded from the fellowship of the Congregational churches.

Nor has the practice of denouncing "him that rebuketh in the gate," and abhoring "him that speaketh uprightly," been confined to former times, or any one question. The dropping of the name of the venerable Pres. J. Blanchard from the roll of members of the General Association of Illinois, and the refusal to recognize the College church of Wheaton as a Congregational church, or even as a Christian church of any sort, and this after a refusal in either case to make inquiry into the actual facts, shows that the real animus of the movement was to get rid of faithful, Christian testimony, and that the Masonic putrescence should not be disturbed, and so offend the nostrils of the churches and the community.

Doubtless it is true that every church ought to welcome to its fellowship all who give evidence of fellowship with Christ, and that any other test than that of Christian character should be abjured; but it is equally true every church ought to exclude those workers of iniquity. When the Advance shall cease to be the organ and apologist for those who make and perpetuate "schism in the body" of Christ, and when it shall cease to take sides with those who make no objection to Freemasonry, but who do denounce and disfellowship its opponents, it may be accepted as a competent witness in the case in which it volunteers its testimony.

Willimantic, Conn.

HOW THE LODGE "WEATHERED THE STORM."

Several years since Otsego county, N. Y., was canvassed for its history and with others the Masonic lodge at Cooperstown applied for a notice, through its master, Mr. Goffe, who prepared a paper from which I make extracts. Though facts are perverted, and it is involved in inconsistencies and written in the smooth and guarded style of the lodges, it will be interesting to Anti-masons as a historical sketch and important as an exposition of lodge tactics.

The writer states that the lodge was established in 1795, by warrant from the Grand Lodge of the State, Robert R. Livingston being Grand Master and DeWitt Clinton, Junior Grand Warden, and boasts of the number and eminence of those initiated the first year.

Uninterrupted prosperity is recorded down to the Morgan tragedy, when the narrator says: "But now the time approaches when the lodge will receive a severe check, when partisan fanaticism will be arrayed against our beloved institution, and Masons are to suffer persecution and ostracism. Many of the weaker brethren apostatized from our order and became conspicuous among its persecutors. Old Otsego lodge, like many of her sisters, came near being shipwrecked by the violent waves of persecution, but thanks to a noble few, who manfully adhered to their duty and stood by their posts, she weathered the storm and finally came out depleted in numbers, from the persecution, hatred and malice of the Anti-masonic period.

"The following is recorded by Worshipful E. B. Crandall: 'Toward the close of the year 1826, some few of the members of the lodge, becoming somewhat restive under the proscription of political Anti-masonry, appeared in a body and notified the master that at the approaching regular meeting of the lodge it was their intention to move the lodge to surrender its warrant, as a step toward appeasing public opinion and allaying the political excitement then everywhere raging in the State. The worshipful master replied that he did not consider it a favored question and he should refuse to entertain it before the lodge unless all its members were previously notified of the intention, and so long as he remained the depository of the warrant and was sustained by the constitutional number of Masons; or, in other words, unless all its members unite in the proposed movement, he would never consent to surrender the warrant for such purpose. He further observed that if they concurred, he would notify the meeting to be held at an early hour and then informally consider what might be done under the existing state of public feeling, and whatever might be determined on by the brethren assembled, short of a surrender, etc., he for one, would cheerfully observe. Accordingly it was afterwards informally agreed that as an experiment this lodge would cease from its labors, keep its property insured and standing good in Grand Lodge, and meet only for the purpose of closing its unfinished business of organization, by the annual election of officers or otherwise as circumstances might specially require.' "

The lodge continued to meet but once a year for the election of officers and thus maintained its organization as agreed upon in 1826. Occasionally they initiated a candidate, calling it unfinished business, and other members were added by affiliation. The records were kept during this period by C. B. Crandall, who was for many years secretary and to whom the lodge is largely indebted for the careful preservation of its archives and documents. His record tells us that for nearly twenty years the lodge had not done regular Masonic work; that although in the year 1835 an attempt was made to revive its stated meetings, a vote to that effect was passed by a small majority, yet "the opposition was so strong and so earnest, it seemed the time had not arrived and the resolution was suffered to pass by inoperative."

"In 1845 a strong desire was manifested by the brethren to resume labor, but time and the tide of emigration had so reduced the number of members residing within a reasonable distance that it was difficult at times to get together a sufficient number for the election of officers. At the election, Dec. 9, 1845, the desire among the remaining few to resume work and revive the lodge into activity was strongly manifested and it was resolved:

"'That when this lodge closes, it shall stand closed till St. John's day (Dec. 27) at two P. M. to install officers elect and for a discourse.' The officers were installed as appointed but the discourse failed. During 1846 the regular meetings were punctually attended, but the members were aware that their condition was one of irregularity, they not having paid any dues or held any correspondence with the Grand Lodge for a number of years, and as a consequence, their warrant had become forfeited; but such also was the condition of most other lodges in this jurisdiction, and it was expected that the Grand Lodge, on being appealed to and the true state of our situation laid before it, would hail our renovation with rapture, and again fold us in its fraternal embraces."

"At the Grand Lodge meeting in 1848 the matter of Otsego lodge was referred to a committee who reported that, 'in view of the facts of the case, a new warrant be granted.' "

Thus the lodge was resurrected after a virtual death of twenty-two years. The record is made as favorably as possible to render it presentable to the public. Nothing is said of a Mr. Esquires who is said to have first introduced Anti-masonry in its vicinity, and whom they threatened to send to the asylum as an insane person, but finally thought it more discreet not to molest. *

To take an oath to do something that is unknown at the time of swearing is contrary to Scripture example. For instance, when Abraham desired his servant to swear unto him that he would not take a wife for Isaac of the daughters of the Canaanites; but that he would go to Abraham's own kindred in Mesopotamia, and from thence take him a wife, he did not do it, until he fully understood the import of the oath, and what would be required of him. "The servant said unto him, Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land; must I need bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest: And Abraham said unto him, Beware thou, that thou bring not my son thither again. * * * If the woman will not be willing to follow thee, then thou shalt be clear from this mine oath, only bring not my son thither again." The import of the oath being thus explained to him, knowing exactly what his oath would require him to do, he then sware to his master. "And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his master, and sware to him concerning the matter." Gen. 24: 1–9. How different from this the conduct of those who swear to do they know not what! They act in direct antagonism to Abraham's servant, and to Scriptural example.—Sandy Lake News.

THE COURAGE OF CONVICTION.

We read of a married daughter of John Knox, the famous apostle of Scotland, who, when her husband was imprisoned went to the authorities and asked that he might be liberated. She was told that if he would renounce his errors they would grant her petition. She seized the corners of her apron and holding it forth cried, "I would rather kep his head in my apron!" There was manifested the spirit of her father when he made Queen Mary tremble and defied all the power of the Romanism of that day in Scotland. The heroic spirit is ever required to lead the battle against dominant evil. The United States has had sons worthy of their origin. The Pilgrim fathers were an honor to our race, and they entailed the blessings of civil and religious liberty to our country. But wrong-doing is not dead and right principles require to-day the same watchful care which our forefathers gave them in their day, if we would preserve them for our descendants.

Now the question is, What evil is there which now requires to be watched? or whence can arise any danger to our rights, our liberties, or our religion?

We reply that danger to our religion contains danger to all our rights and liberties. And this danger is found in the utterly antagonistic principles, and subversive and insidious influences which are found in the secretistic laws and religious rites of lodgery.

Freemasonry is the most prominent and the most delusive probably of any of the multitudinous secret orders. Those which are identified with dynamite doings have no moral weight among men; but Masonry wears the sheep's clothing so successfully as to deceive many. Men are unwilling to accept the truth regarding its anti-Christian character, and point to the false Christ of its secret chamber as if it was the true Christ who commanded his gospel to be preached freely to the whole world.

Freemasonry like Christianity demands the supreme sway over its members; and as no man can serve two such Masters; the soul of every man who holds this double membership must enthrone the one and degrade the other. Jesus is the truth, but Freemasonry proper treats him as any false prophet. All over the world, Freemasonry is a religion that claims the power to secure for its obedient members an eternal home in the Grand Lodge above. But it tells no one on earth of the Jesus of Nazareth, the only Saviour of the world.

Masonry pervades and corrupts our churches and civil courts and our legislatures, and the only safe way for them is to exclude Masons as candidates for, or members of, any one of them. T. H.

THROUGH THE TEMPERANCE LODGE MILL.

In a lecture some time since to his own congregation, Rev. T. L. Wilkinson, editor of the Iconoclast, Waterford, province of Ontario, Canada, told his experience with secret temperance orders and the conclusions to which he finally came after thorough examination of their principles. The following is the story:

When a boy, about fourteen years of age, I joined a society known as the Cadets of Temperance (juvenile Sons of Temperance). When about nineteen I united with the Sons of Temperance, and not very long thereafter I became a party to the organization of a lodge of Good Templars, in which I took three degrees, and in this way I obtained some insight and experience into the mysteries of a secret society. I often heard the plausible arguments employed in justification of such secrecy as pertained to such institutions, the principal one being that the family was a secret institution and that, therefore, secret lodges were in perfect consonance with the divine order of things. I failed to perceive the fallacy of such reasoning, and finding that these institutions were popular with and patronized by Christian men and ministers who took the ridiculous pledges of concealment apparently without any qualms, I almost regarded such societies as divine arrangements for carrying on the crusade against the liquor traffic. In fact I thought and I argued that a man's chances for salvation were something like those of a heathen—rather uncertain, who would stand aloof from such organizations. Accordingly for several years, and until some time after the beginning of my ministry, I was almost incessantly associated with a temperance lodge of some sort. This gave me an admirable opportunity for observing their workings and tendency. I finally saw, however, that a great deal of precious time was spent in foolish drill and senseless ceremonies, as well as a great deal of precious money in building lodge rooms, buying regalia and other apparatus, all to very little practical purpose, while the enforcement of the law and infliction of penalties often caused much hard feeling and occasioned breaches of friendship, some of which were exceedingly difficult to heal.

Often a preponderance of inexperienced young people would congregate at the lodge and get up programmes of entertainments (which sometimes ended with a dance) that Christian people could not consistently patronize. Sometimes profane or openly wicked men were appointed to officiate as Chaplain, to read the prayers, and lecture candidates in the most religious fashion, together with a great many other things more conducive to evil than good, while the great end ostensibly in view was almost entirely lost sight of. Intemperance was rife; the masses were uninstructed; those who did not bear good names were black-balled, making their characters worse, and driving them further from the paths of virtue. Those who didn't pay their dues or could not restrain their thirst for liquor were expelled and handed over to the tender mercies of the devil. There was frequently a great scramble for the chief offices, hard feelings being engendered on the part of such as were elected to serve as private members, while one very conspicuous feature was the fostering of ritualism—putting ceremony in the place of sense, and parade in the place of practical work. I saw, at length, in a very clear light, that so much ceremony and display in the lodge room was calculated to create a taste for ceremony and display in the church—where there was already amazingly too much—thus retrograding into the letter and form instead of advancing into the spirit and life. The same, I saw, was true of all secret associations, and upon maturer reflection, I concluded that the secrecy, while altogether unnecessary, was little better than a farce, and utterly incapable of defence from the standpoint of revelation. I, therefore, ultimately became disgusted with such societies, and determined to have no more to do with them.

But my strongest objections remain to be stated. I found it was quite a common thing for temperance orators, both in the lodge and in public gatherings, most vigorously and vociferously to berate the church for apathy and indifference in allowing the souls of men to perish and the liquor traffic flourish without scarcely putting her little finger to the burden, while at the same time perhaps, nearly every working member of the several churches and their ministers belong to the secret conclave, constituted the backbone of the institution and supplied its most effective material.

I began to reason on this and I saw that what the church actually did was credited to some other institutions, and she was cursed by her own ministers and members because she didn't do it. All good Christian people who had been made temperate by Christian agencies and influences and belonged to these societies were put down in their tabulated statements as the trophies of such societies, and these statements were freely flaunted before the world, not with the exclamation, "Behold what God hath wrought," but rather "Behold what these societies have wrought," whereas the truth was that the societies were the offspring of these good people instead of these good people being the offspring of the societies, and the glory of their goodness and their temperance belonged to God, rather than to a human institution. I saw that all this was wrong. The church was really doing the work, and a human organization was getting the glory. I then began to ponder the question, "Is the church really so crude and defective in its constitution and so inefficient in its agencies, influences and instrumentalities that it needs some improved and more modern machinery of human invention to accomplish what the machinery of divine invention has failed to accomplish?" I saw at once that this involved an impeachment of divine wisdom and a reflection upon the divine arrangements that could only be tolerated through ignorance or perversity. Of course I heard the ponderous argument again and again employed, that there were a great many men making no profession of religion, who would co-operate in temperance work but would not join the church, and by confining ourselves to churchly channels we would lose all this aid, whereas if we organized merely on a moral basis we would secure it. I soon saw that this meant, if it meant anything, that if men would not use God's weapons to fight the foe God ought to use men's weapons or allow men to forge their own. Or, in other words, If men would not conform to Christ's methods Christ must adapt himself to theirs. It also implied that he was dependent upon the help of men who did not recognize his authority, in order to save and preserve men from drunkenness, neither of which positions did I find sanctioned in the Bible, though both were antagonistic to it. "Well, then," I asked, "to what extent can God's methods and machinery be set aside or ignored with impunity? Or can they be ignored to any extent without involving an offence to him? And can we hope to be ultimately successful if we leave God or his arrangements out of the question?" These questions pressed me until I was compelled to decide in favor of God's plans, else what became of that scarce commodity—Christian faith?

I am aware that it may be said in answer to this that it did not involve the setting aside of God's plans, but only the addition of others so as to take in a wider sphere of agencies, and increase the aggregate of temperance influence in the world. And what harm could there be in this? To this my judgment responded, "But while Christian people are working the machinery of temperance lodges, they are necessarily neglecting the machinery of the church, and tacitly acknowledging its inefficiency, and the more they do this the more they conduce to that inefficiency, and so disparage it in the eyes of men, and to that very extent they dishonor God.

Now, with these what could I do but to withdraw from such organizations and resolve to oppose sin in all its forms and promote virtue and truth, not as a member of some human brotherhood but as a member of the great Christian brotherhood—the church of God? I therefore resolved to employ Christianity pure and simple as the only effectual remedy for the salvation of men from drunkenness as well as from every other form of sin. Nor is this position, as I see it, incompatible with prohibitory enactments, as the laws of every Christian country ought to embody and represent the Christian sentiment of that country.

Still I was honest and sincere when identified with human institutions to the detriment of the church, and I question no man's sincerity to-day who occupies the position or entertains the opinions I once did. I cordially concede to all such the same character for honesty that I claim for myself, and to whatever extent they are zealously endeavoring to promote temperance principles by means of human organizations, while doubting their wisdom I admire their zeal and rejoice in their success. I may add just here that I by no means deny that much good has been accomplished through the instrumentality of human organization, but the question remains whether more good might not have been effected in the same time, with the same effort and outlay, had Christian people stood together and fought the foe as Christians, instead of as members of a temperance society. In the meantime I think it must be conceded that the way the temperance people have gone on multiplying distinct organizations, and getting up unseemly divisions, producing rivalries and squabbles in the temperance ranks, has done much as in the case of the churches, to weaken their influence and augment the expense of carrying on their crusade. These reasonings led me to decide that I would no longer be a party to the propagation of institutions that, however good their intention, were interfering with the autonomy and efficiency of the church of God.

After all, we must insist that one of the great evils of oath-bound orders, whether claimed as benevolent, or protective, or of some other character, is their secrecy. Can anybody tell what good thing there exists in this world whose goodness is enhanced by being kept from men by terrible oaths of secrecy? The principle set forth by the Redeemer of men when he said: "Neither do men [who are in their right minds] light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candle-stick; and it giveth light to all that are in the house," applies in this case; and could we have an unprejudiced jury we should "rest" the case right here. When all about us are enveloped in darkness and we have a light, there would be serious reason to question our benevolence, if not our very rationality, did we shut it up in a vessel, or refuse to let it shine lest some one would see. But if there is any good behind the tyled doors of the lodge, this is just what the orders do with reference to it. They no sooner strike their light of benevolence(?) in a town, than they proceed to turn the vessel of secrecy down over it, and suffer it not to give light to any, save to such as are willing to swear they will keep all others from seeing the light. Hence the importance of the Saviour's injunction, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in heaven."—Blanchard, Iowa, Record.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XIX.

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

Tom's idea that Nelson had gone to buy the much talked-of farm proved at first very convenient. It kept him in a child's state of amused expectancy, but like a child his feeble mind soon grew impatient at the delay, and a deep-seated longing after the one human being who had loved and cared for him with a self-sacrificing devotion more motherly than fraternal took possession of his soul. Hour after hour he would sit gazing dully into vacancy, but there were other times, as we have before stated, when he took into his head the strangest and most unaccountable freaks; really periods of semi-derangement when his weak brain became the prey of some crazy fancy, the pursuit of which seemed to have the effect for the time being of wakening it into an abnormal activity.

There had been of late a very decided improvement, so that even Martin Treworthy, who knew so well the deceitful nature of his disease, could not believe that in spite of his apparent increase in strength he was actually failing. But after Nelson went away he began to pine—but so impereeptibly that the fact was not realized by his two friends and watchers. He would eat a few mouthfuls of Martha's carefully prepared jellies and broths, and then, with the caprice of the consumptive invalid, want no more, but he refused no medicine however nauseous, and his great, blue, vacant eyes kept fast the secret of that longing which was consuming his life's already flickering taper.

He liked and was even fond of Martin Treworthy, but he had something of the instinct which leads an animal to forsake new and strange quarters from which it misses the familiar hand that has always fed it. One thought he brooded over, but concealed with a cunning he only showed when one of these half-insane fits was on him: and that was to steal away and find Nelson.

There came a warm, almost summer-like afternoon when Martin Treworthy ventured to leave his charge, as he supposed, quietly sleeping. The south wind, the sunshine, and the scents of early spring stealing in through the half-closed door, combined to excite more than ever Tom's restless notion to wander off; and with many furtive glances to the right and left to make sure that he was not watched and followed, he opened the door still wider, and stole out with noiseless footfall and heart as exultant as the child's who sets out to run after the rainbow. The world was wide, but Nelson was somewhere in it, and if he walked on and on—poor Tom's fancy made no more allowance for possible obstacles than the minds of other dreamers—he should certainly find him.

The fever that was burning in his veins buoyed him up with a strange, fictitious strength. In half an hour he had left Jacksonville behind him, and guided by some dim, undefined instinct he took the road that lead due west and directly towards Fairfield. It seemed to him that the farm Nelson had gone to buy must lay somewhere within that circle of golden light, and so he pressed on—on with his face set towards those purple and amethyst splendors, those gates of pearl and opal behind which must lay the Paradise he sought.

When at length the road deviated to a more southerly direction, he quitted it and took a straight course across the fields. It was not easy travelling. His feet sank in the brown, ploughed earth, sharp pains came with every breath he drew, but the strange impulse was on him still. He stopped at a house where some children were playing, and inquired if they had seen Nelson. A woman came to the door, but she thought him only a crazy tramp, and his inquiry elicited merely a pitiful comment which he did not understand. He turned away and went on. The light grew paler, till but one long, golden bar remained. The night fell darkling with all its mystery of silence and shadow and starlight. Terribly weary and chilled to the bone he finally crept unnoticed into a barn whose doors stood hospitably open, and found warmth and shelter, like any other vagrant, in the hay.

It happened to be a barn on Mr. Deming's estate, to whose household we will pay another visit, while poor Tom sleeps on, blessedly forgetful for the time being of the wild notion that has taken possession of his weak brain, and Martin Treworthy, in a state bordering on distraction, has engaged the police in an active search after the missing boy.

Mr. Israel Deming was discoursing with Uncle Zeb on various matters: the prospect of a war in Europe, the state of the grain market, and the peculiar disadvantages under which American farmers labored. Dora was standing at the window looking dreamily out to the still faintly glowing west, and thinking—but Dora's secret dreams and visions are her own, and though in a sense they are far more foolish than Tom's, we will not meddle therewith. Mrs. Deming, as usual, was not so far distant but that she could put in her word on occasion.

"I s'pose now," remarked Uncle Zeb, "a war in Europe would raise the price of breadstuffs and make business livelier, but then in the long run I don't know about it. War is a bad thing, look at it any way you will."

"I know it will take more than a brush among the nations on the other side of the globe to cure our hard times," said Mr. Deming, decidedly. "It is a rascally shame the way public affairs are managed. Just look at it a minute. More wheat raised last year than we knew what to do with, and here are the Indians starving on their reservations, and thousands of unemployed workmen whose families don't know where their next meal of victuals is coming from. The power is all slipping into the hands of the few. We used to send brains to Congress and no money; now we send money to Congress and no brains."

Dora was sorry for anybody who had to starve. It must be dreadful, but then it was nothing that she could help. She didn't vote nor make the laws. And as for the ballot for woman, she had all the rights she wanted already. Why should she concern her head about politics? Such ideas we may hear daily from the lips of charming creatures who, secure in the affection of husbands and fathers, can embroider lambrequins and crazy quilts, and read the latest society novel all day long if they choose, and never a thought for that great army of sad-eyed, patient women from whom the rum traffic is draining the life-blood drop by drop, while they stand selfishly in the way to keep from the hands of their less fortunate sisters the only weapon that can redress their wrongs. So don't be too severe on our little Dora, who could be pitiful enough to any case of individual distress brought directly under her notice, but whose sensibilities distress in the gross, represented by figures—so many starving Indians, or so many victims of the dramshop—did not greatly affect.

"Arter all, farmers have the best on t when there comes a pinch," said Uncle Zeb. "Got that machine in running order yet, Mr. Deming?"

Mr. Deming had a feeling that Uncle Zeb saw through his disappointment in the grange, and was slyly laughing at him. But he did not choose to confess that the machine had not so far paid expenses. His wife was in hearing distance, and he dreaded her keen opinion much more than he did Uncle Zeb's inward chuckle.

"There's a good deal about it that I don't see the use in," he said, cautiously. "But then it suits the young people, and if it gives them a taste for the soil and a little innocent amusement besides, why, it's a good thing so far as it goes. I don't suppose it is really time yet to pass judgment on it fairly."

"Well, when is it time, Mr. Deming?" put in his spouse. "After you've got your fingers cut? And as for the young people, it is my opinion that the grange will teach them as much of farming as the Good Templars did of temperance, and not a thimbleful of either one."

Uncle Zeb chuckled in silence while Mr. Deming laughed, it being the only answer he could make under the circumstances. He had begun to find out that the grange was a rather costly machine, and could not help inwardly acknowledging that for the agricultural classes who had so little ready money, the simple and despised farmer's club had its points of advantage. But it did not occur to his mind, strangely enough, that he was himself helping on the transfer of power from the many to the few by paying away his money to a secret organization, to go in turn into the hands of unknown leaders, thus supplying the means for that very corruption and demagogism he inveighed against so bitterly. But Mr. Deming was perhaps as consistent as most men. The limit of our vision which forbids us to see both sides of a sphere at once has its analogy and counterpart in the moral.

To Dora there were some things about the grange which made it more attractive than Good Templarism. She liked the mixture of flowery sentimentality in the lectures; she liked to join in the harvest dance—even her mother could not object to a pleasant, social recreation not lasting more than five minutes—and she enjoyed immensely the distinction accorded her as an acknowledged beauty, of personating one of the three heathen goddesses who are the presiding geniuses of the grange. All these were among the things in which Mr. Deming "saw no use," but a young and pretty girl intent on making conquests, and a hard-headed old farmer who is chiefly interested in the management of stock and the various kinds of fertilizers, might naturally be supposed to regard such a subject from widely different standpoints.

Dora happened to visit the barn early in the morning. She saw a supposed tramp asleep on the hay, and fled for the house with a wild scream that roused Tom and frightened him even more than his sudden apparition had alarmed his sister. He scrambled out of his hiding place, and when Dora had reached the shelter of the kitchen porch and turned to look once more she saw the object of her terror crossing the fields on a curious, staggering run. He must have been drinking. How lucky he hadn't set fire to the barn or done some other dreadful thing. Dora had a mortal and certainly a very excusable horror of a drunken man.

Tom, in his feverish sleep, had dreamed of Nelson's farm. He thought they were both there together and everything was so beautiful and bright, and he was perfectly happy. Even in the shock of his waking up there still remained a shattered remnant of the beatific vision. The sun was rising full and glorious. Royally unclosed those golden gateways of the east for the monarch's triumphal passage. But above stretched a low-lying, ominous bank of slaty-colored clouds, and as he rose higher and higher they spread over him their pall-like mantle. The wind grew chill and keen and piercing, and a few drops of rain began to fall—not many, but enough to chill poor Tom to the very marrow.

He had taken once more to the high road. A passer-by eyed him curiously, but his staggering gait was against him and wakened suspicion in other minds besides Dora's that he had been drinking.

At last, unable to go further, he sank down utterly exhausted by the roadside. He seemed to have no consciousness but of such utter weariness that it seemed like a bottomless abyss in which even pain was swallowed up.

Dennis O'Sullivan, at that particular moment, was standing in the door of his shanty and calculating the chances for a rainy day, with a thought of his unfilled demijohn. The walk to Jacksonville, the nearest point at which he could procure liquor since Peter Snyder had abandoned the business, was considerably longer than he cared to take unless the cravings of appetite grew unendurable.

By way of assisting his mental conclusions he lighted his old clay pipe, apostrophizing meanwhile an aged goat which was allowed free run of the O'Sullivan mansion, and over which he unfortunately stumbled in his efforts to find a match. The animal really looked patriarchal enough with his long beard to have a certain mythological suggestiveness as if he might be some kind of household Lares.

Dennis, in his sober moments, had sufficient sense to know and acknowledge that he and his family had been better off since the day that Peter Snyder emptied his casks of rum into the creek. But he had given place to the devil of strong drink quite too long for the mere fact that he had now to go several miles instead of a few rods after it to work a thorough reformation. If the strongest advocate of moral as opposed to legal suasion would but make a practical test of his theory on Dennis O'Sullivan as he stands at this moment, a poor, ignorant Irishman, ready to sell soul and body for a glass—no, for a drop of the fiery poison that has nearly burned up will and conscience in its fierce flame, he might confess that there are cases in which it proves a broken reed, and the need of something stronger grows very imperative.

Dennis smoked away for a few moments. The clouds gathered thicker, the rain fell in larger drops, but that empty demijohn must be filled. He took it from the shelf and with hat slouched over his eyes started forth with a feeling that was partly shame, partly a fierce determination to have it or perish, and partly the involuntary impulse of the passion within him.

At the very same moment Peter Snyder was setting forth on a vastly different errand. From the moment he had surrendered himself to his divine Captor, one thought, one desire had possessed his soul—the thought, the desire that possessed Saul of Tarsus. Oh, to be allowed to do as much good as he had hitherto done evil! And so he had been led irresistibly to tell his experience wherever he could find anyone to hear it; and as this is just what the world of sinning, suffering men and women want, he had begun—not to preach exactly, in his humility he would have been the first one to disclaim a preacher's title—but to tell the story at temperance and revival meetings of how the Lord had met him, shown him Himself, granted him mercy, hardened wretch though he was, and how that same mercy must then be for everyone. Only the simple, ever-new story of One who calls not the righteous but sinners to repentance. But from Peter Snyder's lips it had a strange power, and as we have said he was often called upon to tell it in an uncultured but earnest, almost inspired fashion that sent many to weeping and praying who had never wept or prayed before.

They both took the same road. Peter Snyder had a few moments the precedence, and thus he came soonest on the prostrate form of Tom.

"Sleeping off a spree, most likely," was his first thought; as it appeared to be also of another man who rode by on horseback, then reined in his horse and rode back.

"He ought to be taken to the lockup, but we haven't a constable worth the name in Fairfield," and with this expression of contempt for Fairfield's rural police the man rode on, leaving Mr. Snyder to deal with the case as he best might, and also to some meditations on Masonic charity—for he knew the man to be a prominent Mason—that were not flattering to the much-vaunted benevolence of the order.

He bent over Tom, examined him carefully and saw at once the truth. He was in a fainting fit from exhaustion. The face he had certainly seen before. It was Nelson Newhall's feeble-minded brother, and rushing back on his mind came the memory of the wrong he had done or allowed to be done him, and the swift and righteous punishment which had been visited on his head. Mr. Snyder regarded that punishment now in a very different light, as all just and right, and not the thousandth part of what he deserved. He was about to try alone to bear the unconscious Tom to a place of shelter when Dennis O'Sullivan came up, and did not pass by, Levite like, as did the other one; but stopped, his compassionate Irish heart prompting him to render all the aid he could.

Mr. Snyder's eye caught sight of the demijohn.

"The Lord didn't mean you should get that filled to-day, Dennis. Here is a boy that is sick; we must get him in somewhere out of the rain."

Dennis threw down his demijohn very willingly, and together they lifted up Tom and carried him to shelter. Dennis had never been quite able to get over his doubts of Mr. Snyder's sanity, but he had a feeling that he was going to do a very foolish thing which he would rue on the morrow, and it seemed even to his ignorant heart as if heaven had had pity on his weakness and stopped him from his errand to Jacksonville.

Mr. Snyder, on this subject, had no doubts whatever. He had been stopped from giving his testimony at the meeting to which he was bound. But what matter? He had now other work to do: perhaps the undoing in some measure of former evil; at least the trying to, which in the Lord's sight might count for as much.

(To be continued.)

The prohibitory law in Kansas, as amended, provides that any city, county or State officer shall be fined not over $500, and suffer forfeiture of office for failure to prosecute violators of the law.

—A Prohibition party, which can only exist by consent of the Good Templars' lodges, can never give the country prohibition. Such a party must inevitably be "part iron and part clay." During the late campaign, John B. Finch was made chairman of the national prohibition committee, probably with a view to the influence he might exert among the Good Templar organizations at the head of which he was. But it became notorious that his "order" was not falling into line. At the prohibition conference in New York, it is said Mr. Finch proposed to resign the chairmanship to devote himself to his order, which he has since been doing. Why he did not resign our informant did not learn. So Mr. Finch is riding an open prohibition horse and a secret non-prohibition horse. Is his course as commendable as that of Mrs. Foster, whom he has publicly denounced, because she is trying to organize an open, non-partisan society, like Finch's secret, non-partisan society? The average Good Templar is perfectly willing that the Prohibition party should shake the persimmon tree during the campaign, if the lodge can gather the persimmons afterwards. Let John B. Finch either abandon his non-partisan lodge or his chairmanship of the national prohibition committee.—The American.

Reform News.

FROM THE ILLINOIS LECTURER.

CASEY, CLARK COUNTY.

On Sabbath morning I preached in the M. E. church. Before going into the pulpit a trustee came and whispered to me, "Did you intend to preach or are you going to deliver an address?" I replied that my understanding of the arrangement made on the previous evening was that I was to preach.

"Yes, that was my understanding of it, too," he said. "Some have brought us word, that you were not going to preach but intend to deliver an address; that you oppose Masonry. Now we have a good many members who belong to both the lodge and the church, and if a man is going to talk on politics we have a good hall in this city and we think that is the place for it."

I had been granted the privilege to preach there as a Wesleyan minister, and as such, knowing the baneful effects of secret societies, I did preach to them: and if they did not learn more of the "secret works of darkness" in that hour in which I spoke to them than in all their lives before, it was because I could not tell it.

Quite a number expressed a desire to hear more of "this matter," so I engaged Sanford's hall and had a free lecture announced for Monday evening. The hall will accommodate five hundred people and it is quite likely that three hundred people were present at the lecture, and as the assembly was constantly receiving additions I could not take a collection before beginning. Masons, Odd-fellows, Grand Army and Red Men swarmed in, for the sermon on the previous morning set the entire hive in commotion. Let one secretist hear of a lecturer being in the country and he forms a vehicle for the transmission of such "tidings" and for such a purpose excels a newspaper—he'll tell it to those who cannot read. As I closed I requested the audience to name two reliable citizens for the purpose of taking a collection for the Illinois Christian Association opposed to secret societies. I. Green and S. Husband were nominated, accepted and requested to wait on the audience and take their contributions. Instead of doing so, they with others arose and left the room followed by the entire assembly, clinking their silver and in a fit of general and continued laughter.

On the following morning I called to see the editor of the paper in that place; he is a Mason and a G. A. R. man. He said, "Well you had quite an audience last night. I told the boys, 'Go up there and he'll post you all up, then come round and we'll take you into the lodge.' I meant that you'd give them all there was in it and we'd make them members of the lodge." His paper will contain an item on Masonic benevolence, as an offset to my lecture this week; from which it will appear that a dead Mason is worth more to his friends than a live one. Now if he supposes we are inclined to return to combat such a sensible proposition, we protest that it will require something stronger than mere clinking of silver and cachiniation to accomplish it.

Shortly after this interview we learned that something more than mere merriment was intended, but the best of plans fail at times, besides "eggs" are not sufficiently ripe, and they still have a market value. One thing we learned at Casey and that is, that nothing will disperse a mob in that city quicker than attempting to raise a collection; just pass the hat and off they'll move in the best of humor.

I see in the Cynosure of the 7th inst, a mistake or misprint in the answer to Capt. Cole's irregular Masonic question, "How long is it since you were made a Master Mason?" "Ever since I was raised from a dead level to a living perpendicular," would be the correct question and answer.

Bro. Wm. Fenton's article on the desecration of the Jackson street M. E. church, St. Paul, Minn., stirred me to the heart's core. "And of Zion it shall be said this and that man was born in her." Upwards of nineteen years have passed since I experienced religion in that identical church; but that was before plumed folly secured by three links of the devil's chain to a Christless system, standing in its pulpit and in the relation to it of pastor, pointed it down to a coffined skeleton. On the contrary, Rev. Daniel Cobb, a holy man of God upheld by our prayers, pointed sinners up to our living, risen, Saviour, "For he was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith, and much people was added unto the Lord." Acts 11: 24. More anon.

Geo. T. Dissette.

Correspondence.

Correspondents will please notice that for convenience in filing in the publishing department, business letters should not be written on the same sheet with communications to the editor.

CANADA GRANGERS.

Galt, Ont.

We have many grangers in Canada. It is often said by grangers here that they are not religious institutions at all, but simply clubs for mutual improvement and have nothing to do with religion. One gentleman, who is a reader of the Cynosure informed me publicly, when giving an Anti-masonic lecture that they had a ritual in Canada. If so, is it of the same kind as that of the United States? I am inclined to think that there can be little difference as they are both the offspring of Freemasonry. The common, if not the universal sin of secret societies is that they do not believe in Jesus. Their very secrecy is thus prima facie evidence of this soul destroying guilt.

Would not the Cynosure do a good work in collecting statistics as to the number of well-authenticated cases of blindness caused by terrorizing a candidate in initiation? Also the many cases of death in persons of weakly nervous temperament, or subject to heart disease. I know of two such cases.

It is a strange thing that if a minister of the Gospel comes out against the lodge that so much opposition shall be shown by the church of Christ that he shall be doomed to death by starvation if not by the hand of the assassin? The church is actually bribing men to be unfaithful. As it was in Elijah's time so is it now. How long shall this state of things last? It is never darker than just before day. May God hasten on the coming of this longed-for millennial glory. Yours for Jesus.

James Donaldson.

THE G. A. R. AND THE GOVERNOR.

Ness, Kans.

If it was commendable in the governor of New York, of a year ago for vetoing an appropriation to be made out of the State funds for the benefit of a religious school, is it not much more so for Gov. Hubbard, of Minnesota, for vetoing an appropriation of $7,000 in aid of the proposed soldiers' and sailors' re-union (galaday) controlled by the G. A. R., an institution arrogant, selfish, and obnoxious to many—even ex-soldiers? Gov. Hubbard's official act will make him enemies, also friends.

The legislature, like unto that of New York, had not the moral honesty to refuse a steal when requested to grant it by a part of the secret empire; but honest Gov. Hubbard put his veto on it. Let us thank God and take courage. This lodge claims to be only ex-soldiers of good moral character. They should keep their temper down lest their blood boil and they commit an overt act which might destroy their claim to morality.

By their fruits ye shall know them. They became exceedingly indignant, and the "posts" throughout the State are passing denunciatory resolutions of great severity. Pray that the governor may survive them; then thank God that there are a few such men left in the land as a little salt among so much corruption. The Minneapolis G. A. Rs. "Resolved that it is the sense of the L. P. Plummer Post, that Gov. Hubbard in vetoing the appropriation of $7,000, voted unanimously by both branches of the Legislative Department of the State of Minnesota, has placed himself upon record as a selfish and narrow-minded official [noble-minded unselfishness] and that we condemn the act as unworthy of a soldier, etc." Now if he had sanctioned the steal it would have been commended by the G. A. R. as an act worthy of a soldier—a dishonest one. They "Resolve that we cannot find words to express our utter contempt for a man, etc." Some of these same moral men lack nothing in being proficient in profanity, or even vulgarity; if they cannot find words low enough, Satan must have exhausted his vocabulary on the G. A. R. The Lord help the governor.

But soldiers are not all G. A. Rs. Some are real good fish, that are not yet caught in a net and are not likely to be. The Catholics of New York run counter to a governor who dared to do an honest act; the G. A. Rs. of Minnesota likewise. These are rays of light in a dark place. There is yet hope for our nation. There are soldiers of the late war everywhere, not a few of undoubted moral character, quite a number exemplary Christians, who could not be decoyed into a G. A. R. post under any consideration; men of real worth, pure-minded, who seek for nobler associates than such as are generally found in "posts."

J. O. Risheill.

STRAIGHT PATHS.

CLEARFIELD, Iowa.

"Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." was spoken by John the Baptist. They are holy words, given to us as a true light for all time by the direction of God, hence they are worthy of our prayerful consideration.

It was necessary in the days of this holy man to prepare the way of the Lord, but if it had been needful in that age of the world only, the words would not have been written. John spoke many words that never were written; if the substance of all the words that Jesus spoke at one time had been written the world could not contain the books.

God's way is not like man's. Man's ways are crooked, and in every age of the world professing Christians have taken a part in the crooked ways and wicked associations instituted by men; and loud are the cries (of reform) to make his paths straight.

Christ is the only way to God, and "out of Christ God is a consuming fire." "Prepare the way of the Lord" by showing us the paths where Christ will walk with us. He cannot walk with us in the crooked ways where Satan would have us go. He will not crook around with us to the lodge or the saloon. Leaders who advise modification, so the church can "enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season" by comforming to this world, by the members running in crooked, man-made ways, are not preparing the way of the Lord. No, no; they are preparing the way of Satan; but God will bring them and their crooked ways into judgment.

What great need there is for the professed followers of Jesus to be real reformers, for there is no more need of lodges and saloons than there was for a Southern Confederacy, and there is no more Christianity about them than there is about Satan, who is the god of the crooked ways of this world.

CYRUS SMITH.

"LET THE CANDIDATE FACE THE EAST."

When? When kneeling for prayer at the altar in a Masonic lodge. But why face the east? Because the sun rises in the east and the Master of the lodge sits in the east and the two are allied in this Masonic worship.

The question was once asked in my hearing of an Anti-masonic lecturer why the ancient tabernacle opened toward the east; and he had no answer ready. But let any one study carefully the account of the setting up of the Mosaic house of God and it will be observed that it was for the very purpose of turning the faces of the worshipers toward the west, that thereby they might never fall into that which the Lord had commanded they should not do, viz., worship the sun. How little the many good men in the lodge know of this false worship! When good men leave the lodge the day of its doom is come; to that end let the electric light of divine truth shine in on the darkness of this heathen worship. W. A. SHAW.

FROM A MOTHER IN ISRAEL.

STRAWBERRY POINT, Iowa.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—We have taken your paper for some years and prize it highly. We are with you in your great and holy cause, buying and distributing tracts, etc. I was twenty-three years old in 1826 and remember well the great fall of Masonry then, and have been a strong Anti-mason ever since, and an Abolitionist. People say, how can our ministers be Masons and still adhere to it, if it is so bad as your tracts and the Cynosure say? We cannot hear nor support any pastor who adheres to Masonry, and we fear they will have to hear the Great Judge say unto them, Depart from me, for I know you not.

In a late Cynosure we read Bro. Wm. Hall's article on not dividing the prohibition ranks. We endorse it heartily. I have long felt it would be much better to get prohibition first; that would greatly help to put down nearly, if not all, secret societies. Would they not be less anxious about secretism if they had no liquor? And the other great sins too bad to mention would be checked. One thing at a time. O I hope that our next President will be for prohibition, and after that if we women can vote we will help put down Masonry. Do you not think in this way you would sooner get Masonry down?

Yours in your great work,

MRS. JAMES BARNES, SR.

PITH AND POINT.

THE BOSTON CLUB.

My soul felt refreshed and rejoiced to see in the Cynosure that a new interest had sprung up in Boston. I wish more might be done to open the eyes of the churches. Those who do see right dare not open their mouths. May God prosper the work in Boston so as to arouse all New England.—MISS F. M. MITCHELL.

A NORTH CAROLINA PROTEST.

We believe all secret organizations, as Masonry, Odd-fellows, Ku Klux, etc, to be elements of great danger in any republican government. The people of North Carolina, many of them, too keenly feel the sting of the scorpion, that biteth at the midnight hour, to sit idle and fail to assist, in strong protest at least, against any and all night-born orders.—WM. L. WILSON.

ONE GOOD VOTE IN TEXAS.

I endorse the American party platform from beginning to end, am prohibition and anti-secrecy from the crown of my head to the sole of my feet. I was once a skeptic and doubted the existence of God, but when I was converted I received light from the Spirit and word of God, and refused to join even a secret temperance society before I ever saw anything written or heard any one express himself against the lodge.—WARREN PARKER, San Antonio, Tex.

THE UNITED BRETHREN CONFERENCE.

I see the Cynosure, our welcome visitor, takes some interest in the welfare of the U. B. church, and is with us on the question of secrecy. I am glad that you are watching the signs of the times, and have taken notice how secrecy is trying to creep into the U. B. church. I think there has been some secrecy in electing delegates to our General Conference. I find some have been elected that are opposed to our law on the question of secretism. They would like to have us let in the little foxes—minor orders; then next the whole herd of lodgery. Then we would be popular; yes, then the world would love us and they would come flocking to us and fill our treasury with money. What the devil wants is to mix the church with the world. I say, No; a pure church, or none! Go on! give us the Gospel in its purity and the Lord will bless your effort.—JOHN SWICKARD.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON VIII.—May 24, 1885.—The Faithful Saying. 1 Tim. 1: 15-20; 2: 1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT.—This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. 1 Tim. 1: 15.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The faithful saying. vs. 15–17. The one truth which is applicable to every class and condition of mankind is this:—that we are all sinners and Christ Jesus came to save us. But the nail which is to clinch this truth is wanting unless we can point to ourselves as signal proofs of his power to save. And we may doubt the reality of our conversion if we do not have something of St. Paul's feeling, that we are the "chief of sinners" in the sense that we know and feel the depths of our own guilt as we cannot any one's else. It is not for any natural good qualities in us that we obtain mercy. In God's great plan of salvation all pride in our own merits is excluded. A man saved from drowning does not take any credit to himself for grasping the rope, nor does he praise the rope itself, but reserves all his praise and thanks for his real deliverer—the one who saw his peril and threw him the instrument of deliverance. Thus we see how appropriately and beautifully Paul closes with this grand doxology.

2. The charge to Timothy. vs. 18–20. It appears that prophecies of Timothy's future usefulness in the church were among the things that led Paul to build such high hopes on this youthful disciple, and he now holds them up to him as encouragements to war a good warfare. The expectations indulged in regard to us by Christian parents, teachers and friends should inspire us to make their hopes true prophecies. And most of all God expects great things of us. He has every reason to. Every favorable circumstance in our lot, every good influence which surrounds us, every impulse to do better, should be a heavenly prophecy, an inspiring angel standing in our pathway and pointing us upward. "Holding faith and a good conscience," says Bengel. "Faith is like a very precious liquor; a good conscience is the clean, pure glass that contains it."

3. The duty of prayer for all men. vs. 1–6. Our prayers, like the Almighty Heart to which they appeal, should embrace all humanity. It is right that we should pray especially for those in authority, because religion and morals are largely dependent on good government. This does not mean that we are to condone the sins of weak, wicked or vicious rulers from mistaken reverence for the office they hold. Our constitution should be so amended as to exclude from office, and especially from the executive chair, men of immoral lives and irreligious principles, and put in only righteous and God-fearing rulers for whom we can consistently pray. This spirit of prayer for all men is acceptable to God because consonant with his desire to save all. And again we come back to the doctrine Paul everywhere preaches—one God and one Mediator, a personal God and a personal Saviour.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Is the charge to Timothy any different from the charge to all Christians? 1 Tim. 6: 13, 14, 20. What kind of rulers ought we to appoint? Ex. 18: 21; 2 Sam. 23: 3.

EXPLANATORY.

"Of whom I am chief." Every word is emphatic. "I" more than any other, "am" as speaking not of a past state only, but of the present—first, not in order of time, but as chief in degree. Compare the cry of the publican in the parable, "God be merciful to me the sinner" (Luke 18: 13). Such is ever the cry of the conscience, when, ceasing to compare itself with others, it sees itself as in the sight of God—Schaff. Note the marks of Paul's growth in grace. In his letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor. 15: 9) he is "not meet to be called an apostle." Five years later (Eph. 3: 8), he has grown to be "less than the least of all saints." Two years later still, in the very Beulah land, within sight of the Celestial City, he sees himself as "the chief of sinners." Has he grown worse? No, he has grown better; he knows he has been faithful to his Lord; and looks for the crown of righteousness; but the brighter the light of heaven, the more dreadful does sin appear, as the marsh which seems but a forest and lake in the twilight, is seen in the noon-tide rays to be reptile-haunted, malarious and muddy.—Pel.

"All long-suffering." Greek the whole (of his) long-suffering, viz., in bearing so long with me whilst I was a persecutor.—J., F. and B. The sense in each case is pre-eminent. Paul says: "As a sinner I was pre-eminent, towering above above all others; and in me pre-eminently as a most signal example—Jesus Christ showed forth his supreme, unutterable long-suffering, for a model—an illustration—of his mercy to all who might seek mercy ever after.—Cowles.

"A pattern." A sample (1 Cor. 10: 6, 11) to assure the greatest sinners of the certainty that they shall not be rejected in coming to Christ, since even Saul found mercy.—Pel.

"Mightest war a good warfare." Better, "the good warfare" (as in 2 Tim. 4: 7, the good fight"), the campaign of truth against falsehood, of good against evil. Not the mere "fight," but the whole campaign.—Schaff.

"Whom I have delivered unto Satan." Better, whom I delivered, the tense pointing to a definite time, probably on the occasion of his last visit to Ephesus—Schaff. It was a solemn excommunication or expulsion from the church, accompanied with the infliction of bodily disease or death. In ordinary cases the offender was quietly expelled from the Christian society. But an apostle, and only an apostle, seems to have possessed the awful powers of inflicting bodily suffering, as in the cases of Ananias and Sapphira, Elymas, the incestuous person at Corinth, and the men here alluded to.—Ellicott. Rather he delivered him over to Satan, who, and not Paul, inflicted the suffering—torments of remorse, and perhaps bodily disease. That the infliction of bodily disease was sometimes permitted to Satan, we have the authority not only of the Jewish Scriptures and Jewish belief, as in the case of Job, but of St. Paul, who calls his "thorn in the flesh" the "messenger of Satan to buffet him" (2 Cor. 12: 7), and of our Lord himself (Luke 13: 16), "This woman, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years.—Cook.

"In all godliness and honesty." Josephus especially mentions how a refusal on the part of the Jews to pray for Roman magistrates led to the great war with the empire, which ended in their destruction as a separate nasion (only four or five years at most from the time this epistle was written.) The Christians prayed for their rulers, and no Christian was implicated in that terrible rebellion.—Ellicott.

"Who will have all men to be saved." This willing that all men be saved doubtless includes the full provision on God's part of atonement for all men, and the freest and most urgent entreaties to all men to come to Christ for salvation.—Cowles.

This does not imply that he will save all men irrespective of their own faith and repentance. He has done his part of salvation for all men, and wishes that they would repent and believe and come to him. Salvation in its very nature implies free choice on the part of those saved.—Peloubet.

"And one mediator between God and men." Here the stress is laid on the one Mediator. If one only, and that as being "a man," then his mediation must be for all humanity.—Schaff.

"The man Christ Jesus." Not the man as contradistinguished from some others, but man; one possessing the nature, and in his work manifesting the atributes of humanity.—Fairbairn. The center of Christian divinity is not in God nor in man, but in the Godman. Christian theology is essentially a Christology, centering in facts not deduced from metaphysical or ethical abstractions. Above the strife of the schools rises in serene and untroubled majesty the radiant form of the Son of God, the embodiment and reconciliation of divinity and humanity.—Prof. H. B. Smith.

"To be testified in due time." Rev. Ver., the testimony to be borne in its own times. The fitting time in God's providence for Christ to come to the world, and the Gospel times ever since. The great fact of Christ's having given himself a ransom for all is that which is to be testified by his servants in his times; that is, in the times of the Gospel. It is to be the great subject of their preaching.—Schofield.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, Willimantic, Conn.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Geo. T. Dissett, Cynosure office.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Mich., A. H. Springstein, Warren.
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn., J. P. Richards, care Prof. Paine, Wasioja.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun, Syracuse, N. Y.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the persou ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F. W. Capwell, New York; E. W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimhall, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile hands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with hooks of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabhath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

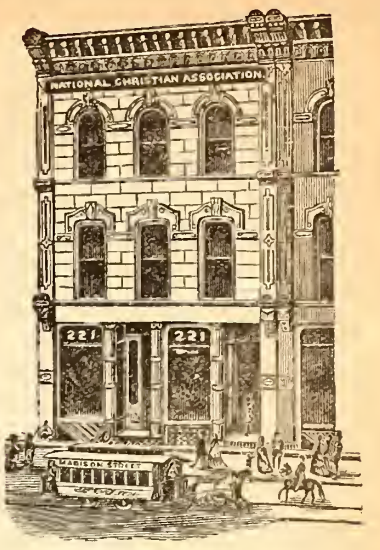
adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.
C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

VICE-PRES.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin

COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimhall, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

Editors.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 14, 1885

The U. B. General Conference, Fostoria, Ohio, meets on the 14th of this month. Don't forget it; either in private, social, or family prayer. The lodge will surely win and drive off the friends of Christ as those who held the principles of Wesley were driven from the M. E. church in 1845, but slavery perished even from the fellowship of the M. E. church. So will the lodge from the church of Otterbein. But if fervent, effectual prayer is offered up constantly what so often occurred in Old Testament times, will take place in the U. B. church: Christ's worship will overcome Baal's and "the land have rest."

GRANDEST PROPOSITION OF THE YEAR.

The General Assembly of the United Presbyterian church meets at Topeka, Kansas, May 27th. Its Wheeling Presbytery sends up a most stupendous memorial, the mover of which, and the Presbytery adopting it should be canonized in the Temple of Reform.

Along with earnest words for home missions, and a pure psalmody, the Wheeling Presbytery asks "that more earnest and frequent prayers be offered for the defeat of secreey;" and adds: "The horrible things secrecy has been doing in our own and other lands in the past few years; the threatenings it is now making; and the devilish machineries it is employing, are the loudest call God ever gave us to testify against it and seek its overthrow." The Presbytery goes on to ask the Assembly to appoint a "manager of the anti-secret reform," to be paid by subscriptions, who shall hold an anti-secret convention in every Presbytery each year, and see that each minister gives a prepared discourse, and elders and private members take part in discussions against the lodge; to appoint the moderator of each Presbytery to arrange for conventions, take up collections and co-operate with the general manager; to report procedings in all the church papers; and the manager of the anti-seeret movement to seek an appointment from, and co-operate with the national anti-secret association in performing his work.

The Cynosure has no words to express its joy and thanksgiving to God for this action of Wheeling Presbytery. The National Christian Association meets in June, a few weeks after the Topeka General Assembly, May 27th. We trust our Dr. Samuel Collins and his two brothers and Dr. Meloy will see that the plan presented by the Wheeling memorial is so presented to the Topeka assembly that it will be joyfully adopted and put in operation; and if laid before the annual business meeting of the National Association in Chicago, June 19th, it will receive its cordial God-speed, and earnest co-operation. And when the Lutheran National council, and the Lutheran General synod, along with the Scandinavian synods and the German-United Evangelical synod shall follow the glorious example set forth in the Wheeling plan, our two million and a half of foreign-born citizens will illumine our whole American horizon with their light.

THE LUTHERANS AND THE ADVANCE.

The Advance misrepresents us, doubtless unintentionally, when it says (May 7,) that the Cynosure is going to bring Miss Frances E. Willard and Gov. St. John into line of opposition to secret societies, or is going to throw them overboard." We have contributed a trifle of money to the cause of prohibition represented by these two persons, and the Cynosure has been lavish in its admiration of both Miss Willard and Gov. St. John, both before and since they evinced their dislike for the lodge; and we admired the heroism of the Advance editor in standing up and voting for St. John last fall. No word has ever escaped us inconsistent with the above. We hope our brother will do us justice.

The Cynosure did and does except to the following from the Advance, March 19. The editor says:

"We refer to churches which exclude any one who belongs to a secret society. * * * Individual churches which insist on such rules need not feel themselves aggrieved if local associations should refuse to fellowship them since they refuse to fellowship the children of the Lord Jesus."

Now the Advance editor well knows that the 100,000 Swedes and Norwegians whom it invites to fellowship, exclude Freemasons from their communions. Both Dr. Waldenstrom, in Mr. Montgomery's excellent book, and Pres. Ekman, member of the Swedish Parliament, in a letter to the Cynosure explicitly show this: and by the ruling of Bro. West, Congregatioualists should "refuse to fellowship them!" Seeing this strange averment in the Advance, our associate very properly put the Scandianavians who are in correspondence with the Cynosure on their guard. We trust our brother, who is himself opposed to the lodge, will reeall his inadvertencies.

GERMAN UNITED EVANGELICAL CHURCH.

Unwritten tradition says that the grandfather of the present Emperor William undertook to unite the Lutheran and German Reformed under the above name, but failed. Instead of making two churches one, he made the two three: Lutheran, German Reformed, and German United Evangelical.

This interesting body of Christians are all German, in the United States, having no organ in English.

Their college in Elmhurst, near Chicago, has seven professors: P. B. Gobel, President, P. T. Lueber, P. C. Dobichnall, and Messrs. Brodt, Recher, Rofche and Machter. The buildings are ample and in good taste; ninety-eight students are in attendance, and in the year 1883 the people contributed $20,669.44 to the funds.

On Sabbath evening, May 3d, the senior editor of the Cynosure preached in their college chapel at Elmhurst, to an interesting and attentive congregation, against the secret lodge. They had had one lecture before from Pres. C. A. Blanchard. The faculty and students are heart and soul against the lodge; have the Cynosure in their reading room; desire more lectures; and their six hundred churches are a reserve regiment, not yet brought into the field against the dark worships of the lodge.

Their churches are widely scattered over the West. Their Theological Seminary with seventy-seven students is now in Normandy, St. Louis county, Missouri. When Gen. Lyon seized the camp at St. Louis and scattered the rebel militia who were being assembled there to take Missouri out of the Union, our flag was flying over their Theological Seminary, which was threatened to be burned down.

Cannot Secretary Stoddard visit the faculty at Elmhurst, and arrange for an earnest, German-speaking agent to visit their 600 churches, and open our cause to them and prevent the lodge from making its way into their churches, and troubling them as it has troubled the Hollanders in Michigan. Their Anti-masonry dates from Luther, whose doctrine of salvation by faith nearly destroyed the lodges on the Continent. An earnest, German-speaking apostle filled with holy fire may so set this great struggle before them as to enlist their co-operation, their contribution and their prayers.

GRAND ARMY PAUPERISM.

The Kansas legislature passed a law in March, providing for the decent burial of ex-Union soldiers who may die paupers, provided the expense is not more than $50. Surviving relatives may conduct the funeral, and if they are unable to pay the bills, they may be met in this way.

This measure on the face of it, seems reasonable and just. There are but few cases where it could be honestly applied, and the burden would not be felt by the public. At the same time there would be some cases of dishonorable advantage taken. Wherefore, then, the self-congratulations of the Grand Army lodges at the passage of the bill; and why is the order in every State urged to secure similar legislation? There must be an African in the fence. It is said that the bill is very important to the G. A. R. in a "financial way." The lodge "department commander" has deemed it of sufficient importance to issue a circular, in which he says the new law will lift "one of the heaviest burdens" from the shoulders of the order. Of course the people who pay taxes want to know why. If a man is able to pay his lodge dues and keep his standing so as to receive lodge burial, he ought to be able to pay for his own funeral. If he cannot pay for both, he is a mean spirited man that would leave a dead body to the expense of others, after he has squandered his money in the lodge. If the G. A. R. is to be so greatly relieved it must be made up of paupers. How else should it receive so great an advantage? But the inference would be resented. There is only one other explanation. Department commander Steward urges in his circular that the G. A. R. "take advantage" of the law. That is the word exactly! The lodge has been accustomed to bury its dead, now the public can do the burying and the lodge can stand by and do the tooting and hold its bag to catch the honors and the dupes. It is manifest that the G. A. R. managers propose to use the law, or the tax payer back of it, not to bury poor men, but to boost their order into greater influence in politics and business.

The attention of the United Presbyterian committee on the Grand Army and of the members of the United Brethren General Conference, who are interested in "minor" orders is respectfully called to this interesting feature of secret lodge work.

—Bro. Isaac Bancroft, Wisconsin State agent, has just reached his seventieth birthday. He is now visiting the northern settlements, and hoped to be able to push on to the Lake Superior region; but finds he must abandon the project on account of the roads, or lack of roads.

—Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea College, has been seriously ill with nervous prostration and pneumonia. He has recovered partially, so as to be able to conduct his correspondence.

—Secretary Stoddard addressed a large audience in Pastor Evald's church, Swedish Lutheran, in this city last Sabbath evening. Next Sabbath he has an appointment at Freeland, Ill., in the United Presbyterian church, Rev. D. S. Kennedy, pastor.

—Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., for years pastor of the First Reformed Presbyterian church in Pittsburg, died last week on his way home from California, whither he went last fall, hoping for restored health. The funeral took place in Pittsburg on Tuesday. Dr. Milligan was the leading minister of the Covenanter church; a tower of strength in the councils of the National Reform Association, from whose convention he was greatly missed a few days since; and in our anti-lodge work a powerful speaker and writer. He has addressed several national conventions, and the columns of the Cynosure were enriched by the able contributions of his pen. The National Christian Association was organized in his church, and he has been president of the corporate body.

—Bro. Dissette, the Illinois lecturer, reached Westfield, in Clark county, since his letter on another page was written. For the first time an Anti-masonic lecturer was not welcomed, except by a few faithful and unterrified souls. The College faculty, which under Pres. Allen's administration would have extended to Bro. Dissette a warm greeting and heard him gladly, could not find an opportunity for an address lest it should discommode a music teacher! It has been some years since Westfield was addressed on this reform, but that seems to be just what is needed. Pres. Bookwalter came of too good stock to allow his institution to drift into the lukewarm tide of nullification.

—Bro. Robert Loggan of Kansas spoke to a fair audience in the United Brethren church near May Day, in Riley county, last week Tuesday and Wednesday, and for the two following evenings he had appointments at the Highland church east of Clay Center, Clay county. He also hoped to obtain the use of the Swedish Baptist church in Leonardville, Riley county, early this week. Thence he expects to go east to Willis in Brown county, and so on to Topeka and other points.

Such socialism as Wendell Phillips practiced would disperse the crowds upon whom the wild ranter from the Continent delights to pour his savage denunciations of the social order. It is said he left only $25,000 of a once large fortune, and on the day before he died burned old notes to a large amount so that his executors might not trouble the signers.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

Members of the corporate body of the National Christian Association will please notice that the time of their annual meeting has been changed by the Board of Directors, from June 18th to June 19th, in accordance with by-law No. 4.

The opening session will, D. V., be held at 10 o'clock, in the rooms of the N. C. A., 221 West Madison street, Chicago, for the election of officers and the transaction of such other business as may be legally considered by the corporate body. An evening session will be held in Farwell Hall, 150 East Madison street, Chicago, and Pres. C. A. Blanchard and others will speak on topics of reform. The evening programme will be more fully announced later, but friends may rest assured that all possible will be done to make this one of our most interesting and effective annual gatherings. Now that the nation has reached a calm following the heated Presidential struggle, and especially since God is opening new fields that seem ripe for the harvest among our home and foreign born sympathizers, there are special calls for earnest prayer and consecrated effort. Every friend who possibly can should attend this annual meeting and join in renewed efforts to urge the conflict on to speedy and complete victory. J. P. STODDARD.

Cor. Sec'y and Gen. Agent, N. C. A.

N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

The National Board met at the call of the chairman last Thursday, Prof. O. F. Lumry of Wheaton College in the chair.

The finance committee reported all bills audited up to April 1st. One secured loan of $1,600 had been made by them from the Association funds. The Westfield College note had been returned for collection to the donor, Mrs. Gilkey, at her request. Moses W. Bicknell has placed in thecontrol of the N. C A. $1,200, upon which he receives during life 6 per cent interest, paid semi-annually.

The basement, first floor and upper floor of the Carpenter building are rented, and the hall on second floor is partly occupied by religious meetings, the gross income being $125 per month.

A verbal report from the publishing committee was made to the effect that the committee prepared for the issue of several tracts and pamphlets, but found their labors likely to be of little use when met in the Board by reports of inadequate funds. The story, "Between Two Opinions," was approved by the committee, and plates were being prepared as fast as it appeared in the Cynosure.

The publisher of the Cynosure also reported verbally that the change he had introduced in the price of the Cynosure from $2.00 to $1.50 strictly in advance, he believed to be no detriment to the paper. A large number of papers are now being sent to Southern ministers by the aid of special donations.

The General Agent reported as the result of the settlement of the Wright will case that $370.00 had been paid and $1,100 would be received next December. Also that from the estate of the father of C. C. Foote might be expected, on the latter's donation, between $200.00 and $300.00. He had also disposed of some of the property obtained from Mr. Daniel Varney of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, for $1,550. A general report of meetings and conventions attended in Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, and elsewhere was made, also of the meetings held in Chicago. Bro. Hinman preaches every other week in Willimantic, and also lectures in New England.

The annual meeting of the N. C. A. was changed from Thursday, June 18th, to Friday. A committee of three was appointed to revise the Constitution and the roll of members of the N. C. A.

To Minnesota for field work was appropriated $10 per month, provided the State raise $40 per month for the same purpose. To make up Bro. Loggan's salary in Kansas, if so much is needed, $25 per month was voted till the end of June.

A committee was appointed on the purchase of the plates of George Clark's song book. The treasurer was instructed to purchase for $20 damaged books of E. A. Cook.

A letter from the president and secretary of the American Publishing Company, Washington, asking that the entire net income of the Washington building be turned over to that company, was read, and the matter referred to a committee.

The Board then adjourned.

HORSE-SHOES, CHARMS AND SPIRIT WORSHIP.

The following sensible views are taken from the Catholic Review, May 9th inst. The Cynosure cordially endorses them:

"Christians are unfortunately to be found, even at the present day, who use in a superstitious way, and, it may be for sinful purposes, things which can have no natural power to accomplish the end desired, but must derive any efficacy which they can be supposed to have, from the devil, whose aid is therefore implicitly invoked by those who possess such things.

"Well now, to pass to the other subject, that of consulting spirits, or seeking, as the Jewish law has it, the truth from the dead. You see it is no new thing, this spiritism, though the rapping and table-tipping business is rather a new form of it in these days.

